HOW HIS SALARY WAS INCREASED.

Colored Clergyman Got a Pointer From the Secretary of the Elizabethtown Water Company.

A certain colored clergyman in Elizabeth, after paying his water bill last week, while engaged in conversation with the ever-affable secretary *of the water company, got an inspira*tion for a sermon. It happened this way:

"Do you know, Mr. Whelan," said the doctor to the genial secretary, "that as water comes from heaven free, no charge should be made for it?

"That is quite true," rejoined the water company's secretary; "you are not compelled to pay for water that comes down to us from above. You are at perfect liberty to take a pail and fill it anywhere along the river. For this nobody will attempt to make you pay. Water in the river is as free as the air we breathe."

"I know, sah," continued the divine, "that the water is free, sah, I should have to walk a long distance to procure it in that way. Besides, it would be very inconvenient and laborious for me to go after water in that manner."

"Well, doctor," added the secretary, "unless you pay our company for the water we furnish, I see no other way in which you can obtain it. Our company goes to great expense in boring into the depths of the earth to obtain a supply of pure water, and has to put in costly machinery to raise it to the surface and then force it through pipes into the houses of our patrons. The water is free, doctor, and all the charge we make is for the pumping."

"You have, sah, given me a valuable idea," responded the doctor; "I never before regarded the matter in that light. I shall, sah, avail myself of the water, reiderra and preach a sermon on the subject of things that are free."

The next Sunday morning, the doctor, after reading from the Scriptures, commenced his remarks by saying:

"Brethren, the Gospel, like water, is free, but you must pay something for my pumping it into you." Then the doctor narrated the incident that occurred in the water company's office, and the application was so forcibly and pointedly worded in the course of his sermon that the congregation has since decided to increase his salary.—Elizabeth Leader.

Lumber Company Branching Out.

The Loiseaux Lumber Company, of this city, has bought out W. H. Smith, the Fanwood lumber dealer, and will continue the business as heretofore. Mr. Smith will manage the coal and lumber yards for the company. This completes a plan originally intended by the company of having a lumber yard every three miles between Plainfield and Elizabeth. They are well located for the convenience of patrons. The company now owns three lumber yards, one at the western end of the city, near Dunellen, one in the centre of town and one at Fanwood.

Miss Mabel M. Rausch Weds.

Miss Mabel May Rausch, of Alton, Fanwood township, and Leslie Earl LaForge, of Newark, were quietly married Wednesday, by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church. The ceremony was performed at the home of the officiating minister. The couple will live in Newark.

GOLF CUP COMPETITIONS

E. A. Stevenson, H. D. Hibbard, F. Reinhart and Miss Goddard Win Trophies

SOME LOW SCORES MADE

Day's Play at Park Golf Club—Messrs. Morse and Reed Winners.

Ideal weather with a number of attractions brought out a large field of contestants at the Plainfield Country Club Wednesday. The rain earlier in the week put the course in fine condition and low scores were the rule. In addition to the events on the course, there was much social activity about the clubhouse, where music was provided throughout the afternoon, as well as in the evening. The house was appropriately decorated for the day and members and friends were going and coming all day. Those who were not interested in golf found a strong attraction in the tennis tournament under the auspices of the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association and this was watched with considerable interest all day.

One of the chief events on the golf course was the play for the Decoration Day cup. This was won by Edward A. Stevenson, with a net score of 71. He also won the first three points for the Golf Committee cup. These scores were posted for the Decoration Day cup:

E. A. Stevenson, 98, 27-71; Arthur Peck, 87, 13-74; L. L. Tweedy, 98, 21-77; Edgar I. Serrell, 83, 6-77; W. D. Riggs, 92, 15-77; A. L. Otterson, 2, 13-80; C. H. Morgan, 80, 0-80; R. D. Lounsberry, 99, 7-82; Thomas R. Van Boskerck, 92, 8-84; S. H. Patterson, 101, 17-84; R. H. Cox, 111, 27-84; Howard Huntington, 102, 13-89; A. E. Barclay, 108, 17-91; E. J. Patterson, 128, 27-101.

The next event of interest was the play for the Golf Committee cup. E. A. Stevenson won from H. Morgan, while Arthur Peck finished second with a net score of 74 and S. H. Patterson took the one point with a score of 76. These scores were returned for the cup:

E. A. Stevenson, 98, 27-71; Arthur Peck, 87, 13-74; S. H. Patterson, 93, 17-76; Edgar I. Serrell, 83, 6-77; L. L. Tweedy, 98, 21-77; W. D. Riggs, 92, 15-77; H. D. Hibbard, 83, 5-78; C. B. Morgan, 80, 0-80; F. C. Talmadge, 84, 2-82; C. A. Stover, 92, 9-83; R. D. Lounsberry, 89, 7-82; R. H. Cox, 111, 27-84; G. T. Van Boskerck, 95, 11-84; Howard Huntington, 102, 13-89; A. E. Barclay, 108, 17-91.

In the playoff for the May cup H. W. Beebe beat L. A. Chase 3 up and 1 to play; Henry Hibbard beat Edward J. Patterson 7 up and 6 to play, and in the final play Mr. Hibbard won the cup by defeating Mr. Beebe 2 up and 1 to play.

In the final play for the scratch cup, F. Jennings beat Whitney Baker 7 up and 6 to play; F. O. Reinhart beat C. B. Morgan, 2 up and 1 to play, and F. O. Reinhart won the cup by defeating F. C. Jennings 6 up and 4 to play. Willard Wadsworth won the scratch consolation cup by defeating C. A. Stover 8 up and 6 to play, Wadsworth having previously defeated E. B. Shoemaker and Stover defeated Arthur Murphy 1 up.

*The last event was the clock com*petition for women. This was won by Miss Margaret Goddard with a score of 24. Other scores returned were as follows: Miss Marjorie Fleming, 25; Miss Maud Van Boskerck, 36; Mrs. E. E. Iremonger, 28.

There was a large field at the Park Golf Club yesterday morning and afternoon to compete for the scheduled events and all enjoyed the fine condition of the course. In the morning there was a ball sweepstakes. This was won by Charles B. Morse, who returned a score of 83. J. L. Watson was second with an 85 and Charles A. Reed third with an 89. These scores were returned:

Charles B. Morse, 98, 15-83; J. L. Watson, 112, 25-87; Charles A. Reed, 105, 14-89; Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 110, 19-91; Thomas Miller, 114, 16-98; L. R. Thurlow, 114, 15-99.

In the afternoon there was the play for the Holiday cup. This was won by Charles A. Reed, who made a net score of 91. The scores posted were as follows:

Charles A. Reed, 105, 14-91; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, 96, 4-92; Alexander Gilbert, 110, 17-93; Rev. C. L. Goodrich, 101, 8-93; George A. Chapman, 113, 18-95; Reuben Knox, 110, 14-96; Charles B. Morse, 112, 15-97; Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 110, 12-98; J. B. Betts, 120, 23-97; Nelson A. Miller, 115, 16-99; Raymond B. Carroll, 99, plus 1-100.

Grossmann School Exercises.

The members of Dr. Grossmann's School are engaged in preparations for the term exercises which will take place on June 16, in the afternoon. The programme will be interesting, and all who desire to attend will receive an invitation if they apply to Dr. Grossmann.

A Lucky Investor.

David C. Smalley made an investment of $25 at the Carnival store. This is what he got for his money—one set of harness, a pound of tea and twenty-three pieces of glassware.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Popular Science Monthly for June contains the following articles: "Concerning Variations in Animals and Plants," by President David Starr Jordan; "The Human Side of the Indian," by Dr. Alexander F. Chamberlain; "The Fresh-water Fishes of South and Middle America," by Professor C. H. Eigenmann; "Facts About Nostrums," by Dr. Horatio Wood, Jr.; "Times and Places of Earthquakes," by Professor H. H. Turner; "Radio-activity and Volcanos," by Major C. E. Dutton; "An Eclipse Expedition to Spain," by Dr. A. S. Mitchell: "The Spanish American Type," by Gustave Michaud; "The Earthquake on the California Coast;" "The Engineering Building of New York City;" "The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching."

Thus indeed, in little more than a score of years, has the desert bloomed, in Fresno county, into the land of the raisin vine, and thus is explained in part the wonderful change observed by the old lady who was astonished to find a city where thirty-five years ago, all there was in sight could have been purchased for a song. Fresno, the county-seat and commercial metropolis with a population nearing the twenty-thousand mark, has been made largely of raisins. From that center are distributed yearly 4,500 cars loads with raisins and billed to all parts of the United States and Canada.—Henry Hawson in Sunset Magazine for April.

The Red Book Magazine for June has as its leading story, a tale by Rowland Thomas entieled, "The King's Handy Man." Mr. Thomas knows well his South Seas and the present story is proof of that knowledge. The story is commenced in Wilbur D. Nesbit in "O'Tander's Peace Conference." Other contributors of varied and excellent short fiction to the Red Book Magazine for June are: Edna Kingsley Wallace, Margaret G. Fawcett, Hugh Pendexter, Norvell Harrison, George Allen England, Porter Emerson Browne, Julia Truitt Bishop and A. M. Chisholm. As usual the June issue is opened with a group of art portraits of twenty-eight beautiful women on the stage.

Politics in Union.

"There is less chance," thinks the Trenton Times, "for the Colbyites to elect three Assemblymen in Union county next November than there is for the Republicans to carry Hunterdon county." A year ago The Times would doubtless have said the same thing about the Colbyites in Essex county. But Colb y won, at the primaries and at the election, and the Colby reform movement has spread with phenomenal rapidity ever since that time. In Union county the most popular candidate for Assemblyman is Everard K. Tucker, because he has the courage and the independence to stand by the Colby reform principles. Tillman, of Rahway, was thought to be something of a reformer, but he stuck by the "regulars," right or wrong, through thick and thin, with such desperate tenacity that he is now suspected of having had his eye on some good, fat appointment, which he feared he might lose if he showed any leanings toward reform. As for Leader Perkins, of Westfield, there is already such a strong public sentiment against him because of his weak-kneed subserviency to the machine and the corporation interests, that if he gets the nomination he will be cut from Westfield to Rahway and from the States Island Sound to the Somerset county line. Union county gives promise of some stupendous surprises next fall, and the "regulars" are already shaking in their boots.—Newark News.

CHARLES K. IANSON DEAD.

Passed Away in Muhlenberg Hospital This Morning After Few Weeks' Illness.

Charles K. Ianson, one of the oldest residents in the city, died at Muhlenberg Hospital Friday, after an illness of a few weeks with a complication of troubles. He was in his eightieth year and had lived in Plainfield since about 1865. He was employed for a long time by the New Jersey Central in the construction department.

There are surviving a widow, one daughter, Mrs. Edwina Moore, of Plainfield, and three sons, one living in Somerville, one in Newark and the other in Plainfield. Mr. Ianson was a member of the First M. E. church and enjoyed a wide local acquaintance.

JOINT CO. BUYS LAND.

Spicer Plant to Greatly Enlarge Its Plant on Madison Avenue.

Joint Company has purchased fifty feet of land adjoining its plant on Madison avenue from Mrs. Aretta H. Manning. As soon as C. M. Wilson, who is using the barn as a carpenter shop, can vacate, the company will build an addition to the plant. The company is doing a rush business. The force has been unable to catch up with the orders, and enlargement of the plant is absolutely necessary.

ELIZABETH WINS DOUBLES COLBY FORGES RECRUITING

Glazebrook and Charlock Take Championship Doubles in Big Tennis Tourney.

SOME CLEVER PLAY

Finals in Women's Singles to Take Place Between Mrs. Edgar and Miss Woodruff on Saturday.

The women's singles for the tennis championship of the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association, played on the courts of the Plainfield Country Club, Wednesday, attracted a large gallery of spectators who thoroughly enjoyed the fine play. The courts were in good condition after the rain and permitted excellent work on the part of the contestants. The finals were reached in the women's singles and Mrs. B. C. Edgar and Miss Woodruff will probably decide the tournament on Saturday.

The men's doubles for the championship of the association was decided yesterday, M. S. Charlock and H. M. Glazebrook, of the Elizabeth Country Club, being the winners, beating W. B. Cragin and E. S. Pendegast, of the same club, in the finals by a score of 6-4, 6-4, 6-3. The winners bring five points to their club, besides the championship, while their opponents, who also were the runners-up receive two points. The result of the women's singles follow:

First round—Mrs. B. C. Edgar, Ilderan Outing Club, beat Miss Helen Lockwood, Danforth Tennis Club, 6-2, 6-3; Miss Florence E. Bradley, Westfield, beat Miss Elsie Burke, Plainfield, 6-0, 6-2; Miss A. R. Robinson, Ilderan Outing Club, beat Miss M. B. Valiant, Plainfield, 6-3, 7-5.

Second round—Mrs. J. A. Hutchinson, Plainfield, beat Mrs. S. F. Weaver, Plainfield, 6-0, 6-1; Mrs. B. C. Edgar, Ilderan Outing Club, beat Miss Florence E. Bradley, Westfield, 6-2, 13-11; Miss A. R. Robinson, Ilderan Outing Club, beat Miss Adelaide Ball, Plainfield, 6-2, 4-6, 7-5; Miss Harriett Woodruff, Ilderan Outing Club, beat Mrs. W. B. Tyler, Plainfield, 6-1, 6-2.

Third round—Mrs. B. C. Edgar, Ilderan Outing Club, beat Mrs. J. R. Hutchinson, Plainfield, 6-2, 6-2; Miss Harriett Woodruff, Ilderan Outing Club, beat Mrs. Robinson, Ilderan Outing Club, 8-3, 3-6, 6-2. This leaves the finals for Mrs. B. C. Edgar and Miss Woodruff.

The third round of the men's doubles played yesterday afternoon and resulted as follows:

L. Dunham and H. L. Robinson, Ilderan Outing Club, beat F. W. Goddard and Howard Carter, Plainfield, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4; semi-finals, M. S. Charlock and H. M. Glazebrook, Elizabeth Country Club, beat A. L. and R. A. West, Bergen Point, 9-11, 8-2, 6-3; W. B. Cragin and E. S. H. Pendegast, Elizabeth Country Club, beat L. Hunram and H. L. Robinson, Ilderan Outing Club, 6-1, 6-4, 6-4; finals, M. S. Charlock and H. M. Glazebrook, Elizabeth Country Club, beat W. B. Cragin and E. S. H. Pendegast, Elizabeth Country Club, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3.

CHAMPIONSHIP MIXED DOUBLES TOURNAMENT

EAST JERSEY LAWN TENNIS ASSOCIATION PROGRAMME.

The mixed doubles championship tournament of the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association will be held on the courts of the Plainfield Country Club, Rahway, on Saturdays, June 16 and 23, and there promises to be a large number of contestants. Entries accompanied by an entrance fee of $2 per team should be received by R. C. Edgar, at 143 Bryant street, Rahway, on or before Friday night, June 15, at 8 o'clock, at which time and place the drawings will be made.

Play will commence each Saturday at 2:30 o'clock. Matches may be arranged to be played during the week ending June 23, but no team will be defaulted for inability to play on any days other than June 16 and 23. All matches will be the best two sets out of three. Individual prizes will be awarded the winning team and the runners-up.

Tea will be served by the Ilderan Outing Club each Saturday, and all members of the clubs composing the association are cordially invited. Trains leave New York, Cortlandt street ferry, for Rahway, over the Pennsylvania Railroad, at 12:40, 1:10, and 1:30 p. m. Plainfielders can reach Rahway easily by trolley. Roger N. Black will act as referee, and the following tournament committee will be in charge: Miss Jones, Miss Robinson, R. N. Black, Mrs. B. C. Edgar, Miss Martin, Bertram Berry, Harriett Osborn and R. C. Edgar, chairman.

The Plainfield Country Club will enter several teams in this tournament and judging from recent play is likely to secure a leading position. In the tournament at the club this week the Plainfield tennis players did good work, showing a marked improvement over previous efforts.

Colby Reports at Executive Meeting Show Membership Here Numbers 150.

HAVE $50 IN SUMMIT

Enrollment Blanks Being Circulated Throughout County—Plan Mass Meeting.

The Colby spirit seems to be spreading vigorously in Union county. Reports from the different centers encourage the leaders greatly.

In this city over 200 names have been enrolled by the Colby league, although the blanks have been in circulation but a few days. Elizabeth has enrolled the same number, and Summit's branch has a charter list of 250.

Enrollment blanks will be circulated in Rahway and some of the smaller towns of the county today. Steady growth of the League membership is expected.

One of the matters of importance which is being discussed by the League leaders is the date of the Colby-Record mass meeting in Elizabeth, which was scheduled for sometime in the next month. President William N. Runyon says that he hoped to be able to have a time settled upon at *the meeting of the executive com*mittee this week, but owing to the death of Mr. Colby's daughter, it was impossible to do so. When Mr. Colby would be able to make a date appear at a meeting there. This matter has been held over until the next meeting of the committee, which will be at the call of the chair.

BRONZE ATHLETIC TROPHY OFFERED BY W. G. BESLER

IN THE BASEBALL CHAMPIONSHIP OF CENTRAL R. R., A. A.

For the purpose of promoting competition in athletics in a healthy and sportsmanlike way, W. G. Besler, of North Plainfield, vice-president and general manager of the New Jersey Central, has presented to the New Jersey Central Athletic Association a beautiful piece of bronze, for an inter-department baseball championship trophy of the organization to be known as "The Besler Bronze." The presentation was made in the office of Mr. Besler in Liberty street, New York, and in the course of his remarks said "that he hoped such competition would create something more valuable, namely, esprit de corps among the members of the various departments of the railroad that would stand for better sport, better fellowship, and more than either, better service for the company in whose service all the members are."

Pierre P. Garven, president of the association, who is also Mayor of Bayonne, and one of the attorneys for the road, accepter the gift, expressing the thanks of the officers and members, not only for the handsome trophy, but for the support and assistance the company had so generously given in helping to make the association a success and thanked Mr. Besler especially for the personal interest he had manifested.

Nine teams have entered the contest for the "Besler Bronze," and a spirited struggle is anticipated. The teams are: Ferry, pier 10, North river; Pier 39, North river; Central Building, New York; Transportation Department, Car Service Department, Car Inspectors, Police Department, Jersey City Freight Office and Elizabethport Car Clerks.

The association was organized less than two years ago and today has a membership of about *300, composed most entirely of em*ployees of the New Jersey Central. The association has a splendid athletic field over 550 feet square at Communipaw, and hope to erect thereon within a year or two a commodious clubhouse. The officers, in addition to President Garven, are Harry C. Northrop, vice-president; Joseph S. Dunham, treasurer, and Louis Hooker Palmer, secretary. The board of governers is composed of Edward Dunn, chairman; F. E. Highbie, T. F. Dickerson, A. E. Owen, J. H. Moore and W. J. Dougherty.

Preparing to Open Summer Camp.

The Plainfield Union, King's Daughters, are making preparations to open the summer camp for the babies on Johnston's Drive. The committee in charge of the camp find that several improvements will be necessary before the place is opened for the season. The camp will be conducted this year the same as in past seasons and Miss Olive DeLany, the trained nurse, will care for the sick babies as before.

Chairman of Committee.

The Republican Club, of New York, one of the first to open its campaign committee at this early date will ex-Assemblyman Edward R. Finch as its chairman. Mr. Finch is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Finch, of Park avenue, this city. A familiar name on the committee is that of Alexander Gilbert, of West Eighth street, president of the Market and Fulton Bank, New York.

GREAT MEN OF SOMERSET

S. S. Swackhammer Tells Mt. Bethel Graduates of Them In Address.

GROWTH OF CHARACTER

Strong Men Come From the Fields and Woods; Narrow Streets of the City Cramp the Soul.

Former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer made the chief address at the graduation exercises of the Mt. Bethel School Friday night. His subject was "The Farmer Boy and the School." He drew an inspiring picture of the strength that springs from the rural life, and to point the lesson of it he read a roster of the greatest men Somerset county has sent out into the world.

Mr. Swackhamer spoke substantially as follows:

"How blest the farmer's simple life;
How pure the joy it yields;
Far from the world's temptestuous strife,
Free in the scented fields.

"By the tall, dark mountains, by the deep-toned seas, by the purling rivulet and the majestic river, in the dim woods and the open fields, we look through Nature, up to Nature's God.

"Emerson says: 'Only as the masters of the world have called Nature to their aid, have they reached the height of magnificence. This is the meaning of their hanging gardens, villas, islands, parks and preserves, to back itself with humanity with these strong accessories.'

"The narrow walls of the city cramp the soul, and even the city dog, for want of room, has learned to wag his tail up and down. It was under an apple tree in his uncle's orchard that Sir Isaac Newton discovered that Law which permeates the Universe and controls alike the pebble and the constellations. It was a solitary peasant girl who read the horologue of the stars, and, recalling at the rewardrice of a vacillating Dauphin, led him to victory and a crown. It was on the banks of the quiet Avon, that Shakespeare, that matchless painter of the human soul, worked the miracl of the imagination and 'foresailed and beggared posterity.'

'Within the sound of the booming waves, 'on the peachy margin of the sea,' Demosthenes pointed those arrows of his invective before which the spirit of Macedonia trembled and grew pale. It was amid the shaggy forests of German, that Martin Luther forged the thunderbolt of the Reformation which tore the shackles from the human conscience.

"But turn from general history to let us localize the subject, for Somerset county has produced men of character and brain, men distinguished for genius and achievement.

"Witness William Paterson, the first Attorney General, a member of the convention which met at Philadelphia in 1787, where he and Edmund Randolph were the leading spirits in the framing of the Federal Constitution; a United States Senator and Governor of New Jersey, who produced the most perfect system of statute law to be found in any State of the Union; who was placed on the Supreme Court bench of the United States by George Washington, and who enrolled among his law students Governor Throop, of Georgia, and the celebrated Aaron Burr.

"Witnes Samuel L. Southard, the intimate friends of James Monroe, who as United States Senator, drew the Missouri Compromise which passed on motion of Henry Clay, and who left the office of Governor to enter the United States Senate of which he became the presiding officer and so continued to the time of his death.

"Witness William L. Dayton, United States Senator, Attorney General and Minister to France (by appointment of Abraham Lincoln), a noted journalist, an able advocate and a skillful diplomat.

"Witness Andrew Kirk Patrick, lawyer and jurist, Chief Justice of New Jersey for twenty-one years, noted for his opinions which were of deep learning, sound reasoning and polished language; the Judge who decided the famous case of Arnold vs. Mundy, that laid down the doctrine which has become established law, that navigable rivers, where the tide ebbs and flows, the ports, bays, coasts and seas, including both the waters and the land under the waters, for the purposes of fishing and repassing, navigation, fishing, fowling, sustenance, and all other uses of the water and its products, are common to all the people of New Jersey. And that the proprietors of New Jersey do not, under the grant from the Duke of York, take such a property in the soil of the navigable rivers in this State, that they could grant several fisheries thereto.

"Witness Theodore Frelinghuysen, who took his seat in the United States Senate beside Webster, Clay and Calhoun, and was nominated for Vice-President of the United States on the ticket with Henry Clay, who was distinguished for his consummate ability as an acute and broad-minded statesman and of whom Daniel Webster said, 'There is not a man of purer character, of more sober temperament, of more accessable manners, and more firm, unbending, uncompromising principles than Theodore Frelinghuysen.'

"Witness Frederick Frelinghuysen, the astute lawyer, the ripe scholar, the urbane United States Senator, who in 1870, during President Grant's administration, declined a nomination of Minister to the Court of St. James.

"Witness John P. Stockton, the great attorney general, whose brilliant career attracted universal attention and whose profound learning and impassioned eloquence were everywhere recognized.

"Witness Dr. Talmage, the world renowned pulpit orator, who like the great apostle to the Gentiles, reasoned of temperance, righteousness and judgment to come; and who being dead, yet speaketh to the millions of mankind. But the history of Somerset county is so replete with the names of noted characters; men of genious and high attainment, that the mere calling of the roll of fame would exhaust the time which I should occupy.

"But my young farmer friend says he is too young for great exertions and achievements. It is said that at 32, Alexander the Great wept for another world to conquer. At twenty-six the Earl of Chatham was the greatest statesman of all Europe and the Prime Minister of that Empire on whose territory the sun never sets. And Henry Clay, the mill boy of the slashes, who could charm a Senate and hold spell all by his art, was permitted to violate the Constitution of the United States and to enter the Federal Legislature at the age of twenty-nine.

"With the public school maintained and conducted as it is in Somerset county today, there is no excuse for the youth who fails to acquire an education which will thoroughly equip him for the battle of life. There are splendid opportunities, but unless a young man feels himself tugging at the cable which binds him to the earth; unless he feels within him the flutter of wings; unless he hears voices calling to him over the mountains, nobility is dead within him, and failure is his fate. The elements are against him. Not alone is the school and the university; they exist in the mind, in the conscience, in the will. Shakespeare has said, 'The flighty purpose never is o'ertook unless the deed go with it. The seal which Napoleon used for his love letters was the figure of a sun going down behind the hills, under which were the words, 'The night cometh.'"

TALENTED ARTIST

RETURNS FROM FRANCE.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall's Daughter Studied Under Great Menard.

Miss Caroline Minturn Hall was one of the passengers on the steamer Vaderland, which arrived from Antwerp a few days ago. She will spend the summer time at home, Mr. and Mrs. David P. Hall, of Madison avenue, before going to Newport, where she will be the guest of her grandmother, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, for the remainder of the summer. Miss Hall has completed her art studies in Paris, and has brought to this country all her pictures and studies with the exception of those now on exhibition at the new salon in the French capitol.

The Paris correspondent of the Chicago Evening Post speaks thus of Miss Hall and her work now at the Salon: "In the department of designs and cartoons two drawings for pictures—'Evening Over the Chaos" and "The Oaks," by Caroline Minturn Hall, attracts attention. Miss Hall is one of the promising young American painters. She has been for three years a pupil of the great Menard and the growth of her work from year to year is worthy of such a master. As she is the granddaughter of Julia Ward Howe and the niece of Laura E. Richards, the author of "Captain January," one expects extraordinary work from this talented young woman.

Endeavorers Entertained.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church entertained Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Odgen Meeker at New Market. After playing games refreshments were served and at a late hour the Endeavorers returned by stage to their homes. Those in the party included M. Edwin Burroughs, Miss Helen Burroughs, Miss Leah Hammond, Miss Winifred Hammond, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Ballentyne, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Hummer, Miss Lizzie Wilcox, Miss Bertha Wilcox, Stanley Karner, Miss Emma Korff and Miss Marion Englehardt.

Mission Band Meets.

The Young Women's Mission Band of the Unity Reformed church held its last meeting for the season in the parlors of the church Friday afternoon. The time was occupied in arranging work for the summer, which will include the making of useful garments by the Sewing Guild for the missionaries' boxes and barrels to be sent away in the fall. An encouraging letter was read at the meeting from a missionary to Japan, telling of the latest efforts there in mission enterprise The band will not meet again until October.

Harvard Graduates.

Among the New Jersey students who are candidates for degrees at Harvard University this month are Arthur F. Conant and Philip Bartlett Wells, of this city Mr. Conant will receive the degree of bachelor of arts and Mr. Wells will be honored as a member of the history class in the Graduate School.

SUBMIT SEWER REPORT

Committee From Borough Council Details Result of Its Investigation.

PUBLIC MEETING NEXT

Friday, June 15, the Date Set and the People Will Be Asked to Air Their Views on the Subject.

The sewer investigation committee of the borough council, recently appointed by Mayor Smalley, made its first report to that body at the regular meeting Friday. It was given in a clear and concise form and in the belief that the taxpayers would fully understand and vote accordingly, it was decided to hold a public meeting in the council chambers Friday night, June 15. This is one of the most important steps yet taken by the officials and what follows in the report to govern the necessary system will depend upon how the report is viewed by the people. In detail, as presented by Chairman Van-Arsdale, it was as follows:

To the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield.
Gentlemen:

Your committee delegated to investigate and report upon the proposition to establish a system of sewerage for the borough begs to report as follows:

Numerous meetings have been held by the committee and considerable investigation and study has been given on the subject in the course of which the engineer, Mr. Pierson, has furnished maps and profiles, the result of surveys, and plans and estimates showing a feasible system of sewers in the borough and the probable cost of the same.

These maps, plans, estimates, &c., are available for inspection at your convenience.

In its consideration of the subject your committee has been greatly assisted by Mr. J. O. Osgood and others who have advised with them.

As a result of our investigation your committee believes that the outlet of any system adopted must in a general way follow the direction of the flow of the streams, Green brook and Stony brook, and that it will be found necessary in any event to carry the outfall sewer to some point southwest of Rock avenue and that in considering the subject it will be found most convenient, at least for preliminary consideration to assume that the outfall sewer must extend to Rock avenue, the southwesterly boundary of the borough, at a point near the Plainfield disposal plant.

Upon this assumption we are able to give some figures which will to some extent show the relative cost of emptying the borough sewage into the Plainfield side (if a satisfactory arrangement with the city can be made) and of establishing an independent disposal plant of our own either within or beyond the borough limits:

Thus it is estimated that a satisfactory system of sewers covering about sixteen miles of our streets *(there are something less than four-*teen miles of water mains) and about two miles of outfall sewer to Rock avenue, can be installed complete, with 196 manholes, 16 flush tanks, 12 lampholes and 800 specials and including engineering and incidentals for $65,000; also that a disposal plant capable of taking 350,000 gallons daily can be constructed for $35,000, also that the annual bond will probably cost $15,000; making a total cost assuming that disposal plant were located at Rock avenue of $115,000. If the plant is located below Rock avenue the cost would be increased about $5,000 for each additional mile but if a point is found where natural materials suit*able for sewer beds is found this* would be reduced considerably. If having reached Rock avenue a pumping plant is built to pump the sewage to the Plainfield beds the cost of such plant would be about $3,500. Electric power to operate such pump would cost each year about $500.

Assuming that an agreement with Plainfield can be reached and that the sewage should be discharge into the city beds one-fourth of the total number of gallons discharged thereon by the city and borough jointly we reach the following conclusion:

Total cost of Plainfield disposal plant including land, $145,500; less land not used for disposal purposes, &c., which possibly may be deducted, $25,500; dividing this by four leaves amount in which the borough must pay interest, $30,000; add original cost of pumping plant, $3,500; total, $33,500; interest at 4 per cent. per year on $33,500, $1,340; cost of power for pump, $500; one quarter of operating expenses of Plainfield plant yearly, $1,160; total, $2,000. Now figure from these data it will cost us to discharge on the Plainfield beds each year $2,500; $2,500 is the interest at 4 per cent. on $62,500. In other words it seems that we will be obliged to pay if we use the Plainfield beds the interest on say $62,500. While on the other hand it seems that we can establish a plant of our own at a cost which will vary, depending upon whether we locate it within the borough or a mile or two beyond the borough limits, between $50,000 and $70,000.

There are many phases of this subject to be carefully considered before any definite action is taken, and a change of plans may also considerably change the figures given. Your committee feels that before any plan is adopted an expression of public sentiment should be sought on the whole subject and particularly upon the question of whether we should strive to use the Plainfield plant or build one of our own and if the latter, then where it should be located.

Your committee therefore recommends that a meeting of the public be called at which our tax-payers and voters be asked to express themselves on this most important subject.

Dated June 1st, 1906.

Respectfully submitted.

When the report had been read and the agreement made on the date for the public hearing, Mr. Lee suggested that the fact be advertised in the two Plainfield newspapers.

"Why not the North Plainfield Review' as well?,' suggested Councilman Van Winkle.

"I don't see any use in wasting the borough's money that way," retorted Mr. Lee. The other councilmen with the exception of Mr. Van Winkle and Mr. Krewson, seemed to agree with him as on voting the borough weekly was passed by.

WANTS THE BUILDING ORDINANCE REVISED

MAYOR SMALLEY SAYS IT IS NOT STRINGENT ENOUGH.

Mayor Smalley has his axe out for boroughites who want to use the sidewalk for building purposes and at Friday night's council meeting, he instructed Counsellor Charles A. Reed to revise the building ordinance.

"It's an all right ordinance," said the executive, "but it's powers are limited and it doesn't cover half enough territory. It should take in the entire residential section of the borough and the authorities should have the right to stop people from getting into the street with small structures and thus depreciating the value of property in the neighborhood. We had an instance of this kind on Duer street a short time ago when a man tried to build a store with the porch encroaching on the sidewalk. It would not only have been in the way but would have spoiled the appearance of that entire section. I want the ordinance amended so as to enable us to deal rigidly with such cases, not only on Somerset street but in the outlying districts."

Councilman Krewson wanted to know how far the building extended in Plainfield.

"So far as I know," said the mayor, "it goes out to the baseball grounds. "Those who keep track of local events and happenings saw the joke and there was a good laugh.

In the regular order of business, J. V. Wandling was granted permission to make repairs to the residence at 39 Prospect place and J. C. Manning, acting for C. Frank French, received a permit to build a one-story brick store on Somerset street adjoining Mr. Trenk's building at Somerset place. The New York and New Jersey Telephone Co. was granted the right to open parts of Craig place and Somerset street to lay conduits and lights were ordered placed on Watchung street and one on Waichung avenue between Pearl and Chatham street. On a resolution introduced by Councilman McGee it was voted to have all bills against the borough to be in the hands of the clerk before the last Friday of each month.

E. L. ELECTION.

Angus P. Atwood Chosen President of a First M. E. Society.

Reports of the various committees and the election of officers comprised the chief business transacted at the annual meeting of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church held in Vincent chapel, Friday night. The committee reports showed that the past year was one of gratifying success, spiritually and in other ways. The treasurer reported a balance with all bills paid and the membership of the league has steadily increased.

All of the officers, except the second vice president, chairman of the world evangelism, were elected last night, and this one selection will be made on Sunday. The officers chosen follow:

President, Angus P. Atwood; first vice president, chairman of spiritual work, Maurice McGrath; third vice president, chairman mercy and help committee, Mrs. Thomas MacDonald; fourth vice president, chairman of social work, Miss Helen Whitney; secretary, Arthur Bingaman; treasurer, George M. Rittenhouse, Jr.

"Bobby" Leach To Go Up.

"Bobby" Leach, the veteran balloonist, will leave his lunch wagon in the hands of his chief assistant for the next two weeks while he fills an engagement in Providence, R. I. He will make ascensions every day. Mrs. Leach will go with him.

All fruits in season, of the finest sort procurable at Alex. Lusardi's store, West Front street.

The Southern Restaurant has a lunch and growing patronage, because its service is excellent and unsurpassable.

LAUNCH SUMMIT BRANCH

Colby Organization Starts Under Powerful Influences in Lawrence's Stronghold.

JUDGE RUNYON SPEAKS

Hamilton Wright Mabie Chairman of the Meeting—Gathering of the Best Men of the City.

City Judge William N. Runyon, as president of the Union County League for Equal Taxation, went to Summit last night to help start the branch of the Colby organization there. It was launched with a fine degree of enthusiasm. Y. M. C. A. Hall, where the meeting was held, was well filled, and the audience was made up of the best men of the city and the surrounding district.

Hamilton W. Mabie was chairman of the meeting, and he made a ringing speech. Mayor Pagan delivered the address of the evening.

The branch was organized for separate work in each of the two wards of Summit. Charles H. Grant is chairman for the First ward and Ernest E. North for the Second.

Judge Runyon spoke after Mayor Pagan. He was enthusiastically greeted, after Mr. Mabie had introduced him as "the man who had been tested." He urged the new branch to work hard and to stand fast in the faith that victory must and would be theirs. The old political leaders of Union county, he said, were not the head of the party because of their brains or their genius, and there was nothing to do but come out at the primaries and vote to beat them.

The Republican party in this State, the Judge said, was suffering from fatty degeneration of the conscience. He laughed at the claims to credit made by the State leaders now because of the remedial legislation passed by the last Legislature.

"I will give them credit for passing those laws," he said, "when I hear that the trustees of the Carnegie Hero Fund have given a medal to a Kansas farmer for hustling his family into the cellar before the cyclone hit them." Laughter and applause made it impossible for the Judge to proceed for a minute.

He recounted again, as at Elizabeth, the interview he had early in his conversion with a machine leader, who declared that every small tradesman who enrolled in the reform movement would be attacked in business. The Judge said he did not intend to ask any man who might be attacked to hold himself open to assault, but would take a simple assurance of support at the polls without seeking for enrollment. The names on the polls were no indication of the strength of the revolt against the machine.

The movement was not started, the Judge said, for the purpose of slashing the party ticket if things did not come his way, but was not the new idea hoped; nor was it started to assail corporations, as such. It was launched to shatter the great evil of special privileges for the corporations and to make them the equal of the individual before the law, and no more.

The Judge read over the aims and principles of the organization, and in commenting on the demand for popular choice of United States Senator, he observed dryly that he didn't believe any of the present representatives of the State of New Jersey in the upper house would be holding their positions if the people had had anything to do with the selection. The sally was greeted with much laughter and sustained applause.

Judge Runyon closed his speech with an earnest plea for hard work on the part of every recruit.

MISS PENNINGTON
BRIDE OF A. W. LONG.

Groom Is a Preceptor at Princeton University.

Miss Catherine Colt Pennington, of Paterson, and Augustus W. Long, of Princeton, were married at noon today at the home of the bride's uncle, Albert H. Atterbury, of West Seventh street. Rev. Dr. Samuel Studdiford, formerly pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, Trenton, but now retired, performed the ceremony. Owing to the recent death of the bride's mother, the affair was a quiet one. There were about thirty guests from New York, Paterson, Princeton, Trenton and this city.

The bride was attended by Miss Mildren Wood, of Princeton, and Miss Adrienne Holmes, of Paterson, as bridesmaids. The best man was Nicholas Stahl, one of the masters at the Lawrenceville Academy.

The bride is a member of an old *New Jersey family, her great grand*father being Governor Pennington, and her great-great-grandfather being Elisha Boudinot, for a long time a distinguished member of the New Jersey Supreme Court and otherwise prominently identified with State affairs.

The groom, who was from North Carolina, is preceptor in English at Princeton University, which position he has held for a long time.

Following the ceremony a wedding luncheon was served and during the afternoon the couple left on a wedding journey. They will make their home in Princeton.

CONSOLIDATION NOT DEAD

Subject Suddenly Shows Signs of Life at Borough Council Meeting.

ANOTHER COMMITTEE.

Matter Reconsidered on Councilman Smith's Motion and He, Councilmen Lee and Krewson Put on Committee.

To all intents and purposes having been disposed of for a long time to come at a meeting a few weeks ago, the question of consolidating the two Plainfields was suddenly revived at last night's regular session of the borough council. Incidentally the resurrection put a little ginger in the meeting and it proved to be something like old times, for not long years ago when harmony stayed out in the hall.

Councilman Smith did the trick by getting up and declaring that in his opinion the request of the Board of Trade to have three members appointed to confer with three from the city council in regard to consolidation, had not been given full consideration. When the communication was received, Mayor Smalley named a committee of three to discuss the advisability of doing as requested and these were voted back unfavorably. Accordingly, the matter was dropped.

Mr. Smith asserted that many boroughites had spoken to him about this disposition of the letter and he asked that the communication be reconsidered. He was supported by Messrs. Van Arsdale and Lee, who said it would be no more than an act of courtesy to have such a committee confer with the city representatives and they were willing to have it talked over.

Councilman Van Winkle, who was chairman of the three appointed, stated that his committee had talked the matter over thoroughly and that their decision was reached after considering all sides of the question. He said that the subject of consolidation brought up at this time might lead to confliction with the sewer question, some people believing the borough was seeking to bring it about solely for the purpose of getting the city beds without paying. The question of reconsid*eration as suggested by Smith was* put to a vote and carried, Councilmen Van Winkle and Krewson alone voting against it.

When the matter passed, Mr. Smith offered another resolution to the effect that the committee of three be appointed to confer with the committee from the City Council. This was also put to a vote and went through on the following from Messrs. Van Winkle and Krewson.

"Since you have paved the way," said Mayor Smalley, "there's no time like the present so I'll appoint the committee at once. I think it would be a good thing to name members who were opposed to consolidation when it was agitated before, so I'll make Mr. Lee chairman" and ask Mr. Smith and Mr. Van Winkle to serve with him."

The appointment was accepted by the first two but vigorous objection came from Mr. Van Winkle. He was firm in his decision not to serve and the matter was at a standstill until Councilman Krewson made some remark about the vagueness of the Board of Trade's plan and added that he would "like a little light on the subject."

"Why to be sure," quickly replied the mayor, "and I'll give you a chance to pick some more pointing you in Mr. Van Winkle's place. You can have your credentials at once."

"I didn't mean it that way," said Mr. Krewson, but he had to join in the laugh with the other councilmen and did not press the matter.

The committee will await the action of the City Council, which received the Board of Trade letter and has done nothing as yet.

Saved by a Hair—

The wife of a Kansas farmer, so the story goes, got tired of asking him to fix some things about the day after he had come home from town told him she had done the work herself.

"And you know," she said, "the drawer that was locked for over a month, and which you said couldn't be opened except by a locksmith? Well, I fixed it myself. I opened it!"

"Well, well! How in the world did you do it?"

"With a hairpin. And the oven door," she continued, "has been slipping around one one hinge for ever so long, just because you were too lazy to fix it, but it's all right now."

"Well I'm glad you had it fixed."

"Had it fixed! I fixed it myself—with a hairpin. And then that crayon portrait of mother that stood in the corner for almost six solid weeks because you never would bring me any picture hooks—I got it up with a hook I made myself—out of a pairpin."

"Well, well," was all he could say.

"And there's Willie. You've been coaxing him and bribing him for over a year trying to break him of biting his nails, and I broke him in a week."

"With a hairpin?" he inquired meekly.

"No!" she snapped. "Don't be a goose! With a hairbrush."—Kansas City Journal.

REFORM IN SOMERSET

Steps Have Been Taken to Organize a Colby Club.

BOROUGHITES LEAD

I. P. Runyon Started It With a Visit to Senator Colby—Robert Clark, Jr., For Chairman of the Club.

Former Senator Charles A. Reed will have a chance to make good his offer to welcome Senator Colby's en*trance into Somerset county. Steps* have been taken to organize a Colby organization in the county, and it will be a reality very shortly.

The inception of the organization started three weeks ago on North Plainfield. I. P. Runyon started the movement with a journey to Senator Colby's office. He laid the conditions in Somerset before the reform leader, and asked him if they did not offer his encouragement for the formation of a Colby club. The upshot of that conference was that Senator Colby agreed to launch the purification movement in Somerset, and steps were immediately taken to bring it to a head.

Robert Clark, Jr., was secured as chairman of the proposed club. Mr. Clark, however, was compelled to leave town in a business trip, and a committee of three well known antiorganization men took up the active work of organization. The three were W. W. Webb, Jr., J. H. Cooley and E. D. Hutchinson.

They consulted with former Senator Lewis A. Thompson, of Somerville, and he joined the movement. Plans will be made for the speedy organization of the club. Nothing has been done yet of a definite nature, but the men at the head of the movement are keeping themselves in touch with the situation, ready for a full plunge into the campaign as soon as it is laid out.

It is supposed that A. V. D. Honeyman, now that he has returned from Europe, will be drawn into the move*ment. The proposed club will, it is* assumed, as a matter of course, be firmly anti-Reed.

ST. STEPHEN'S REPORT.

Annual Statement of Netherwood Parish Sent to Bishop.

The annual report of St. Stephen's church just sent to Bishop Scarborough shows that there are eighty-two families in the parish. There have been thirteen baptisms of infants and one adult. Fourteen persons were confirmed. The communicants at last report were 141, added, 20; died, 2; present number, 133; matriages, 1; burials, 5. The financial statement is as follows: Parochial receipts—church offerings, $784.27; Sunday-school offerings, $125.90; donations, $500; guilds, $137.50; duplex, $199; consolidation missions, $2.50; Garwood Mission chapel, $10; Trenton Mission Home, $5; Bishop's Advent offering, $8.09; total, $25.59.

Parochial expenditures—rector's salary, $600; current expenses, $276.99; poor, $94; the Sunday-school, $71.60; repairs, $55.38; payment of debts, $10; other objects, $37.44; total, $1,145.91; general missions, $37.31; foreign missions, $2.37; Muhlenberg Hospital, $13.33; total, $53.01.

In addition to the above, these boxes have been contributed: St. Ann's Guild, Archdeacon B. M. Sparr, West Virginia, $70; Junior Auxiliary, Alaska, $5.31; China, 75 cents; Dakota and Georgia, $29.50; Sunday-school, St. Clies' Honea, $7.25; total, $112.81.

The parish house statement shows that $4,012.82 has been raised toward the total cost of $5,000, leaving a balance of $836.17 yet to be paid. With the return of the rector from Asbury Park, and renewed effort, it is hoped to clear the new parish house of all indebtedness.

Comfort the Thing in Men's Dress.

Comfort is the watchword of the present season. It is, of course, an ideal worth considering, if not the highest ideal. Propriety is an element in sartorial art, as in other kinds, and fashion utterly at variance with the physical requirements of mankind cannot be a good fashion. There is an obvious fallacy, however, in the assumption that everything is justified by the idiosyncrasy of the individual. To say that a silk hat or a buttoned boot is no excuse for wearing anything else with a frock coat. On the other hand, that "sweet disorder in the dress" which Herrick praised may be consistent with the strictest sartorial morality; for such disorder may as easily be the fruit of artistic impulse as of loose principles. A man without a waistcoat is a beautiful or a disgusting object according to the kind of coat and shirt he wears.—Providence (R. I.) Journal.

LARGEST GRADUATING CLASS TO BE GIVEN DIPLOMAS AT PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL

Plainfield High School Graduating Class 1906.

Dr. J. H. Canfield, formerly chancellor of the University of Nebraska, and now librarian of Columbia University, has been secured as the speaker for the commencement exercises of the Plainfield High School, to be held at the First Baptist church Thursday night, June 21.

Principal Ira Travell will complete the details for the commencement this week and they will be announced next week. There are forty-seven members of the graduating class, the largest class ever turned out of the local public schools.

The members of the class are the Misses Antoinette Aalholm, Avis Irene Aldrich, Lena Bohan, Ethel Margaret Bolce, Ruth Bullock, Mary Laura Conover, Florence May Cooney, Sadie Everett Coyle, Lillian Demarest, Margaret Demarest, Bessie Evelyn Dunham, Hazel Gardener, Katherine Garretson, May Tilsworth Hallett, Antoinette Dyrett Hill, Bertha Celestine Hill, Miriam Manchester Horton, Gertrude Laura Hunter, valedictorian; Louise Klein, Christella Mac*Murray*, Ethel Murray, Anna Rafferty, Cora Louise Ricketts, Eva M. Rogers, Alice Sawyer, Anna Shepherd, Ruth Isabelle Thompson, Ellen Holmes Ulrich, Lillian Anna Walsh, Elizabeth Crane Winter, salutatorian; Hudson Coe Burr, James Malcolm Davis, Howard Brooks, Stuart Freeman, Fox Freeman, president of the class; Joseph William Gavett, Jr., Clarence Robin Heaume, Benjamin Herrmann, Joseph Henry Jones, Philip Leichtentritt, Edward Leslie Palmer, George M. Rittenhouse. Abe H. Rubenstein, Robert Ernest Rogen, Milton Wilcox St. John, Russel Foote Stryker, Arthur Stoddard Whitney, Harold Cammeyer Todd.

TRAIN SERVICE POOR COMMON COUNCIL TOLD

115 CITIZENS PRESENT PETITION AND COMMITTEE IS TO ACT.

In the hope of securing a more satisfactory train service between Plainfield and New York during the middle of the day, a petition in five parts, signed by Elston M. French and 115 other interested persons, was presented to the Common Council at the June meeting, Monday. The petitioners asked that the Council take the matter up with the officials of the New Jersey Central with a view to remedying the existing trouble.

The petitioners complained that the express trains leaving New York during the forenoon and which previous to December last stopped at Plainfield have been taken off and that since December no express trains from New York stop here between 11 o'clock in the morning and 2 o'clock in the afternoon. This arrangement was found to be unsatisfactory to those who desire to bring prospective real estate purchasers to Plainfield. The petitioners also complained of a similar condition of affairs existing in the schedule of trains from Philadelphia to New York during the forenoon and early afternoon. There are several fast trains, but they only stop here on signal to take on passengers for the west or allow western passengers to get off.

The communication was similar to one presented to the Board of Trade at a recent meeting, but that body, so far as known, has taken no action looking to a betterment of the service.

President Mellick referred the matter to the public affairs committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Dietz Serenaded.

Upon their return from their wedding trip last night, Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Dietz were given a reception and serenade at their home in Rahway, which was attended by many Plainfielders, as well as guests from Newark, New York and Rahway. A quartette of college chums, William Ulrich, Herman Ulrich, John Hochle and James Oppenheimer, rendered several selections. Dancing and instrumental music also helped to pass a pleasant evening. A company of thirty young people serenaded the bride and groom and were rewarded by a bountiful supper. Mr. and Mrs. Dietz received many handsome gifts.

Children's Day Exercises.

Children's Day exercises at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will be held on Sunday, June 17, when the offerings will be given to the Presbyterian Publication Society.

Gave Lawn Party.

Mrs. W. S. Angieman gave a lawn party on Saturday afternoon, at her home on Waynewood place, in honor of the birthday of her aunt, Mrs. Mary Clarkson. The affair passed off delightfully.

BOARD OF EDUCATION RETIRES MISS FORCE

SHE HAS TAUGHT IN THE CITY SCHOOLS FOR THIRTY-SEVEN YEARS.

The city Board of Education at its meeting, Monday night, retired Miss Emma Force, who has been a teacher in the local schools for the past thirty-seven years. The action of the members was taken at her own request as she wishes to devote her entire time to the care of her invalid mother, but under the provisions of the State law she will receive an annuity of one-half the average of her salary for the past five years for the remainder of her life. The board passed the following resolution in connection with the retirement:

"Resolved, That in pursuance to her request Miss Emma Force be placed on the pension list, to be paid an annuity of one-half the average of her salary for the past five years, payment to be made in the same way and at the same time as the salaries of the other teachers; that the clerk of the board be directed to express to Miss Force the board's appreciation of her long and efficient services."

Miss Force has been in the Franklin school during the greater part of the thirty-seven years and she has always been a great favorite with students. There are many business men in Plainfield today who were taught by her and they remember her as a conscientious, pains-taking instructor. She had a way of making herself the friend of every boy and girl in the class and the majority of the friendships have remained. There is only one other teacher in the city corps who has been in the service longer than Miss Force, Miss Ellen Niles, of the High school.

SMALLEYS TO BUILD SAUSAGE FACTORY

TWO-STORY STRUCTURE TO BE ERECTED ON SITE OF BLACKSMITH SHOP.

Smalley Brothers, North avenue butchers, who are the owners of the property now occupied by J. E. Flannery on East Third street as a blacksmith shop, have had plans prepared for the erection of a two-story building, 22x50, on the site, where the firm will cut Jersey pork and manufacture sausage. It is expected that work on the new building will be started August 1. In the meantime the old buildings, which are among the landmarks of the city, will be torn down. Mr. Flannery has occupied the property for a great many years.

Smalley Brothers will equip the building with the latest machinery. This arrangement will not make any change in the firm's detail business on North avenue and the meat market will be continued as at present. Lack of room in the North avenue building has compelled the firm to establish additional quarters.

SHAKESPEARE AS OF OLD

Hartridge School Pupils Present "As You Like It" on Greensward.

ON MR. MALI'S GROUNDS

Production Creditable In Every Way —Young Players Know Their Lines and Read Them Well.

With pupils of the Hartridge School in every part, Shakespeare's "As You Like It," was presented on the lawn of the John Taylor Johnston place, East Second street, Monday afternoon. The performance was witnessed by a society gathering numbering close to 500.

The scene was laid at the side of the brook, in one of the prettiest parts of the grounds. As in all open*air Shakespearian productions*, there were no walls between acts, the play going on steadily, from start to finish.

The production was highly creditable. The members of the cast knew their lines thoroughly, and read them well. The costuming was all that could be desired. The girls in male parts took their roles gracefully.

Three old English glees were sung in the play. Dorothy Tremaine sang two and wee Robert Miller sang the other. Pretty dances were executed by the Loves and Cupids and the shepherdesses and foresters at the end of the last act. The incidental music was played by the Schumann String Quartette, of Newark, with Miss Seward, of the faculty, at the piano.

The cast:

Duke, Frederica R. Mead; Frederick, Edith Mellick; Amiens, Dorothy Tremaine; Jaques, Virginia M. Ross; Orlando, Frances D. Stiles; Le Beau, Margaret B. Buttfield; Touchstone, Ann R. Waldo; Corin, Constance Pitts; Silvius, Helen Burke; Charles, Marjory Douglas; Adam, Louise Fox; William, Alice H. Smith; Rosalind, Evelyn Butts; Celia, Katherine McCutchen; Phebe, Helen Joy; Audrey, Helen Beeler; Lords: Margaret Schofield, Abbie Holstein, Beatrice Hedges; ladies: Frances Iredell, Helen Riordan, Miriam Howe; Foresters: Marjory W. Brown, Shirley H. Curry, Mary Rushmore, Marjory Douglas; Shepherdesses: Frances Hyde, Gladys Chase, Edith Foster, Helen Harrington; Pages: Robert M. Miller, Orton O. G. Dale, Roger D. Mellick; Hymen, Winifred Rapalje; Loves: Katherine Drayton, Dorcas Bomann, Louise Patterson, Janet Lane, Elisabeth Bourne, Helen Terry, Mildred Miller; Cupids: Stanley W. Burke, Allen V. Heely, Jack P. Stevens, James H. Ackerman, Dale Warren, Seward Lyon, Bruce Buttfield.

Miss Marguerite Walbridge, of the faculty, coached the members of the cast. The dancers were trained by Miss Laura M. Keanish, also of the faculty.

MISS COLE'S GIFT TO NEW BRONSWICK CHURCH

SCOTCH PLAINS WOMAN PRESENTS MEMORIAL WINDOWS.

The beautiful stained glass windows given by Miss Emilie S. Coles, of Scotch Plains, daughter of the late Abraham Coles, M. D., LL. D., *are now in position in the First Re*formed church, New Brunswick, and are greatly admired. Four were put in the past week and four more will be placed in position during August.

The announcement by Rev. Dr. Pockman, the pastor, has aroused great interest. He has informed his people that one of the widows contains a real ruby forming the centre of a flower. In a few words Dr. Pockman described where the ruby could be found and it has since been greatly admired by every one.

The windows are of great beauty, the colors being exceedingly rich and harmoniously blended. They represent four periods in the life of Christ—the babe in Bethlehem, the wise men bringing gifts to the child Jesus, Jesus going up to the temple at the age of twelve and Christ blessing little children.

Dr. Pockman has given the highest praise to Miss Coles for her gift, explaining that she presented the windows to the church in the hope that they would be object lessons to the children and would bring the life of Christ home to them when they could not remember the preacher's words.

At the service when the windows were unveiled, the hymns written by the late Abraham Coles, which were on the banneretts given to the Sunday-school at its anniversary, were sung by the congregation.

Saturday's Game Counts.

Considerable discussion is going on among the sports interested in the base hit pools over Saturday's game. Under the rules it was a "full game," the visitors having played five innings and the locals four, which makes a 4½ inning contest. Three hits were made by Plainfield, one each by Bertwhistle, Leonard and Curley.

PASSAGE OF ORDINANCES

Measures For Sewer System Extension, Grading and Sidewalks Taken Up.

REPORTS ARE READ

Transfer of $1,800 From General to Fire Fund—$200 For Town *Improvement Associa*tion.

The regular order of business was suspended at the June meeting of the Common Council, Monday, to allow for public hearings on the proposed ordinances to establish the south-side sanitary sewer; to establish the grade in a portion of Leland avenue, and to provide for the repair and improvement of sidewalks in the East End of the city. No one appeared to speak for or against the ordinances and during the evening they were read and adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised.

In the absence of President R. I. Tolles, who was detained at home by illness, the chair was occupied by Councilman Mellick. Councilmen Montgomery and Tyler were also absent from the meeting. Not a single member of the license committee was present and it was necessary to authorize members of other committees to sign necessary bills.

J. Clarence Ogden having secured an equity in the property, 921-925 Park avenue, offered the city $735 for its interest in the property and for the conveyance of the deed to him, the city having acquired the property at a tax sale. In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel, the proposition was accepted and the mayor and clerk were authorized to arrange for the transfer provided the money is paid within fourteen days.

The offer of the Town Improvement Association of Plainfield and North Plainfield to care for the city park until November 1, 1906, providing the usual appropriation of $200 was made, was accepted in a resolution offered by Mr. Mansfield.

Understanding that the city is desirous of selling the property in Plainfield avenue, owned by the late Charles McCarthy, which was bought in at a tax sale, Bridget McCarthy, a sister of the dead man, made a proposition to the city, in a communication, offering to pay an amount equivalent to all claims against the property to get possession of it. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

The Board of School Estimate, through the secretary, F. T. Woodhull, informed the Common Council that it had determined that the amount needed for school purposes for the ensuing year, exclusive of that apportioned to the city by the superintendent of schools, would be $73,000. The communication was filed and action will be taken on the matter later in the month.

David C. Smalley and Charles McGinley, owners of the adjoining property, petitioned the Common Council to close Church street, from East Third street to the railroad, a short distance. The petition was made in view of plans Mr. Smalley has to build in the vicinity. The matter was referred to the fire and building committee.

Foster Callahan, who received the contract for the building of the *extension of the sanitary sewer sys*tem, at the last meeting, asked for an extension of time to June 4, 1906, to prepare his bonds. The matter was adjusted satisfactorily.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that during May sixteen permits were granted.

Mr. Daniel offered a resolution, which was adopted, transferring $1,800 from the general to the fire fund. The same member also moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet on Tuesday night, June 12, when a supplementary tax ordinance will be introduced to provide for the money to be raised by taxation for the public schools.

Mr. Gloak offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing H. C. VanEmburgh, civil engineer, to make all necessary corrections in the city map from May 1, 1905, to May 1, 1906, at an expense not to exceed $100.

In accordance with a resolution by Councilman Frank Randolph, one two-way fire hydrant was ordered placed at College place and Ninth street, and one two-way hydrant at College place and Eighth street.

Watchung School Roll of Honor.

The roll of honor at Watchung School for the month of June is as follows: Grammar grade—Elsie Schmidt, Adele Herrmann, Roy Herrmann, Douglas Demler, Gusta Troiano, Ferdinand Blume, Raymond Kellogg; primary grade—Helen Schmidt, Daisy Schmidt, Minnie Blume, Lottie Gunn, Helen Mobus, Edel Moldenke, Richard Moldenke, Clifford Kellogg, Richard Schmidt and Joseph Galluppi. Miss A. G. Higgins is the teacher at this school.

Anthony Dobbins, who has been visiting his mother, Mrs. Robert Walpole, has returned to his home in Newark.

Cass Acheson, who has been visiting his father-in-law, Joseph Clark, has returned to his home at Hazlet, N. J.

LOCAL PUPILS TO AID

Will Contribute Money For Rebuilding of San Francisco's School Buildings.

COMMENCEMENT PLANS

Board of Education Informed That All Plans Are Complete—$73,000 Needed For Expenses Next Year.

Pupils in the Plainfield public schools are to be given an opportunity to join in the movement to aid San Francisco to restore its educational facilities. A great many of the schools in the city were destroyed by the earthquake and fire and a national movement has commenced to help rebuild them, the losses being too great for the citizens to bear at this time. In order to secure quarters of even a temporary character an appeal has been made to all the school children in the country and the communication was read by Leander N. Lovell at the regular meeting of the Board of Education Monday night.

In submitting the letter, Mr. Lovell said the matter was one that impelled favorable action on the part of the local board and his remarks were seconded by Superintendent Maxson. The latter stated that other schools throughout the country were already engaged in soliciting funds and in many cases money had been forwarded. Accordingly a resolution was passed, giving the superintendent the power to receive contributions from the pupils and send them on as he deemed best.

In the absence of Secretary Woodhull, Mr. Abbott read a communication from the executors of the estate of the late George Updike, stating that a scholarship for Rutgers college had been placed at the board's disposal and was to be awarded by it to the most deserving student desiring to enter that institution. The communication, which was signed by C. W. and William S. Updike, executors, was placed on file and their wishes will be complied with.

It was reported by Mr. Abbott that all arrangements had been completed for holding the annual commencement exercises of the High school. They will take place in the First Baptist church on June 21 and the speaker will be Dr. J. H. Canfield, former chancellor of the University of Nebraska and at present head of the library at Columbia University.

Superintendent Maxson reported that the State had doubled the appropriation for the manual training and cooking departments, making the amount on hand for these purposes $800 and $600 respectively. In connection with this matter he stated that a room in the basement of the building had been prepared for the cooking department. The manual training work is to be carried on in the basement of the new High school. Mr. Maxson was empowered to fit up these departments with the necessary equipment at a cost not to exceed the appropriation.

On behalf of the Board of School Estimate, Mr. Lovell announced that the school appropriation for the coming year would be the same as last, $73,000. To meet the increased cost of supplying books, paper, etc., the annual tuition fee for school children living outside the city limits was raised from $48 to $52 with no reduction in case of illness.

The matter of appointing the school medical examiners was referred to President Probasco with power.

COUNCIL CHAMBER FOR DISTRICT COURT

JUDGE NEWCORN TO SIT IN THE CITY FATHERS' ROOMS TEMPORARILY.

Former Assemblyman William Newcorn, the newly-appointed judge of Plainfield's district court, informed the Common Council, Monday, as to his appointment on May 28 last, to the office and his selection of Horace O. Adams as clerk of the court. He also stated that he was sworn in by Judge Atwater, and that he had administered the oath to Clerk Adams, who had furnished bonds in the sum of $2,000, which were approved by Judge Atwater. The Judge told the Common Council that in accordance with the law it must provide quarters for the court and also supply *books, stationery and proper fur*niture.

The communication was referred to the finance committee. Later in the evening Chairman Daniel offered a resolution, which was adopted, providing that the Common Council rooms be used as a district court until further notice.

The matter being settled it remains for Judge Newcorn to complete his arrangements for the holding of the first session of court on Tuesday, June 12.

The women of the Seventh-Day Baptist church will hold a strawberry festival in the parlors of the church on Wednesday night, June 13.

FOUR NEW MOVES ARE PLANNED BY THE P. P. A.

Going After the Ice Dealers and the Telephone Company.

CITY WEIGHER OF COAL

Council To Be Asked To Appoint One, To Shut off Short Weight Tricks—Consolidation Endorsed.

Investigation of the telephone service, the ice supply, the municipal water-plant question and coal-weighing will be undertaken by the Plainfield Protective Association, now that the Public Service Corporation has been practically disposed of. The new lines of activity were laid out at the third general meeting of the association Monday. Also, consolidation was approved by formal vote.

The meeting was not largely attended, but the members present were very much in earnest, and there was an animated discussion on every subject brought up. The session lasted for two hours.

President Depew, at the beginning of the meeting, made formal report on the drop in rates promised by the P. S. C. Much better gas and electricity were promised, he said, in connection with the greater concession. He received a letter yesterday, he said, in which he was apprised of the fact that new transformers would be in operation in the powerhouse in a few weeks. Furthermore, the company had promised to receive and investigation complaints, hereafter, instead of keeping a bouncer busy.

Mr. Depew said that he had suggested to the P. S. C. the advisability of putting cards beside the meter, on which the man who made the read*ing could sign his name to the fig*ures he entered on his book, but the corporation officials couldn't see their way clear to ordering that. Some check on the readings was needed, Mr. Depew said, and he suggested that the members take their own readings nightly, and register them on blanks furnished by the association. A considerable discussion arose from that suggestion. It was finally decided that the devotion of the members to the meter readings would be too uncertain, and in place of the nightly readings, it was decided to send cards noting the amounts of the lighting bills each month to the secretary. This will enable the association to see what the average bill was or should have been for a certain period. The cards, with printed forms on them, will be furnished by the association.

In the course of the discussion, it was brought out that the new level rate was not only raising the price of the lighting in the few private houses where the special rate had been in force, but in the business places as well. Mr. Depew stated that the adjustment of the rate was undergood to apply only to private consumers, and discussion of the measure of protection to be accorded the big consumers of light began at once. W. S. Saunders was of the opinion that big concerns could fight their own battles, but D. E. Titsworth insisted that the big consumers were entitled to every bit of assistance and protection the association could give them, and L. V. Randolph agreed with him. It was finally agreed that whenever a large consumer laid a complaint before it, the Association acts for the complainant.

William J. Stillman pointed the way to the first of the new campaigns. He said that short weights in coal had been detected in certain directions, and he moved that the association seek to have the council take advantage of the law covering the case and appoint an official coal weigher. The salary, he said, would cost nothing, if a certain concern got the appointment as weighers. The new move was enthusiastically received, and at Mr. Saunders' suggestions, the executive committee was instructed to ask the co-operation of the Board of Trade in securing the appointment.

The telephone service in this city was marked for investigation after the members had agreed that it was very poor. Mr. Depew said he understood the case lay in the fact that the company paid very cheaply for help as the local exchange, and that as soon as an operator learned the business she went off after another position, so that there was a constant need of untrained workers. L. V. F. Randolph said the company strung wires where they pleased, and ought to be checked in that. F. E. Kingman, who served on a merchants committee for the regulation of telephone service in New York, agreed that the subject ought to be investigated.

Mr. Randolph brought up the water question. He said the members required intelligence on the matter to enable them to vote rightly on it. The executive committee was in*structed to secure necessary data.*

Mr. Saunders offered the following resolution:

"Whereas, Plainfield and North Plainfield are geographically, commercially and socially one,

"Resolved, That this Association in the interests of economy, public welfare and progress favors the consolidation of the city and borough under one government."

Having decided that the question involved was not a political one, the members voted in favor of the resolution unanimously.

Ice was the last subject considered. President Depew brought it up, and a lively spirit of interest was immediately manifested. Before the matter was referred to the executive committee, suggestions were offered that a co-operative plant be built, and that the committee study out just what the ice costs the dealers and publish the facts, so that the consumers can see for just how much profit they are being worked. It was charged that a combination of dealers controlled the price, and that one man was paid $3,000 a year to stay out of business.

The next meeting will be held at the call of the chair.

MANY MORE STREETS TO BE MACADAMIZED

PUBLIC HEARING ON ORDINANCE SET FOR MONDAY, JULY 2.

For the purpose of improving certain streets and portions of streets with macadam, Mr. Gloak, chairman of the street and sewer committee, introduced an ordinance at the meeting of the Common Council, last night. It was adopted on first and second reading, ordered advertised and Monday night, July 2, was the time fixed when a public hearing will be granted.

The ordinance provides that the macadam work shall be done equal to that on Carlton avenue, between Putnam and Watchung avenues, and must be completed before October 15. There is to be an issue of three regular municipal bonds, $1,000 each, to run for three years, at five per cent. interest, and the Common Council reserves the right to redeem them at any time prior to that term. In cases where the damages shall exceed the benefits as determined by the commissioners, to be appointed by the Court of Common Pleas to as*sess benefits and damages, the city* is to pay the excess.

The streets to be macadamized include Berckman street between South avenue and East Seventh street; Richmond street, between Putnam and Watchung avenues; Kensington avenue, between Watchung and Prospect avenues; Division street, between West Fifth and West Sixth streets; John street, between West Fourth and West Seventh streets. The streets are to be macadamized to a width of sixteen feet, eight feet on either side of the centre.

In addition to the above ordinance, Mr. Gloak introduced another one which was adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised, which provides for the macadamizing of Division street, between West Sixth and West Seventh streets. The property-owners are to pay into the city treasury the sum of $167.-44 before the work is started.

Mr. Gloak offered a resolution, which was adopted, giving to the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company permission to continue its work of laying underground conduits on Watchung avenue, Park avenue, Plainfield avenue, East Sixth street, West Eighth street, Grant avenue, West Seventh street and Madison avenue.

FAVOR FOR WINDHAM FROM COMMON COUNCIL

In an attempt to secure for Henry Windham, proprietor of the Waldorf hotel, permission to erect a canopy from the curb to his cafe on East Front street, Councilman Frank Randolph caused considerable discussion at the June meeting of the Common Council Monday night. The effort at once raised the old question of granting to Charles P. Schring to erect an iron awning in front of his property on West Front street, *occupied by George Watts, the butch*er. Mr. Daniel, who opposed favorable action to the petition of Mr. Windham, could not see what right the members had to discriminate be*tween West and East Front street.*

Mr. Randolph moved that the petition be granted, adding that it had Chief Doane's approval as building inspector. He also said that the canopy Mr. Windham proposed to erect would be similar to the one now used by Woodhull & Martin at the firm's main entrance to its store.

Mr. Hibbard opposed Mr. Windham's petition on the ground that he did not believe it to be right to put public property to private use and besides such a canopy would be more or less of an obstruction on the sidewalk.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVII PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JUNE, 12, 1906 NO. 32.

"Support the Constitution, which is the Cement of the Union, as well in its Limitations as in its Authorities."—Madison.

NO ASSEMBLY DISTRICTS

Highest Court Upholds Decides That Perkins Law is Unconstitutional.

HELPS ITS AUTHOR

Knocking Out of Redistricting Bill, Materially Betters Chances of Westfield Candidate for Renomination.

The Assembly district law, introduced and fathered in the Legislature by Assemblyman Randolph Perkins, of Westfield, has been declared unconstitutional by the Court of Errors and Appeals, which confirms the opinion of the Supreme Court. Although Lawyer Perkins thus finds that the measure, which he introduced for the State Republican organization's sake, is in violation of the constitution of New Jersey, he has the satisfaction of knowing that the action of the Court of Errors materially increases his chances for renomination. Thirteen of the fourteen judges held that the new law is unconstitutional.

Had the statute been upheld and the decision of the lower court reversed, Assemblyman Perkins would have had to fight it out in Plainfield, Westfield, Rahway and the rest of what would have been known as the third assembly district for a renomination. Pitted against him is Judge William N. Runyon, of this city, the candidate of the anti-organization Republicans. Friends of the Plainfield candidate were sanguine that he could defeat Perkins at the primaries.

As it is the assembly candidates will be picked without reference to locality and there will be voted for all in all sections of the county. Perkins, Tillman and a third selection will be the candidates of the regular Republican organization. Runyon will be one of three independent Republicans placed on the Colbyites ticket. Perkins has a much better chance of being nominated since his statute has been knocked out.

The Court of Errors announced its decision yesterday. Perkins Assembly Redistricting act was favored by Gov. Stokes.

Tenure was put through by the Republican organization in the hope of carrying Hudson, a strong Democratic county, and in the belief that it would seriously embarrass the Colby reform movement. Thirteen judges of the fourteen agreed with the constitutionality of the act, and one judge—G. D. W. Vroom—upheld the measure.

The failure of the act, it is believed, will have an important bearing on the next elections, as Hudson county, which through unusual conditions went Republican last election, may be whipped back into the Democratic line. It may defeat the ambitions of both George L. Record and Senator Dryden.

PREPARING FOR CAMP.

Company K Starts for Sea Girt Next Saturday Morning.

The members of Company K are making preparations to start on their bi-yearly visit to the State camp at Sea Girt. They will leave Plainfield Saturday morning and will be met at Elizabeth by Companies E and I, from there all three will proceed by special train to their destination. They are to remain in camp a week. From present indications the greater part of the local company will go though the new military law gives the members the privilege of remaining home.

The entire Second Regiment will be in camp next week. Besides the companies from Elizabeth and Plainfield there will be four others from Trenton and one each from Somerville, New Brunswick, Freehold, Lambertville and Princeton. The Third Regiment is now on the ground and its companies will remain over Saturday afternoon for a joint inspection by General Grant of the regular army.

John Taylor's Natal Day.

In honor of his thirty-second birthday, John Taylor, of Plainfield avenue, gave a "stag" party to thirty-five friends at his home Monday night. Musical selections were furnished by Professor Hankinson and the Black Diamond Quartette contributed vocal numbers. A special feature was some sleight-of-hand tricks by George Suggics who greatly mystified the gathering by his miraculous agility, his five-ace trick being the piece de resistance. A supper was served in conclusion.

New Postal Operator.

Mrs. H. M. Ward, of McKeesport, Pa., formerly as operator for the Postal Telegraph Company at that place, has been transferred to the company's office here, to take the place of A. J. Coleman, who will take a position in the company's main office in New York after a week's vacation.

TWO DEALERS SOLD POOR GRADE OF MILK

HAS PASSED AWAY

AFTER TESTS BY HEALTH OFFICER OFFENDERS WERE REPRIMANDED.

At the postponed meeting of the Board of Health yesterday it was reported that during the past month the city was practically free from contagious disease, there being one case of scarlet fever, two of measles and two of tuberculosis. There was one death from tuberculosis and one from diphtheria.

Health Officer Thurlow made seventy-three visits to dairies, twenty-five samples of milk were examined. Two dealers were reprimanded for selling a poor quality of milk.

Permits to sell ice were granted to the Natural Ice Company, Frank T. Ostrom and John Morton, and Alexander Gordon was given a permit to sell milk. Permits were granted to William Grattan and George Christiansen to collect garbage, and the application of Mary C. Scudder to sell milk was denied.

It was reported that the ice sold in Plainfield is of good quality, and that it comes from two sources, Watchung Lake and the artificial ice plant. It is sold by the Natural Ice Company, F. D. Ostrom and John Morton, the report says.

Extracts from the report of Inspector William Addis showed the number of inspections made in all departments and the results were very satisfactory. The vital statistics showed that during the month there were twenty-marriages, thirty-four births, one still-birth and twenty deaths. Of the twenty deaths, twelve were persons over twenty years of age.

SEEBER AND NUGENT COMPLETE DEAL WITH M'VEY.

Deny That They Will Open Wholesale Liquor Store in North Avenue Place.

George Seeber, president of the Rising Sun Brewing Company, and Edward Nugent, Esq., counsel for the company, of Elizabeth, were in Plainfield yesterday effecting a transfer of the deeds for the property, whereby Mr. Seeber exchanges his property on West Front street, formerly known as Goff's Hotel, for J. H. McVey's Annex property on North avenue, and a residential property on East Front street, also owned by Mr. McVey and occupied by Theodore French.

When questioned as to what he proposed to do with the property, Mr. Nugent replied that it is not the intention to open a wholesale liquor store, but that John Madden, who now conducts a pool and billiard room on the first floor, would remain there and Mrs. McAndrews, who leases the upper part, would continue to have the use of the floors. Further than that Mr. Nugent and Mr. Seeber had nothing more to say.

There was a rumor current that in making the trade, Mr. Seeber expected to apply to the Common Council next year for a license to sell liquor in his North avenue property, failing to secure such a license for John Goff for the West Front street property. If he has any such intentions he is not disclosing them at present and in all probability the property will remain as it is for this year at least. Mr. McVey is now in possession of the West Front street property and will open a restaurant and boarding-house there.

Old Offender Caught Again.

John Higgins, of Stone street, is in the police toils again. He went on a spree last night and was found weltering along Somerset street in a choppy sea with an immense cargo of beer on board. Marshal Dooley towed him to headquarters, where he is lying at anchor today, waiting for somebody to bail him out before Mayor Smalley comes alongside tomorrow and collects duty on last night's cargo.

Accused of Striking Boy.

On complaint of Rose A. Miller, Maude Washington, of East Third street, was arraigned before Judge Runyon in the city court, this morning, charged with striking the complainant's four-year-old son Herman. At the request of the defendant's counsel, William G. DeMeza, the matter was adjourned until Saturday morning. Both parties in the case are colored.

Forty Days Hangs Over Sachar.

Meyer Sachar, a well-known West End character, was arraigned in the city court, this morning, charged by Louis Schiff, with calling his name and flinging a screen door against his head. Meyer denied the charges but a suspended sentence of forty days was placed over him, the evidence showing that he had been making life miserable for Louis.

Dr. and Mrs. B. VanD. Hedges, who were married in Chicago a few weeks ago, are expected to arrive in Plainfield tomorrow.

J. SMYLIE TUCKER

ORGANIZER OF M'KINLEY CLUB; WELL-KNOWN IN COUNTY POLITICS.

James Smylie Tucker, one of the best-known of the younger citizens of Elizabeth, died at noon yesterday at his home in that city. He had been acutely ill for several months. His sickness dated back from the time that he enlisted in the Spanish-American War.

Mr. Tucker came of a family that is prominent in that city—a family that has lived here almost from the time of the settling of the city before the War of the Revolution. His ancestors fought in the Revolution. His father was the late Wm. B. Tucker, and his mother is Mrs. Mary Smylie Tucker.

Mr. Tucker was born in Elizabeth on June 30, 1870. When the war broke out with Spain in 1898 he enlisted and served on the U. S. S. Badger, doing marine duty. After the war he went with the Metropolitan Trust Company and was employed there till June, 1905, when his health began to give out.

Mr. Tucker was prominent in many activities in Elizabeth, taking a deep interest in politics and being a member of many societies. For many years he was secretary of the Republican County Committee, and was a member of the Republican City Central Committee of Elizabeth. He was a candidate for councilman-at-large in the year before that office was abolished, and ran for member of the City Council from his ward—the Ninth. He was one of the organizers of the McKinley Club, and was its first president.

He was a trustee of the First German Presbyterian church. He belonged to Washington Lodge, No. 33, Free and Accepted Masons; William A. Mack Cornell, Jr. U. A. M.; Court Childs, Independent Order of Foresters; Camp Sewell, Spanish-American War Veterans; the U. S. S. Badger Veteran Association, the McKinley Club and the Board of Trade. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary Smylie Tucker, three brothers, Assemblyman Everard K. Tucker, Raymond W. Tucker and Earl D. Tucker, and a sister, Mrs. John K. Ricketts.

Arrangements for the funeral will be made later.

HEARING POSTPONED.

Young Beerman, Abused by Regan, Seeks Retribution Through Father.

The hearing in the assault and battery action brought by Charles Beerman against Patrick J. Regan, which was before Justice Snape at the borough court yesterday afternoon, was not held because the police were unable to serve summons on Regan. Beerman appeared and the case was postponed until a week from today at 2 o'clock in the same court.

The plaintiff, Beerman, alleges that his son was brutally treated by Regan on the evening of July 2, Young Beerman, whose name is Charles, is a lad sixteen years of age. He was at his home on the evening mentioned when Regan came along and accused him of trespassing on an adjourning lot, which he owns, and destroying fences. Charles denied the charge, but Regan, thinking he knew who had done the mischief, shook him and struck him to make him confess. It is said that young Beerman was badly abused, it is alleged, his clothes being torn and his face bruised. Regan is a special officer in the borough and it is alleged that he was drunk that night. When Beerman saw his son, he had a warrant sworn out for Regan's arrest and he is anxious to get retribution for his son's mistreatment, declaring that he is innocent and did no damage on the land.

'Phone Company's Costly Building.

According to a contract filed at the county clerk's office, the new building now being erected for the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company on East Fourth street, will cost $51,885. This is exclusive of the site and will make it one of the costliest structures in the city. The entire work is being done by L. W. Seaman, Jr. & Son, a Brooklyn firm.

Camp Children on Outing.

In two large stages and a big touring auto, 150 New York children and Miss Sara Curry, of the Neitherwood Fresh Air Home, made a trip to the Beckstein farm at Oak Tree. Miss Margaret Hayes, Mr. Beckstein's granddaughter, entertained the children. Upon their return bountiful refreshments of ice cream, cake and candy were served.

Reprimanded and Freed.

Sentence was suspended with a reprimand by Mayor Smalley upon P. H. Green, who was found badly drunk by Borough Marshal Dooley on Somerset street early yesterday morning. Green promised to climb up high on the water wagon and be good.

MRS. SAUNDERS' FUNERAL TAKES PLACE TOMORROW

SERVICES AT THE HOUSE IN ROCKVIEW AVENUE AT 4:30 O'CLOCK.

Funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Bertha Louise Saunders, wife of former Mayor William L. Saunders, will be held at the home, No. 112 Rockview avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Interment will be made in Hillside cemetery. Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, in which Mrs. Saunders was a devout communicant and active worker, will conduct the services at the house and will say the committal services at the grave.

Mrs. Saunders was a native of New York city. Her maiden name was Bertha Louise Gaston and her marriage to Mr. Saunders took place at Narragansett Pier, R. I., in 1877 was a society event. In 1889, Mr. and Mrs. Saunders removed to North Plainfield and since that time both have been prominent in local affairs. Mrs. Saunders took an active interest in all benevolences while her husband has been a leader in civic affairs.

Surviving her are the husband and two daughters, the Misses Louise and Jean Saunders.

A Tribute.

In the passing away of Mrs. William L. Saunders, Plainfield has lost one of its most active and potent influences for good works. During the seventeen years of her life here no worthy cause seemed to appeal to her in vain. Impulsive, warm-hearted, enthusiastic, full of the fire of genius *and of an abounding energy, in what*ever cause she enlisted she proved a power in herself and a stimulus to others.

All Plainfield knows the many enterprises in support of its charities to which she gave her time, her brilliant talents and her industrious labors. All Plainfield knows how ready and helpful she was in every emergency of the church, club or hospital. It is superfluous to recount in detail what is ever present in the minds of all.

But while the public dwells upon this phase of her life, many a sad heart in private mourns the loss of a friend and benefactress whose spontaneous sympathy and help came unsought and were doubly precious.

Beautiful in person, gifted with rare accomplishments, of a tender and loving nature, Bertha L. Saunders leaves an enduring imprint upon the community, to her friends a sweet and lovely image and a noble example of charity in thought, speech and action.

ROBERT ABBOTT MAKES GOOD SHOWING AT GOLF

RETURNS SCORE OF 84 IN THE FIRST ROUND AT ENGLEWOOD.

Robert Abbott, of the Plainfield Country Club, made the best showing for the local players in the opening round of the annual meet for the National amateur championship, which began at Englewood, yesterday. His score for 18 holes was 85. W. Lester Glenney finished with a score of 89. Dudley E. Barrows returned a score of 91 and F. C. Talmadge returned a score of 97. The low score for the day was a 75 made by Dwight Patridge, of Bedford, the former interscholastic champion and now a student at Yale.

Golfers from all parts of the United States and one former Canadian champion assembled yesterday and over 130 contestants started in the opening medal-play round, a record-breaking field. It was considerably after 6 o'clock before the last pair holed out on the home green. During the early part of the day it was excessively hot, but in the afternoon a violent thunderstorm nearly broke up the play. It was a veritable deluge in the amount of water that fell, for more than one of the greens was temporarily flooded, and half a hundred golfers were forced to keep on driving and putting away in the rain and soaked to the skin in the meantime. Trees were struck at last ment to start, and he had scarcely reached the fifth green when the storm broke in all its fury. The wisdom of dividing the thirty-six holes qualifying round into a two-day event was proved by the late hour required to finish, for it was after 6 o'clock before the last pair landed on the home green. All will play another eighteen holes today and the best thirty-two will then be picked from the lot and they will be drawn for the first championship match-play round tomorrow morning. The result of the day's play gives a total of thirty-nine golfers who have a score of 86 or under and this average will probably qualify.

STATE SENATOR GETS SOME SOMERSET BONDS

FRELINGHUYSEN AND MESSRS. STOKES BEST BIDDERS.

The Somerset County Board of Chosen Freeholders met in the "new court house," at Somerville, yesterday afternoon, the First Reformed church chapel, and did a great amount of business. The county collector, Edward B. Allen, made a report of the bids received for the county bonds for the erection of the new court house, as follows:

John D. Everett & Co., of New York, for $280,000, $281,596; Somerville Dime Savings Bank, of Somerville, for $25,000, $26,120; First National Bank, of Somerville, for $24,000, $24,427.20; H. K. Stokes, of New York, for $180,000, at the rate of $102,511; J. S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerville, for $100,000, at the rate of $102,522; Plainfield Trust Co., of Plainfield, for $14,000, $14,000; J. A. Bullock, of Philadelphia, for $2,000, $2,026; H. V. Dayton, of Branchburg, for $1,000, $1,010; David Rinehart, of Potterstown, for $1,000, $1,001.

By resolution the board awarded the issue to Messrs. Stokes and Frelinghuysen. These bids give a premium of about $7,000.

A map showing the condition of the Rock Hill road was placed on file. A letter from F. A. Pope asked $500 damages for Mrs. Jennie Milliken for her horse breaking through a bridge at Hillsborough township. Members Hoagland, Bated and Gibson were appointed a committee to investigate. Dungan & Reger claimed $140 for William Elitzer for injuries to his horse in Bernards township on a bridge. Messrs. Bunn, Demler and Pilhower were appointed to investigate.

Bids as follows were received for the bridge (Skillman) in Montgomery township: W. T. Kirk Co., $198; Canton Bridge Co., $220; J. W. Scott, $253. The former was awarded the contract.

The board will meet at Rocky Hill July 18.

TRUCKMAN'S NARROW ESCAPE.

Pinned Against Wall When Heavy Machine Slipped.

While engaged with several other men in removing a plumber's heavy, pipe-bending machine from the cellar of the new Plainfield High School, yesterday, John Wierenga, brother of Henry Wierenga, the local truckman, had a narrow escape from being killed.

The machine, which weighs 3,500 pounds, was half way up a steep stairway when it suddenly slipped from the grasp of the men holding it and it fell to one side, pinning Wierenga against a wall. At the same instant the lower end struck against a projecting post, which held it, otherwise it would have slid, rolling Wierenga along with it.

The imprisoned man was released after several minutes' effort and the machine had to be let back to the basement floor. The stair rail was broken when the weight went against it.

Hit Doctor's Turnout.

An automobile being driven by Frank A. Fuller, of Woodland avenue, ran into a horse and carriage owned by Dr. A. Wasser Love, which was standing on the right hand side of East Fifth street, Saturday night about 12 o'clock, completely wrecking the carriage and injuring the horse to such an extent that it will be a long time before he can be driven.

Funeral of John R. Sickler.

With a gathering of relatives and friends in attendance, the funeral of John R. Sickler was held at his late home on Spooner avenue, this afternoon. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, was in charge and members of the family acted as pall bearers. Inter*ment was made in the Methodist* cemetery.

Auto Collides With Cow.

While Charles Woolston, of this city, was making an auto run to Newark, Monday night, a cow obstructed the road near Springfield and was bowled over. The machine was slightly damaged but the occupants escaped unhurt. Woolston says he was not exceeding the speed limit.

Twisted Tendons in Foot.

While crossing the street yesterday afternoon, William F. Doane, of East Seventh street, slipped and se*verely wrenched the tendons of his* right foot. A physician examined the foot, which is considerably swollen so that Doane was unable to go to business in New York today.

Net Profit $234.50 for Library.

The net profit from the musical and literary entertainment given at Trinity Reformed church recently, for the benefit of the Sunday-school library, was $234.50.

HEAVY FINES IMPOSED ON SPEAK-EASY MEN

FOUR PLAINFIELDERS PUNISHED BY JUDGE ATWATER IN COUNTY COURT.

Judge Atwater meted out justice to several Plainfield speak-easy proprietors today as well as passing other severe judgments on offenders in other parts of the county. Four culprits from this city were heavily fined and severely reprimanded by the court.

Dominick Parets who was convicted of running a speak-easy at No. 317 St. Mary's avenue, was fined $250 and costs. This is his second offense. James Brown, who pleaded not guilty, and his son, Thomas Brown, who pleaded guilty, were also fined. The court fined the father $200 and costs and the son $100 and costs. They ran a speak-easy at the corner of North and Leland avenues. Jules Donato, who had a joint on Liberty street near Fourth street, pleaded guilty when arraigned and today was fined $100 and costs.

Robert Birney, of New Providence, indicted on a charge of kidnapping a boy at that place, and who was arrested in Pennsylvania and brought back to this State, was given six months, and Al. Lamma, of Westfield, convicted on a charge of stealing clothes from the family employ*ing her, was also given six months* in jail.

MRS. VAN DYKE'S PARTY.

Forty Friends Spend Enjoyable Evening at Her Home.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. VanDyke, of East Fifth street, entertained a company of forty people at their home, last night. Dr. and Mrs. Flinn, of Somerville, accompanied by a number of young people, came to Plainfield to surprise Mrs. William Bauer, of that place, who was entertaining some Plainfield friends at the home of her parents.

The parlors were decorated with palms, daisies and cut flowers, while the dining room was decorated with red carnations and the table was garnished with candelabras with red shades, the color scheme being red.

During the evening there were pleasing soprano solos by Miss May Grant and Miss Laura Gosweeb and there were also piano selections by Mrs. William Quick, organist of the Episcopal church at Somerville. Several encores were given to the delight of all.

Refreshments were served at 10 o'clock Mrs. L. L. Schofield was assisted in the dining room by Mrs. Leonard Smith and Miss Mary VanEps.

Silences Bass Drums.

Atlantic City, July 11.—Salvation Army services in the resort hereafter will not be conducted with the bass drum as an accompaniment, as the Mayor has approved a bill which outlawed drums on the streets. The law also stops phonographs on the board walk, which were a nuisance, and it stops horns and cymbals. The bill to buy the volunteer fire Department for $130,000 was approved. The first one was upset by the court.

Summer Plans at Faith Chapel.

Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor of Faith chapel, accompanied by Mrs. Musson, has arranged to spend the month of August near the Catskills, with a classmate of his Missionary at Crozier Theological Seminary, and his wife. During his absence the pulpit at Faith chapel will be occupied by Rev. George Bowers two Sundays and Rev. J. A. Cubberley, of this city, will preach two Sundays.

Flying Trip in an Auto.

Former Senator Charles A. Reed and his partner, W. A. Coddington, made a flying trip yesterday morning in Mr. Reed's automobile. Leaving Plainfield at 5:30, the two lawyers went to Morristown, Bernardsville, Somerville, Bound Brook and thence home, reaching here by 9 o'clock. En route a stop was made at Bernardsville for breakfast.

Colored Man Found Dead in Bed.

George Sylvester Quenby, colored, was found dead in bed at his home on Cottage place, this morning. He had expired during the night from heart disease. He was fifty-six years old and leaves a wife and one daughter, Mrs. Jenkins. The funeral will be held at the house Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Work Well Underway.

The contractors are well underway with the work of building the Scott avenue bridge over Cedar brook. As the contract is not a large one, the estimated cost being $1,400, it is believed that there will be little difficulty in completing it on time.

Laura E. Connett.

Laura E. Connett, the five-year-old daughter of William R. and Laura E. Connett, colored, of West End avenue, died yesterday. The funeral will be held at Bethel chapel tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be at Hillside.

READY TO BUILD SCHOOL

Contract Awarded to John Abbott & Son For Erection of Convent Institution.

ESTIMATED COST $300,000

Building On Watchung Mountain Will Be 192 by 150 Feet In Depth—D. T. Kenney Donated Site.

Following a conference held at Trenton, yesterday, between the officials interested, contracts were awarded for the construction of the new St. Mary convent which is to be new St. Mary convent school which is to be erected on a plot of ground on the side of the mountains back of North Plainfield, for the Sisters of Mercy of the Trenton Diocese. The site was donated by David T. Kenney, of the borough, and he has been assisting Bishop McFaul and others in preparing the plans.

The building will represent an outlay of $200,000 and the general contract for all the work went to J. H. Abbott & Son, of this city. It was understood that Den J. Galbraith, also of Plainfield, would install the heating and plumbing requisites. The Hawkins stone is to be used for the most part will be of stone, the material being secured from William E. Bartie's quarry, located a short distance from the site. In dimensions it will be 192 feet front by 150 in depth.

At present it is the intention to have the building lighted by electricity, the power to be furnished by an individual plant. This is a matter of extreme importance as electricity is to be used in other ways and should it be generated on the ground, it would represent a considerable saving in the running expenses. It is a matter, however, that has not been fully decided.

Mr. Kenney felt highly elated that a Plainfield firm secured the main contract as he was anxious to have the first benefits from the building left in this community. The construction will give employment to a large number of mechanics for a long time and practically all will be Plainfielders. Mr. Kenney was in consultation with Bishop McFaul at the episcopal residence in Trenton, yesterday, and they will arrange all the preliminary details before Abbott & Son take charge.

The convent will be erected on one of the prettiest spots overlooking Plainfield in the midst of what is known as "The Picture Lands." Mr. Kenney purchased the property especially for the purpose and the bishop and his associates have been highly pleased with it. The convent is now at Bordentown, where it has been for many years, but the present quarters have been outgrown. It was the desire to move to a more central portion of the State and Plainfield was selected. When the structure has been fully completed and ready for occupancy it will bring many people to the city and borough who would otherwise never see them and they will benefit accordingly.

It is said that the work will be started at once.

EVENING MEETINGS STARTED.

Park Ave. Baptist C. E. S. at Netherwood Home Last Night.

The first of the summer evening meetings at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home was held last night and was in charge of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church. Several members of the society were at the camp and music was a feature of the service. George S. Hilliard led the meeting. During the services Mrs. William H. Sebring sang "Will There Be Any Stars in My Crown" and "Sweet Peace, the Gift of God's Love," and Mrs. Sebring and Miss Florence M. Hawkins sang a duet, "My Father Knows."

At the conclusion of the service games were played and the evening was passed socially. Mr. Hall pre*sented each of the children* and mothers at the camp with a cake of toilet soap and Miss Miss Sara Curry a quantity of it for use at the camp during the summer. The next of the evening services will be held Thursday when members of the Epworth League of the First Methodist church at Westfield will conduct the meeting at the camp.

A Two Dollar Skate.

James Connor and William Connor, who were arrested Saturday night by Borough Marshal Dooley for intoxication, were fined $2 apiece by Mayor Smalley at their trial in the borough court last night.

Sunday School Picnic.

Miss Lucie Coriell and Miss Anna Randall, teachers in the primary department of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, took their classes on a picnic to Johnston's Drive yesterday afternoon.

WINDOW SCREENS IN SALOONS LAWFUL THEY SAY DON'T WANT SKATING RINK

Lawyers Take Issue With Police Order to Remove Them Week-Days.

WHAT THE LAW SAYS

Claim That Common Council Only Can Direct That Window Screens Be Removed According to Statute.

Lawyers say that the order issued by the police department for the removal of window screens in local saloons during the hours of business is without warrant inasmuch as the Common Council has not directed it to be done. The bishops' law gives the body having the right to grant licenses the power to order all window screens removed during the hours of business, but members of the Common Council, which alone has that power vested in it, say that no authority has been given by it to have this done.

Chief Kiely, who issued the order to the saloonkeepers, says, he received his instruction from Corporation Counsel Marsh and presumes that the city's attorney understands the law on the subject. The corporation counsel left for Europe on Thursday. Lawyer Louis Barton, who is in Mr. Marsh's office, said he did not know anything about the matter.

From what the representative of The Daily Press can learn from local lawyers it appears that all window screens in saloons must be removed between 12 o'clock Saturday night and 12 o'clock Sunday night. They need not be removed during the hours of business, it is reliably reported, unless the Common Council so directs. There must, however, be a clear and unobstructed view of the interior at all time to the person entering the saloon.

When asked for his opinion regarding the provisions of the new law, a well known lawyer said today:

"The third paragraph of section four of the amended so-called Bishops' bill, passed at the recent session of the Legislature and approved April 13, being the second paragraph of the amended section 11 of the original act, clearly provides that the first clause for the doing away with all partitioning or semi-partitioning of the bar-room into smaller rooms or alcoves whether done by permanent partitions or by screens or other obstructions, and enacts that the whole of the interior of the bar-room, excepting such part as is used for toilet purposes, must be open to the clear view of any one inside the bar-room; and the second clause as clearly provides for the same clear view by any one from without the bar-room at all times during prohibited hours and at all other times, also, if the licensing body of the municipality so require.

"Before, therefore, the licensed places in Plainfield can legally be required to take down their screens during selling hours," says Mr. Angleman, "a regulation providing for such requirement must be passed by the licensing body, i. e., the Common Council. The mere dictum by any official or committee is not sufficient under the statute."

The Trenton State Gazette says editorially:

"The impression prevails in some quarters that the Bishops' law requires saloonkeepers to remove screens and curtains from their windows during business hours on week days.

This, as we understand it, is not the contemplation or requirement of the law, which provides that in every place where intoxicating liquor is retailed, there shall be no screens or obstructions that will prevent a person entering the room where liquor is sold from seeing all parts of that apartment.

From 12 o'clock Saturday night until 12 o'clock Sunday night, curtains and screens are to be drawn from the windows of saloons so that passers-by on the street may get a full view of the interior.

Through these provisions, as a matter of fact, the Bishops' law works no hardship and most dealers will be willing to comply with it."

The Bishops' law contains this paragraph:

"The court, excise board, or other board or authority having power by law to grant licenses in any municipality of this State, if said license is not in an inn and tavern, or a hotel having at least ten spare rooms and beds for the accommodation of boarders, transients and travelers, or a restaurant where the business of furnishing meals to the public, for compensation, is regularly carried on, and which restaurant is conducted and operated on more than one floor or story of the building where such business is carried on, or a picnic or recreation ground,, or a building with a bowling alley, or in a building entirely occupied by a regularly-organized club or association, shall upon the days and times when the sale of liquors or other intoxicating drinks is by law prohibited to be sold, may at any or all other times, require that the entire interior of such bar, or business room in which such liquors and other intoxicating drinks are sold and served shall, during the entire prohibited time, or may at any or all other times, as may be required by such authority, be open to full view from the public street; and upon the making of an order to that effect by the court, excise board or other authority having power to grant such licenses, a full view of the entire interior of such bars or business rooms in such municipality shall not thereafter during the times so specified as aforesaid, be obstructed from the public street by the use of non-transparent glass, or of a shade, blind, shutter, screen, merchandise or any other article placed within or without the building in which such room is located."

It is conceded that Corporation Counsel Marsh takes a very different view of the intent of the legislators bearing on this subject. Councilman Daniel said last night that the corporation is always very careful and that he believes he had good reason to give the instructions to the police chief.

TEMPORARY QUARTERS FOR THE DIME SAVINGS.

Likely to Use Rooms Now Occupied by Plainfield Trust Company.

Guillermo Thorn, the photographer, is moving today from his quarters on the third floor of the Dime Savings Institution, and will store his good for the present at 432 East Fifth street. Mr. Thorn occupied the quarters he is leaving today for thirty-seven years.

His removal is necessitated by the proposed improvements and alterations planned by the Dime Savings Institution, whereby the whole building is to be remodelled. The Asbestos Club, which occupies the second floor, will also move, and during the period of improvement the Dime Savings Institution will occupy other quarters, possibly those now used by The Plainfield Trust Company. It is believed that the company will be in its new building on Park avenue in time to make their present place available for the Dime Savings Institution.

Architect A. L. C. Marsh is now at work on the plans for the changes in the Dime Savings Institution and he expects to present them for approval within a short time, after which the work will be started. The whole front will be changed and the interior transformed into one large room with a handsome skylight dome which will give much-needed light. The entrance on the two floors above will be added to the main entrance to the bank. Entirely new furnishings will be supplied.

LION WILL GO.

Fitz Decides to Get Rid of His Battered King of Beasts.

"Bob" Fitzsimmons is making arrangements to get rid of his lion. The attack made by the animal on a horse recently, which Fitz was compelled to check with a mallet, has decided the pugilist-farmer to put "Senator" where he will be back of bars and under the eye of a trained keeper.

"Senator" would have been disposed of before now, but for the condition in which the hammering left him. He was nearly beaten to death before he loosed his grip on the horse, and he is still rocky. He walks shakily, and seems to be cloudy in his head. Fitz wants to nurse him back to health before sending him away, in spite of the terrific beating "Senator" still longs to get at horses. He tugs at his cable and growles every time a horse goes by him on the grounds.

Seventh-Day Baptist Conference.

The annual conference of the Seventh-Day Baptist church of New York and New Jersey will be held August 22-25 at Leonardsville, N. Y., and will be preceded by a preconference of pastors to be held at West Edmeston, N. Y., a short distance from Leonardsville. It is expected that a large delegation will attend from the Seventh-Day Baptist church of this city.

Entertained at Hopatcong.

Miss E. S. Thompson and E. R. Gwyer, of this city, have been entertained at Lake Hopatcong by Mrs. John C. Lake, of the Sunnyside, who gave them a delightful launch party on Wednesday followed by a dinner and dance at the Forest House. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Saunders and Miss Emma Kennedy, of Hackensack; Mrs. Arthur B. Baker, East Orange; Mrs. Elizabeth Woodruff and Miss Edna Woodruff, Philipsburg; Mrs. Mahlon Smith, Lake Hopatcong, and Mrs. S. M. Gwyer and F. D. Gwyer of this place.

Little Doing in the Common Council.

There is not likely to be much doing in the Common Council during July and August, unless some urgent matters should come up. These are the months that the members select to take a rest from municipal duties and as many Plainfielders are away also, there is scarcely any need for any meetings, outside of the regular ones.

Borough Council Refuses George Cook Permit to Erect Building For This Purpose.

HAS "RECOLLECTIONS."

Routine Business Transacted at Last Night's Session—Fire Alarm Circuits to be Overhauled.

The borough council, at its meeting, Friday night, refused to give George Cook, of this city, a permit to erect a frame building 60 by 100 feet on the north bank of Tier's lake to be used as a skating rink. It was stated by Chairman Lee, of the building committee, that the borough has unpleasant recollections of a building of this character that had its day twenty years ago and that the sentiment is against having another. When the roll was called, all the members present, with the exception of Mr. VanWinkle, voted for a resolution not to grant the permit. Mr. VanWinkle explained that his intention had not been called to the matter before the meeting and he was not acquainted with the detailed plans of the applicant.

In the regular order of business, the borough Board of Health made application to the council to provide a proper dumping place for garbage men and scavengers. Mayor Smalley at first laughingly referred the matter to the "sewer committee," but immediately stated that steps would be taken at once to comply with the request.

Chairman Smith, of the fire committee, stated that the fire alarm system in the west end of the borough has contracted several kinds of kinks recently and that an electrician had been engaged to give the various circuits a thorough inspection. At his request, a resolution was passed giving the regular firemen seven days' vacation and another resolution offered by Mr. VanArsdale resulted in the usual time off being granted the members of the police force.

Chairman Smith also asked for an appropriation of $75 to buy boots and coats for the fire department and it called for some discussion through the mayor's remark that "the borough finances are low and every penny counts." Chairman Smith insisted that they were needed and he got the money.

The mayor reported as acting recorder that during June the police had made thirty-eight arrests and that $76 in fines had been collected. Chairman Lee reported that in the same month a total of $988.11 had been expended in street work. Permission was granted the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company to open parts of Elm place, Brook avenue and Jackson avenue for the purpose of laying conduits and on a resolution offered by Mr. McGee the council was empowered to borrow $2,500 for needed expenditures. The appointment of Benjamin Scribner as a marshal to do special business concluded the session.

OFFICERS INSTALLED.

Annual Ceremony of Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M.

Past Councilor George Allen, the oldest past officer, installed the officers-elect of Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., last night, in the council rooms in the Babcock building. There was a large attendance of members of Somerset and other councils, and the work was performed in a satisfactory manner.

These officers were installed: Past councilor, George Watts; councilor, Arthur Dow; vice-councilor, William Hultt; conductor, William Dunham; warden, Charles Wilson; financial secretary, George Allen; recording secretary, Walter C. Walker; assistant recording secretary, Fred Soper, Jr.; inside sentinel, H. C. Smith; outside sentinel, George GaNun; trustee, Hortman Mundy; treasurer, Jesse M. Scull. After the installation there was a social time and refreshments served.

MR. ANDREWS CHOSEN TRACT SOCIETY SEC'Y

PLAINFIELDER SELECTED FOR RESPONSIBLE POSITION IN NEW YORK.

Frederic H. Andrews, of this city, who is a member of the Union County Taxation Board, has been elected financial secretary of the American Tract Society, of New York, a position that he is particularly fitted for.

Mr. Andrews is an elder of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and has been active for nearly a score of years in the mission work carried on by that church in the three chapels, Hope, Warren and Bethel. He is the chairman of the Lake George committee of the Young Men's Christian Associations of the Eastern States and Canada, and takes a prominent part in the Silver Bay Conference each year. For twenty-two years Mr. Andrews was a member of the New York Produce Exchange and has served as its vice-president.

PLAINFIELDERS AFTER GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

MESSRS. GLENNEY BARROWS AND ABBOTT IN NATIONAL TOURNEY.

H. Chandler Egan, the amateur golf champion for the past two years, arrived at Englewood yesterday and will be at the links daily in preparation for the defence of his title in the national tournament to begin on Tuesday. Egan made an 80, very good for the first glimpse of the 6,203 yard course, and was accompanied by John Hobens. The club's pro was so inspired by the presence of the amateur champion that he reeled off 73, breaking all records for the course.

The Plainfield Country Club will be represtned in this tournament by W. Lester Glenney, Dudley H. Barrows and Robert, Abbott. Great things are expected of Abbott, who holds the intercollegiate golf championship, and as he is playing an exceptionally strong game at present, he should be able to make the entire field play the best to beat him.

Barrows and Barrows are also strong factors to be counted on in the tournament. The latter is a member of the Princeton 'Varsity golf team and his work during the past year has been of a high order. The same can be said of Glenney, who was formerly a member of the Columbia University golf team, and who has not lost any of his enthusiasm or playing ability since leaving college. It is a sure thing that these three Plainfielders will enter the tournament and possibly there may be more.

THE HALL OF FAME.

Sir Gilbert Parker, the novelist member of parliament, does most of his writing nowadays while standing up.

Asa Dekluge, who has been chosen chief of the Apache Indians to succeed Geronimo, is a graduate of the Indian school at Carlisle and has great influence with his tribe.

Dr. Lyan, of Pana, I., the oldest physician in that state, celebrated his one hundred and first birthday. More than a thousand persons attended a reception given in his honor.

Francis MacMillen, the American violinist, who has been playing with great success for many years in Europe, will come to this country in the fall. He left Ohio in his boyhood.

Some say that men of genius are always thin, but among the fat and famous may be mentioned Renan, Dr. Johnson, Rossini, Balzac, Henry James, Dumas, St. Beuve and W. D. Howells.

Richard T. Greener, a negro, formerly United States consul at Vladivostock, has been given a decoration of the Red Dragon by the Chinese government for his humanitarianism during the Russo-Japanese war.

Sir Purdon Clarke, director of the Metropolitan museum, has gone to Europe and while abroad will make arrangements to get copies of certain masterpieces which the museum may never hope to obtain possession of.

Professor Wilhelm Ostwald has resigned a professorship in the chemistry at the University of Leipsic as a result of his displasure at the lack of support accorded to his chemical researches. He will establish a private liboratory.

Claude Kinnear, whose father is a vice admiral of the British navy, has enlisted in the United States marine corps and is now stationed at the Norfolk navy yard. He is twenty-five years old and saw hard service in the war.

General J. C. Jamison, a Missionarian of the old school, is probably the greatest bird lover in Oklahoma, his present home, and is advocating that the State adopt as a part of the curriculum in the study of birds and their protection in the public schools.

Miss Nina Horanady, president of the Daughters of the War of 1812, for Georgia, has discovered in Ocean Park, Cal., Daniel Turner, who, she claims, is the only survivor of the war of 1813. He is a full blooded Cherokee Indian, born in Georgia and fought against the British during the battle of New Orleans.

The Rev. John Aldis, once the most prominent minister of the Baptist denomination in England, has reached the age of ninety-eight. He began life in a shoemaker's shop. Afterward he was sent to Horton college, near Bradford, now known as Rawdon college. Later he became pastor of Maze Pond chapel, London, and in 1866 he was elected chairman of the Baptist Union.

Telephone Building Progressing.

The contractors have about completed the foundations for the new building being erected by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company. The cellar is of unusual construction, the floors and walls being interlined with five-ply tar paper and cement to keep out all possible dampness.

An Early Morning Blaze.

A blazing oil stove at the residence of A. B. Davis, of 172 Duer street, started a fire at 5:45 this morning that caused $200 damage. An alarm was turned in by Mr. Davis from box 152 and the borough department prevent a much heavier loss by its quick response and good work. A hydrant stream and the chemical were used but practically no damage resulted from water.

NEW SEWER COMMISSION KILLS TWO GIRLS AT HIS REQUEST

Mayor Smalley Names Citizens to Investigate Matter For the Borough.

REPRESENTATIVE BODY

W. J. Buttfield Chairman—Fifty Members—Appropriate $300 For Work.

In accordance with the resolution passed at the public meeting held two weeks ago, Mayor Smalley announced the appointment of a sewer commission at Friday night's session of the borough council but much to the surprise of most of those concerned he named fifty prominent property owners as members. They were selected after careful scrutiny of the tax lists and the East and West sides of Somerset street are evenly represented. The only suggestion made by the mayor in announcing his action was that those named meet for conference before July 17 and agree upon a sub-committee of five, the latter to take the initiative in investigating the question of a sewer system and report to the council as soon as possible. The names on the fifty list are as follows:

William J. Buttfield, chairman; Charles W. McCutchen, Col. John F. Wilson, C. Frank French, George F. White, William S. Smith, Edwin S. Hooley, W. G. Debele, Alex. Thorn, Herman Schwed, J. N. Groendyke, Martin I. Cooder, Robert Clark, Jr., Harrison Codington, Charles B. Pope, T. B. Brooks, Elston M. French, Dr. Justus H. Cooley, L. E. Barkalew, W. E. Brock, Fred Becker, Harry H. Moore, W. J. Conroy, J. H. McLaughlin, George R. Schenck, E. Faber, Hegeman, Jr., George D. Hallock, Henry Opdyke, W. H. Shotwell, Reuben Knox, Andrew Lutkins, Thomas E. Currin, H. A. McGee, Frank de L. Hyde, Joseph H. Osgood, William L. Saunders, George T. Rogers and Samuel Townsend.

In presenting the names, Mayor Smalley informed the council that when the idea of a commission was first suggested he did not take favorably to it but since then he has regarded it in a different light. It is such an important matter, he explained, that it is advisable to let every resident of the borough who owns property, have something to say about it. He deplored the fact that progress so far has been very slow but he added that the man he had made chairman is one who has taken great interest in the subject and that he can be relied upon to expedite matters.

W. J. Buttfield was the one who offered the resolution that the commission be appointed to take up the question and he is thoroughly conversant with nearly every detail as far as the council has gone. The list contains a number of other well known residents who are also fully competent to handle the subject, among them Mr. Osgood, who is chief engineer of the New Jersey Central; E. S. Hooley, W. L. Saunders, T. Kenney and Captain W. C. Smith.

Following the appointment of the commission, Councilman VanArsdale offered a resolution that the body be authorized to expend not more than $300 in preparing its report. It was passed unanimously and the money will probably be spent in securing the assistance of a competent engineer.

Summer Shore Book.

The New Jersey Central has just issued an interesting booklet on the New Jersey coast resorts. It is replete with information desired by the vacationist. The book contains 64 pages of reading matter and has about 75 illustrations together with maps of the various routes to the shore. New Jersey always popular as a vacation resort has become doubly popular since the New Jersey Central has put in operation its fast Sea Shore trains in addition to the famous Sandy Hook route. If you are interested in a vacation, be sure you have the New Jersey Central "Sea Side Resorts of New Jersey," it will be sent to any address upon receipt of 4 cents in stamps by C. M. Burt, General Passenger Agent, 143 Liberty street, N. Y.

The Law of Gravity.

"The thought of losing you," sighed the fortune-hunter who had been rejected, "makes my heart sink."

"Yes," replied the heiress, unfeelingly, "that's due to the gravity of the loss."

Conroy Balled.

Special Officer John Conroy, who was arrested on a serious charge Thursday morning and committed to jail to await the action of the grand jury, was released today under $250 bail.

TRIPLE CRIME WAS PLANNED

REMARKABLE TRAGEDY REPORTED FROM GERMANY.

Music Teacher Tells How He and His Pupils, Melancholy Over Study of Wagner, Had Agreed to Die.

Berlin.—Carl Brunke, a young bank clerk, has just been sentenced to eight years' penal servitude here for one of the most extraordinary deeds in the annals of crime. Without hesitation he confessed to the police that he had murdered at their own request two sisters, Martha and Alma Hanke, 22 and 21 years old, respectively.

The self-confessed slayer had for some time been acting in the capacity of teacher of music to the young women, and expert alienists say that all three had been reduced to a state of extreme melancholy from excessive study of Wagner.

There is no doubt that the two girls did ask Brunke to kill them. Indeed, Martha, the elder one, gave him the money with which to buy the revolver with which the double murder was done.

When Brunke was arrested he said he was ready to confess and with the utmost calmness said:

"When I came back the two girls were awaiting me in my room, but our courage then began to fail us. Martha gave me $15 to buy three bottles of champagne, and after we had drunk up our courage with the wine we discussed all the details of our approaching deaths.

"First I fired a test shot and we all agreed that the revolver would surely do its work unfailingly. Both girls had put on white waists and black skirts so as to make a presentable appearance after death.

"By agreement I shot the younger sister first. The instant I fired she fell to the floor dead. We bent down over her body and Martha asked her if she was still alive, but received no answer.

"I DELIBERATELY TOOK AIM AND FIRED TWO SHOTS."

"Martha then stood up and pointed out to me carefully the spot on her breast at which she wished me to fire. I took deliberate aim according to her directions and fired two shots, both of which hit the mark and passed entirely through her body. She must have died instantly.

"It had required to turn the weapon on myself as soon as I had killed the two girls, but weakened at the sight of their lifeless bodies lying on the floor in front of me. Instead of shooting myself I decided to surrender to the police and make a confession."

Brunke turned over to the police letters apparently written by the two girls, in which they said that it was at their own request that he slew them.

The alienists who examined the prisoner decided that although he was suffering from form of insanity, it was not sufficiently marked to render him immune to punishment. The eight-year sentence was imposed under a section of the criminal code which provides a minimum of three years' penal servitude from crimes of such nature. The courts cannot recall any case of this kind.

Child Drowns Baby Sister.

London.—"I put Dolly in the water. Dolly dead. Buy another Dolly." This statement was made by the three-year-old daughter of Mrs. Branch, of Nyanza street, Plumstead, to her mother. It was only too true; she had drowned her baby sister. The victim was the six-weeks-old child of Mrs. Branch, who told the Woolwich coroner that on Friday afternoon she left her infant in the kitchen with the older child. The latter came to her and remarked: "Sister wants mamma." As the little girl was in the habit of making this remark when she had done anything wrong, the mother did not pay any particular heed, but when she added that Dolly was dead the mother went to the kitchen and found the infant drowned in a tub. The jury returned a verdict of death by misadventure.

TO PROSECUTE OFFICER

Giles Hires Lawyer to Press Brutality Charge Against Roundsman.

M.B. MELLER FOR FLYNN

Hillside Avenue Resident Says Giles Made a Nuisance of Himself and Frightened Mrs. Meller.

John Giles, of Lake street, has taken steps to press the charge of cruelty brought against Roundsman Flynn when he was arraigned by the officer, Tuesday morning, charged with drunkenness and disorder. He has retained Lawyer F. J. Pope, of Somerville, to carry the case through.

When Giles was brought up in court, George Solomon, an Assyrian, who claimed to have seen the arrest, declared in court that the officer beat Giles unmercifully with his billet. The roundsman denied the charge, but Solomon was so insistent and excited in his reiterations of the accusation that Judge Runyon laid the case over until Saturday.

Mr. Pope appeared in court when it was called, ready to combat the charge against Giles and to prefer a counter-complaint against Flynn. Chief Kiely asked for an adjournment in order to array the witnesses for the prosecution, and the magistrate put off the hearing until next Friday morning.

Mr. Pope made a statement to the reporters in which he charged Flynn with making the arrest illegally, as well as brutally. He claims that Giles was sitting on his own steps when the officer came up to arrest him, and that Flynn went directly to his premises to take him into custody without having seen any disorder. It is claimed that Giles' only approach to disorderly conduct was a shaking administered to his son after he had called his father a vile name. Mr. Pope declared that the row brought about the arrest out of spite. The neighbors, according to Mr. Pope, were wrought up over the alleged cruelty, and Giles is being backed with plenty of money in his fight for satisfaction.

That is the story of the defense. M. B. Meller, of 963 Hillside avenue, whose residence is near the Lake street shed in which Giles makes his home, furnished something for the other side of the story this morning in a letter to Chief Kiely. The officer went after Giles in response to a telephone from Mr. Meller's shouse. Mr. Meller says Giles has made a nuisance of himself on several occasions, and on the night in question he carried on in the Meller yard to such an extent as to terrorize Mrs. Meller. Mr. Meller says he had tried to keep Giles out of trouble on other occasions, but he felt then that he could put up with no more of his actions. Giles, he says, beat his son brutally.

It is not denied by the defense that Giles is a drunkard or that he had not been drinking Monday night. The claim is that he did not resist arrest, which of itself was illegal, and that the officer battered him brutally. The roundsman charges Giles with striking the officer a blow. He acknowledged striking him over the back of the hand, but says it was necessary to loosen his grip on a wire fence. Giles shows bruises under his arms, but the officer says that were made by the grip he took in pulling the prisoner off a fence.

In his prosecution of a charge of cruelty against Flynn, Mr. Pope will have to do without the testimony of Solomon, the Assyrian. He sailed for Assyria the afternoon of the first hearing. The departure explained how he happened to have the $2,000 which he flung dramatically on the court table in an excited offer to back his word against Flynn's for any sum from $100 to $1,000. He had drawn all his money out of the bank for the trip. The departure probably also explains why he "talked back" so courageously to all the representatives of the law in court.

HONOR RETIRING OFFICER.

Handsome Jewel Presented to Charles McGinley.

To mark his retirement from office as keeper of records and seal, a position he had filled for twenty years, Charles McGinley with a silver and gold past chancellor's jewel, last night.

The presentation followed the election of the new officers. It was made by Past Chancellor Walter L. Herbert.

The officers elected are as follows: Chancellor commander, John Hall; vice chancellor, Harry Baker; prelate, Robert Jahn; inner guard, Lewis Perrine; outer guard, Stephen Braum; keeper of records and seal, George Drewal.

RAILROADS ON ISTHMUS.

New and Old Lines Which Cross the Panama Neck and Their Traffic.

The Panama canal is so great an enterprise that it overshadows other important work that has been done to facilitate commerce between the Pacific and Atlantic oceans, across the wasp-like waste connecting North and South America. We have heard something of the Panama railroad and also of the Vera Cruz-Pacific railway, which affords communication between the two coast lines. Perhaps not so much is known of the new national railway built across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec by a combination of American capital and the Mexican government. A report from Special Agent Pepper to the consular department says:

"As it exists to-day the Tehuantepec National railway is an unusually good work of railroad construction and seems capable of sustaining all the freight traffic that can be obtained for it. The road is standard gauge of four feet eight and one-half inches. For the clayey soil there is rock ballast and gravel. The ties are creosoted pine, California redwood and native hardwood. Eighty-pound steel rails are employed. The best steel bridges with solid masonry and abutments are utilized wherever a river is to be crossed, and this is especially important on account of the torrential rains in the wet season. The locomotives and rolling stock are of the best equipment. With this solid construction there seems to be no question about the railroad standing whatever strain may be put upon it."

Thus it appears, says the Indianapolis News, that the old line across the Isthmus at Tehuantepec has been rebuilt and modernized. It is not regarded as a rival to the canal when it is completed, but it is designed to carry a heavy traffic during the period of the canal construction. It will carry the overflow traffic which the Panama railroad cannot take care of, on account of the necessity of using it for facilities for the construction work of the canal. Connecting with the new railroad on either coast will be steamship lines, and a great traffic will doubtless be developed, which will reach its full flower when the canal is put into operation. It is evident that tremendous commercial possibilities have developed in recent years, and that there is to be a marked increase of commerce across the isthmus long before the canal is finished.

PACKING COCOA SEEDS.

Method Tried in Samoa Thought to Be of Value for the Philippines.

Consul General Helmrod, of Apia, submits a method of packing cocoa *seeds for export which has been prac*tically tried in Samoa with excellent results, and which he believes may be of special value to planters in the Philippine Islands.

The seeds should be selected from ripe pods and well washed in water, then placed on a rough towel and gently rubbed in order to remove most of the pulp, taking care not to damage the skin. The seeds are next placed in a current of cool air for 24 hours. The packing material is composed of equal parts of vegetable mold and finely ground or pounded charcoal, moistened just enough to resemble earth taken out of a shaded place. If the packing material is too wet, the seeds will rot, and if not moist enough the seeds will absorb all the water and perish. A tin box eight by four by four will hold about 200 seeds if packed as follows: Place a layer of earth or charcoal about three-fourths of an inch deep on the bottom of the tin box and lay the seeds in rows, leaving a little space between each. Spread another layer of the charcoal and earth, then another layer of rows of seeds, and so on until the box is full. Packing a slip of material across when the lid fits will help to keep the moisture in. When wetting the charcoal and earth, it is a wise precaution to do it 12 hours before using it, as this gives the water time to permeate the whole mass evenly.

Tree of the Canaries.

The dragon tree of the Canary islands is notable for the existence of individuals believed to be the oldest living vegetable organism in the world. The age of one tree, in particular, the once famous dragon tree of Tenerife, has usually been estimated to be from 4,000 to 6,000 years, having thus an antiquity comparable with that of the pyramids. This wonder of the plant world was 70 feet or more in height, and survived intact until the year 1819, when during a terrific storm one of the largest branches was broken off. A similar storm in 1867 stripped the trunk of its remaining branches and left it standing alone. This tree derives its common name from a reddish exudation known as dragon's blood, found in the sepulchral caves of the Guanches, and supposed to have been used by them in embalming their dead. It is said to have been at one time an important article of export from the canaries.

Fifteen-Ton Piece of Coral.

The dredger Governor, in the old Pacific mail dock, did herself proud by landing a 15-ton piece of coral on dry land. The big scoop has been delivering ordinary loads, when the boom dropped and the engine started to haul in a fresh load. Then the gear groaned, and things commenced to make a big fuss, and more steam was given and everybody stood by. Balanced as neatly as an egg in a spoon came up a coral rock far too big to get in the scoop, and just able to cramp in under the gin block.—Honolulu Commercial Advertiser.

ELEPHANTS BREAK UP CHURCH SERVICE

EVADE KEEPER AND STARTLE COLORED CONGREGATION.

ANIMALS CREATE A PANIC.

Make Their Escape While Being Loaded Into Train at Cincinnati—Are Recaptured After Causing Considerable Excitement.

Cincinnati.—An elephant hunt engaged an army of men and a company of circus attaches from early morning until six o'clock the other evening in the territory north of the city. While being transferred from the winter quarters of the circus to a railroad a herd of 20 elephants escaped from their keepers. Part of the herd escaped into the front door of a colored Baptist church near by while services were in progress. The congregation dispersed through the windows, and the parson slipped out at a rear stairway to find refuge in the belfry. The animals scattered in all directions, trumpeting and mowing down fences in their mad rush. Some of them pulled up small trees and shrubbery. Most of the animals were retaken by the middle of the afternoon, but there were many wild scrambles by pedestrians to get out of the way.

The animals, after their long stay in winter quarters, were rather chary of stepping on the ponderous runway and entering the cars. But the one elephant was induced to go up into the car, and the others, emboldened, were about to follow, when an express train came along at full speed on the opposite track, the engine whistling as it passed through.

The terrified elephant in the car charged down the runway through its companions, knocking the attendants right and left, and in a moment there was a stampede. To add to the trumpeting and squealing of the monster beasts was a continuous clanking of chains.

Frightened pedestrians, seeing the elephants coming on a run, sought safety wherever they could, and the streets were soon deserted by all but the attendants. Fences were pulled up, lamp posts overturned and business signs thrown helter-skelter.

At the First aBptist Colored church, the congregation had just finished a hymn, and the minister was giving out the text when pandemonium seemed to have broken loose in the church yard. One elephant with long tusks, the patriarch of the herd, butted his head against the door, which crashed in, and an instant later the beast's head was shoved into the church, and the long trunk waved about threateningly.

Several members of the Sunday school class saw the animal's head and trunk, and, imagining that Satan had called either to admonish them or to take them with him, rent the air with their infantile shrieks. The elephant then withdrew his head and, taking a place in front of his companions, commenced a slow gallop about the church edifice, a trick they had been taught in winter quarters. Women screamed and several fainted, although Pastor Francis endeavored to allay their fears.

The members of the congregation cowered in terror as the elephants circled the building, their outstretched trunks pulling down limbs of trees and hurling the benches and chairs in the yard to splinters.

After their little run-about recreation the elephants proceeded to dig up the church yard and other yards in the vicinity and made them look as if a number of laborers had been at work with picks and spades. Finally the keepers arrived on the scene and went to work to calm the animals, but they were so excited that this took some time. Several of them, however, obeyed the command "Duke!" which means in elephant language to lie down, and these animals were formed into a line. The elephants were, after a short while, under control, with the exception of five, one of whom was the old animal that led the outbreak. With four other elephants he disappeared in the direction of Carthage Heights and as soon, as word could be sent to the fair grounds came on horseback, with ropes and chains, started after them.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Philistine for July contains an article entitled "A Little Journey to the Home of Mary Baker Eddy," by Elbert Hubbard. The preachment is written in the doughty editor's best style and is bound to attract attention. The notable passage is the following: There is an adage to the effect that a prophet is not without honor save in his own country. An adage is sometimes true and sometimes not. In the case of Mary Baker Eddy the adage just quoted goes away. Mrs. Eddy has the good will of Concord, and very many of the leading men and women of the city are Christian Scientists. The Christian Science Church at Concord cost upwards of two hundred thousand dollars, and was the gift of Mrs. Eddy. Over the entrance, cut deep in granite are the words, "Presented by Mary Baker Eddy, Discover and Founder of Christian Science." In all of her literature, Mrs. Eddy sets out the unqualified statement that she is "The Discoverer and the Founder." She is not apologetic—she assumes no modesty she does not feel—she speaks as one having authority as did Moses of old, "Thus saith the Lord!" She enters into no joint debates; she does not answer back. Her intense conviction which admits of no parley is one of the secrets of her power. Homeopathy modified the dose of all the Allopathists; and Christian Science has nearly eliminated the Hahnemanian theory of attenuations. It having been found that the blank pellet cures quite as effectively as the one that is medicated. Christian Science does not shout, rant, defy or preach. It is poised, silent, sure, and the flagellants, like the dervishes, are noticeable by their absence. The 1900 lady in Sunday is not a Christian Scientist. The Christian Scientist does not cut into the grape; specialize on the elevated spheroid; devote his energies to bridge whist; cultivate the scandal microbe; join the anvil chorus or shake the red rag of woody warfare. He is diligent in business, fervent in spirit, accepts what comes without protect. He not only banishes pain, but also poverty, for poverty is a disease.

Charles Dorman Robinson, whose illustrations (one of them reproduced in color from the original pastel) of the San Francisco fire will appear in the August Century, has seen his home city burn four times. He was in the fire of 1851, 1854 and 1864, as well as in the much greater catastrophe of 1906. Mr. Robinson succeeded in making a painting of the recent fire when it was at its greatest height, on Thursday night from eleven to three in the morning. He painted three pictures in all, several of which the August Century will reproduce.

The July-September number of The Forum, the representative high-class American quarterly review, is out, with its tri-monthly summary of progress and results in the main lines of contemporaneous thought, activity, and civilization. In "American Politics," Litchfield West discusses Presidential possibilities, the approaching Congressional campaign, and the imminence of sweeping tariff reforms. A. Maurice Low includes, in his abstract of "Foreign Affairs," the inauguration of the Russian Duma, the deposition of Witte from the premiership, England's successful diplomacy abroad and Parliamentary wrangles at home, the awakening of China, the disarmament proposition in Europe, and the Spanish royal wedding. Timely topics of "Finance," treated by Alexander D. Noyes, are the singular situation created in the money market by the San Francisco earthquake and fire, and the Russian loan. In his review of "Applied Science," Henry Harrison Suplee considers the important question of rebuilding San Francisco, and the problems involved in the mine disaster at Courrieres, France. Henry Tyrrell gives a com*prehensive chronicle* of the dramatic season, and of the defined prospectuses of the New Theatre. Two literary articles of sterling value are Prof. Trent's appreciation of Thomas Hardy's "Dynasts," and William T. Brewster's criticism of some "Types of Recent Biography."

"Many's the bears I have shot in the woods, but I'll never forget the big one I let get away because he was so wise I thought he would some day maybe find his way into one of them trained animal shows you folks have in the cities. It was night outa five o'clock in the afternoon that I first saw this geezer, as I was paddlin' a sport back to our camp-ground, and there was Mister Bear rummagin' around amongst our grub, just like he was at home. With me a smell of us, and we within handy spankin' distance of him—so I told the sport to keep still, and there we sat in the canoe and watched him. First, he knocked our jug of syrup off the table, and he rolled it till it broke and the stick to the ground. Then he waddled over to the flour barrel and upset that and got the flour stuck to the syrup until he looked might like a polar bear from Alasky. When he thought he was enough stuck on himself he walked over to our fire and rolled around pretty near close enough to it to get burned for about five minutes. Now, if he wasn't making ginger cake for the little cubs he had left back in the woods you can put me down for the biggest liar you know!"—James Leddy Fequisnot in July "Recreation."

Less than two years ago, a prospector lost his way on the desert, near the California line, in Nye county, Nevada, with thirst. He became delirious. At length he fell in the hot sands and lay, unable to move, until death came to his relief. On the spot where that man's body was found is now the town of Bullfrog. A water-works plant costing fifty thousand dollars supplies an abundance of water. There are hotels with baths in many rooms, and residences equipped with all the modern, paraphernalia that make for comfort, and through them flows in abundance the previous liquor for lack of which a prospector perished only a few months ago on this very spot. Electric lights illume streets where only the stars of heaven looked down on the death of the donely miner, and within the radius of very few miles there are now about fifteen thousand people. That is the way Nevada is growing. —From "The Awakening of Nevada," by Clarence H. Matson, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for July.

NOTABLE CAREER OF MICHAEL ANAGNOS.

Brother-in-Law of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall Died Abroad.

Michael Anagnos, brother-in-law of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Madison avenue, whose death at Turn-Severin, Roumania, was announced yesterday by cable, was a prominent Greek scholar and founder of the first kindergarten for the blind. He was born in Epirus, Greece, in 1837. He was graduated from the University at Athens and assisted Dr. Samuel Gridley Howe, of Boston, in the work of aiding and educating the refugee of the Cretan insurrection, who had fled to Greece in 1867.

He came to America soon afterwards and was associated with Dr. Howe in the work of educating the blind. In 1870 he married the latter's daughter, Julia Romana Howe, and became the successor of his father-in-law, as head of the Perkins Institution, on the latter's death in 1876. In 1887 he founded the kindergarten for the blind at Jamaica Plain, Mass., the first school of its kind in the world. Largely through his efforts it now owns property to the value of one million dollars and has upwards of a hundred pupils. Mr. Anagnos also raised a fund of $100,000 to establish the Howe Memorial Printing House for the blind and materially increased the property of the Perkins Institution, the pioneer and best equipped school of its kind in this country. He directed the early education of Helen Keller, who was one of his pupils at his institution. She was taught by the methods invented by Dr. Howe for his famous pupil, Laura Bridgman. Mr. Anagnos was also president of the Greek Union of America. He was a naturalized American citizen. His wife, who was also deeply interested in the cause of the blind, died in 1886.

IS NOW A FELLOW

H. L. GOODWIN ELECTED TO GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

He Is Only 28 Years of Age—The Object of the Famous Organization and Privileges Enjoyed by Its Many Members.

Kansas City, Mo.—There are three members of the Royal Geographical society in this city. They are Dr. Edwin R. Heath of Kansas City, Kas., Col. J. Gardiner Stowe, formerly United States consul general in Capetown, South Africa, and H. Llewellyn Goodwin. Mr. Goodwin has just been elected a member of the famous old organization on the recommendation of Col. Stowe. There are only six honorary members of the Royal Geographical society in the United States. Dr. Heath of Kansas City, Kas., is one of the six. In the whole United States there are not more than 75 Fellows of the society, and all were elected in recognition of something, scientific attainments, explorations or fame of one kind or another. Mr. Goodwin, the latest addition to the society's ranks, is only 28 years old. He was formerly a department manager for Swift & Co., packers, but is now general western manager for a scale manufacturing company. He was born in Burlington, Kan. Mr. Goodwin is possessed of unusual educational qualifications, particularly in mathematics. Col. Stowe had known him many years and admired his business energy. Under the rules of the Royal Geographical society a fellow may, after a year's membership, propose the name of another for the same honor.

The Royal Geographical society was founded in 1830 for the advancement of geographical science. It received a royal charter of incorporation in 1850. It started with 460 members. To-day it has 4,315 in all parts of the world. Nearly all these members are noted in some capacity. They represent the arts, the sciences, the armies and navies of many nations; kings and princes; professional men whose names are known everywhere. There are scores of members with titles enough to tire most people and from five to 20 letters tacked on the end of their names. His majesty, the king of England, is a patron of the society, and his royal highness, the prince of Wales, vice patron. Rt. Hon. Sir George Taubman Goldie, K. C. M. G., F. R. S., D. C. L., LL. D., and other things, is president.

H. LLEWELLYN GOODWIN.
(Who Has Been Honored by Election as Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society.)

The Royal Geographical society, to be absolutely correct about it, can trace its beginning back to 1555, when the first organized geographical work was undertaken. Travelers began then to write books telling what they had seen in their wanderings. The "Royal society" was founded by some of these travelers. The African as*sociation* was organized in 1788 to promote the exploration of the Dark Continent. Then the Palestine exploration fund came into existence in February, 1827. These three organizations were merged in 1830 into the trust now known as the Royal Geographical society. So that H. Llewellyn Goodwin, in being elected to membership in a body of such ancient lineage, may reasonably be pardoned if he give evidence of gratification.

A member of the Royal Geographical society has advantages over ordinary traveling mortals. If he wishes to visit some out of the way quarter of the globe, about which no one seems to know anything, he may write to the secretary in London, or visit the "house." If he chances to be over that way, and he must all about it in short order. If his mission shall appear to be particularly praiseworthy, the society will put up money to push it along and may even lend him instruments if he needs them, and an outfit. And when he returns—he returns, if he ever does, the society will hold an extraordinary meeting with much solemnity and listen to his story. The collection of maps and books on travel in the society's rooms is not excelled anywhere.

Pulpwood in 1905.

The returns from 159 firms, controlling 222 pulp-mills, give over 2,000,000 cords as the total amount of wood used last year. The wood was divided among the various processes as follows: Sulphite, 1,538,000 cords; soda, 410,000 cords; ground wood, 1,068,000 cords. The total pulp production by all processes by the firms reporting was 1,982,000 tons. According to the census of 1900, the consumption of pulpwood was then 1,296,210 cords, so that there has been an increase of over 50 per cent. in the last six years. This demonstrates, in a striking manner, the drain upon the forests caused by the pulp industry.

FILIPINO RAILROAD MEN.

Natives in Manila Take Readily to the Work of Operating Electric Lines.

The experiment made in depending solely on native Filipinos to man the cars of the Manila Electric railway has proved eminently successful. Although this kind of help was used exclusively in building the line, which were opened to traffic last April, it was feared by some that a certain well-known tendency toward unreliability in the native character would manifest itself in the new work, more exacting than any natives had heretofore been called upon to perform in numbers since the American occupation.

"It is generally known," said P. E. Fansler, assistant to the president of the New York company, by which the system was built and operated, "that the natives are wonderfully quick to learn up to a certain point, where a childish inexactitude has blocked further progress in the attainment of a thoroughly civilized status. That it is rather a matter of proper and well directed tuition seems to be the lesson in the present case. As was generally anticipated, the operating manager in Manila, Mr. Beach, met with instantaneous success in instructing the native mind in the technic of street car operation, but contrary to general anticipation the usual bete noir—instability—seems to have been quite thoroughly overcome.

"It is felt now that the native has lived up to the requirements of the job fully as well as the white man could have done under any conditions and probably better taking the climate into consideration," said he. "It must be remembered that to operate a modern electric car in the crowded streets of an oriental city where the traffic and pedestrians are absolutely at variance and unaccustomed to so foreign an element, calls for the full measure of steadiness and watchfulness to avoid accident. It is a fact that under these trying conditions the Manila Electric railway is being operated with what may justifiably be considered a minimum of accident and that through the demonstration by Filipino motormen of his full possession of those very qualities that the more cursory examiners have declared to be wanting. Fully to appreciate the peculiar demand for steadiness one must have had experience in trying to progress through the streets of a large oriental metropolis. Pedestrians use the roadway very often in common with vehicles and may generally be persuaded to make way only when their lives are actually in danger. A narrow escape from death is uniformly treated as a joke, not only by the observers, but by the 'principal' as well. Under the circumstances the almost complete freedom from serious accident in the operation of the line is decidedly noteworthy. The conductors, too, uniformly show ability to live up to the requirements of their service. They perform their duties expeditiously and with tact and are, moreover, quite honest.

"These facts are significant of the possibilities in the native Filipino character when given just opportunity to display itself and are especially interesting to Americans watching the industrial development of the islands."

MORO BANDS' FANATICISM.

No Course Safe to Hunt Down and Kill Them, Says Gov. Scott, Governor of Sulu.

Maj. H. L. Scott, governor of the Sulu archipelago, about to return to his station, was a visitor last night at the president. After he left the White House, says a Washington report, he said that he had brought Gen. Wood's attack on the Moros at Mount Dajo would improve conditions in Sulu.

"I hope," he said, "that our colonies may not be compelled to give battle to the Moro bands. The chief of the band that was exterminated the other day is perfectly friendly to this country. He tried hard to keep the band from continuing its hostilities against our government in the islands, but was unable to do so. They were determined on disobeying all laws on killing and acting to suit themselves, and they did not propose to surrender.

"They proposed death to surrender. See this hand?" and Maj. Scott held out his right hand, which showed two fingers missing. "Well, I tried 59 times to get the leader of the band that gave me these wounds to surrender. While I lay in the hospital three months I sent him word often, asking him to surrender and assuring him fair treatment. His name was Panglima Hassan. He disregarded every message we sent and returned defiant and insulting messages. Nothing remained but to hunt him and his band down and exterminate them in battle. He was finally killed. That is the sort of character we must deal with among these fanatical people. Not a soldier of this country wants to shed blood, and every soldier regrets the necessity for hostile action."

Negro Advancement in Hayti.

Yet in Hayti the negro has worn the epaulets for a century and one year, and there is proves that the negro as a race, when left alone, is incapable of self-advancement. No one can expect him to develop resources. Time is an unmarketable article. A day is not worth a banana. In his precious logwood forests, rather than cut only the timber that is ready, he strips the bark and burns over the hills after it. To restore such useless waste of vast treasure nature must have 300 or 40 years. A providence man grows a tick at the right. Again, when a new industry rears its head, as since the negro's bludgeon fails, World's Work.

ADDS 3 MILLIONS TO TAXABLE VALUES

Development of Big Tract in South End of City About to be Begun.

THE CAPITAL IS $250,000

Deal Made By Doane & Doane—C. A. Hyde President of the Corporation.

Millions of dollars of taxable property will be added to the city borough through an exceptionally large deal which has just been effected by Thaddeus O. Doane, Jr., and John H. Doane, comprising the real estate firm of Doane & Doane. The firm purchased what is known as the Leonard tract being the site of the old golf course on Plainfield avenue, and then sold it for the South End Homes Company, who has been organized for the purpose of development of this large and attractive property in the South End of the city, and through the New York Chartered Company, will improve the streets, construct sidewalks and sewers and build beautiful and attractive homes on this tract. Doane & Doane, together with Charles A. Hyde, who is president of the New York Chartered Company, are the incorporators. Doane & Doane are the real estate sales agents and will jointly accept offers with the South End Homes Company in the end store of Charles W. McCutchen's new building, 222 Park avenue.

The South End Homes Company is incorporated under the laws of the State, the capital stock being $250,000, with five year six per cent. guaranteed coupon bonds of $250,000. The officers of the company are as follows:

President, Charles A. Hyde, president of the New York Chartered Company; vice-president, George B. Kelly, director of the Aeolian Company; secretary and treasurer, C. E. Coloney, manager John and James Dobson Carpet Company.

The principal and interest of bonds will be payable at the Plainfield Trust Company. Cyrus A. Mayer has been engaged as general counsel for the company.

The Leonard tract is well-known. Since 1835 it has been in the Leonard family and before that in the family of Oliver H. Leonard married, so that, as expressed by one who knew, "the title runs back in the family to the very beginning of things." During all these years Plainfield has grown and developed into one of the most attractive suburban cities about New York, with advantages second to none. By the growth and development the tract has become almost entirely surrounded by residences of architectural and artistic beauty and is one of the most desirable sections of the city.

The elevation is the highest in the city, next to the Netherwood section. A topographical map and survey has been made by F. A. Dunham, civil engineer, from which a subdivision has been made, giving a total street frontage of 10,280 feet, bounded by Stelle, Plainfield, Sherman, Grant and Spooner avenues, with two new streets running through the property to be named Leonard place and South Leonard street.

In subdividing care hase been exercised to conform to the general character of the surrounding and abutting property, so that the lots are all of good frontage and substantial depth, the smallest being 50x137 feet, thereby making it pos*sible only for high-class development.*

The company has retained as architect John V. VanPelt, of New York, one of the leading architects of the metropolis. Owing to the fact that there is a large unfilled demand in Plainfield for high class residences, which the South End Homes Company aims to fill, owing to its ample resources, it will be enabled to act upon terms to meet the conditions of all intending desirable purchasers.

Only a few detached parcels of property adjacent to the company's holdings are on the market and at what would probably be an average of $50 per front foot, a conservative estimate particularly when it is remembered that no property will be sold unimproved, but only in connection with attractive homes built thereon—the total amount received in this way for the property will not be less than $100,000.

The New York Chartered Company has guaranteed the principal and interest of the bonds of the South End Homes Company and is largely interested in the local company and will supervise its management. Doane & Doane are the sales agents.

Interested.

"Miss Gatesk seems very deeply interested in that ugly old musician," remarked Miss Gaddie.

"Yes," replied Miss Knox, "I guess she misses my meaning. I just told her he frequently made overtures.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.
A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.
Published at
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Terms: $2.00 per year.
A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.
THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1906.

Now that the saloon business is properly regulated, the Legislature can well afford to give its attention to Sunday baseball.

Plainfield congratulates itself that the other cities of the State are at last compelled to do what it long since did voluntarily for the betterment of the liquor traffic. The Bishops' law is an infringement on the local ordinances and a welcome one at that.

Plainfield has plenty of good material for its mayoralty, but no one seems willing to become a candidate or at least to announce his willingness at this stage of the campaign. Mr. Fisk is conceded to be the choice of the regular Republican organization, though he has not intimated whether he would head its ticket. Mr. Hall, suggested as the probable selection of the anti-organization men, firmly declines to run. Either of these two citizens would make an admirable mayor. So would Mr. Barrows, who is now mentioned as the probability in opposition to the organization ticket. To him, more than to any other man, is due the present high standard of the police department. In a great measure the excellence of the street department may also be credited to him. His services in the Common Council have been signal and there is every reason to believe that he would give a most creditable administration as chief executive of the city.

Judge Booream, of Middlesex, says he will make no order regarding screens in saloons on the ground, as he takes it, that the new liquor law is ambiguous on that point, yet the statute is quite simply when one peruses it carefully. The act states that all parts of the interior of a saloon must be in full view. By that it means that there must be no screens, booths, side rooms and the like, to obstruct the view of one entering the place. The latter part of the same paragraph deals with screens that prevent a view from the public street and it is so stated. It is specially provided that such screens may be removed also during the hours of business, but only when ordered by the body having power to grant licenses. Consequently it is an entirely optional provision and can only be taken advantage of by the power in whom authority is vested to issue licenses in the first place. As we take it, therefore, the local saloonkeepers cannot be compelled to remove their screens during the hours of business until ordered to do so by a resolution of the Common Council.

Chocolate Caramels.

Put into a granite sauce pan one cup of finely broken or grated chocolate, one cup of molasses, the same amount each of rich milk and sugar and two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter. Stir over a slow fire until thoroughly mixed, then boil slowly until it cracks when dropped into ice water. Turn into greased tins and mark into squares before the mixture becomes cold.

Coffee Caramels.

To one pound of brown sugar allow one cup of strong coffee, a half cup of cream and an ounce of butter. As soon as cooked sufficiently to be brittle when dropped in cold water, pour into buttered pans and mark with a buttered knife into squares before the mixture gets quite cold.

Soft Caramels.

For one pound of brown sugar allow a cupful of milk, a tablespoonful and a half of butter and half a cake of grated chocolate. Cook nine minutes, take from the fire and stir steadily for five minutes, but not until too stiff to pour. Turn into a buttered pan and mark in squares. This candy will be crumbly and rich.

Nut Caramels.

Put into a sauce pan a quarter of a pound of grated unsweetened chocolate, four ounces of butter, one pound of brown sugar, half a cupful of molasses, the same of cream and a half teaspoonful of vanilla. Cook until a little dropped in cold water is brittle, then ad da pound of nuts chopped fine. The nuts may be of one kind or mixed as preferred.

Hand Caught in Press.

J. Madison Drake, Jr., publisher of the Elizabeth Sunday Leader, and son of General J. Madison Drake, nearly lost the finger of his right hand early Sunday morning by getting it caught in a large printing press. Mr. Drake was pointing out some defect when his finger got caught between two cylinders. The press was stopped, but it was twenty minutes before his finger was freed.

Mrs. Isaac B. Hill and daughters, the Misses Juliet and Florence Hill, of Westervelt avenue, are spending their vacation at Delaware Water Gap.

*Miss Laura J. Runyon, of Madi*son avenue, who sprained her ankle a number of weeks ago, is steadily improving and is able to walk about again.

GOTHAM'S AMUSEMENTS

"Seeing New York," which began its fifth week on the New York Theatre Roof (Winfarris Grove) on the 2d instant, is settled down for the all-summer run which the managers, William A. Brady and Joseph Hart, planned for it when they staged it so elaborately on June 5. It is easily the hit of the summer in the metropolis. Its success there has led to the Shubert's withdrawal their plans to put "The Tourists" on for a summer run there: and, as a picture of the gay life of the metropolis, it is so far superior to "The Social Whirl" that the latter is not considered as a factor in the summertime competition of New York theatricals. Indeed, it is largely a question there just now of whether George M. Cohan, in "The Governor's Son," or Carrie De Mar, in "Seeing New York," gets the larger house of an evening. These two, Mr. Cohan and Miss De Mar, are just now the favorites of New York's amusement-seekers. Miss De Har's hit is literally immense, and her doll specialty has caught the town. Others who score heavily in the skit are Clifton Crawford, Al Leech, Cheridah Simpson, Lena Wilson, Rosebuds, Tom Fortune, and Fleurette De Mar. The Flatiron Building scene is the big novelty of the production, and is received nightly with yells and even gales of merriment. The bill of specialties, Part II of the big Winter Grove show, was changed again last Monday night. The chief newcomers were Sylvester, Jones, Pringle and Morrell, which the newspapers of the day after—Tuesday, July 3—described as "the very best singing four in the world." They were recalled seven times. The Four Melvins, ground tumblers, gave an exhibition that more than repaid the management for letting the Provenales go; and Frank and Bob, with their clever trained dog, scored the third big hit of the new-coming artists. Salerno began his fifth week, with new tricks, and Ned Wayburn's "Rain-Dears," the "bully bally" that closes the bill, went as strong as ever.

Just previous to the performance of Primrose minstrels at the New Plainfield theatre a few nights ago, the leader of the big aggregation, who is not to be counted out of the black-face entertainment, was visited in his dressing room by the Daily Press man who inquired how artists in his line conducted their make-up.

"Nearly every visitor who comes into the Mecca," replied Mr. Primrose, "asks the very same question and I am only too glad to let you know all about it. Even the toilet secrets of Lillian Russell are public property, and I suppose mine are no longer secrets.

"Burnt cork always has been, and will be, the thing to use. Nothing can take its place. We buy from druggists and saloonists. It used to be the scheme to hire small boys to pick them up. A small boy will work two hours a day for a pass to a show. If his mother wants him to go across to the grocery he sets up frenzied howls of protest. A minstrel pass is the greatest known stimulant to juvenile endeavor.

"Well, anyhow, you first catch the corks and put them in a big kettle. Then you sprinkle them with alchol and apply a match. Repeat until there is merely a residue of soot. The performer rubs this on until he is black in the face, smears the backs of his hands, paints his lips a bright vermillion, dons a scratch wig, and is ready for business. Of course, he puts on a few clothes.

"There is a Philadelphia man who puts up prepared cork in packages. But most of the boys like to fix it themselves. The first time I blacked up was with cork from the bottom of mother's soup kettle. I mixed it with grease and didn't get clean for four weeks. But burnt cork comes off readily. All you have to do is to apply plenty of soap and scrub vigorously over a bucket of water.

"I can 'wash up' after the show quicker than a laboring man when he goes home to supper from the iron works or gas house. Come down to Manhattan Beach some night next week and I'll do it inside of three minutes or forfeit the best supper that Landlord Leary can serve at the Hotel Iroquois.

"A trace of burnt cork inside the ear is a song and dance man's professional card. It will be recognized at any box office where they are not "turnin' 'em away."

"Does burnt cork injure the complexion? Goodness, no—look at mine. Nothing like it to keep the skin clear, soft and rosy."

The big ballroom at Dreamland, undoubtedly the most elaborate affair of the kind in the world, has been redecorated and more electric lights added and there are more than 5,000 electric bulbs in this gigantic hall. The facilities for bathing at Dreamland have been increased until now 2,500 people can be accommodated at one time. Hurst's Auto Tours of France and Italy will be one of the season's novelties. There will be the usual array of carousals, and it is well known that the Chutes at Dreamland are unsurpassed. To those who wish to delve into the future, there are numerous fortune telling parlors and experts in the art of palmistry. The Iron steamboats run directly to Dreamland and the fare on the boat includes admission to the Park.

Thousands upon thousands of our amusement-loving people of whom Coney Island is an almost inaccessible region, will heartily join our States Island neighbors in three cheers and a tiger for F. S. Hezelrigg, president of the Richmond Light and Railroad Company; Oscar A. Kraeger, president of the Bachman Brewing Company; William C. VanChief, John Ditmer, William Nunlist and Manager Albert Bergen, has through whose heroically liberal, enterprising and sagacious efforts Staten Island is to come into her own as both by nature and art, the Queen of seaside resorts. Metropolyand's willingness and appropriate title of the new oceanic mecca of gaiety, mirth, music, radiance, sensation and glorious spectacle, which has risen almost as magically as if called into being by Genii of the Lamp, on some of the most picturesque and rurally attractive part of South Beach, and whose grand opening on Saturday, June 30th, proved the most notable recreatice event of the season. The thousand foot sea-front of "Happyland" is a boardwalk thirty feet wide, and a commodious pier, fifteen hundred feet in length, leads directly to the ornate main entrance. Among the host of high class features, upon which hundreds of thousands of dollars have been lavished, will be found Electra's lofty revolving tower, whose dazzling effulgence will be reflected in the charming artificial lake in which it stands, and above whose waters rotates a colossal circular swing, and surrounding the tower upon which it is the central point, and which will readily accommodate thirty thousand visitors; a spacious vaudeville theatre, in which continuous free performances will be given; a skating rink; a commodious dancing pavilion, a most attractive ballroom with twenty-five thousand feet of floor space, and a first-class tea garden in a natural grove; the eroption of Mt. Vesuvius, the costliliest scenic railway ever erected, the airship, celestial illusion, "Hereafter," Foolish House, the Magnetic Mansion, Panorama of the most famous scenes in Europe, Heller-Skelter and a specially construct*ed* auditorium fronting a stage three hundred and feet long and a portion of the Grand Canal of the romantic Queen of the Adriatic. Here, Bolossy Kiralfy, the world-famous originator and producer of the "Burning of Rome," "The Fall of Babylon," the Battle of Barnuine & Bailey Pageant and other colossally classic specties, will personally superiniend the first Greater New York presentation of his culminating, amphibious triumph—"A Carnival in Venice," and promises all the strangest and realistic scenery, prodigally gorgeous costumes, prismatic floods of illumination, the gaily freighted gondolas, the brilliant mazes of the carnival season in the Fifteen Century, the moody, dark and stately grandeur, which for continuous months enthused and enchanted great London.

"WILLIE" DEEGAN STILL MAKING POOR SHOWING.

Touched for Ten Hits and Dashsters Are Again Easily Defeated.

Following up their winning streak of Saturday, the Cuban X Giants defeated the Hoboken nine at St. George Cricket Grounds, Hoboken, yesterday, by a score of 8 to 2. "Willie" Deegan was in the box for the home team and he was touched for ten hits, including a home run and a three base hit by Palomino. He was opposed by Munoz, who held his opponents down to seven hits and Captain Leonard touched him for a two bagger. Coupled with the heavy hitting by the Cubans, the Hobokens made errors which materially helped the visiting team to victory. The score:

SPAIN.

It is the Iberia of the Creeks.

Carthagesian influence began to be felt in the middle of the third century, B. C.

From the time of the complete supremacy of the Romans till the death of Constantine it was prosperous.

For three centuries it constituted the richest province of the Roman Europe.

In 409 B. C. hordes of barbarians crossed the Pyrenes and desolated the peninsula.

About 412 the Visigoths invaded the country, and their king, Athaulf, established the Gothic monarchy of Catalonia.

In 711 the Moors obtained mastery and held Spain as a dependency of North Africa.

Ferdinand II (last sovereign of Aragon by his marriage with Isabella, Queen of Castile,) and the conquests of Granada and Navarre, put Spain under one rule.

Ferdinand VII was forced to give up the throne by Napoleon, whose brother, Joseph, was made King of Spain and the Indies from 1808 to 1813. After Waterloo he retired to New Jersey.

The reign of Isabella II, daughter of Ferdinand, was disturbed by the Carlist Religion (1833-1850).

Wars, revolts and annexations followed until in 1868 Isabella was driven from the throne, and in 1870 the Cortes elected Prince Amadeo of Italy as King.

Amadeo, indicated in 1873 and the form of government was changed to that of a Republic, anarchy and general bloodshed following.

In December, 1874, Alfonso, son of Isabella, was declared King. He died in 1886, his widow, Queen Maria Christina, now is regent for, by birth, becoming regent. She bore him a posthumous heir, now King Alfonso XIII.

WORDS OF WISDOM TO THE MALE FLIRT.

Young men, do you realize that when you pay attention to a girl for months with no idea of asking her to marry you, you are spoiling her chances with other men?

Of course, you may argue that she does not have to waste her time on you unless she wants to, but perhaps she has grown fond of you and hopes that you are in earnest.

Deep in every girl's heart, whether she acknowledges it or not, is the hope some day she will marry and have a home of her own, says the Philadelphia Bulletin.

The dearest game of her childhood is "playing house," surrounded by her beloved doll babies.

All her girlhood's day dreams are clustered around the man who some day will come into her life and win her love.

And so she feels that any man who shows her attention, and in whom she feels an interest, may possibly turn out to be the hero of her dreams.

When a man begins to pay what looks like serious attention to a girl other men keep out of the way.

On every side the girl hears remarks which indicate that her engagement is looked upon as a sure thing.

Can you blame her if she allows herself to drift into caring a good deal?

And then perhaps the man either wearies of the friendship or grows interested in some other girl.

He drops the whole affair as calmly as he would discard a worn-out glove.

To him it has been merely an incident, a flirtation.

But how about the girl?

She has to bear the brunt of all the gossip and comment.

People look on her as jilted, and men are not as keen about her as they used to be. They feel that one man has grown tired of her and *former that she cannot be very attrac*tive or she would have held him.

I do not for one moment mean to infer that there can be no friendship between a man and a girl without the girl thinking that the man is in love with her.

There are many good, firm friendships between men and girls where neither side has the faintest idea or desire that love should enter into the question.

The friendship that I criticise is the one where the man makes deliberate love to a girl, leading her and the world in general to believe that he is in earnest, while all the time he knows that he is not.

Such a friendship hurts a girl immensely.

Not only does it keep eligible men away from her, but it embitters her.

The best time of her life, the time when she should be marrying and settling down in a comfortable home, is wasted on a man who is trifling with her.

Remember this, young men, and in your friendships with girls don't lead them to think that you are serious unless you really are.

SEA GIRT ORDERS FOR THE SECOND.

Issued by Adjutant Rogers on Behalf of Col. Collins.

The following order relative to the Second regiment at Sea Girt has been issued and is self-explanatory:

National Guard of New Jersey,
Headquarters Second Regiment,
Trenton, July 3, 1906.

General Orders No. 17.

In compliance with General Orders No. 2, s. s., Headquarters Second Brigade, N. G., this regiment will encamp upon the State camp grounds, at Sea Girt, from July 14 to 21, 1906, inclusive, for practical military instruction.

2. The command will appear in khaki uniforms, blue shirts, campaign hats, leggings and black shoes for enlisted men. Officers will wear olive drab uniforms and campaign hats.

3. Following is the detail for guard Saturday, July 14, 1906:

Officer of the day—Captain Robert W. Watson, Company H.

Commandant of the guard—First Lieutenant John A. DeRoche, Company G.

Supernumerary officers of the guard—Second Lieutenant Harry B. Kitchell, Company K; Second Lieutenant Augustus Dohm, Company L.

Companies A and B will each furnish one sergeant and five privates; Companies C, D, E and F will each furnish one corporal and five privates; Companies G, H, I, K, L and M will each furnish five privates; the drum major will detail two musicians (buglers).

The guard will be employed on the trains to preserve order and prevent the soldiers from riding on the car platforms. Upon arrival at Sea Girt the guard will be marched in the rear, and as the regiment marches past the guard tents, will fall out from the column and post sentinels.

First Lieutenant Walter A. Morton, Company A, is detailed assistant instructor of guard duty, and will report to First Lieutenant Richard F. Cross upon arrival at Sea Girt.

4. Commandants of Companies A, B, D and E will each detail three privates to report to Lieutenant Charles W. Stark, battalion commissary and quartermaster, at the Clinton street station, on Saturday, July 14, at 8:57 a. m., to proceed to Sea Girt.

5. The regimental quartermaster will forward requisition for haversacks, mess-kits and transportation.

6. The commandants of Companies C, H, K, M and L will issue haversacks and mess-kits to the non-commissioned staff officers and musicians residing on their stations, and will also carry them on their transportation.

7. Officers holding transportation will arrange with the local ticket agent for transportation on Sunday, July 15, of enlisted men who cannot report for duty on Saturday, July 14.

8. The regimental commander expects every officer and man, able to perform duty, to be present at this encampment. It is especially enjoined on the company commandants to make a vigorous effort to secure a large attendance on the part of their men.

9. Company commandants will, on their arrival at camp, report in person to the commanding officer, turning over to him field return of their commands. This return will show the number of officers and men present, the absentees being carried on it by name.

10. The troops while en route will be under the direct charge of the battalion commanders, who will see to it that the necessary guards are posted at the ends of the cars; that proper discipline is maintained throughout, and the comfort and safety of *the men looked after. This will ap*ply also to the return movement from Sea Girt on July 21.

11. Movement of organizations from home stations and other details will be noted in subsequent orders.

By order of Colonel Collins.
JOHN M. ROGERS, Adjutant.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, of Franklin place, will spend the month of August in their cottage in Maine.

SUMMER MEETING OF THE ENDEAVORERS.

Plainfield To Be Represented at Asbury Park Sessions.

The programme for the second annual Christian Endeavor Summer School, to be held at Asbury Park, July 16 to 31, in the First Presbyterian church, provides for twelve sessions. The first afternoon will be devoted to registration and an open parliament on "What Help Do You Most Need From This Conference?" Plainfield's many societies will be represented.

Tuesday morning Rev. W. D. Stults, of Manasquan, vice-president of the State Union, will lead a conference on "Practical work including the pledge and its relation to the members. Mrs. A. M. Baxter will speak on "The Use of the Blackboard," Mrs. F. W. Miller will discuss "Topic May Drawing," and an open parliament on "Missions" will be conducted by Dr. Carter Milliken. At the afternoon session, following a Quiet Hour, Mr. Stultz, will outline the duty of the prayer-meeting committee. Rev. Albert Erdman, of Morristown, will speak on "Possibilities of Bible Study," and will conduct a question box with a conference on "Help for Bible Study."

The session Wednesday morning will include an address on "Sectional Work," by Rev. Elliott Field, of East Orange; a parliament on junior meetings, by Mrs. A. M. Baxter; a conference on "Using the Bible," conducted by Mrs. Miller, closing with a discussion on "Relation of the Society to the Church," led by Rev. M. Woodruff. Wednesday afternoon Miss Ida B. Stephens, State secretary, will *speak on "Difficulties and How Over*come" and a conference on "Value of State Work to Societies" will be led by Mrs. Field. The delegates at night will attend the regular service in the church, to be conducted by Rev. Dr. Taylor.

On Thursday morning Mrs. Baxter will speak on "Junior Missions," Mrs. Miller will discuss "The Intermediate Society" and "The Mother's Meeting," and Decker will tell of the importance of committee meet*ings, and a sample Endeavor meet*ing will be held, using the regular Endeavor topic for October. At night Rev. Dr. Arthur W. Spooner, pastor of the First State president, will speak on "Using the Lantern to Illustrate the Truth," and Mrs. Decker will conduct a conference on "The Importance of the Habit Forming Period." After a Quiet Hour service Friday morning, led by Dr. Spooner, Miss Anna Lloyd will speak on "Plans for Missionary Lessons," *Dr. Spooner will discuss "Evangel*istic Work Among Children," Mrs. Miller will tell of "Work Among Boys," and a sample meeting will be conducted by Mrs. Miller.

Raritan, 1; Bound Brook, 0.

The fastest A. C. of Bound Brook, was defeated in the most interesting game by the Invincibles, of Raritan, at the latter place Saturday afternoon by the score of 1 to 0. Harney and Matthews formed the battery for the Invincibles, Lamle at third played a star game for the Laurels.

DON'T FORGET IN SUMMER.

To give pure cold water to the baby two or three times a day.

To prevent sore mouth by rinsing with a little cold water and borax.

To shield baby's eyes from strong light, especially from full sunlight.

To avoid saffron tea for bleaching the baby, for it has a tendency to produce scrofulous sores.

To apply hot clothes to the little feet and stomach for colic, and leave the peppermint in its bottle.

To use good common sense continually and in large doses; and the baby will be a joy and comfort to the household, no matter how trying the weather.

Mrs. Arthur F. Freeman, of New York, has been spending a few days with her father, E. M. Daniel, of West Eighth street.

COULD NOT QUENCH THIRST

Plainfield Excursionists to Suburbs Found "Dry Sunday" General.

THE BAR ROOMS CLOSED

New Bishops' Law Works Wonders —Saloonkeepers Want to Sell Out.

Though Plainfield has known the meaning of a "dry Sunday" for years, it remained for the enforcement of the so-called Bishops' bill Sunday to remind the regular "excursionists" to the suburban resorts that thirst quenching on the Sabbath is a thing of the past. The hotels at Scotch Plains, Watchung, Dunellen and New Market that have always been wide open from Saturday night until Monday morning were closed tight and though dusty looking Plainfielders hung about the places "spitting cotton" they couldn't even purchase a bottle of soda water or a cigar. The villages were never interfered by a sadder lot of mortals and if the persons responsible for the Bishops' bill had hove in sight their lives wouldn't have been worth a moment's purchase.

To the law-abiding Scotch Plains residents who have grown callous to the sight of drunks reeling through the street on Sunday, it seemed as if the millenium had come. Families gathered on the porch to observe and comment on the absence of "package" laden individuals and to the oldest inhabitants it seemed as if time had sped back a few decades. Every hotel in the place closed promptly at 12 o'clock Saturday night though they were doing a rushing business and those who failed to clear out when the order was given, were assisted to the door with the necessary force. The law was certainly observed in that village and will continue to be, though it is sure to result in some of the proprietors going out of business.

In recent years, the hotel keepers in the suburbs have depended on the Sunday trade to tide them through the week and without exception the profits on this one day have been large. Plainfielders contributed the bulk of the coin and with the supply cut off, a place of any size cannot meet expenses. Already two owners have offered their business for sale at a price way below what they paid for it a short time ago.

There is no doubt but what the provisions of the Bishops' bill will continue to be enforced in the suburbs as the power does not rest alone in the hands of the authorities. Private citizens can prefer complaint and the case will be taken up and prosecuted without causing them any undue notoriety or inconvenience. One Scotch Plains resident said yesterday:

"This is the first time since I have lived here that Scotch Plains has had a quiet Sunday and I am certainly going to do all in my power to keep it just this way. The Bishops' bill has done something for us that Law and Order Leagues and police were powerless to stop and it seems almost too good to be true."

In Plainfield proper, the bill has made no material difference in the conduct of saloons, in fact, the local ordinance covered most of its provisions. Such a thing as keeping open on Sunday has been unheard of for years and the interior of barrooms has always been open to view from closing time Saturday night until Monday morning. In this respect, Plainfield has been a model for the entire state and it even has gone ahead of any other municipality in establishing a saloon "zone." It also stands alone as the one city in New Jersey that demands a $1,000 license fee for selling liquor and previously makes the applicant get the signatures of the reputable persons before he is given the privilege.

But speaking of the suburbs is another matter an the camp of the regulars is filled with woe.

All over the State yesterday the liquor law was obeyed strictly, excepting at Atlantic City where it was said to be wide open.

Joseph McGrath.

Following an illness of a year with catarrhal trouble, Joseph McGrath, aged twenty-nine years, died yesterday at his home on South Second street. He was employed as a machinist in one of the local shops and leaves a wife and three small children. The funeral was held from his late residence on Tuesday morning at 8:30 and from St. Mary's church at 9. Interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Invaders Will Play Here.

Manager Daab has completed arrangements for the appearance of the "Invaders," of Elizabeth, on Crescent Oval, on Saturday, and as many of the old favorites are members of the team, there should be a large crowd. This will be the first game in the county championship series. Linderman and Farmer will be the battery for the visitors and among the other well known players on the team are "Dave" Driscoll, who plays first base and "Kid" Brogan, who covers second. This will be the first appearance here of "Al" Farmer since he played with the locals.

WILLIAM FARRIER SUMMONED BY DEATH

END CAME WHILE HE WAS VISITING AT SOMERVILLE.

Following an illness that had afflicted him the greater part of the past year, William Farrier, the well known bridge builder whose home was in New Market, died Sunday morning at the home of his brother-in-law, William Johnson, of Somerville. He had been failing rapidly recently but two weeks ago he made the request that he be driven to Mr. Johnson's place and it was complied with. Chronic dyspepsia was his original complaint and it led to stomach complications.

Mr. Farrier was born in Scotland county sixty-seven years ago, almost in the shadow of Skibo Castle, Andrew Carnegie's estate. He came to this country in middle life and twenty-five years ago located at New Market. He became a contracting mason and later made a specialty of bridge foundations with the result that the greater part of the structures in this part of the State was started by him. The last contract he received was for the bridge now being built over Green brook on West End avenue and which he was to construct entirely. Failing health, however, of his business would not permit him to do it, he turned the job over to his foreman, Magnus Johnson, who now has it well under way.

Mr. Farrier was a typical Scotchman, quiet and unassuming yet very observing and ready at all times to give counsel to his friends. He was a member of the First Baptist church at New Market and enjoyed the re*spect and confidence of the entire vil*lage. He is survived by a widow.

The funeral will be held from his late home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

FORMER SCHEPFLIN HOME PREY TO INCENDIARY FIRE.

Fire Which Broke Out Saturday Afternoon Causes $2,000 Loss.

The former home of the late Christian Schepflin on Grove street, Dunellen, and one of the largest houses in that borough, was badly damaged by fire Saturday afternoon. The place has not been occupied since the first part of the year and incendiarism is suspected. The Seventh-Day Baptist Memorial Association, of this city, owns the property.

When first noticed, the flames were bursting from three or four places but they undoubtedly originated on the first floor. The Dunellen department was summoned and under the direction of Chief Wyhauksy did splendid work in quelling the blaze. They saved the place from total destruction and it can be repaired, though the loss will reach at least $2,000.

Thrown From an Auto.

Dr. T. W. Bebout, of Stirling, accompanied by Frederick W. Moffett, the well-known marksman of Bloomfield, had a narrow escape from serious injury in an automobile accident in Stirling yesterday afternoon. They went out for a spin in Dr. Bebout's big and white running along at a rapid rate the machine came to a sudden stop, hurling both men to the ground. In Moffett, who was thrown a distance of twenty feet, turned a complete somersault, and landed on his back and one hand. Dr. Bebout escaped with a few bruises and was able to attend to his own as well as his companion's hurts. The two men were taken to Dr. Bebout's home in Mr. Whitney's auto.

He Saved Girl's Life.

A feat of heroism was performed by twelve-year-old Walter Dwyer at the Olde Mountain Camp, Berkeley Heights, yesterday. Miss Gertrude Wright, who is stopping at the camp with her family from Newark, was dam, and accidentally fell in. Walter Dwyer heard the splash, and seeing Miss Wright's plight, jumped in without waiting to remove his clothing, and brought her safely to the bank. The girl's father presented Walter with a fine knife and a substantial check was presented to him by the company.

PLAINFIELD IS DEFEATED

Cuban X Giants Win in Rattling Good Contest the Score Being 2 to 1.

PHIL SMITH IN THE BOX

School Boy Pitcher Allows Visitors but Three Hits—Sensational Plays.

Fandom was permitted to witness an exceptionally fast game of ball at Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, when the Plainfield team met its first defeat of the season here. The Cuban X Giants were the opposing players and all agreed that the contest was one of the best ever played on the oval. It was replete with brilliant sensational plays on both sides, although the visitors had a little of the best of it. It was one of those hair-raising exhibitions with a garrison finish, and not until the last man was retired in the ninth inning was the contest decided.

Manager Lamar picked Bustamente, the fast infielder, to do the slab work, his other pitchers failing to come to town, and the little Cuban pitched remarkable ball, allowing but one hit, which Goodman had the honor of making. Things looked dubious for the visitors in the first inning, when Bustamente filled the bases with free passes, but in quick succession he fanned the next three batsmen. In the first stanza the Cubans scored a run on a free pass given Winston, a sacrifice by Wilson and a single by Garcia. Smith made Plainfield's only run in the second inning, after two men were out. He got a pass, as did Connolly, who followed him and then Goodman drove the ball into the outfield, bringing "Phil." home. Bustamente was generous with passes, giving eight, but the brilliant sharp fielding of his team saved him. He struck out ten batsmen.

"Phil." Smith was not far behind his rival for box honors. He allowed but three hits and was strong at all points of the game. Unfortunate errors by Leonard and Connolly helped materially to lose the contest. It is not often that Manager Reed makes a mistake and he is gratefully excused. Connolly's failure to catch Valdes's fly in left garden, which was an easy out, is not so readily explained.

During the contest there were two double plays of the lightning variety. In the seventh inning Reardon caught a difficult fly, between his territory and that of Connolly and returned the ball quick enough to put Williams out at the middle station. The other double was made in the eighth inning, when Valdes nipped a hot one off Snow's bat and caught Heffron at first. The remarkable quick fielding of the visitors shut off several runs in several innings, when Bustamente did not have the Indian sign on the batsmen.

Snow, at short, played a fast, snappy game, retiring two runners and accepting four chances in clever style without an error.

Such contests as that of Saturday will do much toward reviving interest in the game and increasing the attendance. Although there was a marked improvement in the crowd, it was not what it should be to properly support the game. It is hoped that on Saturday there will be a further improvement. Manager Daab expects to have the Invaders from Elizabethport here, with Linderman, Farmer, Driscoll and many of the old-time favorites.

SUNDAY MORNING FIRE DAMAGES ROTH'S BUILDING

TOTAL LOSS MAY REACH $1,000—FULLY COVERED BY INSURANCE.

A fire that had probably been smouldering for several hours, broke out at 10:50 Sunday morning in the former Meeker building on East Front street, now owned by Roth & Co., and occupied by this firm and Bodine & Stires on the ground floor. It gave the city department a hot fight for an hour and was stopped just in time to prevent a bad conflagration. The loss cannot be estimated at present but will be at least $1000 on the building and perhaps the same amount on the stock of Bodine & Stires and goods belonging to C. M. Meeker who leased the upper story.

The building is of frame construction and was recently overhauled by the new owners, who purchased it from the Meeker estate. No one had been about the place after closing hours Saturday night but shortly before 10 o clock yesterday Patrolman Morris Higgins noticed smoke issuing from the rear of the part occupied by Bodine & Stires, a grocery firm. He returned in an alarm from box 12 and Chief Doane and the apparatus from headquarters were quickly on the scene.

The flames were then just creeping into the main store and thick volumes of smoke were pouring through the windows of the Hotel Waldorf, leading many to believe that this building had caught fire. Four streams of water were laid in the house and the trouble was located in a short time, though the firemen were beaten back several *times. They experienced much dif*ficulty in putting out the blaze because of the great quantity of packing boxes and groceries in but that were in the Bodine & Stires' storeroom.

Chief Doane made an investigation but beyond finding that the blaze evidently started in the rear of the grocery firm's place he learned nothing of the origin. The tenants themselves have no explanation.

The building is insured for $5,000 and Roth & Co.'s contents for $4,500 though these were not damaged. Bodine & Stires carried $1,000 on their stock but they have reached no loss figures as the goods are in such condition that it is impossible to tell if they have all been rendered worthless. C. M. Meeker has $500 insurance on his property.

When the alarm was turned in by Patrolman Higgins, the house tappers sounded all right but the gong gave but one blast. Believing that he might need more call men, Chief Doane had the whistle sounded from the house station and the double call brought out the West End company. The apparatus was afterward sent back but the call men remained.

BARROWS WON LEG ON THE JULY CUP

GOOD FIELD OF PLAYS ON THE COUNTRY CLUB COURSE.

The favorable weather conditions together with the number of attractions brought out a large field of golfers at the Plainfield Country Club, Saturday. It is seldom that the course has been in such fine condition and this is an exceptional pleasure to play on it. It is pronounced unusually fast.

In the weekly competition for the *Golf Committee cup, Dudley H. Bar*rows showed his old-time form and won first honors with a net score of 73, while Charles A. Stover finished second with a 75 and J. P. Murray third with a 78. These scores were returned:

Dudley H. Barrows, 73, 0—73; Charles A. Stover, 87, 12—75; James P. Murray, 96, 20—78; Edward J. Patterson, 97, 17—80; W. Lester Glenney, 79, plus 2—81; Stuart H. Patterson, 93, 11—82; J. A. Hutchinson, 104, 19—85.

There was also the initial play for the July cup and Dudley H. Barrows won a leg on it with a score of 73. These scores were posted for the cup:

Dudley H. Barrows, 73, 0—73; Charles A. Stover, 87, 12—75; James P. Murray, 96, 20—78; W. Lester Glenney, 76, plus 2—78; Edward J. Patterson, 97, 17—80; Julius E. Erickson, 92, 10—82; Stuart H. Patterson, 93, 11—82; J. A. Hutchinson, 104, 19—85.

For making the best gross score in this competition, an 87, Charles A. Stover scored a win for the semi-scratch cup. The remaining players in the first eight Men's championship cup tournament were unable to play the semi-final round, but those left *in the competition for the Consola*tion cup, second eight, played the semi-finals. Charles A. Stover beat Stuart H. Patterson, 2 up and 1 to play, and George T. Van Boskerck beat Edgar L. Serrell, 6 up and 4 to play. The other semi-final round will be played off on Saturday or next week.

John L. Watson, 104, 24—80; Rev. C. L. Goodrich, 98, 9—89; Charles B. Morse, 106, 16—90; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, 93, 2—91; Rev. Dr. H. Carroll, 106, 15—91; Charles A. Reed, 102, 10—92.

FAST TROTTING AT PARK

Perrins "Easter Bay" Goes Under Wire First in 2:18 Trot Event

CONTEST FOR PLACE

Lively Heats Between Prince and Harry Dawson—Powder Boy First in 2:24 Trot.

Before a good-sized crowd of enthusiasts, the postponed races of the Plainfield Driving Association were held at the Driving Park, Saturday afternoon. There were three events as scheduled but owing to the heaviness of the track neither brought out any exceptionally speedy work or the competing animals were not seen to their best advantage. The heavy rains of last week had left the track with about three inches of dust and although the sprinkler was used generously it failed to help matters to any extent.

The best race of the day was the 2:18 trot and it went to J. H. Perrin's "Easter Boy," who had been picked to win. The real contest was for second place and the struggle existed with the Belle Meade Stock Farm's bay gelding, "Prince," and Adam Blair's "Harry Dawson." Both animals were in good trim and there was some very lively going. "Prince" was third, second and fourth respectively in the first heat while "Harry Dawson" was fifth, third and second. "Easter Boy's" time was 2:23 1-4, 2:19 1-4 and 2:20 flat.

The second race a 2:24 trot, went to A. S. Case's black gelding, "Powder Boy," the animal getting it through some very good stepping. The third and last race was captured by a local horse, J. H. Green, Jr.'s black mare, "Lady Trivol." A bay horse, "Allen Beck," belonging to E. V. D. Skillman, of Trenton, was a favorite, but Green went into win and sent his animal under the wire first in all three heats. In the final heat "Allen Beck" finished second but had to give way to that position in the previous two to Theodore Pope's "Judge Vincent."

The meet was one of these in the New Jersey Circuit and was attended by many well known horsemen from Trenton, Flemington, Three Bridges, Somerville and New Brunswick. The next meet will be at New Brunswick next Wednesday under the auspices of the driving association.

The summary of the three events is as follows:

Mrs. Walter S. Pound.

Mrs. Lydia A. Pound, wife of Walter S. Pound, died Sunday at her home on West Fifth street, aged fifty two years. She was the daughter of the late Valentine and Catherine Sauerman and had resided in this city all her life. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Thaddeus O. Doane, Jr., and one son, Walter Pound, who lives on West Fifth street. The funeral will be private.

Shop Talk.

A shopman in the Strand has a notice outside his shop describing the value of his goods as "simply phenomenal." We wonder if he would be pleased to know that in literal English this means "merely apparent"—London Globe.

NEW MARKET MAN COLLEGE PRESIDENT

PROF. CORTEZ CLAWSON NEW HEAD OF SEVENTH-DAY INSTITUTION.

Rev. L. T. Gardiner, who has just resigned as president of Salem College, Salem, W. Va., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rogers, of Central avenue, for a time.

His successor will be Prof. Cortes Clawson, A. B., of New Market, who is a teacher in Salem College, and he will take up his new duties upon the opening of the fall term. Prof. Clawson is well fitted for the new position and continued success for the college is predicted under his leadership.

Mr. Gardiner gave up his position at Salem College for the purpose of re-entering the ministry and he has accepted the pastorate of the Seventh-Day Baptist church at North Loup, Nebraska, and will enter upon his duties the first of September. Mr. Gardiner has been president of Salem College for several years and under the guidance of the institution continued to grow in the number of students and influence as well.

NEWARK ICE TRUST ENDS.

Members, Alarmed by Toledo Decision, Disband.

The Newark Wholesale Ice Dealers' Association has become disbanded. Internal discussion is said to have been the cause, but it is generally believed that the recent action of a judge in Toledo in sending several ice barons to prison may have caused some alarm. Owing to the disbanding of the association there is likely to be a break in the price of ice which may benefit the consumers.

A Hot Reforming Center.

When that Plainfield man brings the ice men to book, it will be admitted on all sides that that town is a little the hottest centre of reform in the whole State of New Jersey.—Newark News.

SILVER TRUST DEFEATED

Plainfielder Frustrates Attempt to Prevent Use of His Own Name.

BY PERSEVERANCE

W. H. Rogers Wins In Fight to Use His Own Name On Silverware Without Intent to Defraud.

The International Silver Company has failed in its attempt to obtain from the Court of Chancery an injunction enjoining William H. Rogers, of this city, from stamping his silverware with the mark "W. H. Rogers," "William H. Rogers," "Wm. H. Rogers," or any mark of which the word "Rogers" is a characteristic part. Vice-Chancellor Stevens has filed an opinion refusing the injunction, and at the same time discussing exhaustively the rights of a man to the use of his own name, showing under what circumstances this may not be done. The effect of the decision is to hold that a man's name is his own and may be used by him with freedom unless it be clearly shown that it is with intent to defraud.

The Rogers litigation, in which William H. Rogers of this city has been for so many years engaged against one of the wealthiest corporations in the country, is a striking example of what pure grit and a steady nerve will accomplish against great odds.

Mr. Rogers not having sufficient capital at the outset of his business, formed a corporation, but after several years fighting through all the courts, it was decided that whatever might be the rights of Mr. Rogers individually, he did not have the right, under the special circumstances of the case, to give his name to a corporation. As Vice-Chancellor Stevens said, referring to the complainant in the first case: "Its case rested and was decided wholly on the likelihood that customers would or might be deceived because of the similiarity of the name." In his first opinion, the Vice-Chancellor pointed out that the corporation unnecessarily adopted a name that was likely to prove misleading. * * * "as has often been said, the whole vocabulary of names is open to those who organize a new company, while the individual is not responsible for his name and ought ordinarily, in common honesty, to use it to do business under it." The opinion held that even in the case of a corporation, the question is whether there has been a representation, false in fact, though ignorantly or innocently or mistakenly made.

The result was that the corporation was enjoined from 'using the name Rogers in any form whatever, but there was no decree against Mr. Rogers personally. The Wm. H. Rogers Corporation was successful on one branch of the case, and a very important branch, namely, as to the demand for profits and damages during all the years that it had conducted business. The Vice-Chancellor, and also the Court of Appeals, decided this question in favor of the Wm. H. Rogers Corporation.

Mr. Rogers put himself in the hands of his counsel, Craig A. Marsh, with the result that the old corporation first changed its name and then took proceedings whereby it was dissolved, and Mr. Rogers started in business for himself under his own name, stamped on the goods as follows: "W. H. Rogers, of Plainfield, N. J.," and in addition to this, he printed on his labels, box covers and in his advertisements, the words, "Not connected with any other Rogers." He selected patterns of his own. He obtained control of a patented process by which silver was deposited more thickly on the wearing parts of the spoon than on the other parts, without increasing the quantity of silver per gross. He conducted the whole process of manufacture from start to finish, in his own factory, and under his own supervision. He made his goods of a quality which has no superior in the market. When the International Silver Company's lawyers sent him a registered letter, threatening suit if he continued to manufacture in his own name, he ignored the letter and increased his manufacture. The threatened suit was promptly begun and pressed with the utmost vigor. On the trial before the same Vice-Chancellor who heard the original case, the printed book of testimony, containing 649 pages, was put in evidence, and numerous other witnesses *from all over the country were ex-*amined. The long opinion just filed by the Vice-Chancellor is exhaustive of the whole subject, and decides that Mr. Rogers is now a bona fide manufacturer of all the goods put out in his name, and that he is entitled to conduct his business in the way in which he has been conducting it, and that the complainant's *bill or complaint should be dis-*missed.

One extract from the opinion is as follows: "It is not pretended that the defendant is in any way imitating the complainant's wares or the packages, boxes or wrappers in which they are contained. The only complaint is that because in using his own name, he may be getting some of the trade that would otherwise go to complainant, he should further differentiate his manufacture from that of complainant's by stamping upon the ware itself the words 'Not connected with the original Rogers.'"

The Vice-Chancellor, however, decided that Mr. Rogers is not obliged to injure his plated ware by putting upon it matter which other makers do not put upon it, and which might tend to disfigure it and make it less saleable, and that under the au*thorities cited, he is under no legal* obligation to do anything more than to use his own name fairly.

Since the evidence was taken, and the argument was had in the present case, Mr. Rogers has built a new factory adjoining the railroad, near Netherwood, and under the decision just rendered, his right to continue the manufacture and sale of his silver-plated ware under his own name, is no longer open to question.

TOM JOHNSON HOST AT BRYAN WELCOME.

Cleveland Mayor Accepts Invitation to Preside at Madison Square Garden Reception.

Speculation as to who will preside at the reception to W. J. Bryan in Madison Square Garden on his return from Europe was set at rest yesterday by the acceptance of Mayor Tom L. Johnson, of Cleveland.

Mayor Johnson wrote to William Hoge, chairman of the Reception Committee, assuring him of his enthusiasm in the plan to honor Mr. Bryan and stating he felt that he was working along the same lines with Mr. Bryan.

"For ten years," writes Mr. Johnson, "Mr. Bryan has been the trusted leader of the democratic Democrats. For almost ten years they had known that the Presidency of the United States was taken from him by a huge corruption fund contributed by corrupt and corrupting beneficiaries of privilege. Through confessions of some of the culprits, this has become a familiar story now, and all but the shameless condemn and deplore it.

"To him, the Presidency has never seemed a personal nor even a party prize. Even within the present year, when urged by his friends to become a candidate for the Presidential nomination in 1908, he has steadfastly replied that there is yet time for more available men to come into prominence and that no office-seeking on his part shall be allowed to em*barrass himself, his friends or his* party with premature conflicts over candidates. He is not a candidate for office; he is the leader of a cause."

NEWARK MERCHANT STRANGELY MISSING.

John A. McLorman Left His Home on June 18, and Has Not Been Seen Since.

John A. McLorman, fifty-two years old, a prominent commission merchant, of Newark, is missing from his home, No. 445 Summer avenue. He went from there to assist in business early in the morning of Monday, June 18 last, and no trace of him has since been obtained.

In hope of being themselves able to find the missing man, his friends kept the fact of his disappearance quiet until yesterday. Then, after having exhausted all their resources, they appealed to *Chief of Police Ad*ams to assist in the search for McLorman.

Mrs. McLorman told the police that while her husband had acted as though he contemplated suffering prior to his disappearance, she knew of no cause that would induce him to remain away from home voluntarily.

McLorman is tall and heavily built, weighing over 200 pounds. He has gray hair and side whiskers. He has two children, a married daugh*ter and a fourteen-year-old son.*

DIED WHILE SMOKING.

Bernard Strauss, of Newark, Expires Suddenly at Belmar.

Bernard Strauss, of Newark, one of the wealthiest provision men in New Jersey, agent of the Armour Beef Compan, died suddenly at his home in Belmar, near Asbury Park, last Thursday night.

Mr. Strauss had been unable to sleep and had remained on the porch of his house talking to his wife. He was smoking his pipe sitting in a big arm chair apparently in good health when he suddenly fell from the chair to the floor. Before a physician could be got to him he was dead. Heart disease is given as the cause of death.

Nearly Bit Her Tongue Off.

The only thing the proprietors need to do is to remove screens during the closed hours and this has always been done voluntarily.

WARD BRANCHES FORMED

Colbyites Get Their Lines Shaped For the Approaching Battle.

MEETING ALL BUSINESS

Organization Effected Without Speechmaking or Frills—Permanent Officers in Two Wards, Temporary In Other Two.

Ward organization was effected by the Independent Republicans Thursday. Representative adherents of the new idea from all the wards gathered at Reform Hall, and drew up their lines for the battle at the polls on September 25. In two wards, the Second and the Third, the organization was permanent. The First and Fourth elected temporary officers and will choose permanent leaders at meetings to be held next week.

The gathering was one for business, and business only. No speeches were made, and branch organization work was entered upon as soon as Chairman G. W. V. Moy explained what steps were necessary to the general meeting. The various ward delegations met in separate corners of the hall, and got right down to business. There was considerable discussion on the question, and the meeting lasted until after 10 o'clock. N. Mansfield Smith was general secretary.

The First ward chairman is I. B. Hill, and C. B. Vail is secretary. Permanent officers and committees will be chosen at a meeting to be called by the secretary.

In the Second, the officers were chosen as follows: Chairman, How*ard Tracy; vice chairman, G. E. Hall;* secretary, Philip Suffern; treasurer, J. H. Frost; executive committee, E. E. Iremonger, Edward Willis, F. L. Holt, Samuel Merwin, William Taylor, Clarence Goss.

The officers of the Third were: Chairman, David E. Titsworth; vice chairman, F. E. Klusman; secretary, J. Stephen Higham; treasurer, G. W. V. Moy; executive committee, First district, Dr. A. F. Van Horn, W. M. Stillman, Jacob Kirkner; Second district, J. H. Cose, Clarence L. Murphy and Elliott T. Barrows.

The Fourth's temporary officers are: Chairman, E. D. Cutting; secretary, N. Mansfield Smith. Permanent organization will be effected at a meeting to be called by Mr. Cutting.

The same constitution with the exception of a minor change or two, was adopted by all the ward branches. It is as follows:

Constitution.

This branch is formed under the constitution adopted by the Union County Republican League for Equal Taxation and that constitution is in all respects approved by this branch.

By-Laws.

5. Committee on Elections, three members.

CANDIDATES.

Sec. 1. All candidates of this branch for municipal ward office shall be selected at a regular meeting or at a special meeting called for that purpose.

Sec. 2. A candidate to be endorsed by this branch for a municipal office other than a ward office shall be selected at a special joint meeting of all the ward branches of the city of Plainfield, which shall be called by any representative of the city of Plainfield or the executive committee of the county organization upon the written request of ten members.

Sec. 3. All candidates for this branch for county, State or Federal office shall be selected in like manner and the chairman of the branch shall endeavor to have such selections approved by the county league.

AMENDMENTS.

Sec. 1. These by-laws may be al*tered, amended or repealed by a two*-third vote of those present at any meeting provided that notice of the proposed alteration, amendment or repeal shall have been given in the call of the meeting.

The executive committees of the First, Second and Third wards will be made up of six members and the officers. The Fourth ward there will be nine committeemen, three from each district.

At the meeting last night the mem*bership of the organization was ma*terially swelled. Each of the wards turned in a bunch of newly-signed cards.

FREEHOLDER COMMITTEES

Constables and Justices to be Paid After Adjournment of Grand Jury.

BORROWED $100,000

S. P. T. Wilbur Made Chairman of One Committee—$1,750 For New Bridge at Garwood.

Robert Perry, of Westfield, who *was elected to succeed Former Free*holders, Thursday. The full list of place, was seated at the July meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders, yesterday. The full list of committees for the year was also announced. In the selections, Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur, of this city, is made chairman of the committee on stationery and is also a member of the committee on audit and miscellaneous accounts and agreements. Freeholder William Westphal, also of this city, is made chairman of the committee on jail inspection and also a member of the committees an appropriations and the Elizabeth drawbridge.

It was decided to build over a small creek at Garwood and the usual procedure will be followed. A committee was also appointed to inspect a bridge at Alton and ascertain what can be done there.

It was announced that the work on the new bridge at Scott avenue in this city, would be started on Monday. This will be a concrete structure and will cost about $1,000. A report of progress was received on the Leland avenue bridge. This structure will be completed within the next two weeks. As to the West End avenue bridge it was stated that the work is progressing although not as fast as desired.

The full list of committees is as follows:

Collector's bonds—Meisel, Darby, Gladek; publication — Robinson, Kline, Smith; discharge of prisoners —Welsh, Chandler, Westphal; settle with collector—Krouse, Cady, Smith; auditing accounts—Cady, Wilbur, Woodruff; lunacy—Adams, Meisel, Swain; public grounds and buildings —Krouse, Cady, Woodruff; jail inspection—Westphal, Wahl, Murphy; stationery—Wilbur, Smith, Kline; settle with sheriff—Robinson, Perry, Chandler; miscellaneous accounts and agreements — Darby, Wilbur, Gladek; legal questions—Meisel, Gruener, Perry; appropriations—Krouse, Westphal, Cady, Kline Woodruff; county roads—Adams, Krouse, ensen, Gladek, Swain; Elizabeth draw-brides—Jensen, Westphal, Murphy; Rahway draw-bridge—Gruener, Chandler, Gladek.

County Attorney V. R. Coddington announced a settlement of the suit of Charles Simpson against the counties of Union and Morris, which has been pending for a year. Simpson was injured while crossing a bridge over the Rockaway and was awarded damages. He finally agreed to settle for $100, each county paying half.

In anticipation of the collection of taxes it was arranged to borrow $100,000, according to the annual custom. Freeholder Woodruff offered a resolution which das adopted, providing that constables and justices of the Peace shall receive their pay after the adjournment of the Grand Jury. The estimated cost of the new bridge to be built at Garwood is $17,950.

Will Teach In Suburb.

Miss Daisy Brouard, of this city, has been appointed a teacher in the Dunellen schools. She will teach the fourth grade. She was voted $45 a month salary.

Miss Mabel Hill, of St. Louis, is the guest of friends on Fairview avenue.

DURATION OF LIFE.

STATISTICS SHOW THAT LONGEVITY IS INCREASING.

Interesting Facts Concerning Births and Mortality Are Brought Out by Compilers of Figures.

Vital statistics show that owing to modern sanitary reforms and the advancement of medical science, there is a prolongation of human life now in all civilized parts of the world. It has been noticed for a long time that there has been a marked increase of longevity in the United States, and now the latest statistics prove that in foreign countries a similar condition prevails.

Swoden leads the world in low death rate. The Swedes have kept vital statistics for more than 150 years. No other country has such ancient records. It is said that all countries can estimate the improvement in the death rate for 10, 15 or 20 years, but in Sweden the average mortality of children under 10 years of age for the 10 years previous to 1760 was 53.5 per 1,000, and this percentage has been decreasing gradually ever since, until it is now only 26.9 per 1,000, or the lowest in the world.

There has been also a decrease in the death rate of all ages in Sweden. The statistics show the rate for persons between 10 and 20 years of age has fallen from 11.5 per 1,000 in 1760 to 4.3; for persons between 30 and 40 years of age it has dropped from 11.5 to 7.1 per 1,000, and for persons between 40 and 50 years of age from 16.5 to 9.5. The death rate as well as the rate of illiteracy of the two countries on the Scandinavian peninsula is the lowest to be found anywhere in the world.

The actuaries of insurance companies find a decided prolongation of human life in Holland. There the average life of man has increased from 40 to 57 years, and women from 39 to 61 years, while the lowest death rate among women is from 20 to 35 years of age. In Great Britain and Ireland, says the report, there has been an improvement of about 5 per cent., according to tables kept for 30 years.

Notwithstanding the great immigra*tion from Germany, which disturbs* the calculations of the statisticians, it is found that the average duration of life in the empire is considerably greater than it was 20 years ago. In Hungary, municipal statistics for Buda-Pesth and several other cities show a decrease of 20 per cent. in the average death rate, particularly among children.

A Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record-Herald, who has been investigating these vital statistics, *finds that there is no way of ascer*taining with accuracy the birth rate among the people of the United States, although such a record is scrupulously kept in the cities of Europe. In most American cities it is true that much attention has not been paid to this subject. Nevertheless, health authorities are taking hold of it at the request of statistical associations, and the death rate in regard to births rates will probably soon be recorded.

In New York and Washington there is a birth rate given, as in Boston. In Washington the birth rate per 1,000 is 19.8, death rate, 19.2; in New York, birth rate 28.9; death rate 22.6; in Boston, birth rate, 26.5, death rate 19.4.

The highest birth rate in the world is at Cairo, Buenos Ayres being second; then come the great manufacturing cities of England. The lowest birth rates are reported from Calcutta, Brussels and Paris.

WAY TO MANAGE WILLIE.

"Don't," Said His Mother, and at Once He Posed for His Picture.

With a joyous smile the photographer bowed his customers out, relates the New York Sun.

"Come again," he urged.

"Thank you!" humbly murmured the father of little Willie, who had just been taken.

Father's presence had been dispensed with during that operation on the ground that he was upsetting Will he had been there the first five min*utes of the attempt, and he was de*cidedly skeptical of the photographer's really plning to repeat the experiment.

But he was grateful for the blandness of the farewell and turned a relieved countenance toward his wife. She seemed singularly calm after what she must have been through.

"Do you think he got him?" he whispered, indicating Willie.

"Oh, yes," nonchalantly. "Awfully cunning pose, too. He was holding a tin steamboat."

"How in the world did you do it?"

"Oh," with an easy smile, "Willie happened to pick up the steamboat himself, and the photographer said to me: 'You couldn't make him hold that, could you?' and I said: 'Certain*ly! Do you* want him to hold it?' and he said he did. So I turned to Willie and I said: 'Why, Willie, don't you know you mustn't have that steamboat!'"

"Well?" inquired Willie's father.

"Why," remarked his wife, "of course Willie hung on to the steamboat like grim death."

Poor Father!

Bobbie—Mamma.

Mamma—Well?

"Were men awful scarce when you married papa, or did you just feel sorry for him?"—Judge.

ICE MEN AND COAL DEALERS TO BE PROSECUTED

Wealthy Resident Asks Attorney General For Advice on Proper Procedure.

ALLEGED COMBINATION

Indignant Citizen Believes That the Ice Dealers Are in a Combination in Restraint of Trade.

Proceedings will shortly be brought against the ice men of Plainfield in an effort to prove that they are in a combination in restraint of trade, according to a prominent and wealthy citizen who has interested himself in the matter on his sole responsibility. The Daily Press is not at liberty just yet to announce the name of the man who says he will conduct the fight on behalf of the local consumers, but that he is in deadly earnest is evidenced by the fact that he has already communicated with Attorney-General McCarter.

The Attorney-General has been asked to define the mode of procedure and to furnish any information or instruction that would be of value in conducting a suit against the wholesale and retail dealers. It is promised that there will be no delay once the law authority for the State has replied to the query. Just what form the action will take is not decided and cannot be until the Attor*ney-General is heard from.*

"I am determined to have the matter investigated in a proper way," said the indignant Plainfielder today. "I intend to get some light on both the ice business and coal business here. Nobody else seems willing and therefore I have undertaken it."

The man in question is one of the wealthiest and best known citizens of Plainfield. He believes that there is a monopoly in the ice business here and that the retailers are in a combination that fixes prices and regulates the trade. He likewise believes that there is a local "coal trust."

Steps to correct the conditions brought about by the alleged ice combine have also been taken by the Plainfield Protective Association. The executive committee has the matter under advisement and action will be taken as soon as data sufficient to proceed upon is gathered.

REALTY TRANSFERS.

The following real estate conveyances have been recorded in the Union County Clerk's office, Elizabeth:

Mary A. Gregory to Henry Hansen, lot 19, block B, "Map of Netherwood," Plainfield $1

Elizabeth Gilbert to G. Harwood Frost, westerly side Woodland avenue, corner Charles Hyde, Plainfield $5,000

J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Co. to Aaron A. Vander Veer, northwesterly side West Fourth street, 415 feet northeasterly of Prescott place, Plainfield $1

Solomon Mann to Philip Mann, southeasterly side Third street, 100 feet southwesterly of Lee place, Plainfield $1

SHOT AT SMITH.

Wanted to Read Former Senator Out of Party.

Disgruntled Democrats, members of the new league which was formed several months ago with the idea of injecting reform methods similar to those of the Colby factions into their inanimate party, met behind closed doors in Di Jianni's restaurant, in Central avenue, Newark, on Thursday night, and after a lively session, which broke up early yesterday morning, voted down an attempt by one of their number to read ex-United States Senator James Smith, Jr., out of the party.

The meeting was called hurriedly, and neither Simon Northrup, the president, nor Nelson Abeel, the secretary, was present. J. Harry Hull, a member of the executive committee, presided until Under Sheriff Charles Mason was made temporary chairman.

The following students have been enrolled at the Plainfield Business College recently: J. Arthur Honeyman, Somerville; Georgs Strathle, Plainfield; B. Howwits, Plainfield; Arthur Dandi, Plainfield; Russell S. Davis, Califon; Lillian Norman, South Plainfield; Mrs. Fanny Bergen, Plainfield; Bayard Taylor, Dunellen; George Egel, Plainfield; Ralph Goldsmith, Plainfield; Charles L. Ryder, Plainfield; Maude C. Farr, Peacock; Bertha Elling, Somerville; Alice Halsted, Somerville; Charles Westphal, Plainfield; Fred Bonnet, Plainfield; Russell Randolph, Plainfield; Fred Martin, Plainfield.

SENTENCE HANGS OVER HER.

Mary Moore Gets a Scorching Call-Down from Judge Runyon.

Mrs. Mary Moore was arraigned for the second time within three days in the city court Friday morning, for drunkenness, and Judge Runyon gave her the most scathing rebuke he has administered to any prisoner in a long time. Her husband stood by and heard the biting Runyonization with frank approval. It was on his complaint that the woman was arrested.

After telling her that she was a "brute, a sodden beast, unworthy of being called a woman," and other raking things, Mrs. Moore was allowed to go under suspended sentence for the sake of her husband and children. But the sentence hanging above her is the limit—$100 and fifty-nine days in jail—and it will fall the first time she reappears in court.

"You'll come back," said the judge, "I haven't any hope that this will keep you away. But the min*ute you reappear that sentence will* fall and nothing will keep it off."

Mr. Moore said he would make arrangements to have the children put away the next time his wife was arrested. Mrs. Moore left the court room with the choice between cutting out booze or going to jail for six months.

PUMPING STATION SITE.

Committee Having Difficulty In Arranging For One.

The street and sewer committee in providing for an extension of the sanitary sewer in the southwestern part of the city, where it will be necessary to establish a pumping station, has not yet decided upon a location for the station. An attempt was made to get the option on a certain piece of ground in that part of the city without acquainting the owners as to the purpose for which it was desired.

The matter leaked out in some way and the owners put the price up so high that the committee did not think it advisable to consider it. Now it will probably be necessary for the committee to select some suitable site and have the city pay the price set upon it by the owner.

Ordination at St. Stephen's.

It is likely that within a short time arrangements will be completed for the ordination of Rev. Arthur Searing Peck, rector of St. Stephen's church. Mr. Peck, who has been away from the city for the benefit of his health soon expects to return to his parishioners. When he took charge of the work at St. Stephen's church, he was located in the mission at Trenton and was sent to Plainfield by Bishop Scarborough. The services will be held at St. Stephen's church and Bishop Scarborough will attend.

William Sweeney in Buenos Ayres.

Mrs. Sweeney, of Liberty street, has received several interesting letters from her son, William Sweeney, who is now in Buenos Ayres on a business trip. He says that he likes the country very much and the people are very hospitable. Since arriving there he has been the guest at a number of dinners given by prominent residents. He says that all the modern improvements in any up-to-date city in the United States are to be found in Buenos Ayres. He does not know when he will return to New Jersey.

More Storm Sewers.

With the completion of the second extension of the storm sewer now proposed for Richmond street, it is believed that much of the flooding by surface water in heavy rains will be obviated. The next storm sewer work to be undertaken will probably be on Second avenue, between the railroad and Eighth street. Councilman Tyler was anxious to have this work put through last year, when the first section of the Richmond street storm sewer was provided for, but he was assured that the Plainfield avenue sewer would be given equal consideration this year.

ROOSEVELT WON'T BE AT BRYAN RECEPTION.

President Declines to Preside at Meeting of Commercial Travellers' Anti-Trust League.

President Roosevelt has declined the invitation of the Commercial Travellers' Anti-Trust League to preside at the reception to William J. Bryan in Madison Square Garden on August 19. Secretary Loeb wrote that the President has already announced his positive intention to accept no invitations for the summer.

The Bryan reception committee, determined to show the non-partisan nature of the reception, has sent invitations to Senator La Follette and Gov. A. B. Cummins, of Iowa, to address the gathering.

The Delayed Cackle.

"I say Jerome K. Jerome says the English sense of humor is best."

"Yes, and I guess that's true. I told a good joke to a party of fellows last night and there was one Englishman in the crowd."

"Well?"

"Well, you know the old saying: 'He laughs best who laughs last.'"

CURRENT LABOR NEWS.

John Burns, as president of the Local Government Board in England, says that the government will take up the old-age pensions questions when the report of the Poor Law Commission has been received. Personally he considers that it would be best, simplest and fairest in inaugurating an old-age pension scheme to give everyone a pension of 5s. per week on reaching the age of 65, military, naval, civil and municipal pensioners to be excluded.

* * *

The International Typographical Union has announced the election of officers to serve for two years as follows: President, James F. Lynch; first vice president, John W. Hay; secretary-treasurer, J. M. Bramwood.

* * *

The French Cabinet has announced that the government refuses to recognize the right of state employes to strike.

* * *

A site for the proposed labor temple for Cleveland trades unionism has been purchased. The price that will eventually be paid is $18,000. It has not been decided just how much money will be expended.

* * *

Montreal, Canada, journeymen bakers have practically secured all their demands, including the request of the men for $15 a week, with $18 a week for foremen.

* * *

The Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, by vote of 2,552 to 1,857, have decided to affiliate with the Structural Buildings Trades Alliance.

* * *

The tobacco workers are making a fight in an effort to replace with union-made goods the large amount of non-union tobacco now on the market.

* * *

A case of unusual importance to organized labor has just been decided by the Superior Court of Cincinnati in reversing Judge Hosea, of that city, who had held in contempt two officers of the Iron Moulders' Union because they had induced strike-breakers to desert their work and had sent them out of the city. the union paying their railroad fare.

* * *

At a conference of delegates from the building trades, held at Sydney, Australia, recently, to discuss the workings of the New South Wales arbitration act, the feeling was that the act, in its present form, was not acceptable to organized labor. Rather than work under the emasculated law, delegates were of opinion that a return to the old methods of industrial warfare was preferable.

* * *

Legislation has made possible in Lombardy, Italy, the application of rigid laws governing the employment of women and children in factory labor in the protection of workmen, in compulsory insurance and pensions, and in better housing for the laboring class. Women's hours for labor, and the age at which children may be employed are definitely fixed.

* * *

Many German concerns own dwelling houses and rent them to workmen at actual cost; they provide food at actual cost, furnish fuel at wholesale prices, and give transportation in whole or part.

Retail grocery clerks of East Liverpool, Ohio, will attempt to secure a 6 o'clock closing hour to take the place of the present 7 o'clock law.

* * *

A sudden adjustment of the Chicago freight handlers' grievance against the railroad companies entering Chicago was accomplished unexpectedly. Employes of four of the great trunk lines were authorized by joint council of the union to accept a proposition for a partial increase offered by the companies.

* * *

The long struggle between the operators of Ohio and the union miners was officially declared off recently and a settlement was reached after a conference of two days between the miners' officers and John H. Winder, representing the "stand-pat" operators. By the agreement 35,000 union men will go back to work in the mines in Southeastern Ohio, where the troops were recently called out.

The Carpenters' Union of Spokane, Wash., intends to build a labor temple in the near future.

DRESS HINTS.

If leather "lifts" are fitted into the heels of rubbers the overshoes will wear longer than without them.

The art of bow tying is one that every woman of limited means should acquire if she wishes to be well dressed.

Spirits of wine will clean soiled silk embroidery. Dip a camels hair brush in it and brush the trimming until all dirt is removed.

Worn silk may be patched with a scrap of the same neatly put on with mucilage. Place a piece of tissue paper over the place and iron until dry.

An overtrimmed hat is a deal more unsightly than a hat that has nothing on it but a ribbon. More women suffer from a lack of overdressing, anyway, than from a lack of trimming.

When you baste turnover collars and cuffs in your waist, take an extra stitch or two at each corner. This will prevent that ugly curling up which so often mars the otherwise trying effect of the pretty little set.

LAUNDRY LINES.

Bed linen and underclothes should be soaked in tepid water to which has been added some melted soap and some soap powder.

After putting colored clothes through the wringer rub the rollers with a cloth saturated in paraffin oil. That will remove all color from them.

Coffee and tea stains if rubbed with butter and afterward washed in hot suds will come out, leaving the table linen quite white and fresh.

If starched clothes are very stiff when brought in from the line they will fold and get into shape with much less work if they are sprinkled and let lie for a heap for an hour or so before folding.

When the water is too muddy to whiten the clothes it can be cleared very quickly by stirring in a little cornmeal. The meal will go to the bottom as soon as it is thoroughly wet and will carry the solid particles with it.

THE CAREFUL LADY.

Why does the lady act like that
And hold her skirt so high?
The sun is shining very hot,
The pavements are quite dry.

I guess that she is thoughtful,
And wants to save her skirt;
I think it very nice in her
To keep it from the dirt.

Oh, no, my child, you're very wrong,
As wrong as wrong can be—
The flowers on her stockings
Are hand-painted, don't you see?
—American Spectator.

INKLINGS.

You may say very wise, even naughty, things if you are supposed to be a fool.

Secrets are the things that everybody knows—in strictest secrecy, of course.

Is there anything more amusing than to see two people who hate each other band together against yet another enemy?

Do you knew the maiden who with shocking innocence hands out the information supplied by men friends?

Everybody loves love stories—loves to make fun of them, too.

PICTURE STOCKINGS.

They're made of silk.
They're thin as gauze.
One may harken them in black.
They're of the chiffony weave.
They also come in white and two tan shades.
They're exquisitely plain and cost but $2.

Why picture stockings? Why, because they are so sheer that you can see your best beau's picture through them. Also, because they're pretty enough to frame.

THE BUSY BANGLE.

How it jingles.
Some wear a number.
One girl sports a full dozen.
It's a fad to wear them all on one arm.
Each bangle is more or less (rather more) weighty.
The bangle is supposed to be the gift of a girl's fiance.
To wear a dozen argues a girl to be one of Cupid's industrious followers.

Defined.

A certain member of the Yale faculty is famous for his power of condensing his many strong antipathies into trenchant epigrams. His pet abhorrence is logic, a fact which was unknown to the student who recently approached him with the question:

"Professor ——, I am thinking of taking logic next year. What do you think of the course?"

"Horse sense made asinine," responded the professor, tersely.—Harper's Weekly.

By REV. WALTER J. TATES, D. D.

The distinguishing mark of the real Christian is his regard for his fellow man. Since men appeared on earth they have congregated together in companies more or less numerous. Such association implies and imperatively demands some consideration for the well being of each other. Utter selfishness would prevent all community life. Where there is to be any sort of association it must be based on mutual assistance and interest of some kind and degree.

Often this bond of union has seemed scarcely higher in degree or more binding in force than the sexual instinct, the maternal impulse or gregarious attractiveness which rules among wild animals.

Such foundation is insufficient for human society, however well fitted for the world of beasts. Fraternity can be based alone on the qualities in man which make him a partaker of the divine nature. The impulse must not, cannot be a physical impulsion, but must be a spiritual impulse. Ideal life in companionship. It cannot be a mere intellectual conception of possible relations. That would be bare, cold, lifeless. It must have a motive impulse warm with heart blood, pulsating strong and passionate, the outgoing free love of the divine nature. The soul desires to impart itself and all its good to some one like minded and to receive in return the confidence, love and good of that other. This is in the very fiber of the human soul. It must be active. It must work out its ideal and impulse and is restless and discontent until it finds an object of affection which it can idealize and on which it can lavish its love.

This is the changeless base of human society. It is the reflex of the divine nature. It founds the family relation, but does not stop there. It is the bond of all tribal and clan affinities. It is the root of true patriotism, but—deeper, broader and higher than all these—it underlies the society of the church of Jesus Christ.

He who comes to consciousness of this fellowship, who realizes the grace of Christian love, awakens to a new world of being. The powers which used to hold him and which he sees still keep other men in servitude no longer have power over him.

The love of money sinks far below his horizon. He used to feel its power; now he cares for money only as it will serve to lift others to a better life. He dreads no privation, feels no poverty, shrinks from no work, has no impulse to fraud, but works in order to give.

The sensual desires of the flesh cannot capture him. He lives in the atmosphere of pure love, and a perfect satisfaction of soul keeps the body in its lower place as servant.

He is bound with those who suffer, and, as he can help, he carries their burdens and cares.

He does nothing as task. It is not such. The heart is free, and he enjoys the helping of others because the heart feels for and with them.

He is to be betrayed. He undoubtedly will be scorned, but the unshaken love of God abiding in the soul keeps him steadfast, immovable and always abounding in the work of the Lord.

Needing and Wanting.

"See, here!" cried Goodley, as he caught the new waiter entering a saloon, "when I gave you that dime you said you needed something to eat."

"Quite so," replied the intelligent hobo, "I needed something to eat, but a drink is what I wanted."

Repairing East Front Street.

Under the direction of Street Commissioner Gavett, East Front street, between Park and Watchung avenues, is being repaired with a top dressing and the steam roller has been working there for a few days. This is the first repair work on this section of East Front street in eight years. It was decided to fix the street after the Public Service Corporation completed its work of laying new rails and ties along that thoroughfare. West Front street, between Grant and Clinton avenues, will be similarly fixed when the trolley company finishes its work of repairs to the tracks.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 18.

By REV. S. B. DOYLE.

Topic.—How can I be a true friend?—Prov. xvii, 17; xviii, 24; xxvii, 9, 17, 19; Eccl. iv, 9, 12.

Friendship is a subject upon which many have written. Some of the world's greatest essayists and philosophers have not looked upon friendship as a theme unworthy of their thought and have contributed their thoughts upon friendship to the world. Nor is so doing have they in the least lowered their dignity as great thinkers. Friendship is a very common sentiment, yet a very great and important one. It enters into practically every human life and affects it at every period from childhood to old age. It is a need of every life. "Two are better than one." It is a blessing to every life. The value of true friendship is inestimable. It is a great blessing to save one in whom we can absolutely trust, who knows us altogether, our weaknesses and our failings as well as our points of strength, and who in spite of all our limitations and imperfections is constant and unfailing, rejoicing in our successes, cheering us in discouragement, comforting us in trouble, strengthening us in weakness and not failing even in telling us our faults that we may guard against them. If every one had such a friend and if human friendship were never inconstant or betrayed, how many rough places in life would be made smooth and how many clouds would be lifted from the dark and dreary days of life!

Friendship in its strictest sense should be limited in its manifestations. The human heart and life can scarcely have more than one ideal friendship. Friendship means confidence, and he who takes many into his confidence and gives them a knowledge of his real self and life commits a serious folly. We may have many friends who esteem and respect us, but among them all there should be one above all others —"the friend who sticketh closer than a brother," the one to whom we intrust ourselves even more entirely than to one bound to us by the ties of blood. David and Jonathan had doubtless many friendly companions, but only their "two souls were knit together." The secrets of the soul are sacred and should not be revealed to every one who comes within the range of our acquaintanceship. To have one bosom friend, in whom we can put implicit trust, and but one, should be our aim, and in the selection of this one the greatest care should be exercised. Moreover this friend should be of our own sex. "Platonic love"—intimate friendships between men and women, which should not develop into love and matrimony—is quite impossible. Men and women are not made that way. What may seem at first to be but friendship almost eventually develops into the stronger sentiment, and if anything exists that makes that sentiment a mistake it is friendship and should not be fostered into. A young woman especially can make no greater mistake than to give her confidential friendship to a man whom she cannot or should not marry. A man's confidential friend should be a man, and a woman's a woman. The attempt to reverse this order has in innumerable cases wrought ruin and disaster.

The only way to be a true friend is to be one. The elements of true friendship are commonly known—constancy, "a friend in need," faithfulness in secretly guarding every confidence intrusted to us. No viler or more contemptible person exists than the one who betrays the confidence of friendship or deserts a friend in the hour of trouble. But, besides a human friend, we have the opportunity of a divine friendship. In Jesus Christ, the Son of God, we may find a friend upon condition of conformity to the divine will. "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." The best of earthly friends may fail us, but Christ will never fail. No one should be without the friendship of Christ or need be without it. Is He your friend?

Effect of Our Thoughts.

Every day we are becoming more like our thoughts. If they are mean and selfish, we cannot prevent ourselves from becoming so; if they are unclean and evil, our character and conduct will inevitably be shaped by them. It is true that, "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

As Charles Kingsley says: "Think about yourself, about what you want, and you will be the most people ought to pay you, and then to you nothing will be pure. You will spoil everything you touch; you will make sin and misery for yourself out of everything which God sends you; you will be as wretched as you choose on earth or in heaven either."

And, on the other hand, loving thoughts will produce loving acts, and a generous, kindly way of regarding others in our own minds will bring us to a generous, kindly treatment of them in daily life.—Robert E. Speer.

Christian Investment.

There is one form of Christian investment which can be made to yield sure and large dividends. There never was a time in the history of the world when a dollar could do more good, or do it more quickly than today. Look at some of the diagrams that show how much is spent for chewing gum and gewgaws and then say whether or not it is an era of bountiful sowing. As has been well said, the missionary who stands with the throat like a highwayman and says "Your money or your life!" This is a money esteeming age. Money represents us as no mere talk can ever do. What will you give? What will you give? What will you give, fellow Christians, that is ever sounding in our ears.—H. A. Bridgman.

Moral Way of Growing.

When a boy wants to grow he cannot make himself taller by drawing a plan with a footrule and trying to stretch up to it. The way to grow is not to think about growing, but to seek the most advantageous conditions of life. And the moral way of growing is the same way—not to put as much attention to details as to tone of the soul *to associate much and closely with Je*sus, to breathe the pure air of prayer and eat the good food of the Bible and so go bravely in good condition and healthier spiritual vitality.—Nolan Rice Best.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 18.

By REV. S. B. DOYLE.

Topic.—How can I be a true friend?—Prov. xvii, 17; xviii, 24; xxvii, 9, 17, 19; Eccl. iv, 9, 12.

Friendship is a subject upon which many have written. Some of the world's greatest essayists and philosophers have not looked upon friendship as a theme unworthy of their thought and have contributed their thoughts upon friendship to the world. Nor is so doing have they in the least lowered their dignity as great thinkers. Friendship is a very common sentiment, yet a very great and important one. It enters into practically every human life and affects it at every period from childhood to old age. It is a need of every life. "Two are better than one." It is a blessing to every life. The value of true friendship is inestimable. It is a great blessing to save one in whom we can absolutely trust, who knows us altogether, our weaknesses and our failings as well as our points of strength, and who in spite of all our limitations and imperfections is constant and unfailing, rejoicing in our successes, cheering us in discouragement, comforting us in trouble, strengthening us in weakness and not failing even in telling us our faults that we may guard against them. If every one had such a friend and if human friendship were never inconstant or betrayed, how many rough places in life would be made smooth and how many clouds would be lifted from the dark and dreary days of life!

Friendship in its strictest sense should be limited in its manifestations. The human heart and life can scarcely have more than one ideal friendship. Friendship means confidence, and he who takes many into his confidence and gives them a knowledge of his real self and life commits a serious folly. We may have many friends who esteem and respect us, but among them all there should be one above all others —"the friend who sticketh closer than a brother," the one to whom we intrust ourselves even more entirely than to one bound to us by the ties of blood. David and Jonathan had doubtless many friendly companions, but only their "two souls were knit together." The secrets of the soul are sacred and should not be revealed to every one who comes within the range of our acquaintanceship. To have one bosom friend, in whom we can put implicit trust, and but one, should be our aim, and in the selection of this one the greatest care should be exercised. Moreover this friend should be of our own sex. "Platonic love"—intimate friendships between men and women, which should not develop into love and matrimony—is quite impossible. Men and women are not made that way. What may seem at first to be but friendship almost eventually develops into the stronger sentiment, and if anything exists that makes that sentiment a mistake it is friendship and should not be fostered into. A young woman especially can make no greater mistake than to give her confidential friendship to a man whom she cannot or should not marry. A man's confidential friend should be a man, and a woman's a woman. The attempt to reverse this order has in innumerable cases wrought ruin and disaster.

The only way to be a true friend is to be one. The elements of true friendship are commonly known—constancy, "a friend in need," faithfulness in secretly guarding every confidence intrusted to us. No viler or more contemptible person exists than the one who betrays the confidence of friendship or deserts a friend in the hour of trouble. But, besides a human friend, we have the opportunity of a divine friendship. In Jesus Christ, the Son of God, we may find a friend upon condition of conformity to the divine will. "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." The best of earthly friends may fail us, but Christ will never fail. No one should be without the friendship of Christ or need be without it. Is He your friend?

BIBLE READINGS.

I Sam. xviii, 1-4; Prov. xxii, 24, 25 xxvii, 6-10; xxv, 9; Mark v, 19; Luke x, 30-37; John xv, 1-15; II Tim. i, 16-18; Jas. ii, 21-23; iv, 4; III John 14.

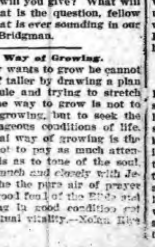
A London Worker.

In Miss M. Jennie Street the great London (England) Christian Endeavor union found a model secretary. She is one of the most indefatigable workers in all England. She sometimes travels almost a thousand miles per week and has been able to address as many as thirty-two meetings during several days. "I love my work," she says, "and find much joy in it and in the fellowship of my dear fellow workers." Miss Street is also the popular editor of the Band of Hope Review. She has written many Christian Endeavor articles, not a few of which have had large use in America.



MISS M. JENNIE STREET.

A Welcome Message.

Pennsylvania's governor-president, Rev. R. G. Brunon, D. D., of Williamsport, sends a cheerful greeting to all his fellow Endeavorers. "First of all," he says, "be true to your pledge, for in its keeping is bound up the secret of blessing and joy. Then be sure to carry with you the depressing memories of past mistakes and failures, but, knowing that a merciful God forgiveth the wrong, let us look up into His dear face and with a clearer faith, a stronger courage and a tender hope live the days of this glad new year."

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

In packing bottles slip rubber bands over them to prevent breakage.

A piece of soft flannel is better than a brush for removing dust from silk.

A lump of camphor placed in the clothes press will keep steel ornaments bright.

Cake or crust can be prevented in a tea kettle by keeping an egg shell in the kettle.

Rub white spots on oilcloth caused by heat from utensils with spirits of camphor.

Place a small bag of unslackened lime inside the piano. It will keep the springs from rusting.

To clean marble busts, mantels, etc., wipe free of dust, then wash with a weak hydrochloric acid.

Spots on plush will disappear if rubbed lightly and rapidly with a clean, soft cotton cloth dipped in chloroform.

A sponging with a solution of one part ox gall to two parts of water is said to brighten the colors in a faded carpet.

Kerosene rubbed into boots and shoes which have been hardened by water will soften them. Rubbing with a woolen rag, saturated with kerosene, will also brighten tin and granite ware.

To clean zinc dip a piece of flannel in paraffin and with it well rub the zinc, which should then be washed with hot water and soap to remove the smell of the oil and polished with a dry cloth.

All articles used in bath room, kit*chen or pantry should be dipped in* enamel paint and thoroughly dried before being screwed in. Then there will be no rust spots on towels or clothes that are hung on them when damp.

In filling gem pans with batter of any kind do not put it in with a spoon, which is apt to leave drops on table and pan, but pour from a small pitcher which is kept for the purpose. It is more easily and quickly done.

THINGS IN THE SHOPS WORTH KNOWING ABOUT.

A fetching princess gown made entirely of alternate rows of narrow white satin ribbon and insertion with a yoke effect of applique in a rich floral design may be had a Broad street shop.

A simple and jaunty model for an outing suit is of all-over sailwook embroidery, with the skirt and swagger little pony jacket finished with tailored bands of linen.

Gorgeous long lingerie kimonos of lustrous wash silks, in long and short lengths, with superb borders of "flash" poppies, are rich enough to delight the most fastidious.

In millinery for midsummer wear the Vests Tilly and Gainsborough models with their soft, gracefully flowing coque feathers, are steadily gaining in popularity.

Exquisitely dainty, gauze silk hosiery, with hand embroidered roses and blocks in colors to match light summer gowns, are ultra-fashionable.

The shops are showing a varied and unique line of "dog collars" consisting of gull gold links inlaid with the different colored stones.

In footwear there are endless numbers of attractions for any lady this season, among which the most favored are the hand-embroidered canvas pumps, colored suede oxfords and the court ties in gun metal kid and patent leather. The trim French heel so long esteemed as indispensable to detail feminine has been replaced by the new covered regulation Cuban heel.

Beautiful beyond description are the parasols so much in vogue this season. The white ones with huge bunches of hand-painted violets and roses are particularly artistic.

Filmy lace handkerchiefs continue to gain in importance and beauty, and are carefully chosen to conform with the toilette of the well-dressed woman.

VINES FOR THE VERANDA.

Every possessor of a house with a porch, whether in city, suburb or country, should realize the opportunity he has, with the help of nature, to make it a beautiful, shady retreat in summer. In the woods many wild vines may be found. There are the Dutchman's pipe, the wild grape, the moon seed vine, the trumpet vine and others. The wild grape vine is especially useful and easily obtained. The silk vine is very fine, with dark green luxuriant foliage of neat habit. It belongs to the milkweed family of plants and derives its name from the silky contents of its seed pods. A number of the clematises are well worthy of a place on the most beau*tiful verandas,* especially the flowering varieties, such as clematis jackmanii, which has purple flowers, and clematis henryi, which has great white flowers, both producing a mass of rich color.

Tobacco Smoke.

The composition of tobacco smoke is complex. Analysis gives nicotine, pyridic bases, formic aldehyde, ammonia, methylamin, pyrrol, sulphuretted hydrogen, prussic acid, butyric acid, carbonic acid, oxide of carbon, the steam of water, an ethereised em*pyreumatic oil, and tarry or resinous* products, among which we detect small quantities of phenol. Of all the products of tobacco the most venomous are nicotine, pyridic and methylamin bases, prussic acid, sulphuretted hydrogen, oxide of carbon and empyreumatic oil, and all that we draw into our lungs with more or less satisfaction.—Harper's Weekly.

HALL DECLINING SUGGESTS BARROWS FOR MAYOR

Former Councilman Boomed By Anti-Organization Men as the Ideal Candidate.

WHY MR. HALL REFUSES

Says Business Interests Would Not Permit Him to Devote Necessary Attention to Office.

Deeming that the duties of the office demand the undivided attention and time of the incumbent, and firmly believing that his own business interests elsewhere would not permit him to devote the necessary time to it, if elected, Henry L. Hall has decided not to allow his name to be considered in connection with the mayoralty nomination. Against the wishes of his friends, particularly those identified with the anti-organization movement, the man commonly considered as the choice of the Colbyites to succeed Mayor Buckle has announced that he cannot accept the honor.

Mr. Hall and his friends are now booming former Councilman Elliott T. Barrows for the nomination. They point to him as an ideal man for the place. Mr. Barrows' experience in the Common Council, where he was a leading figure for a number of years, the anti-administration men say particularly qualify him for the position.

When seen by a representative of The Daily Press last night, Mr. Hall confirmed the report that he would not lead the anti-organization forces as their standard bearer in the coming municipal campaign. He said that he deeply appreciated the sincere action of his friends in suggesting his name but that he could not accept the nomination. His time, he said is much taken up in his business and that he is apt to be called away to distant points as his business demands, he did not feel that he would be the man for the place. Mr. Hall stated that mayority is a position of unusual responsibility and the incumbent should be able to devote a large part of his time and attention to its duties.

Mr. Hall told the Daily Press man that he much preferred to stay in the ranks and work for the cause in which he has enlisted. In fighting against boosism, he declared, he has been prompted by no selfish motives, and so long as the battle continues he will not be a candidate for office.

It is not known whether Mr. Barrows will comply with the wishes of the anti-organization men and allow his name to be used in connection with the mayoralty. One of the leaders of the Colbyite movement, stated, however, last night, that it would be definitely known in a day or two.

Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, city chairman of the regular organization, who is the organization favorite for mayor, has given no intimation as to his position. He is now at his Easthampton home and is likely to remain there during the summer season.

"NO LADY, THAT'S WHAT SHE AINT," SAYS TENANT.

Two Women Act as Their Own Lawyers in District Court Case.

"She's no lady, that's what she aint. I did not pay the June rent but I did spend $35 for the repairs of her house and I don't consider myself in debt to her." These rather plain remarks were directed to Judge William Newcorn in the district court, this morning, by Mrs. Emma Bush, against whom dispossess proceedings were instituted by Mrs. C. D. Iseman for possession of the latter's property at 1207 West Seventh street.

The two women appeared before the court to fight it out, neither having retained counsel, and it was after Judge Newcorn decided to give Mrs. Bush three days to get another place to live, that she began to explain her case. She also said that it was at the request of the landlady that she remained on the premises as a care-taker. This assertion was denied by Mrs. Iseman, who said she had no use for such a person, that Mrs. Bush owed her the rent for June and part of July.

After the decision in the case Mrs. Bush left the court agreeing to do as directed, declaring that Mrs. Iseman "was no lady."

Branch School Continues.

The fate of the school at Branch Mills has been settled for another year, and the old school is safe. Children from Springfield, Mountainside and Westfield attend the school, though it is in Springfield township, and it is necessary for the three municipalities to join in maintaining it. Westfield Board of Education was the last of the three to decide to maintain an interest in the school, and passed resolutions at its last meeting that the school was a necessity. It would not, however, concur with the Board of Education of Mountainside in declaring it a first-class school.

COL. KUSER RETAINS REED IN AUTO CASE

PLAINFIELD LAWYER INSISTS UPON TRIAL OF SPEEDING CLAIM.

Colonel Anthony Kuser, son-in-law of Senator John F. Dryden, who on the afternoon of Sunday, June 10, was held up on Union avenue, Bound Brook, by the borough marshals, on the charge that his automobile was being speeded at a faster pace than allowed by law, while on his way from Bernardsville with the Senator, to take a train for Washington at Bound Brook, and who was released on his promise to make everything all right, has not had a hearing yet. Since then he has placed the matter in the hands of his counsel, former Senator Charles A. Reed, of this city, with instructions to insist that the charge of exceeding the speed limit at Bound Brook be tried. In conversation with a reporter of a Trenton paper last Wednesday the Colonel said he was not disposed to allow the matter to drop, as the borough au*thorities at Bound Brook seemed dis*posed to do, but that he would insist upon having a trial and an opportunity to show that the charge was unwarranted.

Sunday, June 10, was the first time that the Bound Brook borough authorities had ever instructed its marshals to arrest all automobile users who exceeded the speed limit in passing along Union avenue, the continuation of the county road through Bound Brook. Accordingly all the marshals, headed by Chief Andrew Flammer, took positions along the avenue, prepared to stop all violators of the borough ordinance. *To be doubly certain, a half-*mile course was measured off, and marshals with stop watches were stationed at either end to take the time of all automobiles in passing over the course.

Soon after these preparations had been made Mr. Inglesbee, a member of the New Jersey Automobile Association, was apprised of the situation and hurriedly had men stationed at either end of the borough, armed with red flags and big, roughly drawn signs which read "Danger! Beware of the Cops." In consequence of this warning all autos, in passing along Union avenue, were speeded at a snail's pace, and no arrests were made during the morning.

About 2 o'clock an automobile containing Colonel Kuser and Senator Dryden, on their way to hurry to take a train on the B. and O., at Bound Brook for Washington, came along at a fast pace and at the end of the measured stretch were stopped on the charge of having exceeded the speed limit. The auto and the occupants were quickly surrounded by a crowd of curiosity seekers and all sorts of comments were indulged in at the expense of the autoists. Finally, upon the appearance of Mayor Brokaw the distinguished occupants of the auto were allowed to proceed on their way, they assuring the Mayor they would settle the matter if he'd send them the bill. Nothing since has been done about the matter by the Bound Brook authorities.

Mayor Brokaw, when seen about the matter, said he was ready for the Colonel at any time, for the speed limit was unquestionably exceeded by his auto on the Sunday afternoon in question. The Mayor said he had been in communication with Senator Reed about the matter, but he would not recede one iota from his position in the premises. In conclusion Mayor Brokaw said if the Colonel wanted to have the case taken to the courts he was ready for him, for the evidence that the colonel's auto was being run at a faster pace than pre*scribed by law on the Sunday* afternoon in question, was unquestionable and he was prepared to stand by it.

WANTS $300 DAMAGES.

Levine's Suit Against Father and Son Postponed.

The case in tort of Aaron Levine against Eugene M. Laing and Allen B. Laing was to have been tried in the District Court Tuesday, but Francis J. Blatz, representing the plaintiff, said that the defendants' counsel desired a postponement because of the absence of an important witness, Henry Latke, who is in Europe, and was not expected home until July 20. The trial was postponed until July 24.

The action is brought by Mr. Levine to recover $300 damages. He has occupied a portion of the building in West Second street, now being remodelled by Eugene M. Laing and Allen B. Laing. The plaintiff claims that the front and roof were removed while he occupied the premises and *he suffered considera*ble damage.

Plainfield will be well represented at the New York University during the next few years. Martin Stutsman, Clarence Heaume and Milton St. John will enter the college in the fall, Heaume and St. John having won scholarship at the Plainfield High School. Norman Hill, also of this city, will be graduated next year.

DR. BOONE RESIGNS FROM HOSPITAL STAFF

PHYSICIAN HAD SERVED ON BOARD FOR QUARTER OF CENTURY.

After a quarter of a century of attention to duty as a member of the medical board of Muhlenberg Hospital, Dr. William H. Boone, of West Seventh street, presented his resignation at the July meeting of the Board of Governors, Monday. It was accepted with regret and resolutions were ordered prepared expressing the feelings of the board.

Dr. Boone has been connected with the hospital from the time of its establishment about twenty-five years ago and during that period has rendered valuable assistance as a physician and surgeon. He told a reporter of The Daily Press that he believed that he was entitled to the rest after a service of twenty-five years.

The report of the medical board, last night, was as follows:

Patients admitted during the month, 46; discharged cured, 47; improved, 7; died 1; total number treated, 85; remaining, 30. In the dispensary, patients treated, 57; visits of patients, 99; X-ray examinations, 2; operations, 2.

USED A DRAG NET; 4 FINED $20 EACH

PARTY OF FOUR VIOLATED GAME LAW IN DUNELLEN POND.

For three hours the hearing of the game warden case was continued Monday afternoon at the borough court before Justice Mundy and at its conclusion Golsen Smalley, Charles Smalley, William Smalley and James Benson were imposed with a fine of $20 apiece for fishing without permit from the game warden with a net in a pond back of Rajotte's brick yard on Jefferson avenue in June. The case was appealed to the county court of common pleas and will come up again in September. The principals were obliged to furnish $400 bonds, Albert Rajotte and Golsen Smalley being the bondsmen. Frank Warren, the fifth member of the fishing party, left town before he could be served with a warrant and was not at the hearing.

A feature of the case was the testimony of 9-year-old Walter Maronsheck, son of Frank Maronsheck. What happened along while the party were at the pond and got some of the fish, taking them home. When his mother heard where the fish had come from she made him take them and throw them back in the pond. Then she went and remonstrated with the fishermen for violating the law.

In connection with the action brought by the State and Game Warden Miller, was action brought by Frank Maronsheck against James Benson for assault and battery at the pond and on June 16, when he learned that Maronsheck had reported the violation of the law. Benson was held under $50 bail to await the action of the grand jury.

V. W. Nash, Jr., represented the State and Maronsheck and William G. DeMeza represented the principals in the fish case and Benson in the assault and battery case. Both counsels will be retained for the appealed cases.

RUFUS S. ROWLAND ENGAGED TO MISS MARGARITA FREW.

Popular Pittsburg Debutante to Be the Bride of Plainfield Man.

Society of Pittsburg and Plainfield is interested in the announcement of the engagement of Rufus Story Rowland, son of Mr. and Mrs. David H. Rowland, of West Seventh street, and Miss Margarita Frew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Nevin Frew, of Pittsburg.

Miss Frew, who made her debut last winter, is one of the best known young women in Pittsburg's exclusive social circles. No date for the wedding has been set, but it is understood that it will take place in the fall.

Mr. Rowland was graduated from Yale this year and is very popular in the younger society set of this city and New York. He has been a prominent figure in many leading social functions.

ENGLISH ETCHINGS.

In England a man can take out an insurance policy against twins.

Less than $5 per week is earned by three our of every four Englishman.

Fully one-third of the land in Great Britain is owned by members of the House of Lords.

Great Britain, it is said, eats in thirteen weeks the 73,000,000 bushels of wheat which it grows.

Since the sixteenth century twelve churches, a convent, a hospital and many hundreds of acres of land have been swallowed by the sea in the vi*cinity of Aldenburgh.*

For every ton of genuine ivory imported into Great Britain there are imported three tons of vegetable ivory. The latter comes chiefly from the republic of Columbia, in South America. It is obtained from the seeds of the ivory nut palm.

BABY CAMP SEASON ON

King's Daughters City Union Institution on Mountainside Opens.

INSPECTION, JULY 17

Mrs. DeLancy in Charge As Matron and Miss DeLancy As Nurse —Day Nursery's Work.

The King's Daughters' Baby Camp on Johnston's Drive, was opened informally Monday for the season. It is expected that by the last of the week there will be fourteen children at the institution. Mrs. DeLany and her daughter, Miss Olive DeLany, the city nurse, will be in charge as usual. Owing to the fact that the Day Nursery will be closed during August the demands upon the mountain resort will be even greater than ever.

Since the opening of the Day Nursery 1,254 children have been cared for there, showing the great need for such an institution. The purchase of the property by the City Union taxes the funds of the organization heavily, and by reason of this *it will need more help from the peo*ple of the city and borough in carrying on the work at the camp on the mountain. Among things needed at the camp are hammocks and swings.

The camp will be formally opened on Tuesday afternoon, July 17, between the hours of 3 and 6 o'clock. At that time a stage will be operated between the end of the Somerset street trolley and the camp, for those wishing to visit the camp. A nominal fare will be charged for the round trip in the stage. This mountain work has grown to a large extent since its inauguration a few years ago and is now regarded as one of the most important charities in town.

HER BANK A DISH.

Better Than a Bed, Miss Lamb Thought, but It Made Mischief.

There was excitement Thursday night in the neighborhood of Fifth and William streets, Harrison, when it became noised around that Mrs. Ann Lamb, of Fifth street, had been robbed of $500.

It appears that Mrs. Lamb gave the money Thursday morning to her daughter Margaret to hide under the mattress. At evening before going to bed the mother thought she would have a look at the greenbacks and, going to the bed, could not find the money.

Both women ran to a neighbor's house and reported their loss, and after receiving all the consolation that the neighbors could give them, went home, but not to sleep. Yesterday morning Miss Lamb went to get her pocketbook, which she had hidden under the mattress, entire, and there found with it her mother's $500, which she then recalled she herself had put there, thinking the dish a better bank than the bed. Now all is smiling again in the Lambs' home.

INVITATION TO ALL FARMERS. They Will Be Asked to Meet State Agricultural Board Aug. 17.

Trenton, July 9.—Every farmer in New Jersey will be invited to meet with the State Board of Agriculture at a basket picnic appropriate of the board to be held on the farm connected with the State Agricultural College at New Brunswick, August 17. The purpose of the gathering will be to get the farmers of the State thoroughly acquainted with the extension of the work of the State College under the appropriation made by the Legislature last winter.

Ground has been broken for the new buildings to be erected at the college and under the appropriation short practical courses in agriculture are to be established for the sons of the farmers who are unable to attend the college for the full term.

For the meeting August 17 a formal programme will be prepared designed to give a complete exposition of what is being done experimentally at the college, by Dr. E. B. Voorhees and his assistants. Dr. Voorhees is president of the State board and professor of agriculture at the college.

MORE CHILDREN ARRIVE

Now 225 At the Home—Donations Needed.

Miss Sara Curry, in charge of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, spent Monday in New York city among the poor people of the east side tenement districts in the vicinity of the Little Missionary's Day Nursery. She returned to this city in the afternoon, bringing with her a dozen small children for a vacation at the camp. This makes a total of 225 children at the camp. Friday fourteen little crippled children will be brought out.

Miss Curry reports much sickness among the poor in New York; she spent the day visiting the sick in the vicinity of the nursery. At the camp things are going smoothly despite the large number of children there.

There is great need of two or three baby carriages or go-carts at the camp, for many of the younger children. If there are any who care to donate vegetables, fruit or food of any kind, a telephone message to the camp will bring the camp wagon for the donation.

LONGS FOR THE AGE OF THE MINCE PIE

PROFESSOR TYLER, OF AMHERST, DECRIES PHYSICAL DEGENERACY.

America's climate, regarded by scientists as the prime factor in the country's marvellous growth from Colonial days, may be the cause of its degeneracy, according to Professor John Mason Tyler, of Amherst College, a brother of Col. Mason W. Tyler, of this city.

"Every decade," he explained to students at the University of Chicago yesterday, opening a series of lec*tures, "our climate has been drawing* the strings on our nervous system tighter and tighter, until now they are ready to snap."

Physical degeneration was noticeable now in the children of the business and professional men, he asserted.

"Americans a hundred years ago," he said, "lived on pork and doughnuts to a great extent. Before going to bed they were not satisfied unless they ate a large piece of mince pie. We say of today: 'What a barbarous bill of fare!'—we who can't stand anything stronger than tea and crackers."

A Free Scholarship.

Any young man or woman who is a bona fide patron of this paper may secure free instruction in Music or Elocution. The Ithaca Conservatory of Music, with the desire to stimulate the study of these arts, offer two scholarships to applicants from the State of New Jersey, valued at $100 each, and good for the term of twenty weeks beginning with the opening of the school year, September 13, 1906, in any of the following departments: Voice, Violin, Piano, Organ and Elocution. These scholarships are awarded upon competition which is open to anyone desiring a musical or literary education. Anyone wishing to enter the competition or desiring information should write to Mr. George C. Williams, General Manager of the Ithica Conservatory of Music, Ithica, N. Y., before September 1, 1906.

TO AVOID SEASICKNESS.

Scientifically, the cause of seasickness is the disturbance of the pneu*mogastric nerve actuating the diges*tive tract caused by the change from the firm and stable footing furnished by solid land to the yielding and insecure surface of a ship's deck. Many persons experience the same symptoms while travelling in a rapidly moving railway train, says the Boston Traveler.

The effort to maintain the body's equilibrium in these changed conditions brings on nausea.

In the first place, common sense should direct one, at the outset of a voyage, to seek that part of the ship that is least affected by the motion of the sea. This is amidships, where a gentle rising and falling motion is nearly always apparent, even in the calmest weather, but where pitching and rolling motions are the least noticeable.

But in taking such a position, on deck or in a stateroom, one should be careful to keep away from greasy and disagreeable odors from the en*gine room. When on deck, the com*panionway is especially to be avoided.

While some passengers successfully ward off dreaded attack by lying full length of by reclining with eyes closed on a deck chair, others find it better to fix their gaze steadily on the horizon or a distant ship, to walk about, hum a tune, talk, breathe deeply, timing the inhaling and exhaling of the breath, with the rise and fall of the ship. It is, however, a bad thing to fix the eyes on the water rushing past the side of the vessel, the sense of motions thus aroused often upsetting persons who would otherwise have undertaken the voyage in comfort.

A remedy which has stood nearly half a century's trial is the spinal ice-bag invented by a Dr. Chapman. After carefully studying the subject e came to the conclusion that the vomiting was caused by an excess of blood in the nervous centres of the back, "especially in those segments of the spinal cord related to the stomach and the muscles concerned in vomiting."

To lower the temperature, and so lessen the amount of blood locally, he designed a long, narrow bag with three pockets, so that the ice should not rest on the bottom of the. The mouth is closed tightly by a clamp to prevent the escape of water, and the spinal ice-bag is attached to the back by means of tapes.

A more practicable remedy, and probably a more obnoxious one, is the wearing of a tight abdominal belt. Medical men are agreed as to the necessity of compressing the abdominal regions, at least in the early stage of the voyage, until the stomach has become accustomed to the pitching of the vessel. An ordinary handkerchief will do equally well, provided it is tied very tightly.

Restful Reform.

IN UNION COUNTY 2 SALOONS DEFY LAW

ONE OF ELIZABETH'S STATUTE BREAKERS IS THOMAS FITZGIBBONS.

Sunday was the driest Sabbath Elizabeth has ever known, so far as the liquor business is concerned. Out of 200 saloons in Elizabeth only two, so far as can be learned, were open, and these are located at Elizabethport. Only one arrest for drunkenness was made, and that was Mary Roberts, an old offender. She was charged with disorderly conduct. Not an intoxicated man was seen on the streets.

One of the places that kept open is owned by Thomas Fitzgibbons, who is treasurer of the Elizabeth Liquor Dealers' Association. *He did an im*mense business and sold more than fifty half barrels of beer alone, not to speak of large quantities of stronger stuff.

There was a regular stream of thirsty mortals pouring into his place all day long, and at 10 o'clock Sunday night he ran out of beer and then closed.

No attempt was made by the police to interfere with him, but the Law and Order League, it is said, will make a formal complaint against him in the police court and to Prosecutor English. The action of Fitzgibbons in keeping open and defying the law was a great surprise to the other liquor dealers, who strongly condemn the stand he took.

Police Chief Tenney denies that any one sold liquor Sunday excepting Fitzgibbons. No steps will be taken by the police to prosecute him this time.

In the Polish and Italian quarters of the city, where it was thought attempts would be made to sell, there was nothing doing.

A large wagon belonging to Breidt's Brewery and driven by John Stark, was struck by a trolley car at 8:40 o'clock Saturday night. The wagon, which was loaded with bot*tled beer*, was wrecked and the driver hurled to the street and injured. He was removed to the Alexian Hospital. The beer was scattered over the street and in less than ten minutes' time all that was to be seen, it being all carried away by small boys and men, who had a big free feast of liquid refreshments. Some men took as many as half a dozen bottles away with them. No effort was made to make arrests.

There was a big exodus from here to Staten Island Sunday, the rush beginning early and continuing late. The little Arthur Kill ferryboat that plies between Staten Island and Elizabethport was packed on nearly every trip.

Many Newarkers and Elizabethans got stranded Sunday night at Port Richmond owing to the giving out of the power that runs the trolley lines on the island. Quite a number who stayed until late at South Beach found their dismay on reaching Port Richmond and crossing to Bayonne that the last train on the Jersey Central had gone and they were compelled to wait at the Bergen Point station until the paper train came yesterday morning.

County Detective John Keron drove all through Union county Sunday to see how the law was being observed. He reports that he found the hotels, taverns and roadhouses all closed, and, so far as his observation went, there was no violation of the State law.

PITH AND POINT.

Some people can't listen unless they have their mouths open.

It is sometimes easier to figure the other man's profits than your own.

Unfortunately a man with an easy going disposition is apt to be "no account."

The reason a good many of us do not show bad taste in dressing or in ridiculous things is because we have not the money to spend.

One of the things the average girl cannot explain is why when she announces her engagement the world does not stop revolving around.

Children cannot lay claims to having any sense until they admit that their parents know best, and they are no longer children when they admit it.—Atchison Globe.

WHEN PACKING A TRUNK.

Don't pack clothes in a trunk which has not been used for some time without airing the latter; it may have been *lying in a damp cor*ner.

Don't begin to pack before you have collected together all the things required; else you may, at the last moment, be obliged to squeeze some heavy article in the top of the trunk, and thus crush lighter articles.

Don't forget that a dress bodice or blouse must have the sleeves stuffed with soft paper, and any crushable trimmings, such as lace or chiffon should be stuffed out with rolled-up paper; otherwise all the freshness will be gone when brought to light again.

A Dinner Party.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hayward, of Hunter avenue, gave a dinner to a few friends on Sunday. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Quass and family, of Newark; the Misses Ford, of Perth Amboy, and Mrs. Johnson, Miss Miner, Mr. Quass

CAME BACK RICH TO WED

L. D. Gordon, a Miner, Betrothed Poor, Made His Fortune in Nevada.

MARRIES MISS WINDSOR

Ceremony at Holy Cross Church Early This Afternoon—Dean Tuesday Afternoon—Dean Live in the West.

As the culmination of a typical love affair of two years' standing, Louis D. Gordon, a westerner, and Miss M. Windsor, of this city, were married Tuesday afternoon at Holy Cross church. The ceremony took place at 1:15 and in the absence of the rector, Rev. George A. Warner, Dean Eaton, Rev. Reginald Kemp, rector-emeritus of Grace church, officiated. The church was tastefully decorated with cut flowers and potted plants and the service was a simple one; a few of the friends and relatives of the bride and groom being the only ones present.

The bride was gowned in white habitul silk, simply made, and trimmed with rose point lace. She was attended by Miss May Serrell as bridesmaid. Mr. Gordon was unattended. A simple bridal luncheon and a quiet informal reception followed the ceremony at the home of Charles H. Smith, of Grove street. The couple left in the afternoon to spend their moneymoon in Maine. Among the presents were many remembrances from local friends of Miss Windsor and a handsome set of engraved silverware.

Gordon has recently realized a fortune from a gold mining claim near Salt Lake City. Three months ago this claim seemed hardly worth working, but the few tents on the spot have now given place to the site of Gordontown, numbering 600 inhabitants, and gold has been discovered in such quantity that the Gordon claim is now capitalized at $1,000,000.

Gordon met Miss Windsor at Pleasant Point during the summer of 1904. He had come on from the West for the summer and was at that time employed as cashier in a bank at Austin, Nevada. He was poor, but full in love and became engaged to Miss Windsor during that summer. He then returned to the West where he has been working for two years.

From the Nevada bank, he was made manager of a mine on Round Mountain owned by a Chicago concern. This claim was worthless and Gordon lost money. Prospecting for himself in the south side of the mountain he discovered a valuable surface deposit of "pay dirt," which has proven to be his fortune. His discovery was not secured by Gordon without a long conflict of rival claims, but the title to his fortune is now clear in his name.

Miss Windsor has been a resident of the borough for some time past, living at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Smith, on Grove street.

The couple left Tuesday to spend a two weeks' honeymoon at a Maine resort, and will then take up their residence at Salt Lake City, near Gordon's claim.

YOUNG MAN REPRESENTS HIMSELF AS A DETECTIVE

CHIEF KIELY CAUSES HIS ARREST AND JUSTICE MOSHER HOLDS HIM.

Louis Miller, twenty years old, who resides on Lake street, was arraigned before Justice Mosher, Monday afternoon, charged by Mrs. A. A. Chandor, of East Ninth street, with vio*lating Section 36 of the Crimes act* in representing himself as a member of the local police force. He waived examination and was held in $100 bail to await the action of the grand jury. He spent the night in a cell and today the amount was furnished by his mother.

In some way Miller learned that Mrs. Chandor and her family were making preparations to go away on their annual summer vacation and he called at the home of Mrs. Mrs. *Chandor that he was a detective at*tached to Chief Kiely's staff and that for a nominal amount he would watch her premises while they were absent. He is youthful looking and she thought it rather strange that so young a man should be employed as a detective and she refused his offer. He called around several more times and seemed so persistent that she finally informed Chief Kiely.

At the chief's request, Mrs. Chandor preferred the complaint and Mil*ler was arrested. The case is one* of the first of its kind that the local police have had in a long while and the alleged "detective" will receive their full attention as a warning to others.

The Snob's Progress.

"This is Mrs. De Style's at home day, too," remarked Mrs. Snobberly, who was calling upon Mrs. Planeman.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Planeman, "I suppose you will call there, also."

"O! my, no. I'm not sufficiently well dressed for that."

THE FIRE CHIEFS JUNKET

Members of State Association See the City and Borough By Auto.

TRIP GREATLY ENJOYED

In Closing Business Session Mandatory Measure for Pay of Department Heads Is Discussed.

Completing all their business and discussions at 4 o'clock, yesterday afternoon, the members of the New Jersey State Fire Chiefs' Association who came to this city for the semi-annual meeting, ended their visit in a pleasure jaunt that was hugely enjoyed by everyone. In eight big automobiles that had been kindly placed at Chief Doane's disposal by local owners, they were taken from one end of Plainfield to the other and in addition a part of the borough and Scotch Plains. They inspected the North Plainfield fire house, the Netherwood pumping station and several other points of interest and left for home sounding the praises of Plainfield and the head of its fire department.

Following the adjournment at noon yesterday, the chiefs repaired to the Hotel Waldorf, where dinner was served and a short social session enjoyed. As honorary guests they had Mayor James F. Sackle, Councilman Frank Randolph, Chief of Police Kiely and Overseer Alex. D. Ayers. Addresses were made by each and also by F. A. Shepperd, of Fire and Water Engineering; H. H. Esterbrook, of the Firemen's Herald, and William Cross, of the Gamewell Fire Alarm Company. Chief Doane, Chief Stagg, of Paterson, and several others responded.

Returning to Exempt Firemen's Hall, several matters were thoroughly discussed, among them the question of advocating a mandatory law regarding the pay of chiefs and the best methods of fighting fires in cities where apparatus is limited. In the former it was stated that Governor Stokes is opposed to mandatory measures because they take authority away from local officials but the point was raised that this is what was done when the Boards for the Equalization of Taxes were appointed. The Boards of Freeholders have nothing to say as to what salaries they shall receive but are compelled to pay them. In the end it was the concensus of opinion that a mandatory measure should be urged.

The local auto owners who kindly contributed machines for the junket are Frank C. Martin Company, Morris Brothers, Allen B. Laing, William McCullough and Charles Woolston.

CLAIMS EVICTION ILLEGAL.

Mrs. Jessie Sullivan Sues Kussell Sachar for $300 Damages.

Through her lawyer, F. J. Blatz, Mrs. Jessie Sullivan has brought the most interesting suit started so far in the District Court. She is suing Kussel Sachar for $300 damages, for alleged illegal eviction.

According to the plaintiff's claims she rented the upstairs rooms at 612 West Third street from Samuel Kline, who occupied the lower floor. Sachar got a verdict for possession of the premises in an action against Kline. A day or two later a constable came to the house and put Mrs. Sullivan's goods on the street. It is claimed that she was never served with papers in any act,ion and it is alleged further that Kline's goods were not disturbed, pointing to a settlement by the only action that had been instituted.

The case is set down for next Tuesday. Mrs. Sullivan is a widow.

Grossmann School Exercises.

The term exercises of the Grossmann School at Watchung Crest, will be held Saturday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock. This programme will be presented: Ethical songs and responsive exercise, address by the director, games of the five senses—kindergarten group,—distribution of term reports, a melodramatic compilation, "The Joyous Seasons," in twelve scenes, with songs, recitations and callisthenic exercises.

In Honor Birthday Anniversary.

In honor of the twelfth anniversary of her birthday, Miss Helen Woolley, of the New Madison, was given a party yesterday by her mother. Luncheon was served at noon. Miss Woolley received a number of gifts. Those present were the Misses Madeline Strader, Helen Roberts, Edith Richards and Ethel Runyon.

St. Gabriel's Closing Exercises.

The closing exercises of St. Gabriel's Academy will be held at the Park Club, Wednesday afternoon, June 20, at 2 o'clock. Rt. Rev. Mgr. John A. O'Grady, of New Brunswick, will preside.

MISS MINNIE WYMAN IS NOW MRS. KRINEY

NUPTIAL CEREMONY WITNESSED BY 200 RELATIVES AND FRIENDS.

Miss Minnie Wyman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Wyman, of East Front street, and William Richardson Kriney, of West Front street, were married at 7:30 o'clock last night at the home of the bride's parents by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which the bride and groom are both active members. There were about 200 relatives and friends present from Elizabeth, Westfield, Dunellen, Bound Brook, Somerville, Flemington, Neshanic, High Bridge, Englewood, Middle Valley and this city.

The bride was attended by Miss Mary Kriney, sister of the groom, as maid-of-honor; Miss Lydia A. Wyman, sister of the bride, and Miss Mamie Davenport, of this city, as bridesmaids. Frank Marcley, formerly of this city, but now of Summit, was best man, and the ushers were Henry Wyman, brother of the bride, and Harry E. Kenyon, of Dunellen.

The bride was gowned in white silk over white taffeta and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The maid-of-honor's gown was of white swiss and she carried a bouquet of sweet peas. The bridesmaids were gowned in brussels net over white silk and carried bouquets of pink carnations.

While Miss Estelle Boss was playing the wedding march, the bridal party descended the main staircase and entered the parlor. The ushers led the way, followed by the groom and best man, the bridesmaids, maid-of-honor and the bride escorted by her father, who gave her in marriage. The ceremony was performed in front of a solid bank of palms, greens and ferns, arranged in one corner of the parlor. An effective decorative scheme was strings of daisies draped from the chandeliers to the sides of the room.

Congratulations followed the ceremony and then supper was served. The house is beautifully decorated with greens, ferns and flowers, every room being attractively arranged. The main staircase was completely covered with flowers, allowing just enough room for the bridal party to descend, and the scheme was much admired.

The bride received a very large number of gifts, consisting of cut-glass, silverware, linen and furniture. Mr. Kriney is a member of the choir of Trinity Reformed church, of which the bride has been a member for a long time. The gift was a Morris rocking chair.

Mr. and Mrs. Kriney left Plainfield on the 9:30 o'clock train, with the good wishes of everyone, to enjoy a honeymoon. They were showered with rice, while a large painted sign of muslin bore the announcement, "Just married." This was attached to the coach which carried the couple to the railroad station. Upon their return they will reside on East Sixth street, where the groom has a new house completely furnished and awaiting them.

THREE-STORY ADDITION TO GIRLS' SEMINARY

PLANS PROVIDE FOR MAIN ENTRANCE ON ARLINGTON AVENUE.

Owing to the growth in attendance at the Plainfield Seminary, it has been decided to build an addition to the building on West Seventh street, as told in The Daily Press yesterday, and work will be started as soon as that it can be completed for the fall term. The new addition will be three stories high and will be constructed at the back of the present building. This arrangement will provide for seven extra rooms, one for the primary department, a large room to be used as a gymnasium, new dressing rooms, additional recitating rooms, an office and a new stairway.

The plans have been prepared by Frank Stimson, a nephew of Miss E. E. Kenyon, who is in the office of MacKim, Mead & White, New York. Mr. Holske, of New York, is the supervising architect.

By the new arrangements the entrance to the seminary will be from Arlington avenue, instead of, West Seventh street, as at present. There are now ten rooms used for school purposes at the seminary and with the new rooms there will be a total of seventeen, which allow for even better work than this excellent school has been doing. John Abbott has the contract for the work.

Justice Snape's Court.

Judgment for $56 was rendered against Charles Drake, in favor of Lewis Brock, in a contract action before Justice Snape yesterday. F. J. Blatz appeared for the plaintiff.

SENIORS' FLAG HAULED DOWN BY FRESHMEN

IN CONSEQUENCE PITCHED BATTLE ENSUES AMONG STUDENTS.

Within a few minutes after it had been defiantly flung to the breeze from the staff on the Somerset school, this morning, the emblem of the Senior class was ignominiously hauled down and confiscated by five Freshmen. According to time-honored custom an action of this kind cannot be tolerated by the graduating students and there was a concerted rush for the captors, Harry Smith, Clarence Steiner, Lester Hamilton, George Bailey and Arthur Vandedale. Though outnumbered two to one, they put up a valiant fight and in the end succeeded in getting away with the coveted flag. It was taken to the Park Club, where the class exercises are to be held tonight, and again unfurled but so badly marked by the Freshmen that it could not be told from the ribbons of a Mongolian junk.

In order to get the emblem, two of the captors had to remain in the attic of the school all night and emerged from their hiding places immediately after the Seniors had trooped down stairs and locked the door leading to the cupola. It is the first time in several years that the older students have failed to keep their flag on the school staff and as a result joy is rampant among the Freshmen today.

COLBY MASS MEETING HAS BEEN ARRANGED

WILL BE HELD NEXT TUESDAY, WITH SENATOR COLBY CHIEF ORATOR.

The Colby mass meeting will be held at the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night. Arrangements for the event have been made by County Chairman Runyon.

Senator Colby will come down from the Thousand Islands especially to speak at that meeting. It is probable that Mayor Mark Fagan will also speak, and John S. Gibson, of Newark, who has been bucking the Essex county ring for more than a score of years, may also be here.

There will be music at the meeting. The doors will open at 7 o'clock and the meeting will begin promptly at 8.

Complete and final plans for the meeting will be made by the county committee of the Colby organization at a meeting to be held in Newark tomorrow afternoon and evening. The chairman of the meeting has not yet been chosen.

UNKNOWN MAN KILLED.

Thrown On His Head In Attempting to Board a Coal Train.

The body of an unknown man evidently a Swede or a Dane was brought to this city this morning from Cranford, where he was killed by a New Jersey Central train. It was said that he attempted to jump on a coal car and was thrown on his head. His skull was crushed in, causing probable instant death.

The victim was about thirty years old, six foot tall, smooth faced and sandy haired. His clothing was of good material and consisted of a brown coat, black trousers, heavy laced shoes, white underwear and a new outing cap. In the pockets were a silver watch, a pocket-knife, a pocketbook containing forty cents and a card case with a list of Westfield carpentering firms.

The body is being held at Cole's undertaking rooms and the local and county police are trying to learn the man's identity.

Y. M. C. A. Educational Plans.

G. A. Gregg, of New York, one of the international secretaries for education of the Y. M. C. A., was at the Y. M. C. A. offices yesterday, conferring with the officers over the educational work of the association next fall. Plans for enlargement of the scope and equipment of the department are being considered. Mr. Cregg will meet the Education Committee in conference tohorrow night at the association building.

Bonny—Farley.

Invitations have been sent out by Dr. and Mrs. Porter Farley, of Rochester, New York, for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Laura Farley, to Frederic Craig Bonny on Saturday evening, June 30, at the home of the bride, Rochester, N. J. Mr. Bonny is a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Bonny, of Mercer avenue, and has many friends here. He is in business in Rochester.

—Neuman Brothers are now receiving large quantities of Jersey strawberries and extra fine pineapples, just the thing for preserving and canning. Prices low on both.

WEALTH COSTS HEALTH

Dr. Norman H. Probasco Points Out the Danger In Money Hunt.

BEFORE A CHURCH CLUB

New Men's Association of Hope Chapel Has Unusually Interesting Programme at First Public Meeting.

Instruction and entertainment marked the first public social meeting of the newly-organized Men's Club of Hope chapel last night. There were talks on health by physicians, as well as much and refreshments, on the programme.

The affair was a great success. It was largely attended, and the audience manifested great interest and enjoyment through the evening. Two talks on health were the features of the programme. Dr. F. B. Cregar spoke on tuberculosis and Dr. Norman H. Probasco read a paper on "Hints to Health."

Dr. Cregar told his audience of the nature of consumption and how it spread. He touched on the care of consumptive patients, and dwelt on the preventative methods. He emphasized the necessity of disposing of the sputum in a sanitary manner, and told how it could be done. His talk was part of the general campaign of education on tuberculosis that is being carried on by doctors all over the State, and restated the different warnings that have been voiced at the several other meetings of the kind in this city during the past few months.

Dr. Probasco's paper was very much in the nature of a general guide to normal health from infancy-hood to old age.

He told the mothers of the care of the child, explaining what the baby's cries meant, and he told the young and the old of both sexes what not to do if they desired a healthful and unracked middle age.

He warned them against hurrying at meals, against worrying over business affairs, and warned them, with especial emphasis, against a frenzied, incessant chase after dollars. A restless, hectic pursuit of money might lead to wealth, he said, but the task would undo those who had a predisposition to pulmonary troubles, and those who had a tendency to stomach ailments would have constant and poignant reminders of the grievous mistake they had made. Their nervous system might be wrecked, leading to melancholia, and then to death.

"Never shorten sleep," said the Doctor. "Sleep is Nature's best tonic, and man can make no substitute to compare with it.

"Don't forget that the normal, healthy man is at his prime at 40. Such a man, however, never can have been a great wine-bibber, a glutton, or a sensualist. Learn to study yourself and the needs of your frame, so that you may live happy and healthily."

Piano solos were played by Miss Bertha Jones. Mrs. I. R. Howard sang two songs.

Refreshments were served after the platform programme was ended. Members of the Christian Endeavor Society passed them. David Bowden, chairman of the entertainment committee, presided over the meeting.

REV. ANDREW ARMSTRONG.

Former Local Resident Died at His Home In Avon-by-the-Sea.

Following a lingering illness, Rev. Andrew Armstrong, a former resident of this city and at one time pastor of the South Plainfield Baptist church, died last night at his home in Avon-by-the-Sea. He was ninety-two years old and for more than half a century had been engaged in ministerial work in New Jersey. He was at South Plainfield about sixteen years ago.

He was an uncle to T. S. Armstrong, the local druggist, who left his home last night just a short time before he died. He leaves a sister who lives at Bridgeton and a brother in Oakland, Cal. The funeral and interment will be at Pemberton.

Took Father's Rig.

Thomas Waldron, colored, eleven years old, was arraigned before City Judge Runyon, this morning, on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by his father, Ernest Waldron. The boy hitched up his father's horse yesterday morning, and, with two companions, drove to Somerville, where he spent the day. He was held for the juvenile court.

Salvationist to Speak.

Miss Emily C. March, formerly staff captain of the Salvation Army, will speak at the Y. M. C. A. meeting Sunday afternoon. She is well-known here as an eloquent speaker. The Watchung quartette will sing, and E. D. Young will play cornet solos.

BOARD'S LAST SESSION IN OLD COURT HOUSE

SOMERST FREEHOLDERS DISPOSE OF COUNTY BUILDINGS FOR $308.

There was business aplenty at the regular meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders in the Court House at Somerville yesterday. It is probably the last time the board will meet in regular session in the old Court House at Somerville.

A petition was presented for the improvement under the State Aid Road Act for the improvement of the road from Liberty Corner, through Martinsville and Chimney Rock, intersecting Union avenue between Somerville and Bound Brook. Filed.

The sale of the old county buildings for $308 was approved, and it was ordered that the old Court House be advertised at public auction to take place June 21 at 2 p. m.

The matter of the claim made by William Elitzer for damages to his horse at a bridge in Bernards township was adversely reported.

A resolution was passed, providing for the erection of the Allene Ford bridge in Hillsboro, at a cost of $12,000, in the Court House yard.

The board approved the improvement of the road from Bound Brook to Springdale and the road from South Somerville to Millstone under the State Aid Act and authorized that they be surveyed by County Engineer Doughty as soon as the State Road Commissioner consents.

The County Collector was authorized to borrow $20,000 in anticipation of taxes.

The board will meet tomorrow in Bedminister township to inspect bridges.

THINK THEY'VE FOUND MISSING YOUNG WOMAN

REPORT FROM LANCASTER, PA., THAT MISS KUENLEN IS FOUND.

Lancaster Pa., June 13.—A woman answering very closely the description of Miss Irene Kuenlen, daughter of Mrs. Marie Kuenlen, who disappeared suddenly from her home in Plainfield about two months ago, has been located here at the home of Mrs. Mary Melbert. The woman's mind appears to be a blank and she is inclined to seek retirement.

Word has been sent to Mrs. Kuenlen at Plainfield and she is expected to try and identify the woman. The stranger has been seen about Lancaster for two or three days and finally stopped at the home of Mrs. Melbert, who fortunately had heard of the disappearance and recognized a resemblance to the description sent out.

Making Ready for the Minstrels.

The advance representative for George Primrose was in the city yesterday, making arrangements for the appearance of his big minstrel troupe at the New Plainfield theatre on Friday night, June 29. The members of the organization, numbering sixty in all, will come here on June 20 and put in a week re-organizing and rehearsing. On Thursday night, June 28, a "fireworks" parade will be given by the troupe. On account of the box office being closed the seats will be sold at Schreiner's and Rowley's drug stores.

Juniors Will Celebrate Anniversary.

The fifteenth anniversary of Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., will be celebrated Friday night, in Junior Hall. It is expected that the State officers will be present. The committee in charge consists of A. D. Thorn, chairman; H. Hewitt and P. H. Latourette.

Sunday-School Workers' Picnic.

Mrs. Brundage, of Cranford, a member of the Primary and Junior Sunday-school Teachers' Union, has invited the union to hold its annual picnic at her home on Thursday, June 28, and the invitation has been accepted.

Mrs. Ernestine Runyon Married.

Mrs. Ernestine Runyon, of Dunellen, was quietly married to Charles Berkheiser in Dunellen Saturday night. Mr. and Mrs. Berkheiser are living at the bride's home.

Grocers' Excursion.

The Plainfield Grocers' Association has completed arrangements for its annual excursion to Coney Island on Labor Day, Monday, September 3.

Alfred H. Compton, of Compton avenue, left today for Nebraska, on a pleasure trip. He will be accompanied a portion of the way by Elmer Hale, of South McAllister, Indian Territory, who has been living here some time and is on his way home.

MR. HONEYMAN NOT UNALTERABLY AGAINST UNION

Anti-Annexation Leader Never Opposed to Consolidation Under All Conditions.

OPEN TO CONVICTION

In Interview, He Says Merger of Municipalities Without County Line Change Is Practicable.

A reporter of The Daily Press called at the office of A. V. D. Honeyman on North avenue this morning, to ask him what he thought of the new movement for consolidation of city and borough. As Mr. Honeyman goes abroad again next week for two months The Daily Press was desirous of securing some statement from him before he leaves. Mr. Honeyman said:

"I am not prepared at present to give my views on the subject of consolidation pure and simple. If a proposition comes up in a business shape, as divorced from any attempt to steal territory from Somerset county, I shall certainly give it thoughtful consideration. Of course I have read, and with more amusement than interest, the statements made through the daily newspapers by ex-Senator Reed and the borough mayor concerning the project. Amusement, because when the movement was up four years ago for annexation it professed to be one wholly based on the desire for the consolidation of the two municipalities, and nearly the whole burden of remarks made in letters or speeches was the importance of a Greater Plainfield. Some of us then knew, what everybody knows now, that the borough mayor and the then Senator desired annexation above everything else, and never expected to lend a helping hand toward consolidation. The latter would wipe out the local offices held by these gentlemen, and whoever knew of a political officeholder voluntarily relinquishing his office? In other words, everything possible was to be done to get North Plainfield out of Somerset county in order that these two astute politicians might get their hands upon new loaves and fishes, and secure a political standing in a larger and richer county, especially as their debt in Somerset was well-known to be at an end. Those who really had a Greater Plainfield in mind were simply hoodwinked. Sincere and honest as they were, especially Mr. Saunders, whom everybody knew had at heart a Greater Plainfield, they linked their cause with the Philistines, and very likely lost it upon that account. Nobody will be surprised, therefore, that the mayor and borough counsel do not expect, now or hereafter, to surrender their office without a desperate struggle to retain them, especially as the mayor has just received a thousand dollar appointment in Somerset county, given him under political terms which the public very generally understands.

"I do not expect to change my mind as to the impropriety, not to say want of wisdom, in transferring a rich portion of territory from Somerset County to Union, but I do not understand that the new movement for consolidation has this in view. If I am rightly informed, the idea is to open up the subject of consolidation on a purely business basis, expecting that county lines will remain as they are. On this subject I am open to reason and to any further light, if such can be given. It may or may not be a wise thing under all the circumstances for the borough and city to vote to consolidate. Those who are looking toward the future growth and welfare of the borough, instead of the advancement of political schemes, ought to treat the subject in a fair and open-handed manner, and I have no doubt they will. Like Dr. Carroll and others, I never was averse to consolidation at all times and under all circumstances. It is a case where the views of the majority should prevail, and there ought to be no party or personal feeling involved in it. That consolidation without disturbance of county lines is perfectly practicable, from both a legal and business point of view, just as in the case of Greater New York, and the still greater city of London, there is no question. When the plan is fully matured, whether it be this year or at some future time, everybody will make up their minds upon it, and act accordingly. For myself, I shall treat the matter without prejudice as to past discussions, or as to any past or present political or personal feelings engendered in the borough."

CITY FATHERS AGREE ON SCHOOL ESTIMATE

TO PUT $73,000 IN TAX BUDGET FOR RUNNING EXPENSES.

Provision was made at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, to incorporate in the tax budget the $73,000 to be levied and collected for school purposes for the coming year, as reported by the Board of School Estimate. Mr. Daniel, chairman of the finance committee, presented the report of the board stating that it had determined on the sum of $73,000, exclusive of that apportioned by the county superintendent of schools, and then offered an ordinance, which was adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised.

The ordinance provides that the $73,000 shall be collected the same as other tax money and that upon the final adoption of the ordinance it shall be merged into the regular tax ordinance.

For the purpose of further relieving Richmond street in time of heavy rains, Mr. Glosk had read for the information of the members a proposed ordinance for building an addition to the storm sewer in that section of the city. Accompanying the ordinance was a map showing where it is proposed to extend the sewer. It provides for outlets at East Fourth street, at the New Jersey Central railroad bridge and North avenue, and will be an extension to that sewer recently completed. It is further provided that a public hearing will be held on Monday night, July 2, for the benefit of those wishing to speak for or against the improvements. The expense for this sewer is to be paid out of money received from the general tax, as in the case of the other storm sewer built. It is the purpose of the street and sewer committee to add to this storm sewer from time to time until the east end of the city is properly provided with storm drains to prevent the flooding of property.

Plans are also underway for a similar storm sewer in Plainfield avenue. This matter came up last year, but was finally laid over for the 1906 Common Council. It will probably come up in the course of time.

ROBERT KIRKLAND GETS ELECTION BOARD PLUM

COUNTY COMMITTEE NAMES HIM IN JUDGE SWIFT'S PLACE.

Robert Kirkland, of Elizabeth, was recommended for appointment to Judge Swift's place on the County Board of Elections by the Republican County Committee last night.

Action on the vacancy was taken after Chairman Frank H. Smith formally reported that Judge Swift had resigned. He was authorized to send Mr. Kirkland's name to the chairman of the State Committee, who will submit it to the Governor. The appointment will be for the unexpired term.

The chairman was authorized by resolution to appoint a committee to prepare a digest of the primary law for the voters, to indicate the manner of naming delegates and elective officers at the primaries. Judge Newcorn, of this city, was made chairman of the committee, and C. N. Codding and Everard K. Tucker were appointed with him.

The Outing Committee, of which Judge Newcorn is chairman, reported progress in the arrangements for the excursion. It will take place August 11.

All the Plainfield wards but the First were represented at the meeting. Chairman Smith, Councilman Buxton and Judge Newcorn were there from the Fourth; Tax Collector Murray and Charles Foster from the Third, and William Townsend from the Second.

W. C. T. U. Entertainment.

An entertainment consisting of readings by Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Parse, Mrs. William Culbertson, Miss May Howlett, Mrs. Andrew Cox; recitations by Mrs. William Cubberley; vocal selections by Mrs. John Manley and Mrs. Honeyman and a monologue was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms last night. A collection was received at the close of the entertainment for the benefit of the union.

Seat Sale for School Exercises.

Seats are now on sale for the St. Mary Parochial school exercises to be held in the New Plainfield theatre Wednesday night, June 27. They may be had at either B. J. Schreiner's or Frank Rowley's pharmacy.

COMMON INSURANCE TERMS

Technical Expressions Used by Agents Translated Into Plain English.

A level premium is a premium which is the same at every payment; that is, which becomes no greater as the policy holder grows older, says World's Work.

The reserve is the excess amount charged in the early years of level premium policies to offset the failure to increase the premium during the later years. This reserve is invested by the company, and the proceeds from it makes up the deficiencies in the later premium payments.

The annual surplus is the excess amount paid by the policy holders above the sum paid out in death claims, and in expenses of management plus the interest earned by the reserve above the percentage of the requirements.

Dividends are the portion of the surplus divided among the policy holders.

Deferred dividends are dividends that are not distributed among the policy holders annually, but are held by the company and paid to the policy holder at longer periods, usually 20 years.

A surrender is the act of a policy holder in giving up his policy for a consideration from the company.

The surrender value, or cash surrender value, of a policy is the amount the company agrees to pay if the policy holder surrenders his policy. This is less than the sum that he has paid in premiums.

A participating policy is one entitling the policy holder to share in any dividends that the company man pay.

A nonparticipating policy is one that gives the holder no right to dividends.

An annuity is money paid back annually to a policy holder at stated intervals after a certain date, in consideration of the money that he has paid into the company.

Installment policies, return premiums, gold bonds, and other similar arrangements are varieties of annuities in combination with life insurance.

A tontine policy is one on which the holder receives nothing if he fails to keep up his premium till he dies.

Term insurance is insurance for a specified number of years. The amount for which the policy holder is insured is paid only in case he dies before the expiration of the agreed term.

Renewable term insurance is term insurance with the additional privilege of renewal at the policy holder's end of the first term or succeeding terms of years without further medical examination.

HEART AFFECTS WATCH.

Timepiece Is Uncertain If That Organ Is Irregular, Says a Watchmaker.

Nobody would ever think that something the matter with him would cause something to be the matter with his watch, but a watch maker is the cause of it, says a writer in an East End family, says the Pittsburg Gazette, and all because he insists that he does his best with a certain watch and that the reason it does not keep good time is because the man who carries it must have an irregular heart beat.

It came about in this wise: The head of the family has a gold watch that cost him $200 ten years ago. He has carried it ever since, but a year ago it began to act queerly. For some days it lost time, and then it began to gain time; again it would gain time mysteriously and then strangely lose a minute or two a day. It had been to the watch repairer three times in 12 months and was still acting irregularly a week ago when the man's wife took it to the watch maker.

"I think I know what is the matter with this watch," said the craftsman. "I don't believe that your husband's heart is regular, and you don't be alarmed. It is not necessarily disease. He may be just one of those men who can't have a watch that keeps good time, simply because of their irregular heart beats.

"You see, a watch has a regular rhythmic movement," said the watch maker. "It is carried close to the human heart, which ought to have a regular rhythmic movement, too. Now, while the watch is beating away the heart is beating also. If its pulsations occur regularly, punctuating the rhythm of the watch at specific intervals, the rhythm of the watch movement is undisturbed; but let the heart pulsations occur irregularly, now pulsating with the watch, then the watch, again stopping discordantly in between the ticks, the watch is bound to be affected. Leave this watch here, and let your husband carry your watch, and we know if keeps regular time. Let him wear it a month, and see if I am not right."

So the woman handed her husband her watch to note the result. She wanted him to consult a specialist immediately upon her return from the watch maker, but he compromised by agreeing to try the test suggested by the watch man.

Calculating Man.

"I don't like young Dr. Oprates," remarked the timid young thing.

"No? And why?"

"The other evening he called, and by and by he squeezed my hand and said something sentimental, and just as I was trying to look demure and blush I discovered that he had his finger on my pulse to see whether or not I was really affected by his attentions."—Judge.

POLYGAMY RARE IN TURKEY

The Law Allows Four Wives, But More Than One Is Considered Bad Form.

The ordinary idea of a harem probably accords little with the picture of life behind the cafasses or screens of the windows of the seraglio presented by Mrs. L. Parks-Richards in a lecture at the Waldorf-Astoria Wednesday morning. In the first place, Mrs. Richards stated that there was as a rule only one wife in the harem.

"Polygamy is practically nonexistent among the Turks," said Mrs. Richards. "The law allows a man four wives, but makes it so difficult for him to take a second one by requiring him to provide for her exactly as he did for the first that it is seldom done. Besides, among the upper classes polygamy is not considered good form. I heard of half a dozen Turks who had two wives while I was in Constantinople, and of one who had four, but these are rare exceptions.

"The crowd of women found in a Turkish harem is made up of servants, slaves and female dependents. No Turk ever lets a relative suffer while he has a roof over his head and every great house has numbers of such dependents, both male and female."

Neither is the life of the harem dull, according to Mrs. Richards. No man ever enters it except the husband, son, father or brother of the mistress, but she may receive women friends and go to see them.

The relation of the inmates of the harem to one another Mrs. Richards found very beautiful. Children were great pets, she said, and servants and slaves were treated with great consideration. Slaves are often treated like members of the family, may marry a son of the house and are much sought in marriage by men for the purpose of avoiding complications with mothers-in-law.

"The sultan's harem," said Mrs. Richards, "is composed entirely of slaves, as the law forbids members of the imperial family from marrying into the great houses of the realm, lest the latter be made too powerful."

The Turkish woman, Mrs. Richards found, is quite satisfied with her lot, while that of the European woman is regarded with horror by the most enlightened Turks.

"It is true," said a Turkish official of high rank and much culture, "that we marry our wives sight unseen and never see until their wedding day, but we do not have the awful European spectacle of angling for men. We do not bring them into the open market and sell them to the highest bidder."

HOW HIS WIFE KEPT TAB.

Made the Old Man Bring Home at Least One Street Car Transfer Each Day.

When the old man got on the car with two heavy market baskets, under the weight of which he fairly staggered, he asked for a transfer even before he paid his nickel fare. The conductor smiled as he handed over the slip and the old man put it away with extreme care, relates the Chicago Record-Herald.

Near one of the streets midway between those at which were cross-town street car lines the old man asked the conductor to stop. This was done, and the car man smiled as he lifted off the basket. A fellow passenger who had witnessed the incidents asked the conductor why the old fellow had insisted on a transfer when he did not intend to use it.

"Didn't intend to use it?" echoed the conductor. "Oh, but he does use it, and he uses one each weekday of the year. No, he does not change cars, for he lives in the second house from the corner where he gets off. To him the transfer is most valuable evidence that he has paid his fare, and not spent the nickel for barrel-house liquor and walked home.

"You see, it is this way: The old man was once a prosperous business man, but booze got the better of him and he lost all he owned. His wife had managed to save a few hundred dollars, and, when he went all to pieces she started a boarding house and made him her buyer. She found that he was in the habit of walking to and from the market and spending the fare money for drink. Then she conceived the idea of making him bring home a transfer each day so as to make sure that he rode at least one way. How do I know this? Because I made him confess. Does it keep him sober? Well, not entirely, for he has established a sort of nickel graft with some of the market men. But he does not spend the old lady's money, anyway."

When Men Get Wise.

The larger part of the great fortunes of this country have been accumulated after their owners have passed 40. In fact, the first 40 years of a man's life are the preparatory years, the years of training and discipline. A large part of this time he is laying the foundation—just getting ready to rear the superstructure. Many of us stumble around many years before we get into the right place, and then, for additional years, we make many mistakes. Most men do not get wise until they have passed 40. They may get knowledge before this, but not much wisdom. Wisdom is a ripening process. It takes time.—Success Magazine.

BRUTAL SHEEP-SHEARING.

Removal of Pieces of Skin While Struggling Is of Common Occurrence.

In the farther west, where by far the greater number of sheep are raised, the shearing is often done by roving bands of shearers, whose only thought is to dispose of as many head as possible in a day, says Country Life in America. To remove a piece of skin as large as the palm of the hand is a trifling matter to them. Sometimes it is the case with a struggling sheep that this mishap occurs several times. It is rare indeed for a sheep to pass through this ordeal without a skin puncture in one or more places. Reference is made to hand shears, but the excellent invention of power shearing machines has not removed all the danger of injury to the sheep. With these clippers in the hands of a careless or indifferent man it is an easy matter to stick the points of the guards into the sheep or to cut slits in its skin. It must not be made to appear, however, that the shearers of the west are more cruel than those of the great sheep raising countries of Argentina, New Zealand or Australia, but the practice is none the less reprehensible, and worthy the protest of all honest witnesses. In the sheep shearing contest at the world's fair at St. Louis last October some of the contestants were so "bloody" in their work that the sheep and goats when released presented a sickening sight. Because of this fact, the judges of the contest, so far as the machines were concerned, went beyond their prescribed duties to rebuke the inhumane work.

HORSE'S LOVE OF HOME.

Longing for Familiar Stall One of the Animal's Strongest Instincts.

The strongest instinct in the horse is that of home—all his thoughts and interests lie there—and the most wearing pain he suffers is that of nostalgia—the longing for the familiar stall and the well-loved surroundings, says Outing Magazine. What wonder that our pets almost heartily return to us from such unhappy experiences mere shadows of their former selves, and in such wretchedly bodily condition that it is months before they regain their usual health and spirits. Below the man in charge, poor feed, bad stabling, insufficient pasturage, etc., and overlook entirely the fact that it is our own fault, and the direct result of heart-hunger which no grass, grain or roof-tree could entirely assuage. Of course, the little-used muscles have, from lack of exercise, shrunk and lost their firmness and plumpness; the crest has fallen from the same cause; "poverty lines" appear in the quarters and shoulders; the tail and mane are out of shape, or all worn away; the feet studded off; the coat dingy and sun-burnt; the skin full of all manner of scars, cuts and abrasions; all these are the effect, not the cause, of the lack of bodily condition which is two-thirds due sheerly and solely to the high-bred, nervous, sensitive horse, to simple homesickness.

GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS

Distribution of Official Volumes an Element Apart from Their Usefulness.

The printing law of 1895 (still in force) specified the edition and disposition of the principal annual publications of the government, writes W. S. Rossiter, in Atlantic. The total "number"—whether single volumes or sets of "parts"—authorized by this law was 122,600, afterward increased to 135,600. Of this aggregate congress reserved for itself as quota 88 per cent.

The quota arose, and has flourished, principally for two reasons. Naturally enough, the voter rather likes to obtain something for nothing, and the receipt of expensive publications from the member of congress for the district involves an element of flattery, just as does the receipt of a package of agricultural department garden seeds from the same source. The books may not be of any practical value to the recipient, and the seeds may never grow, but the object of their dispatch has been secured. Thus there has grown up in connection with the publication of these volumes an element totally apart from the usefulness of the publication or the appropriateness of its destination.

Changes in English.

The English is a living language, and is bound to change both in spelling and grammar. There was a time when the split infinitive was more widely accepted than it is to-day and the double quadruple negative was in good repute. There was a time, too, when spelling was so different from present usage as to be nearly unintelligible now—which caused Artemus Ward's witty remark that Chaucer may have been a great poet, but he could not spell. As long as the language is alive change is its order, as it is with any living thing—change is life. — Indianapolis News.

An After-Dinner Story.

IN LOVE WITH "SOMEBODY"

Stella returned home from her summer vacation in the mountains with a trunkful of tanned gowns, a large supply of white birch bark, two balsam pillows and a broken heart.

That, at any rate, was what she told Jack Harrington when he called to see her. She never hesitated to tell him anything, however trivial, however vital and momentous. She had the trustful familiarity of their long friendship.

"One of the balsam pillows is for you," she said.

"I am more interested in your shattered heart," he answered. "Who shattered it?"

He could never be sure that Stella was in earnest; and on the other hand he could never be sure that she was not. He looked at her now with an anxiety but ill concealed.

"Good looking?"

"I never considered it. I think he was plain—and when a plain man is attractive he is irresistible," said Stella. Jack Harrington was not plain.

"Well, what else?" Jack asked.

"He had a poetic soul," replied Stella, "poetic and artistic. He had a nature above the common things of life, the sordid things. Not that he vaunted it, but it impressed one."

Jack was a merchandising and part owner in a large factory, and enjoyed making money. "Ah," he said.

"He had a subtle mind. You have gauged most men's minds when you have talked with them half an hour," said Stella sweepingly. "I could not sound him. He was refreshing and stimulating. It was the quality of his mind that I admired most, but I almost think I might have been in love with him without that. He had delicious reserve, and he had fidelity always. He was beautifully considerate; he was polished—"

"You could have said it all in two or three words," said Jack. "You mean that he was simply a perfect man."

"Yes, I guess that's it," said Stella. "Well, why don't you marry him?" asked Jack boldly.

"He did not ask me," answered Stella, in a regretful tone. "He walked and talked with me; he danced with me at all the hops, and with almost nobody else. His conduct toward me was at all times most gallant. But after all his many and continued attentions to me he did not offer himself, though several times he seemed near the point of so doing. It is not for you, Jack, to ask why I do not marry him, but that is one reason."

She raised her eyes to him and Jack stared at her moodily. For aught he knew she might be in dead-ly earnest. He himself had asked her several times to marry him. Did the man live who, knowing her, could resist her?"

"Who is he?" Jack asked. "What is his name?"

"Somebody-or-other," replied Stella, dwelling pensively on the syllables.

"Not Fremont, Jr., the son of the land owner?" inquired Jack.

Stella nodded an affirmative. "Do you know him?" she asked quickly.

"I knew him—once," replied Jack. He pursed his mouth twice, but he said no more.

"What do you know about him?" Stella demanded, after an awful pause.

"Oh, all, for one thing," said Jack, slowly and firmly, "he has a wife."

"Oh!" said Stella, in a long note with a fall at the end. A little color reddened her cheeks. She inquired, after a silence. "Where is his wife?"

"At home with the children. It's the opinion of those who know that there is no doubt of her being able to obtain a divorce."

"Oh!" said Stella, faintly. Then, after a silence of several moments, Jack remarked slowly and quietly, "That no doubt accounts for his delicate reserve in not proposing to you." He rose.

"Sit down," said Stella. She turned upon him a ruminating smile. "If that is what he was," she said; "if he was a married man, I thought he was at all—why, then I couldn't have been in love with him."

"I don't see that in the least," Jack answered in a critical, dignified tone.

"And if I wasn't in love with him, with whom am I in love?" I must be in love with somebody," argued Stella, serenely.

Jack looked up at the ceiling, his face showing a pronounced frown.

"I must be," Stella declared, "in love with somebody entirely different; as different as possible."

"I fail to see any force or logic in your argument," said Jack.

"It's plain enough, I could prove it," said Stella. "I had time. I must be fond of somebody that hasn't his qualities. If he was brilliant, I must like somebody that isn't—not so very much. He was dignified and reserved, and I must be in love with some man that hasn't much dignity, and gets confidential when he's feeling good and tells all he knows. Somebody that isn't plain at all, but good looking. And who isn't polite always, but rather blunt when he wants to be. Somebody," he said Stella, "that is not poetic—that can't be hired to read poetry; and is matter-of-fact and hard-headed and—and—perhaps—connected somewhat with a factory—"

But ack met her eyes unsmilingly. "Don't trifle with me, Stella," he said. "Do you think it is a thing to joke about? I have asked you more than once to be my wife."

"Three times," said Stella.

"And I shall not ask you again. What would be the use?" There was a tremor in his voice. He rose again and looked around for his hat.

Stella rose, too. She laid her hand on his arm and the smile she lifted to him was suddenly vivid and tender and a valiant confession of unsuspected things.

"Then," she said, "Jack—I shall have to ask you!"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

HISTORY OF 6-5-4.

And Its Discovery In Java—Sacred Java Gum.

An American gentleman, traveling in the Orient, was invited to accompany a party of Dutch scientists on an expedition into the interior of Java, to excavate some prehistoric ruins. As the excavations proceeded he noticed that the native laborers seemed to find something of interest which they would eagerly seize and secrete. Upon investigation he learned that they found pieces of gum, or hardened sap, which had exuded from the roots of a certain tree, and which, they claimed, was sacred and a sure protection against lightning. As a matter of curiosity he obtained a few pieces, one of which he sent to a chemist friend, telling him of the native superstition. The friend chemically treated a small piece and, preparatory to an analysis, reduced it to a thin paste, which he put away until he should have time to analyze it. About that time he was engaged in testing certain samples of paint, from which the street railway company was to select one; the intention being to buy the one that proved to have the best insulating properties. By accident some of this Java paste was applied to the testing plank, along with the paint samples. To the surprise of the engineer, he was unable to burp it, blister it, or otherwise affect it, in the slightest degree, no matter how high the electric voltage used. The engineer interested a friend with capital; a trip was made to Java, arrangements perfected to obtain a regular supply and the final result was 5-5-4 Stove Lusta, now being introduced here. It is a stove polish, an iron enamel and screen enamel combined; one application giving a Russia iron, lustrous, black finish. It dries in ten minutes, shines itself and dissolves rust as readily as water dissolves salt. It can be burned by flame, but, for electric stoves, gas stoves, cook stoves or any iron work (like boiler heads and steam pipes), where there is no contact with the flame, it is heat resistant and seems likely to entirely supercede ordinary iron enamels and Japans.—From the Pittsburg Press.

THURLOW GETS NEW JOB

Plainfield Health Officer Appointed to Similar Position in Jersey City.

FAGAN SELECTS HIM

Office Pays $2,000 Salary—Efficient Man for the Place—Larger Field for Him.

Mayor Fagan, of Jersey City, Friday announced the appointment of Leon Thurlow, of this city, as health officer to succeed Henry Smellie. The appointment takes effect immediately. The salary is $2,000 per annum.

Mr. Thurlow has not yet made any decision. The first news that he had been appointed was conveyed to him this morning by a representative of The Daily Press. When informed of the fact, Plainfield's efficient health officer said: "That's the first I've heard about it." Of course, I know that my name was being considered by Mayor Fagan, but he had made no direct offer to me."

Continuing, Mr. Thurlow said: "I have an appointment with Mr. Fagan for tomorrow, and if there is a big proposition, the work there being many times as hard as it is here. On Tuesday I will let you know my decision."

It is more likely that Mr. Thurlow will accept the position. Plainfield pays him $100 a month and his duties here take up all his time. Since assuming the office, he has brought about many reforms and has kept a vigilant eye on milk dealers and others who handle commodities that require analytical inspection. The members of the Plainfield Board of Health speak in the highest terms of his work and it is not improbable that they will use every effort to retain his services.

THE ROBIN AS A RUNNER.

Question of Curious Subscriber Answered by the Obliging Editor.

"I saw a freak in birdology as I was coming from my house to my office, and called the attention of two others to it who were standing near by. There were several robins running about in the yard adjoining my lot, and among them was one with a white head and neck. Will the president of the Audubon society please tell us how to account for it?"

Pending Mr. Pearson's explanation, says the Charlotte News and Observer, we would suggest that a robin never runs, since he can use one leg only synchronously with the other, and both have to go the same way at once. It is a funny thing about a robin's legs, but they are dependent to a degree. Perhaps the' robin'grew because he was white-headed. Now, why he is white-headed is another question. The principle of the albino characteristics of heads that ought to be black and now are white has never been solved except by those concerns which advertise to make white heads black—and they won't tell.

But if this robin has learned how to run, he is the oldest in the flock certainly. We put it down to old age at a hazard.

LAUGHTER AND DIGESTION.

It Has Been Shown That Mirthfulness Stimulates Gastric Secretion.

Nothing will take the place of good cheer and laughter at meals or any other time in the home. There is a vital connection between amiability and digestion—between good cheer and assimilation, writes Orison Swett Marden, in Success Magazine. Laughter is the best friend the liver has, and depression, or melancholia, its worst enemy. Numerous experiments have shown that mirth and cheerfulness stimulate the secretion of the gastric juices, and are powerful aids to digestion. Yet, knowing this, many of us sit as gloomy and absorbed at the table as at a funeral. In many homes, scarcely a word is spoken at meals, outside of requests for an article of food.

The meal hour ought to mean something besides supplying a mere animal function. The chief, which fills the family to the table ought to be the signal for a good time generally, when all cares should be thrown off and everybody appear at his best. It ought to signalize the time for mirth and laughter. It ought to be looked forward to by the members of the family as the period of cooing is looked forward to by cupids in school, as a let-up from the strenuous life.

SOMETHING ABOUT ECLIPSES

Not the Same in Manifestation as They Were in Former Days.

Eclipses are not what they used to be. The eclipse, with its accompanying phenomena, is observed a generation ago as the manifestation of certain effects of heat and light, but far more complex in the vision of the investigator of to-day. Prof. T. T. Thomson and the Cavendish school have placed the electro-magnetic theories of matter and of radiation on the firmest of bases. We now think of a body which, like the sun, radiates energy, as sending out not heat and light but corpuscles, electrons of almost popular notoriety, of positive and negative ions, and rays and emanations of such varied types and complexities that elucidation and definition still await them.

Then, too, M. Lebedet and Messrs. Nichols and Hull have confirmed the theory of the pressure exerted by light. Consequently we cannot now look at the corona as a simple glow —it must be viewed as the complex expressions of light exerted on particles of matter in a rarefied territory, of the action and interaction of pulsating carriers of composite electricity and matter.

Imported Irish Sod.

On the very rare occasions that snakes have been found in Ireland explanation of the phenomena has always been forthcoming. One was brought in a bundle of shrubs, another in a packing case from another country, and quickly made a fortune. He was happy except for one trial—snakes. "Oh, for an Australian St. Patrick!" he moaned. And then came an inspiration—he wired for a load of the soil and shipped it, and when he had strewn the precious mold about his dwelling could be sleep in peace.—London Tribune.

Where Londoners Were Born.

Light is thrown upon the subject of ancestral Londoners in the latest volume of the report of the London traffic commission. From one of these we learn that of the 4,500,000 people in the administrative county of London only 3,000,000 were born in it. But that is probably a larger proportion than most people were aware of.

HORNS OF THE REVOLUTION

Charges Were Sounded on Quaint Instruments Made of Wood.

Whenever you see revolutionary soldiers dressed in regulation uniforms and blowing on brass horns you must admire the picture, but at the same time remember that no artists were in that fight. Artists make things very attractive, but not always true to life, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

There was not a uniformed regiment in the army. The grand old fellows fought in hunting garb or the dress they wore on the farm, store, college or tavern. So with the horns or bugles. Those that sounded Johnson's charges in the war of 1812 and those death-knell of the great Indian chief Tecumseh, were the old wooden horns of Capt. Bob Collins.

This was made of two cedar staves three-sixteenths of an inch in thickness. These were trimmed and fitted that when the staves joined they formed a funnel-shaped instrument four inches in diameter at the larger end and tapered down to a convenient size at the mouthpiece. The two cedar staves were held in place by hoops made of cow's horns.

Whether Capt. Bob had acquired the habit of blowing a wooden horn in the army, or whether he had once been a flageolotan (who used such horns altogether) is not known. It is, however, certain that the good man studied reveille at sunrise until his death in 1864. The neighbors for miles around saw the sunrise unheralded after Capt. Bob was called home, and his quaint instrument was never used again. It has been preserved, though, by Mrs. Lucinda Bowman, a granddaughter, who cherishes it in her home in Kentucky, where it is an honored relic.

APPRECIATED PERFORMANCE

Looked Like the Real Thing and the Company Had to Do It All Over.

The late Joseph Jefferson used to say that his career came very near being nipped in the bud in a small western town, relates Success Magazine. He at that time was a member of a small pioneer company which progressed by means of three "bull teams" from one town to another. They were always heartily received by the miners and cowboys, who readily paid the five dollars in gold required to witness their performance. Mr. Jefferson was the traditional melodramatic villain, and in the third act was supposed to kidnap the child." The supposed mother, hearing its cries, rushes on the scene just as he is about to escape, and fires a fruitless shot from a revolver.

Upon this particular occasion all had gone well until this scene was reached and the audience, many of whom had never before seen any kind of theatrical performance, sat as if spellbound. At the crack of the mother's revolver, however, the spell was rudely broken.

"By heaven, she missed him!" a miner-shrieked, and everyone shouted, drawing his own "six-shooter" and leaping to his feet. "Round to the back door and head him off 'fore he can git to his hoss, boys!" he yelled, and following him, half the audience stampeded for the exit.

The excitement was finally allayed by the "mother" and the villain's appearing mend in hand before the curtain, and the manager's explanation of the situation. When the performance had been reconvened, the audience assigned on paying another admission price and having an immediate repetition from beginning to end.

RECESSION OF THE FALLS.

Rate at Which the Niagara Cataract Has Worn Its Way Backward.

The only reliable data that can form a basis for speculation as to the progress of Niagara Falls from Lake Ontario to the present site is found by comparing the two surveys that have been made of the falls, one in 1842 and the other in 1886, writes Arthur Battier Hulbert, in Four-Track News. The first of these was a trigonometrical survey made by Dr. John Hall, nestor of the New York State geological survey. At the suggestion of Sir Charles Lyell, who visited the falls with Dr. Hall, monuments were erected at the points at which the angles were taken in order that some later surveyor would be able to find with accuracy the exact extent of the changes. The second survey was made in 1886 by G. K. Woodward, of the United States geological survey, now director of the Carnegie institute at Washington. The result surprised the world.

* * * Woodward's survey showed that the falls had moved 220 feet since 1842; the rate at the center had been, therefore, five feet per annum. Woodward proved that the tremendous area of five acres of rock had been precipitated from the face of the fall in the half century.

Logical.

Two Irishmen were digging a sewer. One of them was a big, strong man about six feet four inches in height and the other was a little, puny man about four feet six inches. The foreman came along to see how the work was progressing, and noticed that one of them was doing more work than the other.

"Look here," he cried, "how is it that little Lieutenant Dugan, who is only half your size, is doing nearly twice as much work as you, Patrick?"

Glancing down at his partner, Pat replied:

"And why shouldn't he; ain't he nearer to it?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

DR. VAN DYKE ADDS TO NATIONAL HYMN.

In a stirring appeal to the Presbyterian General assembly, in session at Des Moines, Iowa, in behalf of the church's work in the California earthquake, Dr. Henry Van Dyke, of Princeton, declared that when he studied California he always felt that the lines in Samuel Francis Smith's national hymn:

I love thy rocks and rills,
Thy woods and templed hills, were intended for New England, and that for California must be added the following lines:

I love thy inland seas,
Thy capes and giant trees,
Thy rolling plains;
Thy canons wild and deep,
Thy prairies' boundless sweep,
Thy rock mountains steep,
Thy fertile mains.

Thy silvery strands,
Thy Golden Gate that stands
Afront the West;
Thy sweet and crystal air,
Thy sunlight everywhere,
O land beyond compare,
I love thee best.

CANVASS OF CANDIDATES.

At considerable expense American Spectator has obtained opinions and expressions of the same from all of the truly prominent candidates for Presidential nomination. These are all ingenuine, having come to us over our own private line, the least longest wire in the world. The pithy, epigrammatic summing up will, of course, be thoroughly appreciated. The following terse expressions are in answer to our query, "Will you be a candidate?":

Taft—My candidacy is a weighty problem, and there is a heavy responsibility attached.

Cannon—I will if I do.

Bryan—The third is the lucky trial. I shall not get out of communication with my friends.

Shaw—I have always universally considered myself a strong candidate.

Hobson—Of course, it is an office of limited responsibilities—but—

Fairbanks—You'll really have to ask Mrs. F.

Funston—Am too busy to think of it, but they do say I was born in Ohio.

Foraker—I may have to do it just to get that Roosevelt fellow out.

Roosevelt—Didn't I say all along that there would be no third term for me. After what's happened I suppose you'll believe it now.

Col. Bingham—Dammit, no!

Two Sunsets in One Day.

The town of Leek in Staffordshire, England, has the rare privilege at a certain season of the year, of witnessing two sunsets in one day. Between the town and the western horizon there is a high mountain, and when the sun dips behind its crest night begins to fall and the lamps are lighted. An hour or two later the sun shines in all its glory through an opening in the range of hills, and out go the lamps until the second sunset brings night in reality.

LITERARY NOTES.

"Recreation" for June. The June number of this always refreshing magazine deserves special mention. The illustrations, every one of them, certainly have been selected and placed by an expert who put considerable love into his work. The make-up of the magazine as a whole is much superior to what it has been in the past; the articles and stories are a better selection and edited with more skill, and the cover design for the first time takes rank with those of the best magazines. To all, it is a clever piece of magazine-making and there is reason to expect that this and future numbers will be among the best sellers on the news-stands. The cover design, by Frank Tenney Johnson, is in full colors. The leading article, "With the Free in Arizona," by Julian A. Diniock, relates much of interest about the Navaja Indians and is illustrated from remarkably good photographs. George Carling's article, "Trying Out a Motor Canoe," is full of instruction, at the same time a good story. There are two illustrations from photographs. "Calling on the Marsh Birds," by Bonnycastle Dale, is the story of the author's photographing the shore birds of Canada; it is illustrated from excellent photographs of the wild birds.

The American Boy is bidding high for public favor from its issue as it does in its June number, stories by Edward Stratemeyer, Horatio Alger, Jr., Clarence Hawkes, the blind naturalist, J. L. Harbour, Tudor Jenks, Ernest Gilmore, Will Levington Comfort, Helen Leah Reed, and Fred Myron Colby. Among the matter of special interest in this number, outside of stories by the prominent writers named, are sketches of Senator Beveridge, Auguste Rodin, John Christian Watson, Prof. John Milne, and the late Paul Laurence Dunbar; the story of a Wild Elk Round-Up; instruction as to How to Play Baseball, and How to Select and Use Fire*arms with Safety*; a description of Uncle Sam's Flag Shop; a biographical sketch of Henry Ward Beecher; and many items under the head of Puzzles, Mechanics, Chemistry, Biography, Stamps, Coins, Photography, and other hobbies in which boys are interested. There are in addition over 70 illustrations. Subscription price $1 a year. The Sprague Publishing Co., Detroit, Mich.

TO DRESS CARELESSLY ACCENTUATES AGE.

Nothing so accentuates fading loveliness as carelessness of dress.

It is wonderful what a little careful grooming will do for a woman.

Let her touch her eyebrows with vaseline to bring out the lustre, let her bathe her lips with aromatic toilet water, dust her clean cheeks with a bit of pink powder, have her hair dressed in a dainty, pretty way —and lo! there is the light of inspiration and sweetness that is most delightful and bewitching.

There are good and bad cosmetics, sane and insane ways of beautifying.

Choose the right road, then go ahead and you will be amazed to find how you can drop off a year of your life every twelve months, instead of hitching on one.

Try it.

As a usual thing women are unattractive of face and figure for the reason that they are ignorant of the plain laws of health and the more fascinating rules of outward beautifying.

Beauty is a very far-reaching word. It means that one must first of all be nice and neat and clean; second, that one should be amiable; third, that one should make the best of one's good points and learn to hide or overcome the bad ones.

There is many a woman who, having spent a few cents for a little jar of complexion cream, becomes deeply interested in the matter, and, like the butterfly evolving from the caterpillar, gradually transforms herself from an ugly duckling into a very beautiful bird of paradise.

She acquires a certain amount of pride in always looking her best, speaking her best, acting her best and doing her best.

You can't expect more than that from a real angel.—Philadelphia Press.

Drying the Face.

A soft towel should always be used in drying the face, either after soap or any other wash. A rough or bath towel only irritates the skin and serves to work it some injury. The following recipe is also a very good one: Dissolve one can of lye into a quart of cold water. Try out five pounds of mutton tallow until perfectly pure. Have the grease as cool as it can be without congealing, then pour it in a drop at a time, and beat constantly into the dissolved lye.

Change Sewer Inlet.

In connection with the relaying the walk of the City National Bank, the storm sewer inlet at the corner has been shifted. It will be located several feet down Front street, instead of directly at the corner. It is believed the change will improve the walk for pedestrians at that point. In slippery weather the iron cover of the inlet has always caused a number of falls, and is a decided annoyance.

STUDY OF THEATER FIRES.

Experiments in Vienna Indicate That "Fireproof" Curtains Are No Protection.

Whoever imagines that the famous iron curtains in theaters, which are lowered and raised with such solemnity at stated times and are made the subject of all kinds of municipal regulations, are any real protection against fire, would do well, says the Grand Magazine, to study the account of certain experiments recently carried out in Vienna.

A theater was constructed in the most approved modern fashion, the auditorium furnished with the usual galleries and pit and the stage with scenery. Lamps of every system—electric, gas and oil—were placed in great numbers and in the walls certain spy holes were provided through which the commission of engineers and architects who were conducting the experiments might see what went on within the building.

In the first experiment a fire was lighted on the stage and the ordinary curtain dropped, the ventilators in the auditorium being open and those on the stage closed. After the lapse of a minute or two the observers saw the curtain bulge out toward the auditorium, and dense flames and smoke to rush forth at the bottom with such volume that the entire theater was enveloped in an instant.

The gas lamps were extinguished immediately and were soon followed by the disappearance of the oil lights. As for the electric lamps, though they did not go out, they became quite invisible by reason of the dense smoke. In a quarter of an hour a temperature of 720 degrees Fahrenheit was registered in the theater.

Next time the same experiment was repeated under identical conditions except that this occasion the iron curtain was lowered. Its protective powers, however, proved quite illusory.

The flames burst forth into the auditorium with greater violence, if possible, than before; the thermometer registered a temperature bordering upon that of the electric oven, and an analysis of the air disclosed the fact that it contained more than eight per cent. of the deadly carbonic oxide gas—that is to say, far more than sufficient to asphyxiate whoever had not been burned to death.

A third experiment showed that the audience can only hope to escape if the actors consent to sacrifice themselves, which they can hardly be expected to do. It was found that if the stage was shut in from the rest by curtains kept up the ventilators on the stage being oped and those in the auditorium quite closed, the stage became transformed into a chimney as it were, while the auditorium remained intact, the flames and smoke were carried away from it.

MONEY PILES UP RAPIDLY.

Bequest of Benjamin Franklin the Nucleus of an Immense Fund.

A great popular industrial school, the Franklin union, has been established in Boston, and a New York man, Mr. Boullion, called upon to take charge of it—on the foundation of $5,000 bequeathed by Benjamin more than 100 years ago. Franklin, as is well known, had the amount put out at interest for a century for the benefit of the working youth of his native city, states the New York Mail.

What is the result? The managers of the Franklin Union now have on hand, for actual use, a round million dollars in cash, and, in addition to that, $200,000 in good securities, which will accumulate interest for another hundred years, when it is expected to have produced a new capital of $8,000,000 or $9,000,000.

Not to be sure, not all the millions now on hand is the increment of Franklin's original gift, for Mr. Carnegie made a generous addition to that; but the bulk of it is from that source, and all the $200,000 now set aside in securities is derived from Franklin's original gift. In 200 years (which is the length of time that has now elapsed since Franklin was born) his gift of $5,000 *will have rolled up to about $10,-*000,000!

Where will all this have come from? It is a puzzling old problem, the answer to which may seem simple enough to those who put money out at interest, but which is something of a mystery. Money is the measure of value. Value, in the last analysis, consists of things to eat and wear and use. Had $5,000 worth of these things, existing when Franklin died in 1790, actually increased to $1,000,000 worth of them in 1890 or 1906? Had all the rest of the good things that were in existence in 1790 benefited in the same proportion? And if $200, 000 of Franklin's money in 1906 will be $9,000,000 of things to eat and wear in 2006, what will Mr. Rockefeller's $500,000,000 pile up to in that year? To $100,000,000,000, which is what the whole wealth of the United States now amounts to. But at the same rate of increment the present entire wealth of the United States will have piled up, by 2006, to $20,000,000,000,000—an impossible figure.

The world itself would not hold that amount of wealth. Money earns money, but it cannot earn more than there is the equivalent of value for.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning June 17.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic. The storied life.—John xvii, 1-5, 22-24.

The seventeenth chapter of John contains what is called Christ's "intercessory prayer." It is His prayer for His disciples following His address to them after the institution of the Lord's supper and preceding His entrance into the garden of Gethsemane just before His arrest and subsequent crucifixion. In this address and especially in the prayer the subject of glory has an important place, and it very appropriately does so. His life of trials and tribulations is almost over. Within twenty-four hours His work on earth will have been done, and He will have entered into the glory which was His before His coming to this sin cursed earth. The shadow of the cross is immediately before Him, but even this fact cannot keep out the glory soon to be His and later to be His disciples'. Little wonder, then, that glory should be a principal theme in His last address and prayer before His crucifixion. That over and the glory of the resurrection was soon to follow, then the glory of the ascension and then eternal glory as a reconciling Saviour at the right hand of God.

In this prayer Christ speaks of the glory of God, the glory of Himself and the glory of His disciples. Of the Father He says, "I have glorified Thee on earth." God's gift to man of His Son is His supreme glory on earth. "The heavens declare the glory of God," but in no sense to the full degree that Christ's death declares it. The angels forever taught this fact when at His birth they sang, "Glory to God in the highest." Christ also speaks of His own glory. "I have glorified Thee on earth . . . And now, O Father, glorify Thou me with Thine own self with the glory which I had with Thee before the world began." And last of all Christ speaks of the glory of His disciples. "And the glory which Thou gavest me I have given them." Here thus are linked together the glory of God, of Christ and of man. God's glory is to be given to Christ and through Him to His disciples, and thus divine glory is a part of the life of all heaven.

This life of glory even begins on earth, but it obtains its full fruition in heaven. Like Christ, the glory on earth shines through clouds of darkness—dark Gethsemanes and cross crowned Calvaries—but in all of them, the crown of glory comes through the cross of suffering. "If we suffer with Him, we shall reign with Him." And last of all Christ speaks of the Christians' supreme glory in heaven—beholding His glory. This will be our chief glory.

When by His grace
I shall look on His face,
That will be glory, be glory for me.

Evangelistic Endeavor.

In the Christian Endeavor society of the First Baptist church of Chicago last season a band of workers signed a pledge, the results of which were remarkable.

It read thus: "I promise to attend *the regular preaching services and att*er meetings of our church unless absolutely prevented and to request at least one stranger or visitor to remain at each after meeting and take part in these meetings if there is an opportunity."

Out of the large results from the keeping of this I was led to propose a special pledge to help Endeavorers carry out this suggestion, to cooperate with their pastors in every evangelistic effort.

That pledge is as follows:

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR EVANGELISTIC COVENANT.

By God's help I promise prayerfully to—Co-operate with my pastor in every evangelistic effort that he may make as the Lord leads him.

Invite my unconverted friends and acquaintances to our services and welcome them when they come.

Attend the regular preaching services and after meetings of our church unless absolutely prevented;

Request at least one stranger or visitor to remain to all after meetings and take part in these meetings if there is an opportunity;

Endeavor to win at least one person to the Saviour within a month.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

June 10: "Christian Education a National Safeguard"—II Chron. xvii, 7-9.

By REV. WALTER J. TATE, D. D.

"The love and fear of God is indeed the keystone of the political arch." So wrote one of the wisest of modern statesmen and an authority in jurisprudence.

The pillars on which the arch must rest, if it rest securely, are the integrity and intelligence of the common people.

The early settlers of various sections of this country saw clearly that no free government could long stand unless the young people were properly trained intellectually and morally. In many sections they erected a meeting house, as it was called. Here they met on all public occasions, religious and political. And often it was the schoolhouse, as well.

They made no mistake in supposing the young could be fitted for life's duties by a purely secular education alone. In New England especially the town made provision for the support of the minister and the schoolteacher by the whole people. The young had religious instruction in the home also. Whoever studies attentively the history of our country cannot fail to discern the potent influence the school and church have had on our destinies as a people.

Hitherto all attempts to break down our free school system in favor of any sectarian interest has met well deserved defeat. No one will claim that our system has ever reached the highest possible development and efficiency, but compared with the systems of other lands it is far superior for us to any other yet devised.

Our church schools are supplementary to the public school system, and in no sense or degree should be made competitors or antagonists. So far as we can now discern private and denomination beneficence will be needed to give the proper complement and supplement to the free school and state college system.

Our Education society, by its aid in loans to the needy students in our own schools, is doing a vast good, not only to the individuals assisted, to the church in aiding in the proper equipment of preachers, teachers and missionaries, but also to the land and nation in securing the adequate training of such selected ones as those to whom the aid is given.

The manual training and technical schools of Bishop Hoss at Cuba and Siboney, and of Bishop Candler at Tuskegee in Alabama, under the management of Booker T. Washington, for negroes, and Mount Hermon at Northfield, established by Mr. Moody, are doing grand work.

But a wider and deeper work is being done in the schools of our own Freedmen's Aid and Southern Education society. The country is not yet fully awake to the duty of the full emancipation of the slaves placed on this nation. The issue has never been fairly faced. There is in this reality a negro problem. There is a real "white man's burden," which this nation will have to lift or under which it may be crushed.

It is not to be settled in politics. It cannot be adequately stated in one article nor in many in magazine or newspaper. It is more than the question of labor or ballot or social equality.

The negro race of our southland must be educated in a Christian way or it will weight this nation down with an inert mass which no power can carry. The only hope is in our Christian schools. The New York Independent in a recent issue shows conclusively the attempts made in many states of the south to keep the negro in ignorance by withholding funds from public schools. Many of the majority of whites in the south, if the public press and officers of state speak correctly, are much opposed to the education of the negroes, holding that it will unfit them for the menial position far as I can see, there shall alone occupy, but the ignorance of a part will ever prove the degradation of the whole people.

Richness of Character.

Character is the outcome of small duties faithfully performed, of self denial, of self sacrifices, of kindly acts of love and duty. The backbone of character *is laid at home, and whether the con*stitutional tendencies be good or bad home influences will, as a rule, fan them into activity. Kindness begets kindness, and truth and trust will bear a rich harvest of truth and trust. There are many trivial acts of kindness which seem as more about a man's character than many vague phrases.—Smiles.

Use of the Tongue.

James ever brings perfection on the one matter of the use of the tongue. Small though it is, it is like the rudder of a ship in its importance. The rudder is a little thing, but it turns the great ship. So the tongue is a little thing, but what it does has terrible consequences, even as a little fire may kindle a great conflagration. Because of its power a good man will guard its use.—Robert E. Speer.

Use It Today.

That deed of kindness you would do—
Do it today.
That word to helpyour brother be true—
Speak it today.
The time is rapidly passing by
When service is seen, and you and I,
If we mean to help our neighbor's cry,
Must do it today.

That straying one that you mean to seek—
Seek him today.
That helping hand for one who is weak—
Give it today.
Be helpful today—how foolish to wait
Till dear ones pass through the pearly gate
And then remorsefully cry, "Too late!"—
Help them today.
—Presbyterian Journal.

THE POPULAR SAILOR.

Nine-tenths of the hats you see this spring are sailors.

The other tenth are sailors of another style.

In fact, the sailor hat seems to be heading straight for its own destruction, by way of an overdose of popularity.

All of the fashionable milliner's there are sailors at $60 per. On the 98-cent counter in the department stores the sailor reigns supreme.

Every woman you meet wears a sailor in one shape or another. It may be flat and pammed down over her brows, kicking up its heels festively behind. Or it may be small and saucy, and wink its other eye at you as it sails past, floating high on the crested waves of a marcelled head. Or it may batten drunkenly down over one ear, ogling crafty out of its cockade eyes.

For nearly all the sailors hilariously wave a many-orbed peacock's tail as they go. This flaunts out behind and angles that to say the least, are funny.

Ladies that don't have peacock feathers have striped ribbon. Count 'em. You'll see 'em on the street by the millions. The rest—oh, well, the rest have to be content with buckles and bows and sundry little make-shifts, says the Philadelphia Bulletin.

No age is too mature, no fairness too fat and forty, to forego the sailor hat, it seems. Behold it reposing jauntily over the face of the fresh young girl, and with equal assurance cavorting mildly over the left eyebrow of the heavy woman with a countenance like a full red moon, where its diminutive unfitness doth cause the polite to turn away and smile, albeit the less careful giggle openly.

No doubt the sailor is the thing this spring, for all ages, shades, styles and circumstances. But there are a few women who have sworn a mighty vow to wear soup-plates, tomato cans, bureau scarfs, table doilies—anything on their heads but sailor hats, just for the sake of variety!

WHAT THE HAND TELLS.

The shape of the hand shows the disposition and character of the possessor; the lines reveal his fortune. The shape can easily be learned; the lines are a matter of long and careful study and are always changing. A quick glance at the shape of the hand, the ends of the fingers and the way the joints are knotted will reveal more than five years of intimacy. After observing the following rules, if you are deceived, it is nobody's fault but your own.

The Fingers.

When the fingers are square at the end, the tendency is wholly toward the practical or business side; if, however, they are rounded, then *the artistic emotional and imagina*tive side will be prominent. If they are both square and round, "the mixed hand," both qualities will be apparent, but the shape of the first finger will determine which rules.

The smaller the hand the less character. All idiots have very small thumbs. The more it stands out from the hand, the more ability and success.

If the thumb turns toward the hand, it shows a saving, economical disposition, if it turns back and is smaller at the end, it signifies more extravagance and weaker will.

*The first finger represents the per*son, the second is the finger of destiny, while the third shows the influence of circumstances and other peo*ple. When the first finger is longer* than the third, the individual always rules and is not easily controlled. A long first finger is also a sight of a selfish nature.

If the first finger be shorter than the third, other people or circumstances will be too much "in evidence," *and such a hand should fol*low its own impressions and not be advised too much by others. When the fingers are all wide apart, there is great independence; when held close together, quite the opposite. A long third finger is often a sign of great luck in all games of chance.

The Hand.

When the fingers are long and the palm short, there is a great eye to small details; "fussy people" have this hand. When the palm is longer than the fingers, there is much power to plan than execute, and details are dealt with as a whole. It is unusually a hand that thinks quickly and is impatient and in a hurry.

A soft hand shows a love of ease and indifference to work; if it be full, the hand is a powerful one to do. When the hand is full and rather hard ("the insistent hand,") there will be great executive ability and "something doing" all the time. Failure and success, both of a marked character, are for this hand.

A hard hand is much like a hand, shows great nervousness and not a very happy disposition. The long narrow hand is of the arbitrary type and is inclined to be cruel and despotic.

Very large hands over-do, very small hands hope, but do not fulfill, and deformed hands show a deformed nature. A hollow, concave palm, the "Fatal Hand."

Yes, the hand points the way, which the wise endeavor to follow.—Fletcher.

PLAINFIELDS UNITED.

Now that the city and borough councils and the Plainfield Protective Association have appointed committees to jointly investigate the merits and demerits of the subject, no time should be lost in bringing about the consolidation of Plainfield and North Plainfield. Situated as they are geographically, it cannot be denied as a business proposition that the maintenance of two distinct municipal governments is most absurd. In every respect, save that of government, the two places constitute one community. Their interests are identical; their government should be one.

Consolidation does not mean annexation. North Plainfield would still be a part of Somerset county. At the same time it would be part of the ever expanding and progressive city of Plainfield, just the same as that section known as "Netherwood" is today. To argue that the proposition would bring about great inconveniences and complications is most erroneous. Greater New York extends over five distinct counties and its government is run as smoothly as though the entire city lay in the county of New York.

Three years ago, factional feeling and personal spite was the major feature of the campaign. The question of consolidation was never reached. The ugly feeling engendered at that time has now largely passed away. A large percentage of those arrayed against either consolidation or annexation are outspokenly in favor of merging the two municipalities. These men contend that their main objection was the method adopted in starting the agitation. This ground of opposition is now removed by the formal manner in which the subject is again being taken up. The right channels are being used in steering through the project. And there should be no delay.

THE GARBAGE QUESTION.

Assurance is given by the public affairs committee of the Common Council that an exhaustive report on the practicability of municipal control of garbage and ashes collection and disposal will be presented to the Common Council at its next meeting. A thorough investigation has been made. Much information has been obtained from other cities where public plants of this sort are in operation and the results are said to be especially favorable to the undertaking here.

Plainfield already owns the necessary plant but some improvements must necessarily be made. The cost of these improvements is roughly estimated at $24,000 and the running expenses at $10,000. Surely the city can well afford the expense, particularly as the Board of Health has stated that it is for the well being of the community.

When the report is presented, we believe that every member of the Common Council will vote for its adoption and further will do all in his power to bring the improvement about.

CANNED MEATS.

Much confusion pervades the public understanding of the charges against the Chicago beef trusts. As a result inestimable harm is being done to the retail industry which handles only fresh meats. This is most unfortunate and therefore it is a duty of the public press to clear up the existing doubts in the minds of the people. In his message accompanying the report of the investigators, President Roosevelt distinctly says: "There is not one particle wrong with dressed beef in the carcass; but in the canned product lurks the evil." In other words it is not the fresh meat, put the preserved stuff sold in tin cans that is alleged to be so vile.

TO AUTO OWNERS.

The fire chiefs of New Jersey will meet here tomorrow and it is but proper that something in the way of entertainment should be provided by the people of Plainfield. Chief Doane suggests that a sight-seeing tour of the city would be pleasing to the visitors. Owners of automobiles are asked to lend their services in order to carry out this suggestion. The "rubberneck" wagon will be started from fire headquarters at 9 o'clock.

A Chicago man, thirty-eight years of age, with no apparent cause, has suddenly recovered his speech after having been dumb since an attack of fever in his seventeenth year. Perhaps, after a perusal of the stock yard revelations, the impulse to give audible expression to his feelings became irresistible.

Annual Piano Recital.

The annual recital of pupils of Miss May Vincent Whitney will be held at the Park Club on June 22. Miss Grace Carroll, contralto, will assist.

AMUSEMENTS.

All the great schools of Europe and America have worked actively for years in the effort to find help for the unfortunate little ones—all with varying results save the Germans, who reached the long fought for goal first andtoday their inventions and remedies make it possible to save nearly, if not all, the lives of the premature or weakly born. The results of the German savants are all embodied in the elaborate exhibition now at Dreamland, Coney Island, where the whole world views an array of infant incubators inhabited by living infants, thus practically demonstrating to the most skeptical this wonderful system's ability to save the most pathetic of cases. Science has at last conquered that which at one time was deemed impossible, and the little lives are saved and children are reared to become a credit and honor to their parents, when once no hope was entertained of saving them. A great work has been undertaken; one of magnitude and far-reaching benefit to mankind in installing so perfect an institution as may be seen at Dreamland. Its work does not stop here, for in every large city similar institutions are to be created and a systematic effort made to instruct the world's motherhood in the care of the prematurely born. It is a well established fact that previous to the installation and use of the infant incubators, all infants weighing less than 2 pounds, 3 ounces, died on the day of their birth. In fact, only about 1s per cent. of all prematurely born infants live according to statistics. It is, therefore, in the nature of a God send that science has presented the world with an instrument with which to do such good work. The employment of incubators as a means of saving the lives of prematurely or very weakly born infants, has not yet become general in America. Yet it is notorious and obvious that the best and almost only means of saving such infants is to protect them absolutely from changes of temperature and from cold. For such purposes children used to be wrapped up in wadding or in sheepskin with the wool adhering.

"The Social Whirl" at the Casino, New York, has an extremely novel finale. The scene represents the steeplechase course of the Bronxville Hunt Club. Upon the result of a race in which women members of the club are riders depends the success and happiness of most of the characters in the play. The heroine, played by Adele Ritchie, is mounted on the favorite, a mare named "The Belle of Kentucky." The race proper is not seen by the audience, being excitedly described in music and action by the players who are gathered near the "hedge jump" at the finish line. At the critical moment rapid wood work is heard in the wings and then The Belle of Kentucky, with Miss Ritchie gracefully astride, soars clear of the five-foot barrier and lands panting in the centre of the stage. This is quite a feat considering that the persons are on the stage and it might result disastrously for some, if Miss Ritchie was not a skillful horsewoman.

Bernhardt's most successful American tour will end with an engagement of three performances at the Lyric theatre, New York, on June 12 and 13, when she will give one performance of "Camille" and two of a composite bill including Act II of "Hamlet" Act III of "From Frou," Act II of "L'Aiglon," and Act IV of "La Sorciere." The great French actress will sail for home on June 14.

DeWolf Hopper will play "Happyland" another year. The Ranken-DeKoven comic opera de luxe has proved the best medium for exhibition of Hopper humor that he has had since "Wang." Marguerite Clark will remain the comedian's leading woman another season after which she will be featured by the Shuberts in a new musical comedy to be written especially for her.

"What promises to become one of the popular features at "Brighton Beach Park" this summer is the Esplanade which branches off the Esplanade at right angles and follows the line of the ocean front for nearly a quarter of a mile. On either side will be shows of all kinds, a regular street fair, and it will be a difficult person indeed who cannot find a pretty deal there which will amuse them. There are laughter making devices, rifle shooting, illusions, a dog, pony and monkey show, which is called "Monkeytown" and in which the little animals give a reproduction of the famous "Battle of the Flames" act which has attracted so much attention in other localities. Then there is the famous Mexican Midget, Chiquita, who is said to be the most perfectly formed little bit of femininity in the world. Another attraction of the kind certain to attract a lot of attention is the collection of pythons and boa constrictors which are exhibited by Professor Lewis. The smallest of these reptiles is said to measure twenty-four feet in length and to weigh over three hundred pounds and there are fifty-two of them besides a most interesting collection of smaller reptiles. The "Pike" and the Ferari Wild Animal Kingdom which opened to the public on Saturday were well patronized. On Decoration Day the Manhattan Beach Baseball Club played its first game to an immense audience. On June 14, The Pawnee Bill Wild West and Far East show take possession of the big arena which has been prepared for its reception.

SERVICES FOR CHILDREN

Day Observed in a Number of Local Churches Sunday.

FLOWERS AND MUSIC

Exercises in First Baptist, Trinity, First Presbyterian and Other Edifices.

Children's Day exercises, an annual feature of Protestant denominations throughout the country, were observed in many local churches Sunday morning. Special music and handsome floral decorations were found in most of the churches. The programmes in some instances, included recitations and songs.

Trinity Reformed Church.

The Children's Day exercises at Trinity Reformed church took the place of the morning service. There was a large attendance.

The programme was elaborate and enjoyable. It included song by the Beginners' department, in charge of which is Miss Mary Berkaw; Beginners' exercise, "Little Gardeners," by George Gary, Warren Kellogg, Alfred Denise, Leroy Mowen, Reginald Applegate, Benjamin Denise; song and psalm 19, by Junior department, at the head of which is Mrs. L. M. Schofield; recitation, Emma H. Ryno; recitation, "Children's Day," Dorothy Martin; exercise, Ella Porter, Beatrice Tier, Madaline Blair, Ruth Enander, Marguerite Barkalew, Helen McKee, Grace Vail, Grace Denise, Helen Saffron, Evelyn Sokol, Maude McAfee, Edna Mowen; exercise, "Why We Like Children's Day," Marion Blair, Marion Woolley, Laura Smith, Amelia Kersting; exercise, "Childhood's Hours," Leroy Leland, William Tier, Theodore Vail, Louise Seader; recitation, "How Things Seem to a Boy," Walter Fisher; recitation, "Grandpa's Pet," Milford McAfee; recitation, "Accounted For," Edson Day; recitation, "Max Room for the Children," Ruth Hoffman; recitation, "The Land of Smiles," Raymond Stevens; song, "Six Little Daisies," Adelaide Cole, Clara Lee, Anna Vail, Hilda Bennett, Mildred Priemer, Grace Vail; song, "The Blossoms' Greeting," Elsie Bodine, Elsie Debele, Anna Lee, Hilda Bennett, Clara Lee.

Miss Lucy Coriell played for the Beginners' and the Primary departments. Miss Elsie Tier for the Juniors, and Miss Ethel Martin for the Main school. W. C. Leek led the singing by the school.

The platform was prettily decorated with flowers. An unusual decorative effect was secured with a large frame across the front of the platform, to which daisies were thickly placed; it looked like a field of daisies, and made an attractive foil for the flowers. The decorations were placed by a committee made up of Miss Mabel Wilson, Mrs. Clarence Burt and Miss Anna Searing.

Nine children were baptized by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Schenck. They ranged in age from four months to four years.

First M. E. Church.

Under the auspices of the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church, Children's Day exercises were held Sunday in connection with the morning services. The church was decorated with flowers. James R. Joy, superintendent of the Sunday-school, was in charge of the programme, and the vested choir assisted in the musical numbers.

The programme opened with a processional by the choir and school, prayer by the pastor, Rev. A. C. McCrea, followed with a greeting song by these members of the primary department: Edward Crone, Violet Burton, Howard Hile, Mildred Burnett, Chester Alpaugh, Jubilee Rowley, Edith Little. There was a song, solo by Miss Agnes Bailey and the chorus by the girls from the primary department.

The offertory selection was in the nature of a duette by Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell and Miss Bertha vanNuis Willis. The pastor then baptized the following children: Russell White Lynn, Raymond Clausen Lynn, Frank W. Tallman, Lydia Ruth Tallman, Mabele Koch, Robert G. Squire, Jean Bender, Elizabeth Katherine Marchant, Eleanor Janet Marchant, Daisy Katie Hile, John Russell Beekman, Emma Lois Beekman, Walter E. Dawe, Carlton E. Moore, Margaret Ruth Evans.

Other numbers on the programme included recitation, "Love," Mildred Burnett; "Story of the Seed," Bessie Marchant, Ciolet Sutton, Alice Joy; song, "God is Near Me," primary class; recitation, "Child and Mother," Edward Crone. The beginners' department gave these recitations: John Bolsterle, Harold Vail, Harold Seal, Nicholas Cody, Jay Squier, Earl DeNise, Ruth La Cas, Loren Pope; song, Frank Bowler; recitations and song, several children. The programme was closed with a recessional by the vested choir.

Park Avenue Baptist Church.

Elaborate Children's Day exercises were held at the Park Avenue Baptist church, Sunday morning, under the auspices of the Sunday-school. Assisting in the rendition of the musical numbers was the Sunday-school orchestra. The opening numbers included a prelude by the orchestra, a selection, "Keep in Step," choir; "A June Carol," school; carol, "Summer Days," school; exercise, "My Choice," Wesley Johnson, Marjorie Lee, Eleanor Stover, Irene Mou and John Thompson; carol, "Flowers of June," school; recitation, "Growing," Sarah Johnson; flower drill, Clara Hadley, Hilda Van Winkle, Edith Lowry, Ida Odam, Isabel Harvey, Madeline Moy, Ethel Naylor; offertory, orchestra; selection, "Nature's Teachings," choir; song, "Lily's Lesson," primary department.

The last half of the programme was devoted to an emblematic piece descriptive of the Christian's life, entitled "The Voyage of Life." The pupils acting as crew of the boat were Elmore Stutsman, Ethel Van Winkle, Arline Brown, Iva Hadley, Lillian Cuming, Marjorie Brown, Mabel Stutsman, Ethel Neilson, Joseph Hadley, Hugo Hansen, Ethel Lorton, Edith Whitney, Susie Whitney, Marion Mortimer, Isabel von Brakle, Annie Clark, Marion Miller, Irene Moy, William Ponsford and Gordon Moy.

The piece closed with a vocal selection, "Homeward Bound," and a carol, "Rose Strewn Way," by the school. Another special feature was the singing of "The Holy City," by Mrs. William H. Sebring, while Miss Arline Brown in Greek costume acted the part. The exercises which were in charge of the superintendent of the school, assisted by the pastor, Rev. A. W. Pinn, concluded with a song, "On This Happy Children's Day," by the school, the benediction and postlude by the orchestra. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers, under the direction of Mrs. Charles Van Winkle, chairman.

Faith Chapel.

Children's Day exercises were held at Faith chapel, Sunday, when the children presented an excellent programme, under the direction of Superintendent L. W. Randolph, assisted by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Musson. The programme opened with an organ voluntary by W. A. Conger, followed by the singing of "Beautiful Summer," by the school. An anthem by the choir preceded an address of welcome by Roy Haffner and Verna Stewart; a song by the primary department, a recitation, "My Little Apple," Helen Marie Harold; recitations, girls from the primary department; recitation, Helen Myers; anthem by the choir; song, Bessie Carson. Pastor Musson then made a few appropriate remarks, speaking of the significance of the day. There was another anthem by the choir, and the programme closed with the benediction.

Bethel Chapel.

Children's Day exercises were held Sunday afternoon at Bethel chapel. The programme included an address by William D. Murray, appropriate songs by the school, a solo by Mr. Stalney, recitations by Avenue Presbyterian church choir, and recitations by the pupils. Those who took part are as follows: Julius Smith, Petwyn Robinson, Morris Somerset, Fidella Potter, Mary Johnson. An offering was made for the Sunday-school Board.

First Baptist Church.

Children's Day exercises were held in the afternoon at the First Baptist church, under the auspices of the Sunday-school, Mrs. J. A. Powlison, superintendent of the primary department, being in charge of the programme. The church was in bloom and welcome by Lawrence French, recitations by Elmer French, Miss Florence Neal and Willie Rickett. There were also songs by the primary department and the main school. The church auditorium was appropriately decorated, a feature being a large cross made of daisies, which occupied a prominent place in front of the platform. Roses were also used extensively. During the exercises the Junior Mason was taught by Miss Edith Cairns.

ANNUAL LAWN PARTY.

W. D. Murray Entertained One Hundred Children.

William D. Murray, superintendent of the primary department of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Sunday-school, entertained the children from that department, as well as the cradle roll and intermediate department, at his home Saturday afternoon. The affair was in a nature of a lawn party and was very informal.

During the afternoon the 120 little tots enjoyed themselves playing games, while a pleasing diversion was a Punch and Judy show and some tricks by an entertainer. Later refreshments were served. Mr. Murray was assisted in entertaining by his wife and the various teachers in the departments represented. There were about 150 persons present.

Colby's Summer Home.

Senator Colby has taken a house in one of the thousand Islands of the St. Lawrence river, and will make Island his home for the summer. It is an attractive spot and there is fishing a-plenty and much else to do. Mr. Colby will probably not take much part in the summer campaign this year, although he will miss the interest and excitement. He has been constantly engaged in politics for a year now and wants some rest. Last year he had a cottage near Seabright, but saw little of it during his campaign, and preferred a place further removed from excitements and interruptions. The Senator will have a number of Jerseymen as neighbors, including William Riker, of Orange, clerk of the Supreme Court.—Newark Call.

FEDERATED LABOR MEN'S CONVENTION IN AUGUST.

Larger Number of Delegates Than Usual Expected—Growing Rapidly Recently.

The New Jersey State Federation of Labor will have its next convention at Trenton in August. There will be a larger representation than in previous years from unions throughout the State, judging from reports.

The State Federation of Labor has been growing rapidly in the last few years, and it is expected this year's convention will be the most representative gathering ever held in this State. Cornelius Ford, of Hoboken, is the president of the State body, having held that position for four terms.

To interest the local unions in the convention the State Federation some time ago sent a communication to the different central labor unions of the State, which are affiliated with the State organization, requesting that they recommend special deputy organizers for this purpose.

The New Jersey Federation of Labor has for years taken an active interest in legislative affairs and it was mainly through its efforts that the child labor law was adopted several years ago. Vice President H. J. Gottlob is chairman of the legislative committee.

Parochial School Commencement.

St. Mary's Parochial School graduating exercises will be held in the New Plainfield theatre on Wednesday night, June 27, and will be an elaborate affair. The programme will consist chiefly of spectacular dances and music, an instructor in dancing from the Grand Opera House, New York, having charge of this part of the entertainment. Several prizes in gold have been offered for excellence in the different departments and the winners' names will be announced at the commencement exercises. There are nine graduates from the school this year.

A Plainfield Bred Blue Winner.

Michael Quinn, the local horse shoer, is feeling justly proud after the horse show because of the fact that he is the breeder of "Ixion," the first Plainfield bred horse to take a blue ribbon. "Ixion" is a three-year-old stallion and was raised by Mr. Quinn at his place on Park avenue, but was sold by him a year ago to Dr. Voorhees, of Somerville, the exhibitor. Mr. Quinn has another home bred stallion that he will exhibit in 1907.

FREEHOLDERS APPOINT COLLECTOR PRO TEM.

Nathan R. Leavitt to Act for Edward M. Wood.

Nathan R. Leavitt, of Elizabeth, has been chosen by the Board of Freeholders to act as county collector pro tem. during the illness of the County Collector Edward M. Wood. Mr. Leavitt will receive the salary voted to Mr. Wood while he is serving. He has furnished bonds in the sum of $20,000, his securities being Hamilton R. Kean, Louis F. Hersh and Richard T. Potts.

Checks against the county will be signed by Mr. Leavitt and countersigned by the director of the board, Major King. This is in accordance with the resolution providing for the appointment of a collector pro tem. All the banks in which lie any of the county's money are to be notified of the resolution creating the change.

Freeholder Cady said that for some time the board had been confronted with the fact that County Collector Wood had been incapacitated by sickness from attending to the duties of his office. He said County Attorney Codington had been approached on the subject and had prepared an opinion. Clerk Ryno read this. It stated that since the board was desirous of retaining the services of Mr. Wood in spite of his illness, and as the work of the county had to go on, it would be permissible to select someone to sign checks against the county, the checks to be countersigned by the director of the board, sufficient bonds to be furnished, and the various banks holding the county's money to be notified of the change. This opinion was ordered placed on file.

D. of A. Will Attend Service.

The members of Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America, auxiliary to the Jr. O. U. A. M., have received an invitation from Rev. E. E. Roberson, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, to attend divine services at that church, with the Juniors, on Sunday night, July 1.

Her Escort Was Thumped.

The sharp piercing cries of a woman yelling "help!" "murder!" and "police!" about 11 o'clock Saturday night, aroused Scotch Plains and drew a crowd to the corner of Barth and Park avenues. A much excited woman was trying to prevent her escort from following another man, whom they claimed had walked up behind them and hit the man in the jaw, knocking out three teeth. The alleged assailant made good his escape. The escort said he knew him and would square up accounts.

E. B. BIRD,

Many Deals in Borough Realty.

That borough property is on the boom just now is indicated by the deals made this week by George F. Brown, the Somerville real estate broker. D. T. Waring's property at Giraud and Willow avenues, has been sold to Judd Stewart, auditor for the American Smelting And Refining Company; A. R. Phillips, of Washingtonville, has purchased from George Sperschild a new cottage home at 36 Grandview avenue; Oscar Peterson has bought the property at 35 Codington avenue, owned by Frank Cleaves and Mrs. Newton B. Smalley has closed a deal with Judd Stewart for the latter's homestead property at 20 Willow avenue, and after improvements are made will live there.

Boys Valuable Property.

M. Weinberger, the clothier, has closed a deal whereby he purchased of Mrs. Peck, of Brooklyn, through her agent, J. F. Simmons, the brick row of nine houses on Grove street, extending from Green brook almost to Prospect place. This has a frontage of 180 feet and a depth of 300, the land comprising about an acre and a half. Mr. Weinberger will continue to rent the property as at present. This is considered one of the largest deals in residential property in many months.

COMMITTEE REPORTS FOR MUNICIPAL GARBAGE PLANT

Investigators Place Cost of Improvements to the City's Plant at $24,000.

READY FOR ACTION

Running Expenses Estimated at $10,000 Annually—To Be Raised By Tax-ation.

After making a through investigation of the matter, the public affairs committee of the Common Council will recommend to that body that a municipal system for the collection and disposal of garbage and ashes be inaugurated. The report will be presented at the next regular meeting, on Monday night, July 2, and Chairman Buxton will move its adoption.

According to the figures compiled by the committee it will cost the city $24,000 approximately to make necessary repairs and to enlarge the plant. The plant purchased by the city through Mayor James F. Buckle for a mere bagatelle is located on DeKalb avenue. It is in a somewhat dilapidated condition owing to its non-usage for a long period.

The running expenses per annum are computated at $10,000. This sum would be raised by taxation and would be included in the regular councilmanic budget. It is unlikely that the plant would be put in operation before the first of next year but the committee is anxious to finish its part of the work as speedily as possible.

In speaking of the matter this morning, Mr. Buxton said: "The committee has done a large amount of work in this conection and I think its findings will be favorably received by the other members of the Common Council. Personally I believe that the city should collect and dispose of garbage and ashes for the householders. That is the view taken by the Board of Health and that body I think will do all in its power to bring about the improvement."

JERSEY CENTRAL SHORE TRAIN IN BAD WRECK.

Twenty Injured and One Killed Near Eatontown This Morning.

Twenty persons were injured and one killed outright in the wreck of the Atlantic City Express on the New Jersey Central, at Eatontown, at 11 o'clock, this morning. The train left Lakewood at 10:15 and was running at the rate of fifty miles an hour when Eatontown was reached. The wreck was due to the disarrangement of a switch.

The train was made up of a mogul engine, combination baggage and smoking car, day coach and two Pullmans. The fatalities occurred in the combination baggage and smoking car. The fireman had his thigh fractured but the engineer escaped uninjured.

It was about fifty feet north of the Eatontown station that the train struck, what was believed to be the open switch. The engine and combination baggage and smoker were ditched and the day coach left the track, colliding with a couple of freight cars on a siding. The Pullmans were badly damaged.

The train was crowded with homeward-bound New Yorkers, who had been spending Sunday at Atlantic City and Lakewood. The train was due in Jersey City at 12:30.

MRS. PHILPOTT DEAD.

Passed Away at Her Home Saturday After Three Months' Illness.

After a painful illness of three months, Mrs. Catharine C. Philpott passed away at her home on Plainfield avenue, Saturday afternoon. She was eighty-seven years old and was a sister of the late Thomas Belts, a Civil War veteran. She was one of the oldest members of Holy Cross church, having been connected with it thirty years, and her pure Christian faith in God was a lesson to all those around her. She was patient and faithful during her severe illness.

Mrs. Philpott leaves on son, Theodore, and four daughters, Adelaide, Julia and Cornelia Philpott and Mrs. George Conover, of the borough. There is also surviving one brother, George W. Belts and one sister, Charlott C. K. Crook, both of Brooklyn. The funeral will be held at her late home tonight at 8 o'clock and interment will be in Cypress Hills cemetery, New York, tomorrow noon.

Singing Festival Prize.

A handsome silver loving cup won by the Saengerbund at the Jersey City Liederkranz contest on Sunday, is on exhibition at Henry Haurand's cafe, East Front street. The cup was second prize. It is engraved with the event and the date.

MEN OF CONGREGATION TO PAINT THEIR CHURCH

VOLUNTEER A DAY'S SERVICES AND THE WOMEN WILL SERVE DINNER.

Lacking the necessary funds but possessed of determination, the members of the First Church of Christ have adopted a novel scheme to have their edifice on Grove street, just over the brook, painted thoroughly inside and out. The men have volunteered to donate a day's service and the women have agreed to provide the dinner and serve it on the grounds. All the necessary help has been secured, and it is thought the work can be done in one day.

It is hoped to raise the money for the paint and other materials by an ice cream and strawberry festival that is to be held on the church grounds this afternoon and evening from 4 until 10. The surroundings will be brilliantly illuminated by electric lights and the committee in charge has planned to make it a complete success and extends a cordial invitation to everyone. The painting is to be done on or about June 22.

CAPTAIN FEIRING'S TEAM GETS THE BLUE RIBBON

"ANDY" AND "MACK" JUDGED TO BE SUPERIOR TO "NIP" AND "TUCK."

Amid the enthusiastic hand-clapping of hundreds of fashionable spectators, Plainfield's crack fire department team, "Andy" and "Mack," stationed at No. 2 house, received the blue ribbon at the horse show, Saturday afternoon. They competed for it in the fire department class with the borough's gray geldings, "Nip" and "Tuck," and at no time during the exhibition were the entries more closely matched.

Captain Frank Feiring drove the winning team and he had them under absolute control from the moment they entered the ring. In the judging, style, action and conformation of manner in horses counted sixty per cent. and the apparatus forty. In each instance the latter was a combination chemical and hose engine and though the borough's is comparatively new, the city vehicle was every bit as natty and fine appearing despite its years of service.

Lieutenant Campbell handled "Nip" and "Tuck" and while they are two splendid animals they lacked manners and conformation. One is somewhat larger than the other and this fact was apparent at a glance. They also jumped impatiently at critical periods and when the command was given to run, their gait was a gallop. Feiring's team is perfectly matched in size and color and they moved about like clockwork. Not once during the inspection did they misbehave and in the running they did it as prettily as if showing off was any everyday affair to them. These points were all observed by the men who make it a practice to judge prize steeds and was what resulted in Plainfield getting the blue.

The prize that accompanied the ribbon was $50 in plate offered by W. J. Buttfield, of the borough.

Oriole City Man Loses Blue Ribbon to New Yorker in Companion in Exhibit.

BEAUTY AND BREED

Handsome Women Stylishly Gowned a Feature of the Closing Day of Third Annual Show.

With nearly double the number of spectators in attendance than had been noted on the previous two days, Plainfield's third annual horse show closed Saturday afternoon. Threatening showers that hung about the city considerately held off and the last class passed before the judges but a few minutes before the pattering rain drops began to fall. In the early part of the afternoon the sun shone gloriously and reflected the bright hues of hundreds of gorgeous gowns worn by fashionable women in grandstand and boxes and they presented a very pretty sight. The local contingent of society was added to by smart folk from New York, Brooklyn, Morristown and Newrk, while more than a few represented Philadelphia, Baltimore and even Richmond, Va. All in all the gathering was a representative one and did much to add to the success of the Riding and Driving Club's affair.

The programme for the afternoon's judging comprised fourteen classes and through them J. W. Hayman, of New York, and C. W. Watson, of Baltimore, stood out prominently as rivals for honors. The former was a little ahead of the latter in the number of ribbons to his credit for the two days and naturally when they met in the last class of the day and the most important of the show, there was an undercurrent of excitement. It was the companion harness exhibit, open only to blue ribbon winners, and eight splendid animals attached to smart rigs came into the ring.

Watson's entry was his champion "Lord Baltimore," while Harriman's was the proud-stepping "Chieftan," the color quickly narrowing down to these two. The judges realized what was at stake and again and again the rival horses were sent around the ring while every move was closely watched. Mr. Watson was his own driver and while Donnolly handled the ribbons over "Chieftan's" back, both sitting with set expressions and the apparent determination to bring out every little detail which they have learned from long experience. Hayman, who were to decide came to an agreement and there was a tremendous capping of gloved hands when the coveted ribbon was pinned on "Lord Baltimore's" bridle. The smile that lit Watson's features, and that indicated to the spectators that the victory fully repaid him for bringing thirty horses from Baltimore to take part in the show and made him prouder than ever of his favorite.

The other championship class of the day, for saddle horses, W. S. Elliott's "Jasmine" was the winner while great applause followed the award of the reserve ribbon to Miss Margaret McCutchen's chestnut mare "Ali Ablaze." The latter stood an even chance for first place and she took second against such blue-ribboners as Miss Emily Bedford's "Patsey Palmer," Joseph Larocque's "Somerset," Otto H. Kahn's "Elsa" and Tom Rogers, Jr.'s and H. R. Moore's "Gibson Girl." It was a big victory for "Ali Ablaze" as in addition Saturday, she captured two blues, making a total of three blues and a white for the show. She was unfortunate the first day in getting the "pink" four times, something that never happened to her sine she has been bidding for honors.

A pretty class of the day was for four-in-hands and entries were made by C. W. Watson and George Watson. Both were handsome equipages, but the Baltimore man's took first prize. In the classes for jumpers, the Westchester Farm's prize animals took the first and seconds each time and F. G. Platt's "Donner" and "Blitzen" were awarded the blue in the only team class of the day.

Besides Miss McClutchen's "Ali Ablaze," the local winners in the Saturday classes were W. J. Buttfield's "Miss Barnham," one red; Charles J. Fisk's "Careful," one red; Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton's "Garnet," one reda; Miss Mabel B. Hooley's "Brevet," one yellow; Miss Margaret McCutchen's "Blaze Away," one yellow; Miss Mabel B. Hooley's "Babe," one white, and George A. Beaton's "Laddie," one white. In the exhibit of fire horses, attached to apparatus other than steamer on hook-and-ladder trucks, the blues were awarded "Andy" and "Mack" of the No. 2 Company, Plainfield, over "Nip" and Tuck," No. 2 Company, North Plainfield. The winners were driven by Captain George Feiring.

The summary of the day's classes follows:

Class 28—Four qualified hunters up to carrying 200 pounds to hounds. First, Red Raven, Westchester Farm; second, Jack Frost, Wesichester Farm; third, Nimrod, J. E. Davis, New York; fourth, Harry G. Peter Hauck, Jr., Newark.

WORKING OUT HORSES FOR JULY 7H RACES.

Fast Steppers Going Over Course at the Driving Park.

Owners of fast-stepping horses who are interested in the big circuit race meet to be held at the Driving Park Fourth of July, are getting things ready for the event. A number of the horses have been brought to the Park already for training over the course.

Garrison & Co., Philadelphia, have Gidney King, a pacer with a mark of 2:20¼; Black Dart, a green pacer, by Directum; Frank Dale, a trotter with a mark of 2:23¾; Harry Gayton, a stallion that promises a lot as a trotter; and Ocean Princess, a trotter with a mark of 2:18¼, at the track.

The Raritan Stock Farm has two fast horses there, in Col. Delmar, half-brother to Major Delmar; with a mark of 2:14¾ on that trot; and Ikey, a green pacer. Ikey has made a mile in 2:16 an a half-mile track.

Several other fast and promising youngsters are going over the track, including colts by Baron Dillon and other noted sires. Among the local horses are Adam Blair's Harry Dawson, a stallion by Night Hawk, with a mark of 2:20, made on a local track; Tom Brantingham's fast green pacer, that has made a mark of 2:14 on a half-mile track; Dr. Bonnell's pacer, Ben Butler, with plenty of speed promises; and John Osman's Hartwood Bel, by Lind Bel, with a mark of 2:26¾ on a trot.

Wise Youth.

Uncle John—I didn't think you liked oatmeal so much.

Willie—I don't like it at all.

Uncle John—But your mother said you could stay home today and you began right off to complain—

Willie—O! when mom says I can stay home that's a sign she's got a whole lot of errans for me to do.

Juniors Will Attend Church.

Rev. E. E. Roberson, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, has invited all of the Jr. O. U. A. M. Councils, of the city, to attend divine services at his church on Sunday night, July 1. The invitation has been accepted.

WON IN FOURTEEN INNINGS.

Dunellen Take Stiff Game From Somersets, of North Plainfield.

It took Dunellen fourteen innings to capture the game from the Somerset A. C., Saturday afternoon. The contest over played on the Dunellen grounds. Russell pitched a great game, using his underhand delivery with great effectiveness. Conover, who succeeded McLaughlin for the Somersets, also pitched well up to the fourteenth.

Both teams played well in the field. The feature of the game was Garretson's throw to the plate from deep center in the sixth, catching Mullen, who tried to score from second on Mehaffey's single. Titsworth also made a great catch in the eleventh, pulling down a drive that looked good for three bags, and doubling McVoy up at second.

FOUND DEEGAN'S CURVES AND DEFEATED HOBOKEN.

Central Islips Whitewash the Daabsters in Easy Fashion.

The Central Islips landed on "Willie" Deegan's slants at St. George's Cricket Grounds, Hoboken, Sunday, and gave the Hobokens their second coat of whitewash for the season. The visitors won by a score of 6 to 0. They secured twelve hits off Deegan, while Manager Daab's aggregation had to be satisfied with four hits off Sammy Hope, who formerly pitched here. Features of the game were the two-base hits by Heffron and Bertwhistle.

FESTIVAL AND BAZAAR.

Held Saturday at St. Stephen's New Parish House.

Under the auspices of the St. Mary and St. Faith Guilds of St. Stephen's church, a successful festival and bazaar was held at the new parish house Saturday afternoon and evening from 4 to 10 o'clock. The two societies, under the direction of Mrs. James Buckler and Mrs. Robert Mc-Cready, decorated the house attractively with flowers, bunting and flags. During the afternoon and evening ice cream, cake, candy, strawberries and fancy articles were sold and at a late hour all that was left was auctioned off. About $50 was realized as profit to be used for the running expenses of the church.

Those assisting at the affair were the Misses Knox, Lacey, Kahrman, Willis, Mary J. Tygard, Eleanor Gulbert, Helen Borup, Carrie Borup. These young women were also assisted by other members of the church and all were gratified with the large attendance and liberal patronage.

Berthwistle Too; His Shoes.

Jimmey Berthwistle, the fast left fielder of the Plainfield nine, got a handsome pair of patent leather shoes from Mr. Vandardale, the East Front street shoe dealer, Saturday night, for knocking out a home run in the game against the Cuban Stars. Jimmey says he is going to stock up on shoes by the next three years at Mr. Vandardale's expense. He is the heaviest hitter on the team and may do as he says. It was the first home run of the season, and consequently the first time Mr. Vandardale was called on to meet his offer of footwear for four-base hits.

ACCIDENT AT THE SHOW

Tonzo Sauvage's Runabout Rig Overturns Pinning Down the Groom.

GOTTEN OUT UNHURT

Second Day's Judging Brings Many Difficult Classes to the Ring—Local Exhibitors Divide Honors Evenly.

An accident to one of Tonzo Sauvage's rigs which looked as if it might result seriously but which in reality caused no great harm, added a tinge of excitement to the programme of the horse show Friday afternoon. While class 12, one of the best of the day, was being considered by the judges, Edward Carver, a groom employed by Mr. Sauvage, came in the ring with his "Lord Nelson" attached to a runabout. There were fifteen other competitors and when several of them met at the end it became necessary for one or more to make a quick turn toward the centre to avoid colliding.

Carver did so several times and finally got to whirling around at a high rate of speed in a dangerous manner. He essayed to cut the north turn very short and in so doing the vehicle went over with himself beneath it. "Lord Nelson" was thrown down and became entangled in the harness, rendering both driver and horse practically helpless. Grooms quickly lifted up the runabout and greatly to the relief of everyone, Carver was found to be unhurt. The animal was also gotten to its feet without a scratch and was re-harnessed to the runabout, which was slightly damaged. The groom plucky resumed his seat and received fourth prize in the awards.

The blue ribbon for the class went to J. W. Harriman's "Chieftan," with C. W. Watson's "Newmarket," a newcomer locally, second, and the Elsinor Stock Farm's "Katzenjammer Kid" at third.

Though there were but seven entries, no class during the afternoon, perhaps, proved more difficult "to judge than No. 7 for pairs of horses in harness. The pic of the out-of-town entries was in it and no agreement was reached on first choice for over half an hour. The judges were so much in doubt that they rode around the ring with the drivers to satisfy themselves on several points the first time they had to call a since the shed was closed. The lucky contestants were J. W. Harriman's "Chieftan" and Laughing Water," which took first in the tandem class Thursday. "Lord Baltimore" and "Miss Maryland," C. W. Watson's handsome black geldings, carried off the red; Lehman Strauss' "Flurette" and "Babette" the yellow and Walter Bliss' "The Artist" and "St. Clair" the white.

Mr. Harriman took in all during the day's three firsts, one second, one third and one fourth, but this record was beaten by H. R. Ladew's entries from the Elsinore Stock Farm. They were awarded three firsts, one second, two thirds and one fourth.

But these exhibitors were distanced in Class 20 for fifteen saddle horses, when a superb array of animals responded to the call of the coach horn. W. S. Elliott's "Jim mine," which won first in a similar class at the Philadelphia horse show last week over Mrs. John Gerken's "Surprise," took the blue ribbon, and Mr. Harriman's "Corinne," ridden by Miss Belle Beach, was second. "Big Dream" and Miss Emily H. Bedford's "Patsey Palmer," which won a blue Thursday in the combination saddle and harness class, was fourth.

Walter P. Bliss' "Red Fox," a stylish chestnut saddler, was the recipient of the blue in the class for sixteen horses in harness, the next to the last on the day's programme, but one of the most important. More time was spent on this than any other and the result was in doubt until the last moment. "Wesvirginia," C. W. Watson's offering, was second choice; Geo. Watson's "Lord Lonsdale" third, and Charles W. McCutchen's "Bimbashi" fourth. Even the ordinary observer, in looking at "Bimbashi" was a sure blue and there was great disappointment among his admirers in the grandstand and boxes when he failed to get it. The Elsinore Farm's "Cassia" and "Katzenjammer Kid" were also winners in the only tandem class of the day, carrying off the blue against five other competitors.

Among the Plainfield contestants, honors for the day, so far as the number of awards are concerned, were pretty evenly divided. William Palmer Smith's "Beresford" and "Belmore" captured the blue in the hardest local class, No. 29, eight pairs of horses in harness; another blue went to Miss Margaret McCutchen's "All Ablaze" in the saddle horse competition and a blue was awarded W. J. Buttfield in the judging of draught horses. In the later event there were four entries, Captain William Hand's gray gelding "Jim" getting the red and Percy S. Dayton's "Jake" the yellow. Miss Lucy Otterson's "Flying Squirrel" received a white in a class of nine jumpers, competing against such well known prize winners as the Westchester Farm's "Onerios," "Cygnet," "Red Raven" and "Jack Frost." W. J. Buttfield's team, "Miss Banahan" and "Miss Westcott," won a red in a class for roadsters and H. G. Runkle's "Duke" and "Duchess" carried off a yellow in the only class they were entered, No. 29, for pairs of horses in harness. Miss McCutchen's "All Ablaze" and "Blaze Away," driven by Mrs. Charles A. Heed, took a fourth in the judging of five pairs of horses in harness.

The summary of the day's awards is as follows:

Class 24—Nine jumpers over four 5 foot jumps; performance over fence only to count. First, Onerios, Westchester Farms, Orange; second, Jack Frost, Westchester Farm, Orange; third, Red Raven, Westchester Farm, Orange; fourth, Flying Squirrel, Miss Lucy Otterson, Plainfield.

Class 27—Four draft horses shown in hand. First, Miss Buster Brown, W. J. Buttfield, Plainfield; second, Jim, William Hand, Plainfield; third, Jake, Percy S. Dayton, Plainfield; fourth, John, William Hand, Plainfield.

Do They Eat in Heaven?

The two young hopefuls had just returned from the Sunday-school. They were hungry and seemed more interested in what they were about to eat than in telling their parents what they had learned at the church. The conversation was a mixture of remarks about the golden text, and when the cook had prepared for dessert.

"Say, do they have anything to eat in heaven?" the four-year-old suddenly asked. Before he could be answered he ejaculated:

"When I go to heaven the first thing I'll say will be: 'Have you got anything good to eat here?' If they say no, I won't stay."

P. H. S. AGAIN CHAMPION

City Public Schools Defeat Borough Nine in Final of Interscholastics.

THE SERIES NOW ENDED

Plainfield High School Won Ten Out of Fourteen Games, Retaining Laurels Won Last Season.

The Plainfield High School baseball team closed its season on the diamond Friday afternoon by winning the final game with the North Plainfield High School aggregation for the city interscholastic championship. Its record is ten victories out of fourteen games played. Individually the nine was weak at the bat, though remarkably strong in the field at the beginning of the season, but hard practice brought every player up to a good standard of hitting.

By far the largest crowd of the season turned out yesterday afternoon to witness the final game on Cresscent Oval. It was the closing game of the season for both nines and to win the game meant much.

From the beginning the borough boys showed stage fright and as a result, with the aid of two large errors the boys of this city's high school scored two runs in the first inning. No further scoring was done until the fifth inning, when the boys from across the brook scored their only run, by Smith being hit by the ball. He stole second and third and scored on Dunning's sacrifice to first.

Plainfield High School scored three in the sixth by bunching two hits, a base on balls and good base-running. The last tally for Plainfield High School came in the ninth on E. Freeman's three-bagger and VanDeventer's sacrifice to second. The borough team failed to score in their half of the ninth, leaving the score 6 to 1 in favor of the Plainfield High School nine, and again giving them the city scholastic championship.

Mehaffey occupied the slab for the city team and though wild at times, hitting three men, he held the borough boys well in hand, allowing them but one scratch hit, and striking out every boroughite with the exception of two. Peacock, of the North Plainfield boys, pitched in fine style and with better support might well have reversed the score, but the borough boys made seven large errors behind him. The features of the game were Mehaffey's attack for the North Plainfield High School and VanDeventer's playing at second for Plainfield High School. Excellent hitting was done for the city team by Mehaffey, Doane, S. Freeman and Loiseaux.

The score and summary follows:

HONOR NEW MISSIONARY

Farewell to M. K. W. Belcher by the Grace Church Epworth League.

FIANCEE HONORED ALSO

Presented With a Set of Henry Van Dyke's Books—To Leave For Japan Next Month.

The Epworth League of Grace M. E. church tendered a farewell reception, Friday, to M. K. W. Belcher, who will shortly leave for Japan as a missionary, and to Miss Margaret S. Hallock, who will sail with him as his bride.

The affair was largely attended. Flowers decorated the platform and the piano.

Informality marked the evening. There was a programme of entertainment, but all the numbers were delightful and only one of them formal in nature.

Mr. Belcher received a complete set of Henry Van Dyke's works as the League's parting gift. Rev. Dr. Parsons, pastor of the church, made the presentation. He spoke briefly. He assured Mr. Belcher that all he would have the Epworth League feel and wish him, it did feel and wish. The spirit of the evening had been jovial and informal, he said, and he felt it was just as well to keep that spirit. He congratulated Mr. Belcher on the happy event that was soon to occur and wished him and his fiancee Godspeed on behalf of all those present.

Mr. Belcher made a feeling response. He said that Grace was the first church to which he really had felt at home. He had come to it by chance one rainy Sunday, and the spirit of fellowship and cordiality that manifested itself had held him to it ever since. He had been inspired by the church and by the Epworth League. It had been said that a man who has a friend is not useless, and the token of the League members' friendship that he held in his hand made him happy in the thought that he was perhaps of some use in the world.

The programme included readings by Miss Helen Whitney, piano duet by the Misses Florence Smalley and Edith Major, song by Miss Agnes Bailey, and violin solo and imitations of bird songs by Mr. Brynildsen.

Refreshments were served. The committee in charge was made up of Miss Mary Hoagland, chairman; Miss Grace Clark, Miss Ada Van Horn, Miss Lucetta Clark, and Miss Banahan. Mrs. J. B. Harden, Raymond Miller, Benjamin Schuck and George Parsons.

Mr. Belcher will leave for Rochester next Saturday, to be married at Miss Hallock's home. He will sail for Japan July 25. He is to join the faculty of a missionary school at Nagasaki. He is now an instructor at the borough high school.

FAMOUS CHICAGO HOMESTEAD SCENE OF NUPTIALS.

Lieutenant Commander Williams, U. S. N., Gave His Sister in Marriage.

The Chicago Tribune's society column on Thursday contained the following account of a wedding in that city of Miss Adele Cutts Williams, daughter of the late General Williams, and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, of this city:

"The old Farwell homestead at 99 Pearson street, which has sheltered hundreds of brides in years past, but which recently has been quiet, save for the small luncheons and dinners given by Mr. and Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor, was the scene of a wedding last night.

"The bride was Miss Adele Cutts Williams, of Washington, a sister of Mrs. Walter Farwell. She was married to Dr. Benjamin Van Doren Hedges, of Plainfield, N. J., the ceremony at 9 o'clock being performed by the Rev. John H. Dennis. Lieut. Commander Philip Williams, U. S. N., gave his sister in marriage. Mrs. Walter Farwell attended as matron of honor, while a brother of the groom, Dr. Ellis W. Hedges, acted as best man.

"The bride wore a gown of soft white satin trimmed with point lace, and her tulle veil was caught with orange blossoms, which flowers she also carried. Mrs. Farwell's gown was of white lace and she garried a large loose bunch of white roses. Following the ceremony at the ceremony, which was followed by a supper, the newly married couple then leaving for a wedding journey. They will reside in Plainfield, N. J."

Will Open Home July 2.

The officers of the Netherwood Fresh Aid Home are busily engaged in preparing for the opening of the Home on Monday, July 2, when Miss Sara Curry will bring her large family of children out from New York. The Home has been improved in many ways and will be in readiness for the reception of the children and several mothers. This week a number of friends have been busy preparing articles of wearing apparel for the children.

For a delicious and refreshing drink of soda water or ice cream stop at Kelley Miller's pharmacy on Park avenue. It will just suit your taste.

STEVENSON CHILDREN AT PLAINFIELD SEMINARY

ANNUAL ENTERTAINMENT BY LITTLE FOLKS MOST DELIGHTFUL.

Stevenson's children from "A child's Garden of Verse," entertained their parents and friends at the Plainfield Seminary Friday, it being the annual closing entertainment by the little folks. Lovers of Jessie Wilcox Smith's drawings might have thought a rival artist had come to life, so quaint and children were there. But the gate was open and the "grown up people" were allowed to share its delights with the little ones, who in story and song made merry in a fashion to have charmed even the author himself. An original poem by Miss Frances Perkins on Stevenson as a writer added much interest to the entertainment.

The programme arranged by Miss Elvire Kenyon, Miss Jackson and Miss West follows:

"Stevenson's Child of Verse," by Robert Louis Stevenson. Cast:

"To Any Reader," Alison Williams; song, "The Wind," all; "My Shadow," Dorothy MacClymont; "The Thought," Mary Timpson; "The Wish," Minie Taylor; "Marching Song," Constance Veysey, Wolcott Calkins, Morris VanBuren, Theodore Moldenke, Dorothy Manning; "The Little Land," Edith Palmer; "A Birdie," Dorothy Manning; "The Swing," Theodore Moldenke; "The Land of Nod," Elizabeth Williams; "Singing in the Rain," Helen Strong; "Foreign Lands," Josephine Linkiesch; "Foreign Children," Caroline Veysey; "The Pirates," Theodore Moldenke, Wolcott Calkins, Morris VanBuren; "The Seaside," Margaret Crandict; "Story Book Land," Marion Coombe; song, "In Winter I Get Up at Night," Helen Strong, Marie Boles, Eleanor Hatch; "The Hayloft," Claire Kenworthy; "Auntie's" Skirts," Dorothy Simons; "Windy Nights," Catherine Wright; "Where Go the Boats?" Marie Boles; "The Unseen Playmate," Dorothy Simons; "The Flowers," Ruth Timpson; "Good Bye to the Farm," all.

GOV. NAMES COMMISSION ON BRIDGING THE HUDSON.

Governor Stokes has appointed the commissioners provided for in Senate joint resolution No. 5; by Senator James F. Minturn, to confer with the Governor and Legislature of New York, looking to the appointment of a joint commission for the purchase of the necessary lands and water rights, and to secure the necessary federal consent to the construction of one of more bridges over the Hudson river from Jersey City and Hoboken to New York.

Those named were Senator Minturn, who was the Democratic leader in the Senate last winter; former Governor George T. Werts and Victor L. Mason, of Passaic.

Richard Norwood's Father Dead.

Richard Norwood, colored, received a telegram yesterday from Wilmington, N. C., informing him of the death of his father. The latter was eighty-four years old. Norwood says a considerable estate is to be divided between him and his brothers.

2 RUNDS OUT ACTIVE LIFE

L.V.F. Randolph Retires Monday After Half Century of Active Work.

INTENDS TO GO ABROAD

Consolidated Exchange to Choose His Successor As President —Sketch of His Career.

Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph.

Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, one of New Jersey's distinguished sons, retires from active business life on Monday, after rounding out half a century. What may be said to be a most strenuous and successful career as banker, financier and man of affairs. The responsibilities that have rested upon his shoulders as president of the Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange, of New York, will end on Monday, when that institution will choose his successor. He has positively declined a fourth term in his present capacity, feeling that he has earned at the time of life when he is entitled to spend more of his time in the enjoyment of the good things of the world. On Saturday next, Mr. Randolph and his good wife will sail for Europe on the "St. Paul." It is their intention to occupy the summer months visiting the many places of histbric note in Scotland and England. They will probably return early in the fall, but in the years to come, it is their hope to spend much of their time seeing favorite spots in the old and the new world.

Lewis Van Syckle Fitz Randolph was born at Somerville, May 16, 1833. His father was Enoch Manning Randolph and his mother Mary Ann Van Syckle. The earliest American ancestor was Edward Fitz Randolph, a native of Nothingham, Eng., whence came Virginia Randolph. He emigrated to this country and settled in Scituate, Mass., from where he moved to Barnstable, and finally, 1669, to Piscataway. His descendants were prominent in the Colonial life. By the maternal line, Mr. Randolph is descended from the two ancient Dutch families of Van Syckle and Opdyke. John Laing, one of the first settlers of Plainfield, is one of his ancestors. The Fitz Randolph family is an ancient and noble one in England, its line touches that of Robert de Bruis, a Norman Knight who came to England with William the Conqueror, A. D., 1066, and who was a progenitor of the royal Scottish family of Bruce, a descendant, Isabel, daughter of Robert de Bruce, fourth earl of Carrick, became the wife of Thomas Fitz Randolph. The name Fitz Randolph appears first to have been borne by a grand-nephew of William the Conqueror.

Lewis V. F. Randolph was educated in the schools of Plainfield, N. J., with a view to pursuing a college course but the early death of his father determined him to enter business instead. His first employment was for three years in a mercantile way, after which he was for nearly two years (1854-63) in the American Exchange Bank, New York City, where his faithful and systematic labors were rewarded by constant promotion. In 1863 he enlisted in the New Jersey militia, and served through the emergency campaign of that year, and until after the battle of Gettysburg. He was discharged ill of a fever contracted in the service during the Confederate invasion. In the following year he accepted the position of private secretary to the president of the Illinois Central Railroad Co., and, was soon after assigned to the company's money department in Chicago. After six months there he was recalled to the financial office in New York city, and was elected assistant treasurer. In 1873 he was chosen a director, and in 1874 was elected treasurer of the company. The latter office he held for eleven years, and, on his resignation in March, 1885, the directors adopted flattering resolutions assigning his abilities and official record. In 1886 he became secretary to the executors of the Samuel J. Tilden estate, and later secretary of the Tilden Trust Library Corporation. Through the five years occupied in litigation over this estate such was the success of the management in investment of funds, and in the careful attention to doubtful accounts that the original $5,000,000 was increased to over $7,000,000. In writing of Mr. Randolph's part in this achievement, Hon. John Bigelow, biographer of Mr. Tilden, says: "I feel it to be a duty, as it certainly is a pleasure, for me here to make a public acknowledgment of his invaluable services, and formally to recognize the very substantial obligations under which his varied accomplishments as a business manager, his indefatigable assiduity, and his high general character have placed all who are, or may hereafter be, in any way interested in this estate." Following the death of Hon. Andrew H. Green in 1903, Mr. Randolph was appointed by the court executor and trustee of Governor Tilden's estate, and this position he still holds—his colleagues being Hon. John Bigelow and Hon. George W. Smith—and they have the care of three-quarters of a million of trusts still undisturbed and active.

Besides being for many years treasurer of the Illinois Central Railroad, Mr. Randolph has been president of the Kanona and Prattsburg, and of the Carolina and Cumberland Gap Railroad companies; president of the Illinois Iowa Fuel Co.; president of the Atlantic Safe Deposit Co.; president of the Lee-Foster Land and Cattle Co.; president of the Excelsior Steamboat Co.; president of the Atlantic Trust Co.; receiver of the New York Iron Mine; director of the Lawyers' Title Insurance Company, and of the Iron Cliffs Co., and trustee of several large estates, and of various benevolent societies and institutions. He has been for half a dozen years treasurer of the New York Zoological Society, having assisted Hon. Andrew H. Green to organize it, and being one of its managers, and he is a past-commander of the Grand Army of the Republic. He is now president of the board of trustees of the First Baptist church, and for 1881 and 1882 he was mayor of the city of Plainfield, and made a record quite in keeping with his reputation for faithful discharge of duty. In a recent number of the "Bankers' Magazine," Mr. Randolph's record during his term of service as president of the Atlantic Trust Co. is thus outlined: "During that period the Atlantic Trust Co. has not lost a dollar on any transaction or in business of any description; this particular record of the trust company is in harmony with Mr. Randolph's somewhat unique business experience of the past forty years. In the course of handling, during that period, cash and properties, in many fiduciary capacities, to the total of hundreds of millions of dollars for persons and corporations, he has never made a single loss—even in the smallest amount."

Upon Mr. Randolph's retirement from the presidency of the Atlantic Trust Company at the close of the year 1903, after eight years of successful and prosperous management on his part of the affairs of that institution, its board of trustees unanimously adopted resolutions expressing the highest appreciation of Mr. Randolph's services and great regret at his withdrawal.

Almost forty years earlier, on his leaving the clerical associates in the American Exchange Bank, to enter upon his railroad career, they had joined in a similar expression of esteem and good will. Mr. Randolph a dinner and in presenting him with Washington Irving's complete works and letters in twenty-six volumes.

On his return from a visit to the West in the spring of 1903, Mr. Randolph was unanimously elected president of the Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange, and after being re-elected without opposition in 1904 and 1905, had in 1906 declined further business proposition and has retired.

In 1901 he published a volume of poems entitled "Survivals." He was married May 16, 1867, to Emily Caroline, daughter of Matthias Price, of Newark, N. J. They have five daughters.

Among from boyhood Mr. Randolph has been actively interested in literary matters. His poems have been widely commended. He has always been an enthusiastic lover of Nature and has taken great pleasure in farming. For years he owned several thousand head of Hereford cattle and has for more than twenty years been a breeder of registered Jersey cattle.

At a regular meeting of the Board of Governors of the Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange, held on Thursday, May 24th, 1906, the following preamble and resolution were, on motion of Mr. Ogden D. Budd, unanimously seconded by seven governors), unanimously adopted by a rising vote:

Whereas, This meeting of the Board of Governors is the last regular meeting of the fiscal year, which is just ending, and Whereas, Mr. L. V. F. Randolph is to retire to terminate his connection with the Exchange as its president, therefore,

Resolved, That this Board of Governors desires to express to Mr. Randolph, on the eve of his retirement from the office of president, its appreciation of his efforts in behalf of the Exchange during his term of three years, and to place on record an expression of high regard and esteem for him coupled with regret that he is no longer to be connected with the Exchange in an official capacity.

Trouble Ahead.

Ascum—But, surely, you have nothing to worry you.

Macon Pyles—Haven't I, though? I imagine my freaks nights wondering what will become of my children when I die.

Ascum—Nonsense! Why, you're making barrels of money now, so—

MORE DURABLE PAVE FOR THE BUSINESS STREETS

Board of Trade Makes Report With Suggestions For the Common Council.

FINE BLOCKS ARE BEST

Plan for Benefited Property Owners to Bear Part of Expense—Cost About $55,000.

The Committee on Permanent Pavements made its report to the Board of Trade Thursday. It recommends that some form of lasting pavement be put down in the business section, and suggests ways in which the cost of the work might be distributed by the city so as to escape bonding in securing the improvement.

The report is as follows; it was prepared by Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett, and the figures in it are authoritative:

"Your Committee on Permanent Pavements is of the opinion that a start should be made in Plainfield toward securing better pavements on the more traveled streets of our city. Many cities of less size and wealth are quite liberally provided with brick or other durable pavements, and we suggest that permanent pavements be laid on the following streets:

"East and West Front streets, between Watchung and Central avenues;

"Park avenue, between Front and Fourth streets;

"North avenue, between Park and Watchung avenues;

"Watchung avenue, between Front and Fourth streets.

"We consider that either brick, bituminous macadam or treated yellow pine blocks would be satisfactory. Brick is the cheapest and in many ways the most satisfactory, but is objected to by some as being too noisy. Wood block pavement is free from this objection, has been tested for a number of years in New York and other large cities on streets with the heaviest traffic and its use is being continued. It seems to have great durability and is about fifty per cent. more expensive than brick. Bituminous macadam or Bitulithic pavement is about midway in price, and while a comparatively new pavement, has been laid to a considerable extent in Newark and elsewhere, and has many of the merits of the other two.

"Asphalt pavement, while largely used in many cities, is difficult to construct with assurance of durability, some pavements lasting well and others breaking up in places in a few years. One of our neighboring cities was obliged to replace large patches of asphalt after one year's use.

"Many of our taxpayers are opposed to bonding the city for any large amount for pavements, and it has been suggested that property owners along the line of the proposed improvements should pay a part of the expense, so that the cost would not be burdensome to any one. We have prepared the following estimates of cost, in which brick has been taken as a basis; the figures for bituminous macadam may be obtained by adding twenty-five per cent., and for treated wood block, fifty per cent to the figures given.

"On East Front street, the street railway company could pay one-third the cost of the work, and if the city should pay one-third of the remainder and the property owners the balance, the cost to the latter would be about $2 per foot front. On West Front street, the company would pay one-half, and one-third of the remainder would be only about $1.53 per foot front.

"On Park avenue, the price per foot front would be $2.07 between Front and Second streets, $2.81 between Second street and the railroad and $2.55 from there to Fourth street.

"On Watchung avenue, the price would be $1.78 and on North avenue $3.07 per foot front, all on the supposition that the city would pay one-third of the cost per running foot, also the entire cost of the intersections and the general expenses of the work.

"The total cost of the improvement would be about $37,000, of which the street railway company would pay $7,000.

"In case of consent of the property owners to the above plan could not be obtained, we recommend that about $5,000 of the street appropriation be expended each year for permanent pavements; it would require six years, by this plan, to complete the work above outlined, and we consider that the abutting owners would be so much benefited by such pavements that they should be willing to bear their share of such cost in order to have the business center all improved at once, instead of waiting years for it.

"We understand that it would not be necessary to secure a subscription from each owner, but that an assessment could be made by commissioners.

"The estimated cost of paving the several streets with brick is as follows:

"East and West Front Sts.	$16,500
"Park Ave.	7,900
"Watchung Ave.	6,000
"North Ave.	6,600
	"$37,000

"Respectfully submitted,
"Frank H. Smith,
"B. Frank Coriell,
"Andrew J. Gavett,
"Committee."

The report was accompanied by a map prepared by Mr. Gavett. It was referred to the Common Council, after a short debate on the suggestion that part of the cost be assessed against abutting property owners.

V. W. Nash, who is one of the Park avenue property owners, objected to the idea of assessing. He understood the report recommended the assessment, and he objected to that very vigorously. As to the idea itself, he thought it was the part of every taxpayer in the city to bear a share in the cost, because the improvement was for the entire public and not merely for the abutting owners. Trouble and law suits, he believed, would follow the assessment levy. It was unfair to ask property owners who have already paid one assessment for permanent roadways, to pay another.

E. M. Laing supported Mr. Nash. He held that property owners of a certain district should not be held upon the assessments for pavement experiments of different councils.

W. G. Debele supported the committee in its suggestion of assessment, and President Woolston, who, with Mayor Buckle, owns 250 feet along North avenue, the highest priced stretch, said he would be willing enough to pay an assessment to get rid of the present sloppy roadway; although he did feel that the entire city should bear the expense.

Mr. Smith, of the committee, explained for Mr. Nash's benefit, that the report did not "recommend" an assessment and merely suggested such a course, with an alternative distinctly presented. Mr. Nash said he didn't like the phraseology of the report, but made no objection when the vote to refer it to Council was taken.

CHILDREN'S HOME ANNUAL RECEPTION

MANY FRIENDS OF INSTITUTION INSPECT THE HOUSE.

Patrons and friends of the Children's Home attended in large numbers the annual reception held Thursday afternoon at the Home from 3 to 6 o'clock. Mrs. Horace Kimball, president of the Plainfield Children's Home Association, received the visitors about and explained the system employed in caring for the children.

The reception was held under the direction of Mrs. Horace Kimball, president; Mrs. Ruth Leonard, secretary; Miss Lucy H. Everett, corresponding secretary; Miss Ella Serrell, treasurer, who together with Mrs. Sarah A. Hendrickson, the matron, and Mrs. Horace K. Phillips, Mrs. James C. Peck, Mrs. A. N. Selter, Mrs. W. W. Dunn and Mrs. Martin Conley received the visitors. Tea was served in the dining room by members of the association, assisted by young women. Over 100 persons visited the Home during the afternoon.

During the latter part of the afternoon an excellent musical programme was enjoyed. There were piano and violin solos and duets by Miss Clyde Burnet and Miss Marguerite Burnet and soprano solos by Miss Mary Hubbell.

At present there are twenty-four boys and girls at the Home, about the average number. There are accommodations for fifty, but great care is exercised in taking children in. They cannot be under two years of age, and name of boy or girl is kept after she or he is fourteen years old. Another rule is that only the children of worthy and poverty-stricken parents are admitted.

Since the improvements have been made to the Home, it has been furnished in exceedingly good taste. The association is fortunate in having such a person as Mrs. Hendrickson as matron. She is very careful and painstaking in the management of the Home and the children and not one of the little tots is slighted in any respect. The children make up one big happy family and they all appear to be thriving well under the careful management.

One of the animals in the jumping class at the horse show, yesterday, gave evidence of the fact that highbred animals are familiar with prevalent slang phrases and understand their meaning. This particular equine refused to take the fences and misbehaved badly despite the dignified rider's coaxing tones. The latter became angry when someone in the grandstand advised him to "chew his ear off" and suddenly digging his heels in the animal's sides exclaimed, "Cut h'it h'out, will you." Almost the next instant the horse stopped his prancing and went over the nearest barrier as clean as a whistle.

DR. BEN HEDGES WEDS

Married In Chicago Yesterday to Miss Adele Cutts Williams.

A BRILLIANT WEDDING

Doctor and His Bride Will Live On Watchung Avenue — Mrs. Hedges Has Been Here Before.

Dr. Benjamin Van Doren Hedges, of this city, was married in Chicago, Wednesday, to Miss Adele Cutts Williams, of that city.

The nuptials were brilliant. They were largely attended by people of social prominence in the Western metropolis.

The bride received a large number of handsome and costly gifts.

Dr. Hedges and his bride will make their home at Watchung avenue and Sixth street, where he purchased the Carman house. It has been prettily remodelled.

Dr. Hedges is one of the most prominent men in local society, and his bride is well-fitted, both in training and personality, to take a leading position in the social life of the city.

Dr. Hedges came to Plainfield about fifteen years ago. He is a graduate of Princton, class of 1888. He took a post graduate course after leaving Princeton, coming here to join his brother, Dr. Ellis Hedges, upon its completion. He is a member of the Country Club and of the Crescent Avenue church. The bride is not entirely unknown in this city. She was a guest at the Netherwood Hotel on one season several years ago. She came here with her father, the late General Williams.

RELIGIONS OF JAPAN SUBJECT OF LECTURE

A. C. MACLAY'S TALK BEFORE TRINITY MEN'S ASSOCIATION.

Before a small, but appreciative audience, Arthur C. Maclay, the lawyer and author, of West Eighth street, gave a highly instructive lecture Thursday in Trinity Reformed church before the Men's Association, on the subject of "The Religions of Japan." Mr. Maclay sketched the origin, history customs and peculiarities of Shintoism, Confucianism and Buddhism.

Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph made a few remarks commending the very able and instructive lecture by Mr. Maclay. He then asked a few questions directly in line with the subject, the answers to which by Mr. Maclay brought out more clearly several points. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck also spoke words of commendation, expressing his pleasure, as well as that of the association.

The association will not meet again until October.

P. H. S. ENTERTAINMENT PLEASED LARGE CROWD

Mrs. E. M. Alston and G. M. Stricklett Rendered Pleasing Solos.

A packed house enthusiastically greeted the musical work of the Plainfield High School pupils, assisted by the soloists, Mrs. Edith M. Alston, dramatic soprano, and G. Morgan Stricklett, tenor, Thursday, in the school auditorium. The programme was made up of two full hours of high class music, and the way in which it was rendered reflected great credit upon the school musical trainer, C. L. Lewis.

The original programme called for the appearance of G. Seymour Lenox as the tenor soloist, but Mr. Lenox was unable to be present because of illness, and Stricklett filled the bill in first class style, in his place. Mrs. Alston's selections were very pleasing, while Stricklett was forced to respond to several encores, especially to that of "Four Leaf Clover," which he gave by request. The High School orchestra and musical club also had numbers on the programme. Miss Mabel Maxson, of the faculty, presided at the piano.

Among the best songs by the school were the "Evening Hymn," by Reinecke; "Blue Danube," Strauss, and "Pilgrim's Chorus," Wagner.

The affair was a great success and will probably help to cancel the indebtedness of the Plainfield High School Boys' A. A.

Champion Gunner.

Petty Officer Giles, of the warship "King Edward VII," who is a brother-in-law of James Kerrigode, of this city, has made the world's gunnery record. In a recent trial of the Mediterranean fleet, of the British navy, at Malta, Giles secured eleven hits out of eleven from a six-inch weapon, 100 pounds projectile, in eight minute, says the Peel Guardian, which is published at Peel, Isle of Man. The record was made a month ago while the "Henry VII" was steaming at twelve knots an hour and the gun-platform as well as the target were consequently unstable. Gunner Grounds, who previously held the world's record, only put in eight rounds in the same time.

STOCKTON - CRUIKSHANK

Fashionable Society at Wedding of Miss Lelia M. Cruikshank and H. Reeves Stockton

AT THE GRACE CHURCH

Rev. E. L. Stoddard and Rev. E. V. Stevenson Officiate — Vested Choir from Jersey City Sing Wedding March.

In the presence of a large and fashionable assemblage of society people from New York, Brooklyn, Plainfield and many distant points, Miss Lelia Moore Cruikshank, of Belvidere avenue, and H. Reeve Stockton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Stockton, of Central avenue, were married at 6:30 Wednesday evening at Grace church. It was one of the most brilliant social functions of the season. Rev. E. L. Stoddard, of St. John's church, Jersey City, officiated, assisted by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of the church.

The bride's attendants were Mrs. C. Y. Hobart, of Chicago, as matron-of-honor; Miss Helen Moore Cruikshank, sister of the bride, as maid-of-honor; Miss Evelyn Cruikshank, of Montclair; Miss Jane Griffiths, Miss Elsie Dunlap, of Chicago; Miss Agnes Dunlap, of Philadelphia; Miss Helen Sylvester, of Haverford, Pa., and Miss Virginia Iredell, of Cincinnati, as bridesmaids. T. Earl Stockton, brother of the groom, was the best man, and the ushers were Morris J. Dumont, Willard Wadsworth, George Schoonmaker, Charles W. Fisk, Raymond A. McGee, of this city; Markley Stevenson, of Wynecote, Pa., and Charles T. Ellis, of New York.

WM. R. COCK RE-ELECTED

Hospital Board of Governors Select Him as President at Annual Meeting.

CARNIVAL NETS $7,500

Annual Reports Show Great Amount of Work Done by Institution—Officers Chosen.

Charles J. Fisk, who was chairman of the carnival committee, submitted a report at the annual meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, Monday night, stating that $7,500 had been received as proceeds of the carnival, but that some accounts were yet to be adjusted.

It being the annual meeting officers were elected as follows:

President, William R. Cock; first vice president, Edward H. Ladd, Jr.; second vice president, George P. Mellick; secretary, William T. Kaufman; treasurer, Julius E. Erickson. Buildings and grounds committee—Chas. J. Fisk, Edward H. Booth, Frank J. Hubbard, Harry G. Runkle, Henry L. Hall. Managing committee—Samuel Huntington, William C. Kinney, Charles E. Brooks, Mrs. Samuel Huntington, James W. DeGraff, Mrs. John Gray Foster, Miss Imogene Bass. Finance committee—Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Ernest R. Ackerman, William L. Saunders, Samuel Townsend, Julius E. Erickson.

The report of the medical board for May showed the number of patients remaining at last report, thirty-four; admitted, fifty-eight; discharged cured, forty-six; improved, three; not improved, two; died, two; total number treated, ninety-two; remaining, thirty-nine; hospital days, 1,144. In the dispensary the number of patients was forty-five, visits of patients, 138, and eighteen operations.

The annual report of the medical board showed the total number of patients treated during the year to be 665, diseases and injuries treated, 823, dispensaries 836, the total number during the year the number of cases treated was 899, visits of patients, 1,514 and 152 operations.

The increase in the work of the hospital is strikingly shown by the fact that during the year there were 140 more patients and 210 more operations than in the previous year, and that there were 424 more patients and 44 more operations in the dispensary department than last year.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the Board of Governors hereby expresses its hearty appreciation of the efficient and valuable services rendered by the Carnival Executive Committee and associated the committee of the Board of Governors in charge of the carnival recently held.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Board be and hereby are tendered to all the members of the said Carnival Executive Committee and to all the other friends of the hospital who by their gifts of time and money contributed to the great financial success of the carnival.

GERMAN RELATIVES ANSWER.

Nothing Seen of Helen Kuenlen Abroad, They Cable Family.

Discouraging intelligence has been received by the family of Helen Kuenlen from abroad. The uncle to whose home she was brought last week she might have gone, has cabled in answer to queries, that nothing has been seen of the girl by his family.

The search has now reached its limits. The mother is hopeless of ever seeing her daughter alive again, and is very nearly hopeless of even recovering the remains.

Thomas A. Runyon Weds.

Miss Mattie Merrill, formerly of East Seventh street, but now of Newark, and Thomas Albert Runyon, son of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Runyon, of 316 East Front street, were married last Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock by a Presbyterian minister in New York city. The couple left at once for a wedding trip to Atlantic City. They will return tonight and make their home with the groom's parents on East Front street.

At Electricians' Meeting.

William R. Causebrook, superintendent of the electric light department for the Public Service Corporation in this city, with his wife, has returned from Atlantic City, where Mr. Causebrook attended the annual meeting of the National Electric Light Association.

Invents Ice Box Improvement.

Paul Symons, of East Third street, has invented an improvement to ice boxes that promises to revolutionize their manufacture. It is a simple device but declared by experts to be something that has been needed for a long time. Symons has applied for a patent.

Epworth Lawn Party.

There will be a lawn party under the auspices of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church, at the residence of Nelson T. Hull, 531 East Second street, on Friday evening. All Epworth Leaguers are invited to be present.

FRISCO RECTOR THANKS HOLY CROSS FOR CHECK

LETTER TELLS OF THE TEERIBLE CATASTROPHE AT GOLDEN GATE.

In appreciation for the money contribution by the Holy Cross church for the benefit of St. Paul's church, of San Francisco, Rev. George A. Warner, the rector, has received this letter from Rev. W. M. Reilly, rector of St. Paul's church:

"Your letter came yesterday and enclosed in it a substantial token of the sympathy of your people and yourself. Accept our heartfelt thanks. St. Paul's church, though it escaped the fire yet suffered to the extent of $1,500 by the earthquake. The Bishop has promised to give me $800, the amount required to replace the stones which were thrown out of the front of the church. I do not yet know where we shall get money for interior repairs. The plastering is all cracked and a great deal of it down. Our people have lost everything and can do nothing either for repairs or parish support. In order to lessen expenses I am going to give up my house and move into the Sunday-school room on the first of June.

"But few people in the East can form a conception of the terrible calamity that has befallen us. The earthquake was awful, hardly a building escaped injury, and most of our costly and beautiful churches were completely wrecked. Then the fire followed. Fire broke out almost instantly in several places and owing to the water pipes having been broken by the earthquake, the firemen were helpless. The fire raged for three days and nights and until four hundred and fifty blocks of buildings were burned.

"The fire came within seven blocks of St. Paul's church. We were ordered out of our homes by the soldiers and slept one night out by the ocean under the stars. We left our house as it was, only taking with us the parish books, the communion vessels, some of the vestments, and what sacred utensils we could that was dedicated on Easter Day. Of course, we took also a roll of blankets. It was with great joy that we learned that the fire was under control and returned to find everything just as we left it.

"It was a great mercy that the earthquake took place when it did, 5:13 a. m., as had it come later when people filled the streets, thousands or rather tens of thousands would have been killed. Although the outlook seems dark, indeed, I purpose to remain here at my post. Two days after the earthquake a friend came over from Oakland in an auto to take us to his home there, but I refused to go. That same night a poor man came to ask me to officiate at the funeral of his father, who died from shock. He had spent the early part of the day trying to get a coffin for his father, but not one was to be had as all had been burned, so he himself, though not a carpenter, had to make one out of some rough boards and cover it with black muslin. He then sought a clergyman, but was unable to find one till he was directed to my home. This is but one of the many sad duties I have had to perform during the past four weeks. I have had more funerals and baptisms since the earthquake than in any like period during the twelve or more years I have been rector of St. Paul's church. So I have determined to remain here and be of what service I can. Thanking you again and asking you to thank your people for their generous contribution to our needs, I am,

"Yours very faithfully,

"W. M. Reilly."

DEPARTMENT ORDERS POSTOFFICE ENLARGED.

When Improvements Are Made, It Will Have Fifty-three Feet Frontage.

Postmaster E. H. Bird received word from Washington this morning that his request for increased room at the postoffice, obtainable by the lease of the corner store in the Babcock building, has been granted and that the work of making the necessary changes would begin at once. This will give a frontage to the office of fifty-one feet and will make it one of the finest in the State, outside of a government building.

As near as he is able to determine at present the registry and money order departments will be given more room. The partitions will be moved about six feet, and it is likely that one of the present entrances will be closed and a main entrance will be located at the corner of the building.

Among the interior improvements will be the removal of the partition now separating the office from the corner store, thus giving the office more light and air from the Madison avenue side of the building. The changes will require many new fixtures and greater room will be given the carriers for the preparation of the mail for delivery.

Superintendent Norris, of the allowance and salary department, is expected here in a few days and the plan of improvement will be decided upon.

New Fire House.

A new gray horse has been purchased for the chemical engine. The animal was bought in New York. It is Western bred, and is just recovering from acclimatization troubles.

PLAN SCHOOL MEETING

North Plainfield District to Vote on Repairs and Improvements.

ON THURSDAY, JUNE 28

Board Considering the Purchase of Two More Tracts of Ground—Ready for Commencement.

The borough Board of Education held a special session, Monday, for the purpose of making arrangements to hold a public meeting on Thursday night, June 28, to vote on the following questions:

"To authorize the Board of Education to repair and paint the Somerset school building at an estimated cost of $1,500.

"To improve the Somerset street school grounds by the erection of a fence and a flag staff, the amount thought to be necessary being $850.

"To further improve the school grounds by laying a sidewalk at an estimated cost of $675.

"To authorize the Board of Education to borrow money to defray the expenses of the foregoing for the payment of the same by issuing the notes of the school district in such amounts and for such time or terms of years as the Board shall direct, but for no longer time than five years."

The school authorities have been anxious for a long time to improve the grounds about the Somerset street building but a lack of funds has held them back. The erection of the new addition left the surroundings in anything but presentable shape and the items mentioned are all necessary in order to give them an attractive appearance. As it stands now also, one part of the building is painted, though it was done a long time ago, and the other has nothing but its natural brick color.

The board has under consideration the purchase of the two pieces of property at Park place and Vine street in order to secure a larger playground but his matter is to remain undecided for the present.

Several other matters of business were transacted at the meeting, among them the completion of plans for the commencement exercises Friday night and the approval of the teachers' committee report of the corps engaged for the coming school year.

FIVE LITTLE GIRLS AID A WORTHY CAUSE.

In sympathy with the cause of the King's Daughters' Baby Camp, five girls, the Misses Helen Woolley, Ethel Runyon, Madeline Streader, Margaret Winn and Helen Roberts, gave an entertainment for its benefit at Miss Roberts' home on Prospect place, Monday. An attractive programme was presented before a good sized audience and a neat sum was realized, making the first that has been secured for the purpose in this way this season.

The feature number of the affair was the repetition by request of an original "comedy drama" by the young misses, entitled "Harmful Troubles." It was received with enthusiasm by those in attendance and the young artists were liberally applauded. Two delightful character readings were given by Miss Justine Roberts, of Brooklyn, who is very clever in her selection and charming method of expression. Miss Helen Woolley and Miss Helen Roberts contributed two vocal duetts, "Beneath the Oak Tree" and "The Marionette" and the same girls with Miss Streader gave a dumb-bell drill.

The entertainment throughout was greatly enjoyed and may be repeated in the near future.

Ladies' Auxiliary Musicale.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., has invited the Sir Knights with their families to attend a musicale to be given in Masonic Hall, Friday night. Miss Bertha VanNuis Willis, soprano, will sing; Miss Mae J. Colt will give readings, and George C. M. Smith, who recently returned from abroad, will give violin selections. J. Edmund Skiff will be the accompanist.

Class Day a Surprise.

Plans for the class day exercises at the Plainfield High School on Tuesday night, June 19, at the High School auditorium are very elaborate. While the programme is known to outsiders, those acquainted with it say that it will be a surprise to everyone. Class songs will be a prominent feature. They are written by members of the senior class.

Final Examinations.

The final examinations in the Plainfield High School will be held Thursday, Friday and Monday. Principal Ira Travell urges as many as possible to be present on these days and take the examinations so that as good a showing as possible be made.

Talk to Men's Club.

Dr. P. B. Cregar and Dr. Norman H. Probasco will address the Men's Club of Hope chapel tomorrow night. Dr. Cregar will talk on tuberculosis and Dr. Probasco on helps to health. All members of the club and others interested are invited.

GUINN VERDICT CONFIRMED

Supreme Court Upholds the Award of County Court Against the P. S. C.

TO RECEIVE $17,000

Mrs. Guinn Recovered $10,000 Damages—$7,000 Additional Given Husband.

Judges Reed, Fort and Pitney, in the Supreme Court, at Trenton, Monday, handed down an opinion confirming the verdict rendered in favor of the Mr. and Mrs. George H. Guinn, of this city, for $17,000 damages against the Public Service Corporation and its subsidiary company, the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Railway Company.

At the time of the trial in the Union County Court at Elizabeth, last January, Mrs. Guinn, who claimed damages for injuries she received in a trolley accident on East Second Street, near Leland avenue, she was given $10,000 and her husband, who joined her in the suit, was given $7,000.

The decision given yesterday was on the appeal from the verdict recovered at Elizabeth last January, which was for $15,000 for the wife and $7,000 for the husband. The only change is in the reduction of $5,000 from the jury's verdict to the wife.

Hon. Alvah A. Clark appeared for the defendant company and Craig A. Marsh, Esq., was counsel for Mr. and Mrs. Guinn.

W. L. SAUNDERS ON MR. REED'S INTERVIEW

HIS WORST ENEMY COULD NOT DO HIM GREATER HARM.

"Senator Reed's greatest enemy could not have done him greater harm than his interview in last night's Courier-News," said former Mayor William L. Saunders, leader of the new consolidation movement, this morning. "I hope he will be so for more than its authorship."

Senator Reed's interview was secured in connection with published charges by friends of the movement that he was now opposed to consolidation. This is the way the interview reads:

"Asked is he had anything to say in regard to the article, Senator Reed said:

"'Yes. I think I can say something in reply to that. I have always maintained that so long as the Plainfield and North Plainfield remained in two counties there could be no real union without consolidation. This has been my stand ever since the question was first mooted over ten years ago. Unless it is expected to have annexation, I do not believe that consolidation is a good thing.

"'It is believed, however, by those favorable to consolidation, that it would result in annexation. I am not prepared to say whether it would or would not.'

"'And for that reason you do not stand opposed to consolidation?' 'I be was asked.

"'No. I am not opposed to it, but I believe that those who defeated annexation are the ones to take the initiative at the present time, and undue their own mistakes. I was so abused and maligned in regard to my position on the annexation question that I don't feel like taking an active interest one way or the other in the present discussion.'"

"'And for that reason you do not stand opposed to consolidation?' 'I be' was asked.

"'No. I am not opposed to it, but I believe that those who defeated annexation are the ones to take the initiative at the present time, and undue their own mistakes. I was so abused and maligned in regard to my position on the annexation question that I don't feel like taking an active interest one way or the other in the present discussion.'"

CAPTAIN MARTIN MADE HIGH SCORE IN MATCH.

Second Best Individual Mark in Rifle Team Match at Newark.

The First Regiment, Newark, and Fourth Regiment, Jersey City, won out in the team matches with Co. K, of this city, at the First Regiment Armory, Newark, Saturday night. The Plainfielders not having practiced to an extent were hot in condition to go up against the Newark and Jersey City cracks and they made the lowest score, a total of 842.

It was a three cornered shoot in which the crack marksmen of Companies I, C and K were selected to shoot, standing and prone. The Newark riflemen managed to shoot the steadier and excelled in scoring on each target. The Fourth Regiment sharpshooters made a fair showing, but their work was not up to standard attained in previous matches in Newark. Co. C was a strong favorite and was picked by many to win inasmuch as it has been invincible for years in indoor shooting. Captain Martin made a fine score for the Second Regiment, finishing second to Private O'Hare. The former made a score of 94 against 96 for O'Hare.

Bob Lee a Third Warder.

Former Tax Collector Robert Lee has moved from the Fourth ward to the Third. His new home is on West Sixth street. He is in the same district with John Cose.

SEMINARY GRADUATION

Charming Programme Marks Commencement For Four Students.

MANY PRINCIPALS SPEAK

Many Improvements to Be Made at Local Private Institution.

June with its rare beauty, a wealth of flowers tastefully arranged, music exquisitely rendered and fair girl graduates were parts of the beautiful picture seen Tuesday at the Plainfield Seminary on West Seventh street, the prettily decorated walls and attractive surroundings of the seminary making an appropriate setting for the fair scene.

In the presence of a large audience of relatives and friends Miss Kenyon and Miss Arnold, the principals, made the presentation of the school diploma to the graduating class, Misses Dorothy Averill, Marion Hortense Hall, Mary Anna Davenport Perkins and Lucy Roberts Budlong. Miss Kenyon's impressive address was full of truest wisdom and highest aspirations for the best success of the class. She said the diploma from a preparatory school like this meant that the recipient was ready to go on with the higher education. Whether in college halls or in domestic and social spheres the education would be carried on, the student had learned how to learn. From experience and observation Miss Kenyon said she had learned that the pursuit of happiness as an aim would prove elusive and unsatisfying. Happiness could not be found in fields of idleness or in the highway of self-indulgence, but in treading the path of duty with unselfish love and service for our fellow men as an aim in life. At the close of her remarks she referred to the prophecy of one of the graduates twelve years ago when in a crystal globe the class prophet saw changes in the school as the line of march would be lengthened and the school edifice would be enlarged. This prophecy, Miss Kenyon said, was about to be fulfilled, for on the return of the pupils in the autumn they would find a new Music department, a gymnasium, several class rooms and other improvements to the building.

Many and choice offerings of flowers were made the graduates at the close of the address, Miss Kenyon and Miss Arnold also receiving beautiful clusters of flowers.

Preceding and succeeding the presentation of diplomas the following programme of music of a high order was ministered to the guests by the following artists: Miss Mary Henry, violinst; Miss Anna Louise Finley, soprano; and Miss Jennie Rogers May, pianist.

The programme:

Sonata for piano and violin, op. 8, Allegretto quasi Andantino, Allegro molto Vivace, Grieg, Miss May and Miss Henry; (a) Im Kahne, Grieg, (b) Canzonetta, C. Gomes, Miss Finley; Prieslied, Wagner-Wilhelm, Miss Henry; (a) The Robin Sings in the Apple Tree, (b) A Midsummer Lullaby, MacDowell, (c) The Year's at the Spring, Mrs. H. A. Beach, Miss Finley; (a) Le Cygne, Saint-Saens, (b) Humoreske, Dvorak, (c) Scherzo, Van Goens, Miss Henry; (a) In Autumn, (b) Spring Song, Weil, (with violin obligato) Miss Finley.

Each performer gave the greatest pleasure as several encores testified. Miss Finley's sweetly modulated voice and careful enunciation, Miss Henry's wonderful interpretations and Miss May's delightful accompaniments were full of exquisite charm worthy of the occasion and such a June morning.

The graduating class have before them these pleasant prospects: Miss Dorothy Averill will enter Smith College; Miss Budlong will go to Wellesley College; Miss Perkins is planning to spend a year with her aunt, Lady Beaumont, in England, sailing next week, and Miss Hall will pursue her musical studies at the Seminary. The ushers were members of the junior class: Misses Mabel Hooley, Florence Stewart, Helen Adams, Anna Dulton, Katharine Titus and Edith Griscom.

Better Mail Service Needed.

Strange as it may seem, residents of Scotch Plains get one mail from Plainfield twelve hours ahead of Fanwood, although the former place is nearly two miles distant from the railroad station. While Plains people receive an evening mail, the Fanwood people have to wait until next morning for the same delivery. This condition is due to the fact that an order issued by the postal authorities has cut off the Fanwood evening delivery and mail intended for that place is carried through to New York and then returned the following morning. Fanwood citizens are indignant over the poor service.

Prize for Best Essay.

At a special meeting of the Continental Chapter, D. A. R., on Saturday at the residence of Mrs. D. P. Hall, to vote a prize for the Plainfield Public Schools for the best essay on some historical subject. Returns from the last entertainment were presented by the treasurer and it was stated that $49 was cleared for the Washington Rock Fund. Resolutions on the death of Mrs. Scuyler were passed.

AUTO OWNERS PLAN A MUTUAL GARAGE

LOCAL MEN INTERESTED IN CONCERN TO HAVE $25,000 CAPITAL.

At a meeting held in the Casino, Saturday night, preliminary steps were taken by local owners of automobiles to organize what is to be known as The Owners Garage of New Jersey, whose business it will be to conduct a thoroughly first class garage. The step was taken to promote the sport by dispelling the illusion that cars and maintenance cost tremendous sums. Concerns with this purpose in view have been organized in Summit and at Greenwich, Conn., and reports declare them to have been successful.

The meeting was well attended and the following organization committee was named: Benjamin Wood, C. W. Holland, Daniel Glass and G. M. Kirkner. H. W. Stover was elected chairman of the preliminary organization with G. M. Kirkner secretary. It was decided to have the committee conduct a thorough canvass among the owners residing in the city and recommend plans and other details in connection with permanent organization Thursday.

It is proposed to incorporate under the laws of New ersey with an authorized capital of $25,000 divided into 500 shares of a par value of $500 each. The stock is to be sold under the following conditions: That not more than ten shares will be allowed to any one person who is the owner of a motor vehicle and not more than two to a non-owner; that the financial and general management of the company be entirely in the hands of the Board of Directors, and the president and directors must be owners of machines. In addition to the committee and temporary officials named those who have signed for certain shares of stock are Dr. D. C. Adams, H. Alfred Janke, Edward H. Schering, N. R. Titsworth, J. J. Slevin, E. R. Stevens, M. D. Rae, R. M. Huse, Dr. P. J. Zeglio, Judd Stewart, Dr. Jerome C. Wyland, Walter H. S. Veysey, T. F. Hyland, F. W. Yates and many others.

The promoters have plans under consideration to have a building put up for them under lease in the event of not being able to rent a suitable place. They also propose, they say, to act as agent for the first class cars selling them at a very moderate profit, keep others for rent and give special attention to overhauling and storage.

DEBATING SOCIETY CHOOSES NEW OFFICERS.

At P. H. S. Club Meeting Miss Ball Tells of Her Experiences.

The debating society of the Plainfield High School met Monday afternoon for the last time this year in its rooms in the new High School building, and instead of the customary debate the members enjoyed a story by Miss Katherine P. Ball of her experiences in San Francisco during the earthquake and fire. This was followed by a summary of the year's work given by Miss Ruth Bullock, secretary of the association. She spoke upon the success of the debates which the pupils had participated in and voiced the opinion of the association that the aim had been carried out. Miss Gertrude Hunter has served in the past year as president and her efforts have been satisfactory.

After the meeting these officers were elected for next term: President, George Henry Fisher; vice-president, Horace Vail; secretary, Miss Cornelia Lounsbury; treasurer, Orlando Lounsbury. There were about thirty persons at the meeting and ice cream and cake were served.

LAUNCHED HIS LAUNCH.

Capt. "Bill" Jaeger's Converted Craft Slides Back Into Water.

William Jaeger launched his 20-foot converted gasolene launch on Sunday in the Raritan canal. The craft behaved splendidly in the water.

With a party of eleven friends aboard, Capt. Jaeger drove the launch through to the Sound and on to Seward, ground where he cruised all day. The boat made a total of about fifty miles without going cranky anywhere. She has been christened the Louvia.

Jaeger and Jack Mehl, tillerman of the fire truck, changed the craft from a fire truck to a launch on the grounds at fire headquarters. Jaeger is driver of the chemical engine. He will spend his entire vacation aboard the boat. It is berthed at Ackor's, Seward.

Plainfielders Will Be Graduated.

On Thursday, June 28, the graduating exercises will be held at Williams College and among those to be graduates are Erwin Briant Leland and Harold Ira Nomer. They were graduated from the Plainfield High School, Class '02.

Graduates Invited to Alumni Meeting.

Franklin Smith, temporary chairman of the Alumni Association of the Plainfield High School, has invited this year's graduates to meet with the association at the new High School auditorium on Wednesday night, June 20, when the new constitution and by-laws will be acted upon.

DISTRICT COURT OPENING

Lawyers Send a Big Floral Horseshoe to Judge Newcorn.

SPEECH FROM BENCH

Judge Expresses His Appreciation of Testimonial and Tells the Bar of His High Aims.

Judge Newcorn opened the new District Court in the Council chamber Tuesday. The opening came promptly on time, at 10 o'clock, without ceremony or frills.

The court's business went through with expedition and dispatch. A list of eight cases was gone through, and three of them disposed of, within twenty-five minutes. Court was adjourned by 10:30 o'clock.

There was a big floral horseshoe on Judge Newcorn's desk, from the members of the bar in this city. A big bouquet of cut flowers from Justice Hezekiah Hand, balanced the horseshoe on the other side of the desk.

Mayor Buckle, President R. I. Tolley, of the Common Council, and Assessors C. H. Hand and Harry Vanemburgh were at the opening, and a goodly representation of the Plainfield bar. Among the lawyers were Judge W. A. Coddington, W. S. Angleman, C. L. Murphy, S. S. Swackhamer, F. J. Blatz, H. C. Runyon, V. T. Nash, H. L. Clement, Charles J. McNabb, Carlos C. Gallup, J. P. Owens, W. L. Hetfield, Sr., W. L. Hetfield, Jr., J. Henry Crane and N. Douglas Drake. Justice Hand beamed on the new court from inside the rail. He came downtown in a hack, with his bouquet beside him. Constable Jim Babbitt delivered it.

Deputy Sheriff Peter Weaver was the court officer for the day. Neither he nor Clerk Adams got any flowers, but they were warmly congratulated by their friends among the spectators after adjournment. A regular court officer has not been appointed yet, but Weaver hopes to land the job.

The first case desposed of was H. L. Lessig, a mill engineer, who sued D. F. Updike, on a note. Judgment of $50.22 was rendered. H. C. Runyon was the plaintiff's lawyer. Judgment of $58.76 was entered against Walter E. Howarth for the International Textbook Co. V. T. Nash, Jr., appeared for the plaintiff. In the landlord and tenant case of W. D. Thickstun against Martha Probasco, judgment, if desired, was entered.

The case of the International Text Book Co. against Herbert L. Randolph, V. W. Nash for the plaintiff, was put off for a week. William Hand & Son against Anna E. Case, on contract, was not moved. Smalley Bros. against W. C. Workman was settled. Ford & Son against William and Peter Schlicher, on contract, and Elisa Genco against James Trimmer, landlord and tenant, were put over for a week.

The first case business had been disposed of Judge Newcorn arose and expressed his appreciation of the horseshoe and the good wishes accompanying it.

"It was quite a surprise to me, when I came into court, to see it on my desk," he said, "and I feel glad in more senses than one in being able to say that I certainly appreciate this little testimonial.

"This is a new court in our city, and I wish to state at this time that it will be my privilege to say always that it is my intention to do all I ever aim to keep this court on the same plane and up to the same high standard of the other district courts of the state.

"I hope it will be a pleasure to the members of the Plainfield bar to practice here. I will strive to administer justice in accordance with the best of my ability. No man is infallible, and mistakes may be made, but you may always be certain that my mistakes are of the mind and not of the heart. I ask the cooperation of you all in making this a model court of record, and a court of standing."

The court will go on next Tuesday, and every Tuesday thereafter. All cases are set for 10 o'clock, and will be taken up in the order of their priority.

COMPANY K DEFEATED.

Lost Three-Cornered Rifle Match at Newark by 27 Points.

In a three-cornered rifle match at Newark, Saturday night, Company K, of this city, and Company C, Fourth Regiment, Jersey City, were defeated by Company I, First Regiment, of Newark. The winners made a total of 869 points while the local militiamen were close behind with 842. The Jersey City boys scored 788. Though losing the match, the Plainfielders are highly pleased with the result as the Newarkers are crack shots and are favored by the best New York and Brooklyn teams.

Company K's shooters were Captain William B. Martin, Sergeants Hart, Pearsall, Apgar and Tranchand; Corporals Conkling and Bilyea and Privates Frazee, Ford and Shingland. In the near future a return match will be shot between the same companies on the outdoor range at Somerville.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

XXXVII PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JUNE, 19, 1906 NO. 33.

"Support the Constitution, which is the Consent of the Union, as well in its Limitations as in its Authorities."—Madison.

OFF FOR "CAMP TUXIS"

Party of 16 Members of the Y. M. C. A. Leave Tomorrow.

TO BE GONE TWO WEEKS

Plainfielders and Delegation from Meridan, Conn., Association To Tent It On Tuxis Island.

Leaving this city on the 7:55 train tomorrow morning, a party of sixteen members of the junior department of the local Y. M. C. A., under the leadership of Secretary Kenneth Robbie, will go to Tuxis Island, where "Camp Tuxis," the association's camp for the summer, will be pitched for two weeks. The Plainfielders will have as camp mates a party of twenty-five members of the Meridan Y. M. C. A., in charge of Secretary E. K. Allen and Physical Director J. E. Reynolds, of Meridan, Conn.

The local association members who will make the trip will include R. P. Morris, H. B. Freeman, Stewart Freeman, Edgar Freeman, Julius Linke, Walter McDougall, Arthur R. Perrin, Leslie Leland, Stanley Karner, F. J. Line, R. B. Taylor, Gordon V. Moy, Nelson Ramsey, Sidney Rockwell, Walter Droll and John Schofield. The blankets and baggage of the party left town today in advance of the campers and will be sent through direct. Mr. Robbie has taken charge of the baggage, and went to New York this afternoon to look after it.

Leaving this city early in the morning, the campers will arrive at New Haven in time to have lunch and a swim at the New Haven Y. M. C. A. After the inner man has been satisfied, the boys will make a tour of the grounds and buildings of Yale University before the train leaves for Madison, Conn. The party will arrive at the camping ground at about 4 o'clock. The campers will be accommodated in an eight-room cottage and five tents during their two weeks' stay. About eight boys will be accommodated in each of the tents, and there will be a leader in charge of each of the parties. The leaders are to be Kenneth Robbie, Stewart Freeman, J. E. Reynolds, E. K. Allen and Stanley White, of Madison.

The campers will be the only inhabitants on Tuxis Island, but there will be something doing every day and all the time. A "flying baseball league," composed of four teams, the Sparrows, the Robins, the Bluejays and the Blackbirds, has been organized and every boy will have a chance to play ball every day. A first team of the Island players will be matched against a team from Madison, and a team of Madison boys will play a Plainfield nine for the championship of the Island.

Hare and hound runs, an athletic meet, boat races, aquatic contests, including swimming races, obstacle races in the water and a boat tug of war, have been arranged for pastimes; there will be a, "horrible parade," in custume, a week from tomorrow, and several clam bakes. The general program for the day will be as follows: Rise at 6:30, morning dip; breakfast at 7, Bible study at 8, baseball at 9, swimming at 11:30, dinner at noon, first aid to the injured drill immediately after dinner, afternoon events at 2, swimming at 5:30, supper at 6, camp fire at 7:30, camp jelly at 8:30, taps at 9:30.

AN ATTACHMENT IN FAVOR OF G. M. RITTENHOUSE & CO.

Louisville Banker Appears to Have Been Taken In, It Is Said.

An attachment in favor of George M. Rittenhouse & Co., of New York, against the German Insurance Bank of Louisville, Ky., for $2,390, has been issued by Sheriff Hayes, of New York. Mr. Rittenhouse and the company, which is Samuel Bingaman, live in this city, being engaged in the produce business in New York.

The attachment was granted on the ground that the German Insurance Bank is a foreign corporation. George M. Rittenhouse & Co. allege that on March 1 they paid $930 to the German Insurance Bank on a draft accompanied by a forged bill of lading of 310 cases of eggs, which draft the bank had discounted and which the firm paid, believing it to be genuine, and that on February 28 the firm of Brown & Rittenhouse paid $1,412 to the bank on a draft accompanied by a forged bill of lading for 428 cases of eggs.

Improved His Property.

P. A. McVoy, of East Front street, has had a two-story porch and balcony built on the rear of his house. The addition with repainting, has added noticeably to the appearance of the property.

GOLD MEDAL MINSTRELS SHOW AT SCOTCH PLAINS

HIT OF THE PERFORMANCCE MADE BY JACK HALL-IRA BOWERS WINS APPLAUSE

It makes no difference whether the weather is warm or cold, Mutr's Gold Medal minstrel troupe retains its drawing powers. The fact was evidenced at Excelsior Hall, Scotch Plains, last night, when the local amusement organization gave another of its blackface shows for the benefit of the Scotch Plains Baseball Association. A capacity audience attended and the various numbers on the programme were received in the usual enthusiastic manner.

The "hit" of the evening was made by "Jack" Hall, who got three encores on his rendition of "Waltz Me Around Again, Willie," with a dance effect. It was the greatest reception he has been accorded since he brought down the house at the Casino two years ago by his rendition of "Hannah." In the olio, the honors were taken by Ira Bowers by the introduction of an original "vaudevilial sketch" in which he does a clog dance on roller skates. At the opening, he caused screams of laughter by pretending that he could not stand on the rollers and taking some spectacular falls.

The show was arranged and directed by B. C. Firstbrook and was a financial as well as artistic success. Mr. Muir was unable to personally direct the performance on account of social engagements. At the conclusion of the programme ice cream was sold and dancing enjoyed.

400 COLORED PEOPLE TAKE OUTING TO BOYNTON.

Excursion of Calvary and Mt. Olive Baptist Churches to the Beach Today.

Leaving this city in a special train this morning, 400 local colored people made the trip to Boynton Beach today on the second annual excursion of the Cavalry and Mount Olive churches and Sunday schools. The committee of arrangements in charge of teh outing were William Phillips, chairman; L. W. Booker, N. J. Pollard, A. J. Cox, Thurman Bynes, Lee Booker, Samuel Reed and D. W. Brown. The special train of seven cars was in charge of Conductor Newton Amberman. Engineer Thorpe Hartsell was at the throttle.

The train was scheduled to leave the depot at 9:45, and indeed started out on time; no sooner were the cars under way than there were shouts from the Fourth street, and a party of seven women, carrying lunch baskets and babies, came running up the drive. The train could not move slowly as the women climbed on. When the last one, carrying a baby in one arm and three boxes of lunch in the other, together with sundry wraps and an umbrella, came puffing up to the platform, however, the conductor called for brakes and the train stopped, while a couple of late arriving baby carriages were stowed in the baggage car. Again getting under way, a party came up the steps from Watchung avenue and another halt was called. Finally the engineer decided to take matters decisely in hand, and the train pulled out suddenly and quickly. And at that one man was left behind; for he came running up from Park avenue as the last car was slipping away from the platform. He was not disconcerted in the least, merely wiped the perspiration from his face, and remarked to the bystanders in general, "Well, got here kinder late, didn't I?" and then he went home.

The excursionists leave Boynton Beach at 6 o'clock this evening, and are due to arrive in this city at 8:30.

At the Baby Camp.

After making extensize arrangements for the informal opening of the King's Daughters' baby camp on the mountain, the affair had to be abandoned yesterday on account of the heavy shower. There are now sixteen children at the camp, most of them ill, and as every bed is occupied, a number of applicants have been refused for the present for lack of accommodations. The King's Daughters will gratefully receive donations of money, groceries or anything that can be used to carry on this important work at the camp.

Raised Big Pole Unaided.

Charles Keidering, of East Front street, put up a fifty-foot clothes pole back of his apartment house last night. It was an unusual feat in that he put up the big stick after dark, and unaided. With a leather strap to give him a sliding hold, he raised the pole alone and dropped it in its hole. He didn't have even a lantern to light the darkness while at work.

Rate Announced August 7.

Plainfield's tax rate for the coming year will not be definitely known until after the Plainfield Board of Assessors returns from its trip to Elizabeth on Tuesday, August 7, at which time all of the assessors of the county will be present.

CLOUDBURST KILLS HEAT

Fierce Heat Wave Swept Away By a Heavy Storm.

RAIN FALLS IN SHEETS

Drop of Eighteen Degrees In An Hour and a Half And Sweltering Humanity Breathes Freely Again.

Two storms bumped together over the metropolitan district yesterday afternoon, and the things that happened knocked the temperature down in this vicinity and gave sweltering Plainfielders a chance to draw a breath of relief and take a renewed interest in life.

Officially, the storm started out of the South at 2:30. The Weather Bureau soon after ran upon the track of a wind headed from the West and approaching at a rate of fifty-five miles an hour. During the next hour and a half after the two met the mercury fell eighteen degrees, while thirty-four hundredths of an inch of water relieved the burning earth and sweltering people.

Something of the sort was badly needed. The forenoon and the early afternoon were torrid and sticky. All devices for relief passed current, from the shedding of coats and the wielding of every kind of fan, to the earnest and unchecked absorption of tall drinks with foam on them. The storm made up for the sufferings of the people with noteworthy energy. The rain came down in steady sheets, slanting before as stiff a wind as the dry-land sailors of the Watchungs have navigated before in a long time.

The relief was real, and stuck to the countryside. Porches were swept by cooling breezes all evening and sleep was not shy of wooers when bedtime came.

The storm did no damage here, but in other places in its track it tore things around. At Bowne Park Bill's big tent collapsed, and the show was stampeded. A young camel was killed and Major Lillie ("Pawnee Bill") had his shoulder dislocated by a falling pole.

At Long Branch a bolt of lighting hit the flag pole in Ocean Park and shattered it to within ten feet of the ground. Four men engaged in laying out concrete walks nearby were thrown down and stunned.

GOLDEN GIFTS EXCHANGED.

Feature of the Semi-Centennial Celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Murray.

All the children and grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Murray, Sr., excepting three, were present at the celebration of their golden wedding at their summer home, "Burnbrae," Wolfboro, N. H., on Monday. The party numbered twenty-three.

Their children are Mr. and Mrs. William D. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. Townsend Rushmore, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Sandford, Mr. and Mrs. Roger F. Murray, all of Plainfield, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Tilney, of Boston; Mr. and Mrs. James E. Murray, of Brooklyn, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Murray, of New York city.

One of the pleasant features of the day was the presentation by each child of a golden gift to their parents. Each child received a picture of their parents, and a golden box of wedding cake.

At 1 o'clock dinner was served to the party in the new cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Sandford, the dinner being given by Mrs. Sandford and Mrs. Tilney. After dinner various groups were photographed and excellent pictures were secured, especially a panoramo taken by Miss Tilney, of Brooklyn, an expert amateur photographer.

In the evening a reception was given by Mr. and Mrs. Murray to the campers on the lake and an informal social time closed with fireworks and a collation served in Mr. and Mrs. Murray's cottage.

The fifty years have dealt kindly with Mr. and Mrs. Murray, who are enjoying excellent health.

"Freck" Has Been Stolen.

There is a strange mixture of grief and anger at the borough fire headquarters today. "Freckles," alias Freck, Jr.," has been pinched from his chain at the back of the fire headquarters. The said "Freck" is a white bull dog, one year old, with one eye blackened by a spot. He is the pet of the headquarters and the special ward of Ambrose Campbell, who raised him from a pup. He was fed by Campbell last night as usual, and left him chained in his place. Shortly afterward someone unfastened him and now he is gone. Ambrose is waiting with blood in his eye for any clues to the missing pup.

—For making iced tea or coffee nothing is better than Neuman Brothers' 50c Oolong or special mixed Mocha and Java. A drink of either drives away all heat.

NO BIDS FOR CONTRACT

Board of Education Vainly Tries to Get Some One to Grade Ground.

QUEER REASON WHY

Technical Wording of Specifications Responsible for Lack of Any Bids, It Is Said.

The city Board of Education held a special meeting last night for the purpose of receiving bids for the grading of the new high school grounds and for the second time the contractors who are anxious to do the work were conspicuous by their absence. Not a solitary bid came in and there was nothing else for the trustees to do but to refer the matter to the building and grounds committee. They will confer this week as to what is to be done about the matter.

An official of the board was asked this morning why it was that no one wanted the job and he ascribed the shyness of the contractors to the wording of the specifications. The plans were drawn by a New York landscape architect and they have been described in such a way that "countrymen," as he expressed it, did not understand them. He ventured the opinion that they were afraid of getting "stuck" as the terms were unfamiliar and it was like bidding for a cat in a bag. If this proves to be the case it will be attended to by the proper committee and another attempt will be made to have some one come in.

The contract will be a large one as the grounds are extensive and considerable grading is to be done. As soon as the property is leveled off it will be laid out in walks and sections with flower beds similar to those in the city park directly across the street, practically making them one.

At the meeting last night, the board received bids for the building of cement walks about the new school building. There were only three as follows: Standard Paving Company, of Newark, $2,000; Commonwealth Roofing Company, of Jersey City, $1,614; The Serrell Construction Company, of New York, $1,296. All three were referred to the building committee for final disposition and the contract will in all probability be given the Serrell Construction Company.

BUILDERS TO GATHER HERE

Delegates From All Parts of State to Association's Quarterly Meeting.

SESSIONS AT THE CASINO

City Officials To Be Invited To a Dinner—Date Is Wednesday, July 25.

The Plainfield Master Builders' Association met last night to complete arrangements for entertaining the New Jersey Master Builders' Association at its thirteenth quarterly meeting to be held at the asino on wednesday, July 25. It was reported that there would be about 125 delegates at the meeting from all parts of the State. An invitation list was prepared, which includes a number of city officials, who will be asked to attend the dinner to be given at the Casino.

President King, of Bloomfield, will preside at the morning and afternoon meetings, and there will be papers and discussion of matters of particular interest to master builders. It is quite likely that the association will hold its fourteenth quarterly meeting in Elizabeth. At that time officers will be elected.

The objects of the association are to maintain a community of interests among the master builders of the State and to adjust any important differences that may arise from time to time between the masters and the journeymen. Since the organization was formel it has been noticed that there has been far less trouble between the bosses and their employees and strikes have been less frequent throughout the State. In a majority of cases and wherever possible arbitration methods are adopted to effect settlements.

Another important action on the part of the association is its efforts to have all master builders secure licenses, thus raising the standard of workmanship and guaranteeing definite responsibility, where before irresponsible men were permitted to compete with responsible ones and have the same advantage to the detriment of the trade and the man having the work done.

CHAMPIONSHIP TOURNEY

Leighton Calkins Issues Programme For Big Golf Event Next Month.

AUGUST 9, 10 AND 11

Entries Limited to Amateurs and Professionals of Metropolitan Golf Association.

Leighton Calkins, of this city, secretary of the Metropolitan Golf Association, announced yesterday the programme for the second open championship to be held at the Hollywood Golf Club, August 9, 10 and 11. This is in accordance with the resolution passed at the last annual meeting of the association. By the courtesy of the directors and members of the Hollywood Golf Club, the club's course has been tendered for the tournament and they have provided the prize money and medals. Play will begin on Thursday morning, August 9, at 9 o'clock. The championship is limited to amateurs and professionals of the Metropolitan Golf Association.

The Metropolitan open championship competition will be medal play and will consist of seventy-two holes, thirty-six holes to be played on Thursday, August 9, and the remainder on Friday, August 10. The competition is open to all amateurs who are members of, and to all professionals who are employed by, golf clubs, which are members of the Metropolitan Golf Association. Players must be certified by the secretary of a club as representing that club. The entries will close at the office of Mr. Calkins, 25 Broad street, New York, on Monday, August 6, at noon, and must be made through the secretaries of clubs. Competitors will be paired by the committee.

There will be a four ball match, eighteen holes medal play, teams to consist of two players, an amateur and a professional. Best ball of players at each hole to count. This competition is not confined to amateurs and professionals, but is open to all amateurs and professionals in the United States and Canada. Teams entered for this competition will be paired at the tee. Entries close at the clubhouse on Friday, August 10, at 9 o'clock in the morning, and should be made direct to Mr. Calkins, care of Hollywood Golf Club, P. O. Box 152, West End, N. J.

There will also be an open handicap, eighteen holes medal play, open to all. Handicaps will be limited to eighteen strokes, and no player will be allowed to start at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The entries will close at the same time and place as for the four ball match.

The prizes in this tournament for the championship will be as follows: First, $150 and a gold medal to the winner of the championship; second, $100; third, $75; fourth, $50; fifth, $25; sixth, $15. In addition to these above the following special prizes will be added: August 9, best score morning round, $25; best score afternoon round, $25; best thirty-six holes, $25; August 10, best score morning round, $25; best score afternoon round, $25; best thirty-six holes, $25.

Four ball match. Two prizes—value $25 each to be awarded to the winners. Open handicap. First prize, $35; second prize, $16; first to be awarded to the player turning in the best gross score. In the event of an amateur winning any of the above prizes, he will be given the equivalent in plate.

The programme for the three days' tournament will be as follows: Thursday, August 9, 9 a. m., first round for championship, 18 holes; 2 p. m., second round for championship, 18 holes; Friday, August 10, 9 a. m., third round for championship, 18 holes; 2 p. m., fourth championship, 18 holes; Saturday, August 11, 9 a. m., four ball match, 18 holes; 1 p. m., open handicap, 18 holes, all medal play.

The rules of the United States Golf Association will govern all play, except as they may be modified by the tournament committee, which will consist of Paul Wilcox, chairman; Arden M. Robbins, Charles F. Watson; ex-officio, Daniel Chauncey, president, and H. Grahame Wilcox, president; Leighton Calkins, secretary; W. M. Baldwin, treasurer. The committee from the Hollywood Golf Club consists of J. J. O'Donohue, Jr., chairman; Arthur McAseenan, Frank R. Henderson and H. Content, president, ex-officio.

Fell From Pony In Faint.

Miss Frances Ellson, of Westfield, who has been ill several months, rode a pony to this city this morning for exercise. She slid from the pony in a faint at Watchung avenue and Sixth street. She revived almost immediately and was found to be unhurt. She said she supposed the exertion overtaxed her strength, and refused medical attendance. After a brief rest she insisted on mounting the pony again and riding home.

JUSTICE HELD COURT IN BOYCE'S HOTEL

MUCH POSTPONED BEERMAN-REGAN CASE ARGUED FOR TWO HOURS.

The twice postponed hearing of the assault and battery action upon Charles Beerman, Jr., being brought by his father against Patrick J. Regan was settled without penalty by Justice Snape at a special session of the court held at Boyce's Hotel last evening. The case was to have come up at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, after its postponement from last week, but was again postponed by consent of both parties.

There was a case up before Justice Mundy at the court room when the judges, lawyers and parties involved appeared for the hearing, so the Judge held court at Boyce's Hotel, on Somerset street.

The hearing was long and tiresome, lasting for two hours. It was hot, in more ways than one, for Beerman claimed that his boy had been brutally treated by Regan on the evening of July 2, and was anxious for legal redress. Justice Snape made quite a case out of the litigation, and several witnesses were called for each side, without establishing an ydefinite point. Finally His Honor announced that if Regan would give the court his assurance to keep the peace in the future, he would consider the action dismissed. This was about 10 o'clock. Now it happens that Regan is a special officer, and keeping the peace is right in his line. So his attorney in the case, S. S. Swackhamer, Esq., gave the required promise for him and the court adjourned to the coolth. N. Douglass Drake, Esq., represented Beerman in the matter.

BELIEVE TAX RATE WILL BE NEAR $1.25

ASSESSORS HAND AROUND HUBBARD COURT ON THAT FIGURE.

There has been an impression that the New Jersey Central Railroad Company's assessment in Plainfield on second-class property amounted to $83,000 in money; in fact some of the assessors believed it themselves. Last year the New Jersey Central was assessed $15,000 worth of second-class property, at the rate of $2.50. According to the new law this year the assessed valuation on this property will be about $150,000.

Assessor Charles H. Hand, in conversation with a reporter for The Daily Press, said today that he and Assessor Joseph H. Hubbard are of the opinion that Plainfield's tax rate for the coming year will be near $1.25, while Assessor H. C. Runyon believes that it will be nearer $1.25. "We are going to do all in our power to keep the rate down," continued Mr. Hand, "and if it is possible to make it $1.25 you can rest assured that it will be done. Of course, the assessors cannot state what the rate will be until after all of the county assessors meet at Elizabeth on August 7, and learn the county rate, which I have understood is likely to be a little higher this year."

CIVIL ACTION SETTLED AMICABLY BY LITIGANTS.

Legal Action Absut Some Land Settled Without Action In Borough Court Between Brothers.

At the hearing of the action brought by Brooks Carson against his brother, James Carson, at the borough court before Justice Clark Mundy last evening, a mutual understanding was effected between the brothers and Brooks Carson withdrew his complaint. The quarrel arose over the sale of some land by Brooks Carson.

Some property on Mountain avenue was sold to James Carson a short time ago and he was to pay his brother for it in installments of $25 until $200 had been paid, when a 6 per cent. mortgage was to be taken out for the $800 remaining. Seventy-five dollars had been paid, when James Carson went to the property and attempted to remove some top soil. Brooks Carson had a warrant out for him for trespassing. Both men retained counsel, G. W. Moy, Esq., represented James Carson, and W. S. Angleman representing Brooks Carson. The litigation ended peacefully in the court room last night.

—Postmaster E. H. Bird and his brother-in-law, Edward T. VanWickle, have purchased the Vermeule property at 24 Sandford avenue, and will move there later.

—Doane & Doane, the real estate brokers, has signed the lease for a store at 221 Park avenue, Charles W. McCutchen's new building, and hope to take possession about August 1.

ELKS CAPTURE DENVER

Plainfielders Among Antlered Host Enjoying Hospitality in That City.

"EVERYTHING GOES"

Nights Turned Into Mad Revel of Thousands of Masqueraders — Lot of Fun.

Members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., today received souvenir postal cards from Exalted Ruler A. D. Findlay and other local Elks who are attending the annual convention of the order at Denver. Brief passages on them indicate that their trip West was an enjoyable one and that the citizens of Metropolis is doing itself proud in entertaining the antlered host.

According to dispatches received from Denver this morning the first business session of the convention was held yesterday when officers were elected. Judge Henry A. Melvin, of Oakland, Cal., was unanimously made grand exalted ruler and Fred C. Robinson, of Dubuque, Ia., was re-elected grand secretary; John K. Tener, of Charleroi, Pa., grand treasurer; Dr. W. H. Haviland, Butte, Mont., grand trustee, and Bayard Bray, of Indianapolis, Ind., grand tyler, all without opposition.

There were interesting contests for three chairs of the Grand Lodge. Edward McLaughlin, of Boston, was elected over Robert E. Green, of Brrpkline, Mass., by six votes, for the office of esteemed loyal knight. Robert D. Quedner, of Zanesville, Ohio, was made esteemed leading knight, and Professor W. W. McClelland, of Pittsburg, esteemed lecturing knight.

At the opening session, 1208 members were reported present.

Additional arrivals of large bodies of Elks are taxing Denver's capacity to house them. The town is doing its very best, and the effort comes from every quarter. All the fashionable clubs of the city are maintaining open house, and even the rival fraternal orders have arranged receptions.

Night is turned into a mad revel of thousands of masqueraders. Brilliantly illuminated streets, gayly festooned arches, many bands, tooting auto parties and the gay throngs that sweep by on the pavements make a happy carnival picture.

"Everybody goes" one newspaper proclaims on its first page. "You are welcome. But what you want, only remember your money is counterfeit," and the truth of it is not missed by a mile.

Mayor Sheer, of Denver, an Elk, gave a reception last night to the visiting Elks who are Mayors or hold other municipal offices. There are seven such Mayors in the city, including those of Pawtucket, R. I.; Louisville, Seattle, Indianapolis and St. Louis, Mo. Judge J. M. Tierney, of New York, was also a guest.

Entertainment for the Elks yesterday included a variety of amusements. There were automobiles rides and band concerts by the dozen. A reception was held for the visitors at St. Anthony's Hospital. Here the Denver Elks have fixed up fourteen rooms for their special use. The visitors were received on the lawn.

Philadelphia's fight against Baltimore for the place of next meeting is the most talked about and important event of the week. Baltimore's assertion that it has the contest won already has interjected an element of doubt into the struggle, which is exciting intense interest. Though it is asserted at many reliable sources that most of the votes will go for Philadelphia, the fact that her rival is showing confidence has caused the Quaker members to increase their efforts, and tonight they are as sanguine as ever.

Considering Garbage Question.

The councilmanic committee on public affairs is considering a proposition to have the garbage of the city collected and carted out of the city to be disposed of in any way the collector may decide so long as it conforms to the sanitary laws. The committee believes that such a method would be more satisfactory than that of trying to install up-to-date machinery on the plant owned by the city and located on DeKalb avenue. It is the opinion of those who have made a study of the matter that the plant on DeKalb avenue could not be operated in a manner to be objectionable to the residents of that part of the city.

William G. Debele Improving.

William G. Debele, who was injured by the explosion of a gas engine at Debele & Stahl's yesterday morning, spent a comfortable night. He is still unable to be at work, for his eyes are very painful, especially the left one. Dr. Buchanan is in attendance, and it is thought that the sight will be salmpaired.

OPENS FIGHT AGAINST ALLEGED ICE TRUST BY INVOKING AID OF COUNTY PROSECUTOR

Acting on Advice of Attorney General, Mr. Hooley Consults Prosecutor English.

HE FEELS CONFIDENT

Immaterial to Him Personally, But On Behalf of Poor Banker Will Smash Any Illegal Combination.

Acting on the advice of Attorney-General McCarter, Edwin S. Hooley, on behalf of the people, has decided to have criminal proceedings brought against the ice men of Plainfield in order to ascertain whether there is any combination on their part in restraint of trade. This, of course, is providing sufficient evidence can be brought before the grand jury to warrant an indictment. That Mr. Hooley means business is established by his own statement that he has already been in consultation with N. C. J. English, prosecutor of Union county, and that he feels hopeful of producing the necessary evidence.

When seen by a reporter for The Daily Press, Mr. Hooley admitted that he had received a reply from the attorney-general of the State to his request for suggestion how to proceed in the matter. He seemed in his natural good humor when he remarked that the ice dealers would undoubtedly have an opportunity to make good their claim to the Plainfield Protective Association that they are innocent of any wrong doing. As reported in this paper yesterday, the wholesale dealers sold the association's committee Thursday night that the retailers were under no agreement to sell the commodity purchased from them at any fixed price.

Mr. Hooley has received much encouragement from interested citizens and he is going right ahead on his own hook in the hope of helping the people of Plainfield get cheaper ice. He is now at work collecting evidence. It is expected that he has already laid some important facts before the county prosecutor. Just what this alleged evidence is could not be learned for Mr. Hooley told the reporter for The Daily Press that he would not divulge anything until the county prosecutor has acted. There is a deep implanted conviction in him that he has enough evidence to warrant in indictment.

"To the Daily Press man, Mr. Hooley said: "What I think is any trust in the ice business and it is possible to smash it, I propose to do all in my power to break it up. Personally it makes little difference to me whether ice is twenty cents or a dollar a hundred for I can afford to pay for it. But that is not the point. There are hundreds of people who can not afford to pay exorbitant prices and I intend to see whether they will be compelled to."

Continuing, Mr. Hooley said: "I propose to lay all the facts obtainable before Prosecutor English and it will be up to him to do the rest. I know we can depend upon him. There is every reason to believe that there is a combination in restraint of trade here and if it can be proven it will not be permitted any longer."

"It is good news to hear that the Plainfield Protective Association has taken the matter up," added Mr. Hooley. "I hope they will obtain results. But whatever they do will not change my original plans in the slightest. I am going to find out for myself whether there is a trust."

Mr. Hooley also intends to do some investigating concerning the coal business in this city.

Colby Meeting at Cranford.

As the result of a conference held at Cranford this week to discuss the advisability of organizing a branch of the Union County Republican League for Equal Taxation, a public meeting will be held in Assembly Hall, Cranford, on Thursday night, July 26, at which time Mayor Egan, of Jersey City, will speak and explain the "New Idea," and shake up the "regulars." Other big guns, including Judge William R. Kinyon, Senator Colby and George L. Record, will boom in the cause for reform.

P. S. C. Improvements.

The Public Service Corporation has completed its track repair work and that of resurfacing East Front street, between Park and Washington avenues, and the work of putting in a new switch at Front and Somerset streets and West Front street and Grant avenue. The company now proposes to resurface West Front street between Grant and Clinton avenues, after which new rails and ties will be laid in Watchung avenue, from East Front street to the trolley stand. Similar work will be done on Watchung avenue, from the railroad to Fifth street and in East Fifth street.

ICE MEN'S SIDE

Dealers Association Objects to Scale Suggested by the Plainfield Protective Association.

SUPPLY NEARLY GONE

Say They Will Try to Get Ice from Wholesalers Elsewhere—Another Meeting to Be Held in Near Future.

The Ice Dealer's Association held a meeting Friday and Saturday morning President Peter J. McDonough sent the following letter to R. Henry Depew, president of the Plainfield Protective Association:

"The suggestion of your committee to raise the price of ice to butchers and other business men ten cents per hundred and lower it ten cents to private families was brought before our company at their meeting last night and was met with serious objections. First, because it would be likely to cause a raise in the price of meat, which would be greater hardship on the poor, as they can get along without ice but cannot get along without meat; second, because it would bring the wholesale and retail prices within five cents, which is something that has never been known here or elsewhere.

"The matter of a reduction in the price was taken up and as our stock is practically exhausted, our manager was instructed to communicate with as many of the wholesale companies as possible and get their price on ice delivered in Plainfield, after which he is to report to the company and another meeting will be held to take action on the same and you will be notified as to the outcome."

The suggestion, said to have been made by the Protective Association, that the price of ice to butchers and other business men be increased ten cents a hundred, was not made known by the citizens organization, whose committee held a conference with the ice men Thursday night. It astonished several members of the Protective Association when asked for their opinion regarding the reason for such action. No one seemed to know anything about the suggestion and as any member of the committee could not be found, it is impossible of explanation.

Many Sales and Rentals.

The following sales and rentals have been reported by the Mulford real estate agency, for this week: C. M. Slocum, of North Plainfield, has purchased the Lanphear property at West Fifth street and Central avenue and will take possession immediately. Mrs. Ida Brevoort, of Brooklyn, has purchased Mrs. L. Hooley's house at West Sixth street and Central avenue and will begin at once to improve the property. Mrs. C. Detweiler, of Carlton avenue, has purchased Mrs. Otto's house, 514 Clinton avenue, and will take possession September 1. H. L. DeForest, of Superior, Wis., has rented 1028 Park avenue, and will take possession early in September.

BERRIES FOR BREAKFAST.

For the first course of a breakfast or luncheon, fill cocktail glasses half full of raspberries, turn over the fruit chilled and well sweetened currant juice, and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

For a hot day luncheon or dinner dessert, mash ripe currants, sweeten them and after they have stood for a time strain out the seeds through a sieve. Cut bananas in slices, arrange them in a dish, cover them with raw currant juice and chill.

Ripe currants add to the flavor of red or black raspberries, when the fruit is used as a sauce for puddings or pies. They are excellent canned, mixed in equal proportions.

Currant cake is a delicacy from Boston. Cream together a cupful of sugar and half a cupful of butter, add the yolks of three eggs and the whites of two eggs, all thoroughly beaten, then stir in half a cupful of milk and two cupfuls of flour sifted with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. At the last, incorporate a cupful of currants dredged with a tablespoonful of flour and bake for forty minutes.

A Fraud Exposed.

"The lines in your hand indicate," said the fortune-teller, "that you will be married a second time." "Pshaw," she angrily retorted, grabbing for the dollar she had just laid upon the table, "you're an old fraud. If I'm ever married again it will be the fourth time."

BOY MISSILE THROWER INHERITED PRACTICE

HIS MOTHER TELLS JUDGE SHE DID IT BEFORE HE WAS BORN.

In explanation of her four-year-old son's propensity for throwing sticks and stones at the least provocation, Mrs. Rose L. Wilson Saturday advanced one of the most novel pleas that have ever been handed to Judge Runyon in the city court.

The boy was arrested on complaint of Mrs. Maude Washington, who said he had been making her a target for all sorts of missiles and that she had given him no provocation that she knew of. She also declared that the youngster had developed a wonderfully strong right arm from continually throwing things and that no one is the neighborhood was safe.

When the mother was questioned about her son's failing, she readily admitted that he was a human slungshot but declared it was not his fault. "You see, Judge," she said, "just before Herman was born, my husband used to nag me a whole lot and I got excited almost every day. When I got real mad I grabbed anything in reach and threw it at him and that's why Herman has always been the same way. You can't blame him because he came by it honest."

Although Judge Runyon is not an expert in such matters, he expressed a belief in Mrs. Wilson's theory and the boy was discharged. Mrs. Washington declared, however, that whether heredity or no, she wasn't going to be a backstop for Herman's missiles and served notice on him in court that he had better practice on the side of a barn.

FOR YOUNG MOTHERS.

Don't be afraid to touch the new baby. It won't break. Hold it head and back carefully and you will soon be able to handle it with ease.

Don't think if it sneezes after *feeding that it has taken cold. Sneez*ing is a habit of very young babies.

Don't attempt to remove any foreign substance from the nose with a hairpin and cloth. The corner of a clean linen rag dipped in warm water and inserted in the nostril will be sufficient.

Don't use a fine comb. If patches of dirt should appear on the scalp, rub them at night and next morning remove with warm water and pure castile soap.

Don't neglect to wash out the baby's mouth after every feeding, using cold water and boric acid, forming a very mild solution.

Don't forget that you can strengthen the eyes by keeping them shielded from gas light and sunlight and by bathing them three times a day in warm water and boric acid, a cupful of water and a teaspoonful of the powder.

Don't let a draught strike the young baby. There is far less danger of its smothering than of its taking a fatal cold. The new-born infant cannot be kept too warm.

Don't wake it up to look at it, if you do you will regret it later on.

Don't rock it, walk with it or hold it unnecessarily unless you wish to make yourself a slave to its caprices as the months go on.

Don't permit its feet to get cold. Warm feet are the symptoms of a healthy baby.

Don't let it keep on a wet bib and be not told when any party of the body is moist it must be thoroughly dried before powdering to prevent chafing.

Don't use scented powder; unscented talcum, in connection with proper bathing, will keep the baby as sweet as a rose.

Don't put its head on a pillow the way you rest yourself. The little body should be laid out straight or on its right side to keep the back strong.

Don't use soap for the face. Pure white castile for other parts of the body, together with warm water, are the essentials for the baby's bath.

Don't use the same cloth for bathing all parts of the body.

Don't begin talking in whispers. The baby will learn to sleep if you speak normally and you will find it will make life much easier for both you and your friends if you do not constitute the newcomer to absolute silence when she arrives. In fact, in a New York flat this condition would be hardly possible, no matter how much you might wish it.

"Lon" Wiltse Gives Up Pitching.

"Lon" Wiltse, the popular baseball twirler, who has had trouble with his arm this year, has given up pitching for the year for the purpose of giving his wing complete rest. He has returned to the Johnstown Tri-State League Club, where he is playing a fine first base. Not only is he covering the initial sack in faultless manner, but in stick work he has a batting average that is making the league players envious. "Lon" always was good with the stick, but since he gave up pitching he has improved very much.

— Public Hall for St. Stephen's.

In the near future an addition will be built to the parish house of St. Stephen's church, providing for a hall, 50x25, with a stage and accommodations for 300 people. The building is to be lighted by electricity and gas, and fitted with all the necessary requirements. The hall will be used for social functions or public meetings of any character to be held in that section of the city.

STORE CHAT IN SUMMER.

Random Jottings From a Shopper's Notebook.

A very attractive violet pattern, with a dimity to match for curtains, bureau-scarfs, etc., is among the most summery-looking and dainty of bedroom patterns.

A new style tooth-brush holder for the bathroom fits over a tumbler, thus saving fastening to the wall, is of nickel and is priced at only 25 cents.

Most attractive are the Colonial candlesticks on view, with dull finished brass bases and tall Sheffield glass globes, hand enameled in delicate conventional and floral designs. These may be had with electric fitments, also, but to so moderate them seems to take away all the glamour of the old Colonial days. A rather taller model along the same lines is adorned with the enamel made familiar by the girandoles, so high in fashion's favor at present.

Brass desk fitments blend admirably with the dark oak of Arts and Crafts furniture and are very much used on the table desks so often seen in Craftsman living-rooms. A recent addition to these fitments is a perpetual calendar, with elaborate hammered brass frame and leaves of celluloid printed in black and red.

The price of a silk-covered eiderdown comfortable is perhaps prohibitive to many, so that an inviting one of silkoline, with a silk border, filled with wool and priced at $10, will make a pleasing substitute.

Suggestions for travelers fill the shops these going-away days. A yellow pigskin case that rolls up holds four nickel chain coat-holders, in convenient fashion for stowing in a trunk. An emergency case is also offered for the convenience of the summer sojourner. It contains about a dozen little necessities never to be found when needed, yet so often desired at odd times. Twine, a tube of paste or glue-gummed labels, baggage tags, clips, eyelets, etc., are among the various fitments of the case.

An upper compartment for cigars alone is the feature of one of the newest cellarettes, just offered for masculine convenience.

A little screen to protect the lamp is now the universal accompaniment of the fashionable copper or nickel coffee percolator. This stands on a tray to match, in case the guaranteed "dripless" spigot does drip.

A rose" by any other name would smell" as sweet." The "thread and thum" rugs, so much discussed in papers and magazines and talked about and advertised, is only another name for our old friend, the rag rug.

An out-of-the-ordinary rug, because it is made in few of the shops, is a so-called "prison" rug from India. These rugs come in red, *tan and black and are durability per*sonified.

HINTS TO THE HOUSEKEEPER.

The wise housewife will be on the quivive for the midsummer sales of the delightfully cool bamboo furniture and grass rugs, which furnish the plain so comfortably and artistically.

A summer bedroom has an unfinished appearance without those exceedingly dainty scarfs of white dotted swiss with fetched edges for the bureau and chiffonier.

One way of solving the problem of how to keep one's bureau drawer in order is to make trays of various sizes that will not only keep things in their places, but are pretty and attractive looking. Pasteboard boxes of any size may be used, and they should be covered with silk or cretonne or any other fancy material that may be on hand, with bits of ribbon for handles. A little care should be taken to have the trays fit the drawer as nearly as possible, so that no space is wasted, and it is easy, of course, to cut them to a uniform height. In cutting the material for the cover it should be just a seam larger all around than the boxes, so that it may be turned under. The boxes should be interlined with a layer of cotton batting.

Welcome Service Tomorrow.

Among the speakers to address the meeting at the Crescent Avenue church to welcome Miss Curry at the beginning of her fourth summer's work at the Crescent Fresh Air Home will be Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector-emeritus of Grace church and chairman of the camp committee, Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church and Miss Sara Curry, who will attend the meeting with the delegation of twenty-five of the children from the camp. Singing will be a feature of the service, which will be held at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Bank Election.

The vacancy in the official board of the Second National Bank, of Somerville, caused by the resignation of George V. VanderVeer as president just before he left for his summer home at South Royalton, Vt., was filed Friday at a meeting of the Board of Directors. Charles L. Voorhees, who had long been vice president, was chosen president, and Charles Schwed was made vice president. The secretary elected is James Q. TenEyck.

Boys' Club Will Camp Out.

Rev. A. S. Peck, rector of St. Stephen's church, has arranged to take the Boys' Club on an outing to Asbury Park, this summer. He has secured permission to use a certain plot of ground at the shore and is now busy getting together the necessary articles for camping purposes.

SON OF THE REVOLUTION

William C. Stanbery's Father Fought in the Continental Army.

HAS KEEN MEMORY

Grand Old Man Has Lived in Union County All His Life—His Reminiscences.

William C. Stanbery, of Mountain road and Park avenue, Scotch Plains, is a real son of the Revolution, his father, Recompence Stanbery, having fought in the Continental Army.

He is a wonderful old man, as a reporter found who called on him a few days ago. The house is more than a century old, but one hears no creaking boards or rattling balluster as he goes from one to the other of the large old-fashioned rooms, or ascends its stairs to enjoy the homely comfort presented in the sleeping rooms on the second floor. One feels that it was a fitting abode of the fit *men who lived in the days of the un*reasoning within its walls of the ancestry of this white-haired octogenarian. It's a house that speaks of comfort, and it holds treasures from Revolutionary and pre-Revolutionary days in every room.

Before entering the house Mr. Stanbery gave a reporter something of his history. He listed four days to his interesting reminiscences. These are only a few of the facts he gave in a general anecdotal style. He disliked to speak of himself, preferring rather to speak of those of his house there with him, or running as fancy presented to his mind the pictures of the old days.

"I was 84 years old June 17 just past," said he. "My father was Recompence Stanbery, who was in the Revolutionary War. He entered the service as a private and was afterward in the cavalry. He was an orderly sergeant. No, I couldn't say who he was under or what regiment he was in, but I have the bullet that was dug out of one side of his leg after it went in at the other in the battle of Monmouth. I have his musket and cavalry pistols and the bit that he used. I had the bridle, but the leather all fell away and it's gone. My father married Major Chetwood's sister. I think her name was Sarah. I went to school for a while in *Elizabeth. It was Nutt*man's school around there in Goose Hollow in East Jersey street near Scott place, and I boarded for about a year at Mrs. Meeker's at the corner of Broad and Water streets. I was born in this house, and the chairs and furniture you see in the room there are the things my father brought into the house when he moved into it on May 1, 1806, after he built it.

"I was quite a boy when father died. He left everything to my mother, but she said to me soon after, 'You might as well take it all now and manage it. You'll get it all anyhow by-an-by, and you might as well have it now.' So she turned it all over to me and I started in at seventeen as a man. I bought and sold fine cattle and horses and farmed, and nobody would guess but what I was over twenty-one. Scotch Plains was ahead of me once also, but I cast my first vote in Plainfield. Henry Stanbery, who was attorney-general under President Johnson and defended him in the impeachment proceedings against Ben Butler, was my cousin.

"Why, I brought a plate of oysters from old Mrs. Commodore Vanderbilt when she kept a little stand near Castle Garden in New York. Chancellor Theodore Runyon, who took the first New Jersey troops to Washington, was a relative of my wife, and he was at one time ambassador to Berlin. The mother of Governor Henry A. Wise, of Virginia, was my cousin, she being the daughter of my uncle Jonas.

"Aaron Besley, whose father kept the old National Hotel in Cortlandt street, New York, married my niece, and I went to Washington and had him appointed United States representative at Darmstadt.

"My father's brother, who was a doctor and lived in Wheatsheaf, came to stop here just before he started for what was then the far West and where Newark, Ohio, now is. He had nine children. After he had been gone some hours, two of his sons, Henry, who was afterward attorney-general, and William, were discovered picking hickory nuts in the back of the house here in the woods. Father hurried off with them, and when he caught up with his brother, Jonas said he had so many with him that he had forgotten all about Henry and William.

"He had a log house 80x40 when he settled. It had three extensions on each side. He called it Oakland Hall. The main building was two stories high and the extensions one story. Now be sure and get my name right. One day when I was in Oakland Hill my uncle says: 'William, how do you spell your name?' I says, 'Stanbery.' 'That's right,' said he. 'So long as you spell it that way you're welcome to stay at Oakland Hall, but there's some mongrels down here in Baltimore who spell it with a 'bury' on the end of it, and that I won't have.'

"I haven't been in Elizabeth, I guess, for nearly ten years, but I can say that I was on every grand jury from the time I was 21 years old until Billy Kirk got to be sheriff. Then, as I couldn't hear the witnesses long any longer, I gave it up. The last time I was in Elizabeth I was introduced to a clerk in one of the offices in the court house. When he heard my name he said: 'When I was a clerk here there was some old woman of that name who seemed to be dabbling in everything. I met her name everywhere on the books, but never could see her. often wondered who she was.' asked him the old woman's first name. He said her name was 'Recompence.' 'Well,' said I, 'that old woman was my father.' He thought Recompence was a woman's name, like Charity and Grace."

Mr. Stanbery continued farming and doing a real estate business until 1870, when he quit for good. His only son died last New Year's day, at the age of forty-eight. He left one son, who is now 14 years old.

THURLOW WITHDRAWS FROM CONTEST FOR JOB

PLAINFIELDER NOT A CANDIDATE FOR HEALTH OFFICER OF JERSEY CITY.

Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow, who was being considered as a candidate for a similar position in Jersey City, his name having been presented to the Board of Health of that city by Mayor Mark M. Fagan, has withdrawn his name and will not allow it to be used any further in connection with that position in Jersey City.

The Jersey City Board of Health was divided on the question of electing Mr. Thurlow as health officer, there being an equal number of members for him and the same number against him. At a recent meeting of the Board of Health an attempt was made to elect Mr. Thurlow, but after repeated ballots it was found impossible.

Those who opposed Mr. Thurlow did so on the ground that while there were two Jersey City candidates for the office, who were capable of filling the place, they could not conscientiously vote to elect an outside man, and they refused to join with the members who favored the Plainfielder. That politics figured in the selection of a health officer, and the fact that Mr. Thurlow would have exacted certain conditions, such as the assurance that the position would be good for a term of five years at least, was no doubt responsible for his inability to land the position.

Mr. Thurlow will, therefore, remain in Plainfield and continue in the position he now holds. He has performed excellent work in looking after the sanitary affairs of the Board of Health, considered itself fortunate in being able to keep Mr. Thurlow here.

TRUCK DRIVER KILLED BY HIS OWN VEHICLE

FELL BENEATH THE WHEELS AND HIS SKULL WAS CRUSHED.

Simon Matthews, aged thirty-five years, a driver employed by Mullin & Son, of Market street, Newark, fell from the seat of his truck as he was driving in the yard of Huber's hotel at Garwood, Saturday, and was instantly killed, the wheels of the heavily loaded vehicle passing over his head, crushing his skull. Harry Hastings, who had been sharing the seat with him, made an attempt to stop the horses but was not quick enough. The fall was occasioned by his leaning to one side and losing his balance.

Matthews' home was at 138 New York avenue, Jersey City, where he leaves a widow and two children. The body was brought to Cole's undertaking rooms in this city and is being held pending the arrival of relatives. Matthews had been employed by the Mullin & Son firm for a long time and was well known in this city, doing most of the local delivering.

SEASON'S RECORD CROWD OUT TO THE BAND CONCERT.

Soloists Redmond and Weston Well Received by Crowd of 3,000.

The largest crowd of the season turned out at the concert by Lavere's band at Concert Park Friday evening. The stand, which accommodates 800, was filled, and many of the late arrivals were disappointed at not being able to secure seats. Between three and four thousand heard the music, which was well received, especially the selections from Faust and Old Kentucky.

Billy Redmond and Eddie Weston were the soloists and rendered four selections. Both were well received by the crowds and the rendition of the song was first-class. Owing to a mistake in bringing music arranged for a tenor song, "Will Simmons," Eddie Weston's second piece, it was impossible for the baritone to sing it. "Love Me and the World Is Mine", was substituted, and won great applause.

Charles Kolb, of Fairview avenue, is home from the Georgia Military Academy for the summer.

REGULAR TRUCK DRIVERS ORGANIZE A UNION

WILL SEEK REGULAR HOURS AND UNIFORM WAGE RATE.

Forty or more local truck and wagon drivers met in Trades Council Hall, Friday night, and effected the permanent organization of a union. It is to be known as Local No. 336 and will be affiliated with the National Teamsters Union.

The following officers were elected: President, James Whelan; financial secretary, John Staats; recording secretary, Robert Wood; treasurer, John Dunham. Meetings are to be held once a month and inside of a short time it is thought the membership will be made 100.

A member of the union was seen this morning and stated that the organization was perfected for the purpose of protecting their interests. Just the same as is done by men in other lines of labor. Employees will be asked to grant a uniform wage rate and a schedule of hours, most of them having done so already.

MAYOR KANE UPHOLDS THE HONOR OF NATIONS

GETS ARRESTED SEEKING DESTROYER OF IRISH AND AMERICAN FLAGS.

Firm in the belief that every Son of Erin is a Yankee before he is born, Patrick Kane, the "mayor of Cottage place," considered himself doubly insulted, Friday, when someone set fire to an American and an Irish flag that he was *carrying over his shoul*der on North avenue. The mayor was so absorbed in displaying the emblems and announcing the fact that he had embarked in the peanut business that the flames ignited his shirt and added injury to his indignation. He declared in stentorian tones that he could not only put the husky kibosh on the man who had made such a rotten bull it was which, under the contract agreement, must be held to guarantee against possible defects until nine months from the completion of the monument.

To make good his boast, the patriot selected a local lawyer to begin operations on and had him in a tight corner when Patrolman Overbaugh interfered. Pat refused to listen to his advice to put his complaint in writing and let Congress deal with the affair, so he was escorted to cell 5 at police headquarters.

The self-elected chief executive of Cottage place related his tale of woe to Judge Runyon Saturday and exhibited the remnants of red, white, blue, green and old rose (the latter from the shirt) to show what indignities he and his two countries had suffered. The magistrate is not without patriotism and Kane was discharged, with the understanding, however, that he let the police inflict punishment on the renegade who applied the torch. He reluctantly gave his consent and hiked it for North avenue, which now numbers him among one of its leading merchants.

PLAN MEMORIAL TO GENERAL W. S. SCOTT.

Committee Already Named to Take Up Project in Elizabeth.

The first step toward the erection of a monument to General Winfield Scott in Elizabeth was taken Thursday night at the meeting of the general committee of the Soldiers and Sailors' Monument Association in Elizabeth.

On the motion of City Attorney James C. Connolly a committee was appointed to take into consideration the erection of a monument or other structure in Scott Park or some other suitable place to the memory of *Lieut.-General Winfield Scott. Presi*dent Bergen appointed James C. Connolly, Foster M. Voorhees, George A. Ford, John S. Sauer, W. H. Rankin, D. F. Collins and C. H. K. Halsey on the committee.

The meeting was presided over by ex-Governor Voorhees. The sum of $4,000 was voted to Thomas Jardine & Sons on account of their contract. This leaves a balance unpaid of $600 within his power to wipe up the street with any man on the block.

A vote of thanks was given to A. L. Clark for the use of some stones at the ceremony of sealing the records, and also a vote of thanks to Col. Collins and officers and men of the Second regiment.

During the dedication committee Chairman MacKie reported that letter of thanks had been forwarded to Chief of Police Tenney and Street Commissioner Thompson for arrangements at the monument site on July 4. The report recommended an appropriation of $5 to the sexton of Westminster church and $25 to the janitor of City Hall.

The meeting adjourned to meet at call of the chair.

FIRE TRUCK OVERTURNS: DRIVER BUSH BADLY HURT

Vehicle Crashes Into Awning Post and Holly Freeman and John De Meza Have Narrow Escape.

VICTIM IN THE HOSPITAL

Disobedience of Orders In Not Slowing Up At Corners the Cause of the Accident—Investigation Conducted by Chief Doane.

Disobedience of a standing order not to turn corners without first bringing horses to full control, resulted in a serious accident to No. 1 truck of the local fire department at 11 Thursday night, in which Driver Harry Bush was badly hurt and G. Holly Freeman and John DeMeza were cut and bruised. The truck was responding to an alarm from box 83 at Grant avenue and Front street and in swinging from West Second street into Central avenue was thrown over against a post supporting a wooden awning. Bush was hurled from his seat and struck another post, breaking three of his ribs and forcing one of them into the lung on the left side. DeMeza, who was on top of the wagon directly behind Bush, landed in a confused heap in the doorway of a grocery store and Freeman fell on the sidewalk.

The horses stood stock still after the accident, despite the fact that the awning fell part way down upon them, and their display of gentleness probably saved Bush from being killed. He managed to extricate himself but collapsed as soon as he got out of the way. Freeman and DeMeza quickly recovered and after first securing the horses, laid Bush on a blanket and hailed Dr. N. W. Currie, who was passing nearby. The physician gave the injured treatment and the injured man was removed to Muhlenburg Hospital in the ambulance. He passed a bad night but it was said today that he was resting easily and that providing no complications ensued he would recover.

Though Bush was unable to give any coherent statement, it is declared by witnesses of the accident that he had urged his horses to top speed on Second street and that he did not start to make the turn until almost upon the corner. The truck is a very heavy affair and under no ordinary conditions would overbalance. There were reports that a stone in the crosswalk had broken beneath the weight of the wheels and also that one of the horses had slipped but an investigation by Chief Doane showed no truth in either one. It was simply a case of driving too fast, a practice for which the chief has frequently had to reprimand Bush and other members of the department.

The injured man is thirty-eight years old and has been in the service since 1892. He was tillerman on the hook and ladder truck for many years but of late has been stationed at No. 1 house under Captain Daley. Freeman is attached to the same company, while DeMeza is not connected with the department in any way and had no business on the apparatus. He was passing the house when the truck swung out and climbed on the rear.

The rear axle of the vehicle was badly bent and the handles and steps on the left side were damaged. The reserve wagon from No. 3 house will be used in its place while repairs are being made.

Off for Camp Monday.

Accompanied by Physical Director G. L. Listman and Boys' Secretary Kenneth Robbie, fifteen members of the boys department of the local Y. M. C. A. will start Monday for a two weeks' camping trip at Tuxis Island, the association camp for the summer. Those who are to make the trip are H. B. Freeman, S. F. Freeman, Edgar Freeman, N. B. McDougall, R. P. Morris, Arthur Perrine, Leslie Leland, Stanley Karner, Fred Line, R. D. Taylor, G. Y. Moy, Nelson Mathias, Julius Linke, Walter Droll and Sydney Rockwell. The camp is on Tuxis Island in the Long Island Sound, near New Haven, and the boys will live in tents.

Camp Outfits for Company K.

The haversacks, canteens and mess kits for the members of Company K, who are to go into camp, arrived this morning and will be distributed tonight. The company is to assemble at the armory at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning and take the 11:45 train for Sea Girt.

"Depot Dan."

"Tat old fellow dreadfully disappointed," remarked the sympathetic stranger at the village station.

"Yes," said the baggageman, "he missed the train."

"Oh, that was too bad. Where was he going?"

"Nowhere. He just missed seeing the train come in."—Detroit Free Press.

AUTOMOBILE HOUSE BURNS DESTROYING A $1,500 CAR

TOTAL LOSS TO WILLIAM D. BIRD WILL APPROXIMATE $2,000.

A large-sized automobile house belonging to William D. Bird and located in the rear of his residence in West Front street, above Grant avenue, caught fire in some way shortly before 11 Thursday night, and was totally destroyed, together with an auto-car worth $1,500 and $200 worth of seah and blinds stored in the place. A barn directly adjoining, on property owned by D. N. Force, was burning when the department arrived but was saved with a loss of only $150. The auto house was valued at $250 and was insured for $200. There was also insurance of $500 on the machine but none on the material stored in the building.

The fire was discovered by William Higgins, whose residence is situated but a short distance away, and he turned in an alarm from box 87 on Front street and Grant avenue. After it had been sounded fully and the apparatus was on the way, the watchman at the Pond Tool Works noticed the flames and turned in a second alarm from box 47 on South Second street, which by some means having been heard by him. The two calls led to the belief that the Pond shop was on fire and there was a stampede from all parts of the city to get to it.

No. 3 hose company had two hydrant streams on the blaze within a few minutes after its discovery but Captain Feiring saw the auto house was beyond saving and directed the efforts of his men to the Force barn. The two places kept the West End men and those from headquarters busy until 11:45, when the recall was sounded. The fire was a hard one to fight because of gasolene in the car, the proximity of the railroad which practically barred the men from getting at it in the rear.

Mr. Bird was unable to furnish any explanation as to the cause of the fire. He informed Chief Doane that the machine had not been used at all Thursday and so far as he knew no one had been in the building since Wednesday night. It is possible that a spark of some kind may have smoldered on the floor.

BROKE HIS CELL DOOR

"JUST TO GET A DRINK."

Dunellen Prisoner, Caught While Escaping, Tells Mohan He Was Thirsty.

Caught just in the knick of time by Marshal Owen Mohan, William Oliver, of this city, who was arrested at Dunellen Thursday and held on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct in the borough, almost effected his escape from the Dunellen lock-up early yesterday morning. Oliver is an employe of the Plainfield Water Company, and went on a small spree Wednesday night in Dunellen. Oliver's jag was one of the destructive kind, and he was amusing himself by breaking light globes and destroying property generally in the vicinity of Prospect avenue when Marshal Mohan came along and gathered him in.

He was locked in one of the cells, which have not yet been equipped with the hand-to-hand work being made for them and was left to sober up before haling before Mayor Wycoff this morning. But Oliver wasn't so drunk that he didn't realize that it was up to him to get away. Accordingly he started to work very quietly and soon had cut through one of the bars of his cell and gained the freedom of police headquarters. Marshal Mohan heard him walking around and came in and surprised him as he was looking for a favorable back exit.

"What are you doing out here?" said Mohan. "Just came out to get a drink of water," was the reply, in a tone which would signify that there wasn't anything especially wrong about that. He got the drink of water, but only after he had been locked up in one of the other cells. The marshal kept close watch for the remainder of the night and early in the morning he was brought before the Mayor. His sentence was a $20 fine or sixty days "down the road." He paid the fine.

Another Factory Coming.

Work has been commenced on the new factory in Dunellen on the south side of the railroad near Rock avenue. The buildings will be partly in Middlesex and partly in Union counties as the county line runs through the property. Machinery for cement construction of every kind will be manufactured and the plans for the buildings would indicate that a large force of workmen will be employed. Rumor has it that fifty houses in the vicinity of the new plant will be erected immediately for the accommodation of the employees.

The End.

"She's not happy, you say? That's strange! The last time I saw her she told me she had found her ideal."

"Yes, but unfortunately she married it."

Corn Cultivation.

Opinions are strongly formed as to the proper number of plowings a corn crop should receive, writes an Ohio farmer in National Stockman. FRANK H. SMITH PLEASED

Co. Chairman Glad the Constitutionality of Redistricting Law is Settled.

MR. PERKINS VIEWS

Union County Assemblyman Says Effect of Decision Means Solid Delegations in Legislature.

In Union county politicians are gratified that the decision of the Court of Errors to the effect that the law providing for the election of assemblyman by districts is unconstitutional has come early so as to clarify the political atmosphere a little. Neither the regulars nor the Colby faction, as far as outward expressions of opinion are concerned, had any particular leanings to one side or the other except in a firm belief of the principle of the law. Both organization men and anti-organization men are in favor of the principle of the district system.

County Chairman Frank H. Smith, of this city, said Thursday that all were pleased with the prompt decision by the court.

"It was not for the Court of Errors and Appeals to say which was the better system of electing assemblymen," said Mr. Smith. "The judges simply had to decide as to whether the district system was allowable under the constitution. They were always unanimous in declaring it was constitutional.

"I cannot see that the decision is of any particular benefit to the organization or of any particular benefit to those who are warring on the organization in Union county. If the people make up their minds to dethrone the present county delegates, they will do it irrespective of districts, and if they are satisfied with our work they will elect organization representatives whether there are districts or not.

"The district plan was backed last year by the Colby people. I favored them in this matter. I think we all favor the district system as a principle, but I should state that I was not in favor of the Colby idea of having the working of the proposed new law deferred for a year, as they desired and advocated on the floor of the House. Being a good thing in principle, I was in favor of having it go into effect at once, if constitutional.

"It was probably a surprise to some friends of the Colby people that the Colby men did not take the same view. If the law's operation was deferred a year the Colby assemblymen thought it would give them an advantage. As a philosopher today, I want to bring out the point that even unsuccessful reformers are willing to sacrifice a principle for a political advantage."

Assemblyman Perkins said the decision would meet with satisfaction. "The effect will be," he declared, "that counties will send solid delegations to Trenton, where, if the act had been sustained, the delegations would, perhaps, have been split. In counties like Passaic and Union, where there was a chance of electing one Democratic member, the delegations will now be solidly Republican. I fail to see how the decision favors the so-called reformed party. The bill wasn't introduced with any partisan idea, but because the party leaders thought that representation by districts was truer representation. Besides, it was in line with the governor's message."

Lines drawn up by the Colby Assemblymen were placed in the districting act by the Legislature, and those submitted by the organization will be given over to the next. The districts were probably made as much as possible to favor the Colby Assemblymen.

"I always felt that there was a good deal of merit in the district system," Senator Colby began in reply to a question. "It brings the representative nearer to the people and makes it easier to fix the responsibility for bad legislation. The conditions in Essex county at the present time, however, are such as to make but one issue the vital one, that is, the domination of machine and corporation rule, and I believe the district system would have lent itself more readily to those who are anx*ious to prevent the success of the* new movement."

MEDICAL SOCIETY DINNER.

Local Physicians Gather at the Casino.

The Plainfield Medical Society held its quarterly meeting and banquet at the Casino, Thursday. After an excellent dinner prepared and served under the direction of Major Maze Edwards, there was an informal clinical discussion in which all the physicians took some part. The dining room was elaborately decorated with flowers, pink and green being the prevailing colors.

The physicians present were: Drs. P. B. Cregar, N. W. Currie, Ellis W. Hedges, Albert Pittis, P. J. Zeglio, J. Hervey Buchanan, Carl Gesswein, F. C. Ard, C. B. Lufburrow, A. H. Dundon, O. C. Jenkins, W. C. Kempton Browning, Marcus L. Clawson and T. H. Tomlinson.

Frank Webster, of Duer street, leaves today for Connecticut for the remainder of the summer.

WILDLY APPLAUD RUNYON

Local Leader of the Colbyites Makes Ringing Speech at Newark Mass Meeting.

MUCH ENTHUSIASM

Colby, Record, Grubb and Other Prominent Men Expound the "New Idea."

Notwithstanding the heat, the New Auditorium at Newark, was packed to the doors by an intelligent audience that applauded wildly as the Colbyites expounded the gospel of the "new idea" in politics last Thursday night.

Addresses were made by George L. Record, of Hudson; General E. Burd Grubb, Alexander Fordyce, of Middlesex, Assemblyman Henry Marelli, of Passaic, William N. Runyon, of this city, and Assemblyman William P. Martin and Chandler W. Riker, of Essex.

Every speaker was given a rousing ovation, among those who came in for tremendous applause being Judge William N. Runyon, president of the Union County Republican League for Equal Taxation, and candidate for the Assembly.

Judge Runyon spoke as follows:

"Men and women of Essex County: "If there is any follower of the "new idea" who has become wearied with the stress of the fray, who is discouraged in contemplating the numerous odds that must face before victory shall come to us, I hope such an one is here tonight, for if he is, there can be but one result—inspiration renewed within him to continue the work already begun, and with zeal unabated to further it, until shall be accomplished those principles which every man in New Jersey, from John Kean and John F. Dryden, down to the humblest parasite who lives on their bounty, knows are eternally just and right and true.

"To me, a resident of a sister county, this gathering is in very truth an inspiration, for I behold a sovereign people who realizing that those in whom they had placed their trust were betraying them, have arisen in all the majesty of their might and swept their debauchers from power, even as the money changers were driven from the temple in days of old.

"When chivalry and knighthood were in flower, when brave men went forth to joust and tourney, ready to give their lives for right and truth, each gallant knight before the fray rode up to his lady fair, and with the inspiration of her favor high within him, swept forth to battle, bravely to do or die.

"And so do we, as representatives and champions of the "new idea," come this night before Our Lady of Essex, our leader and our inspiration, and as we go forth to the fight, whether victory shall crown us or defeat be our portion, we hope and pray that at the end, it may be said of each of us that we have fought a good fight, and above all else, that we have kept the faith."

MISS OVERTON QUIETLY WEDDED TO A PHYSICIAN.

Daughter of E. A. Overton Becomes Mrs. Alfred Jerome Brown.

At a quiet wedding at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Augustus Overton, of 91 Rockview avenue, Miss Grace Elting Overton became the wife of Dr. Alfred Jerome Brown, of Saranac Lake, N. Y., Wednesday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Both the bride and the groom were unattended.

The reception took place in the drawing room. The entire house was decorated with cut flowers and potted plants, the decorations being simple, but attractive. The bride was gowned in an embroidered robe, simply made, and carried a prayer book. None but the immediate friends and relatives of the two families was present at the ceremony, at the conclusion of which a collation was served at the house.

The couple took an afternoon train for Saranac Lake, N. Y., where they will be "at home" after July 21.

COLBYITES IN CONFERENCE

"New Idea" Republicans Form State Organization at Newark.

MARTIN AS LEADER

William N. Runyon, H. L. Hall, R. H. Depew and G. W. V. Moy Among Those Present.

One hundred or more Republicans from eleven counties of New Jersey, all identified with the "new idea" movement led by Senator Colby, Mayor Fagan and George L. Record, met at the Colby headquarters in Newark Thursday afternoon and formed a permanent State organization to make preparations for control of the next Legislature, which will choose the successor of United States Senator Dryden. Judge William N. Runyon, Henry L. Hall, R. Henry Depew, G. W. V. Moy and W. W. St. John were among the Plainfielders in attendance.

Among the men present were Everett Colby, William P. Martin, Sheriff Frank H. Sommer, John S. Gibson, Lathrop Anderson, William Mungle, Gardner Colby and Frank Smith, of Essex; Senator Mayor Fagan, George L. Record and City Collector Edward Fay, of Jersey City; Assemblymen Theodore S. Bierch and Herman L. Berg, Comptroller Thomas McEwen, Edgar B. Bacon, Captain John Graham and Edward Mitchell, of Hudson; Gen. E. Burd Grubb, William Holt and Stagdell Stokes, of Burlington; George M. Beringer, Harry F. Wolff, George A. Waite, Newton B. Roney and Frank A. Burdett, of Camden; William H. Bannard and Harold B. Ayres, of Monmouth; Col. Alexander R. Fordyce, Jr., and N. B. Frickett, of Middlesex; Henry Horelli, Walter R. Hudson and Gustav Hunziker, of Passaic; Frederick G. Burnham, Charles M. Axtell and Samuel Garrison, of Morris; Thomas Debevois, of Union, and W. C. Howland, of Somerset.

Gardner Colby, of the Essex County Equal Taxation League, was chairman of the conference. Speeches were made by the spokesmen of every county represented, closing with a rousing speech by George L. Record.

On motion of Gen. Grubb, a permanent central body was formed with William P. Martin, of Newark, leader of the Colby forces in the Assembly last winter, and director of the Colby fight in Essex last year, as chairman. In accepting the post, Mr. Martin attacked the "State House ring," and the machine bosses of the counties, naming Lentz in Essex, Dickinson in Hudson, Strong in Middlesex and Richard in Camden. He said the fight was to be one of the loyal and independent people of the State against the power and money and the corrupt influences of boss*ism*.

Gen. Grubb was elected vice chairman. The naming of the other officers was left to an executive committee consisting of one man from each county represented, as follows:

Bergen, Caleb H. Whitebeck; Burlington, William Holt; Camden, George M. Beringer; Essex, Lathrop Anderson; Hudson, Andrew Knox; Middlesex, W. B. Pritchet; Morris, Charles M. Axtell; Passaic, James G. Blauvelt; Union, Thomas M. Debevois. Somerset did not name its representative.

This committee was empowered to complete the organization to select a name for it from among several suggested, to assemblate the several county platforms and to prepare an address to the people of the State.

The conference adjourned to meet on call. The delegates were dined at the Continental Hotel by the local Colbyites.

MRS. SAUNDERS AT REST; SERVICES THURSDAY.

Wife of Former Mayor W. L. Saunders Buried in Hillside Cemetery.

The funeral services of Mrs. William L. Saunders, which were held from the late home in Rockview avenue, Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, were attended by many relatives, friends and neighbors, including a large delegation of the heads of the various departments of the Ingersoll-Rand Drill Company, of New York, of which Mr. Saunders is the president. They were from the New York, Philadelphia and Easton offices of the company and attended in a body. At the request of the family floral tributes were omitted, but in the presence of so many people there was impressive tribute to the high esteem and regard in which Mrs. Saunders was held by all.

Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Holy Cross church, of which Mrs. Saunders was a devoted member, officiated. Afterwards the mourners were given an opportunity of viewing the remains which rested in a beautiful casket placed in an alcove of the music room. The interment was at Hillside cemetery.

Supreme Lodge Dismisses Appeal of Plainfield Members of the Order.

ASSESSMENT SUSTAINED

Members Must Contribute to the Emergency Fund Although Illegal When Originated.

Members of the Ancient Order United Workmen in this city, especially, and throughout the State in general, will be interested in the report of the committee on appeals presented at the session of the Supreme Lodge, held in Montreal, Canada, last month, relative to the appeal of Harvey R. Thorn, recorder, and Theodore Mason, master workman, of Central Lodge, No. 48, from the action of the Grand Lodge, of New Jersey, in establishing what is known as an emergency fund.

At the fifteen annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey, held March 8-9, last, a resolution was adopted providing that in order to promote the general welfare of the order, assessments for the general fund of the Grand Lodge are to be levied on each and every member on the first day of each month and payable on the 25th day of each month, with the understanding that the payment, collection and remittance of the same is to be subject to the same laws, rules and regulations as assessments for the beneficiary fund.

From the action of the Grand Lodge declaring said resolution adopted, an appeal was taken to the Supreme Lodge, the ruling extended that there is no authority in said Grand Lodge for the creation of an emergency fund and that said resolution was legally adopted, inasmuch at it was not approved by a two-thirds vote of the members present and voting, and that notice of the proposed change was not given sixty days in advance as required by law, and that the proposed change was inequitable, unconstitutional and otherwise irregular.

The appeal committee, consisting of Sam S. Blits, Duncan McCormack and S. M. Simmons, presented the following report at the session of the Supreme Lodge:

"Your committee having fully considered this resolution in question reports that although in its opinion this resolution, strictly construed, is of such a nature, as to be in effect an amendment to the constitution of the jurisdiction of New Jersey; and that to adopt it, required two-thirds vote of the delegates, although the resolution provides for an emergency fund, for the creation of which there is no authority under either the laws of the Supreme Lodge or those of the jurisdiction of New Jersey, whether by direct assessment on the members or by increase of dues or otherwise, and although for these and other reasons your committee believes the action of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey to have been, under the laws of said Grand Lodge and the Supreme Lodge as they existed at the time this appeal was taken, irregular and of doubtful validity; nevertheless your committee is of the opinion that in view of the legislation enacted at this session of the Supreme Lodge, which in effect compels each of the Grand Lodge jurisdictions to become and be self-sustaining and to care for itself, Grand Lodges have implied, if not express authority, to raise revenue for its various funds by such means and in such matter, not contrary to its State laws, as its members may direct, that the resolution so adopted by the Grand Lodge of New Jersey, should be declared regular, in reasonable conformity to the present laws of the Supreme Lodge and the laws of said Grand Lodge, and valid and recommends that said action of the Grand Lodge be approved and the appeal dismissed."

RECEPTION TO BRIDE AND GROOM.

Given by Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Meyer to Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Muir.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Muir, who were married on June 20, were tendered a reception Wednesday by the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Meyer, of Scotch Plains. It was attended by 100 friends from this city, New York, Newark, Jersey City and other places, and proved a delightful affair. The lawn was brilliantly illuminated with Japanese lanterns and many of the guests enjoyed themselves out of doors while music was a feature in the house. The bride and groom were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Meyer and Mrs. Andrew Muir.

Mr. and Mrs. Muir are at present making their home on East Kinney street, Newark.

THE "ICE TRUST."

It seems hardly credible that the Plainfield Protective Association should have offered the suggestion to the ice men that they increase the price of the commodity ten cents a hundred for butchers and other large consumers and reduce it a similar amount for the small consumer. Any such proposition as that is as serious a blunder as its solution of the trouble with the P. S. C. where the result was that the large consumer it is said is now compelled to pay more than he did before any negotiations were begun. What the people demand is cheaper ice all round, cheaper for the big consumer and cheaper for the little one.

It strikes us that the methods adopted by Edwin S. Hooley will be far more satisfactory in solving the ice problem. Acting on the advice of Attorney-General McCarter he proposes to invoke the arm of the law. If it can be proven that the local ice men are in a combination in restraint of trade they are not to sell ice to consumers at any price. By resorting to law ample opportunity will be afforded them for vindication from the common report that the rates in this city are fixed by agreement among those in the business, that they are to have a much lower, still allowing the dealers a fair profit, is generally accepted as a fact. Whether it is true will be brought to light in the course of the legal proceedings. It is to be hoped that Prosecutor English will give prompt attention to Mr. Hooley, and that the citizens of Plainfield generally will lend their support to the man who first undertook "to do something" to break up the alleged combine.

George L. Record has been told to confine himself to facts. His reputation as the members of Union County's Board of Taxation. The Jersey City candidate for office, in a speech at Elizabeth some few nights ago, attacked the Governor on the personnel of his appointments for the various county boards and this prompted the Union county members to tell the plain truth regarding Mr. Stokes' policy. Now will Mr. Record be good?

No sooner does Elizabeth build one monument than it starts on another, it now being proposed to erect a shaft in honor of Gen. Scott. The city did always have a pretty good reputation as a graveyard.

Nice time for the ice men to be looking around for a supply. Just like locking the stable door after the horse is gone.

The shows at Coney might as well shut up on August 20. On that day Bill Bryan sets foot again in New York.

Manager Daab has certainly been traveling in hard luck, but "while there's life there's hope."

NEWSPAPER A PART OF THE GOVERNMENT.

For many years, Samuel W. Pennypacker, now governor, and Mayor Sulzberger, both of Philadelphia, enjoyed the reputation of being the two ablest jurists in the Keystone State. But how different their attitudes are today can best be shown by their opinions regarding the powers of newspapers. Governor Pennypacker is responsible for the present infamous "press gag law," which restricts the privileges of cartooning men in public office. Judge Sulzberger, on the other hand, believes in the utmost freedom of the press, holding that it is really a part of the government.

Its functions are greater than those of a grand jury, the most powerful agency of public administration, he argues, when he says:

"We have in the various departments men who have been educated in certain technical lines, and who give their lives to the work in which they are engaged. It is impossible that grand jurors are able to make intelligent investigation of everything that needs investigation.

"Furthermore, it is not their province. What do we have the newspapers for? Why are they granted liberties under the Constitution? It is because they are needed as a part of the government. They are a part of the government; unrestained, but valuable and useful for that very reason.

"A newspaper can print anything, even to erroneous statements. It can print anything except malicious lies. Its function in the government is to investigate, to pry into the business of every department of the government and to criticise wherever it sees fit."

The full text of Judge Sulzberger's opinion on the sphere of the modern newspaper will be found in another column of this issue.

JUST A REMINDER.

Plainfielders about to leave town for the summer season should not forget the worthy charities conducted here during the heated season. Both the Kings Daughters' Baby Camp on the mountain and the Fresh Air Home, for the poor of New York's East Side, in the Netherwood section, are deserving of general support. The baby camp for poor little tots of Plainfield particularly should appeal to the good hearted people of the city. Any contributions received at this office will be acknowledged promptly and immediately transmitted to the proper authorities.

ARE THE REGULARS "DAFFY?"

The report from Trenton that George L. Record may be taken up by the regular Republican organization as its candidate for United States Senate is proof that the silly season has begun. No doubt it would be hailed with delight by the Colbyites, but it is not to be taken for granted that the regulars have suddenly gone "daffy."

WHY NOT WAIT UNTIL WINTER?

The P. P. A.'s committee will have nothing to give out on the ice question until September as its members will hold no meetings during the rest of the summer. Why not wait until December when nature will solve the problem?

A new dodge is being worked by the theatrical press agent. Tales of having fallen heir to fortunes and stolen diamonds having been worked to death. Just now the star to be given free advertisement is getting himself arrested for speeding an automobile.

St. Swithin is getting in his fine work these days.

AMUSEMENTS.

Miss Maud Raymond, who as Beesy, the chocolate-hued attendant in the manicure parlors in the first act of "The Social Whirl," has made the big individual hit at the Casino, New York, musical satire with the song "Bill Simmons," is often mistaken for a genuine "cullud pusson."

"No, I'm not a Southerner and never lived in the South," she said recently. "Many persons have asked me if I was not from somewhere or other beyond Mason and Dixon's line. I've had letters from many who are strangers to me putting this query.

"The fact is that I am a New Yorker by birth and education, and know little or nothing about the darky, in either fact or in his native element. I was born in Orchard street, near Houston, and was raised on the East Side. There are very few negros in that part of the town. I never attempted to sing soon congs, until I had been on the stage a number of years and had met W. A. Brady selected me to play Topsy in the all-star revival of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' did I ever 'black up.'

"I never had a colored servant and never went out of my way to study negro characteristics. If I am as proficient in this line as some persons have tried to persuade me, it is more from intuition and from watching other impersonators than from study of real life. My make-up is a result of considerable experiment with brown paints. There is no burnt cork about it. I am quite proud of its effect.

"The greatest compliment I have had on my work in 'The Social Whirl' I presume are 'mash notes' from real coons' who take me for one of their kind. The other night a man in the second row left his seat and asked Mr. Periet, the musical director, if it was true that I was a white woman."

Another tribute to Miss Raymond's cleverness in "The Social Whirl" is the fact that her song "Bill Simmons" has been only a moderate success, if not a failure, when sung in other plays or in vaudeville by other performers.

THE MODERN WAY.

The slogan of our fathers was
An axiom that has gone to seed.
It was to write one's ads. so that
A passing man who runs may read.

Today we work in similar ways;
Our ads. lok much the same indeed,
But they must be so clever that
A running man will stop to read:

Gluten For Dairy Cows.

The experience of best feeders shows that the most economical method of using gluten is to feed it with bran or cornmeal at the rate of from three to five pounds daily. A good ration for the dairy cow would be gluten meal three pounds, cornmeal two pounds, bran two pounds, which would be fed with about thirty pounds of roughage, preferably two-thirds silage.—Cor. American Agriculturist.

City Park Needs Attention.

Attention has been called to the condition of the City Park, especially as regards the roads which is used about the paths intended to keep visitors off the grass. In many instances the wire is down and lays across the path and women who attempt to pass through the park have torn their dresses beyond repair. The Town Improvement Association of Plainfield and North Plainfield has been given $100 by the city to care for the park for the coming year and it is believed that the association will have this wire fixed to prevent further damage.

LOANED FATHER $30 GOT RAIN CHECK FOR IT

NEW FORM OF LEMON THAT WAS HANDED MEYER SACHER, A LIBERAL YOUTH.

Meyer Sachar, the irrepressible West End youth who was arraigned in the city court last week on a charge of slamming a screen door against his uncle's head, again faced Judge Runyon Monday. His father complained against him this time, stating that the son was as fractious as a Wyoming pony and that he has a habit of calling members of the family "things which they ain't," as he expressed it. A sentence of forty days was hung over Meyer's head at his last appearance and it was about to descend when friends arrived and explained some matters to the magistrate.

"You see, Judge," said one of the interceders, "Meyer loaned his father $30 some time ago and when he asked for it back again he was handed a rain check for a baseball game. Beside that, everybody in the house, including uncles, aunts and cousins, take a crack at Meyer every chance they get. Ain't that enough to make a fellow mad, Mr. Runyon?"

Judge Runyon agreed that it might have been provocation and Meyer is once more at large.

"LITTLE SHIPS" THE TOPIC AT NETHERWOOD HOME.

Rev. T. Moore-Smith Addressed 300 Children Yesterday After-

Despite the lowering weather, open air services were conducted yesterday afternoon at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home and about 150 Plainfielders interested in the work of Miss Sara Curry, of the camp, is among the poor of New York city, were present. The meeting was in charge of George F. Hall, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, chairman of the camp finance committee. The speaker of the afternoon was Rev. T. Moore-Smith, pastor of the First Baptist church at Scotch Plains. Mr. Moore-Smith took as his topic, "Little Ships," speaking from the text: "There were also with them other little ships." In the development of his theme the speaker referred to the children as little ships of the voyage of life. He spoke of the precious cargo of kind words and good deeds carried by each and every one and referred to Christ as the pilot and captain of each one, guiding them through the treacherous trip past rock and shoals of temptation and sin to the haven of eternity. The allegory was well worked out and the children showed much interest in its development.

Singing was a feature of the service, as it usually is. George Taylor, of Brooklyn, superintendent of the Green Avenue Baptist Sunday-school and for many years a friend to Miss Curry in her work among the New York poor, was present, and was in charge of the singing as leader. Several of the more familiar gospel hymns were sung by the children, led by a delegation of the Trinity church choir. Mrs. E. D. Young sang a soprano solo, "Beside Still Waters," and with her husband rendered "God Is Love" as a duet. Miss May Randolph, organist of Trinity church, was at the melodian.

The accommodations at the camp are now taxed to the utmost, as there are more than 300 children from tenement districts spending a brief vacation there. The last delegation from New York came out Friday, and included about a dozen crippled and sick children. In speaking to a Daily Press reporter at the camp, Miss Curry said that she knew that the camp was crowded, but that she had not the heart to keep the children away, for the summer season in New York is most unbearable among the poor. She said that when she left the nursery on St. Mark's place to come to Netherwood, many mothers and children followed her all the way to the ferry, begging to be allowed to come out with her. All at the camp are well, and those who have spent the week at Netherwood are strong and active.

His Own Business.

This anecdote was told by John Graham Brooks: "One of the brightest replies I ever heard came from a lad in my neighborhood, who was being quizzed about his father's accomplishments, and was asked, 'What does your father know, anyway?' There was no hesitation in the answer. 'Father don't believe he knows much of anything except his own business; but he knows that.'"

Tragedy.

"No, George, I can never, never be your wife."

Despair written upon his every feature, George Worthington reeled and clutched at the mantel for support. The blow had fallen.

"Then," he muttered hoarsely, "there is but one thing left for me to do. I must die."

Going out in the back yard he stabbed himself with a can of corned beef.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

School Coal Being Delivered.

V. W. Nash, Sr., the coal dealer, who received the contract for furnishing the coal to the Plainfield Public Schools, has about completed the task of putting the 685 tons in the several schools. There yet remains 150 tons to be put in the new High School building and the winter supply for the Franklin School.

WELCOMED MISS CURRY

Special Service Held at Crescent Avenue Church Last Evening—Camp Speakers

CHILDREN AT CHURCH

Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, Rev. John Sheridan Zelie and Miss Sara Curry Spoke—Program By Children.

A special service to welcome Miss Sara Curry at the beginning of her eleventh years' work among the New York poor and the fourth season in charge of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home was held at the Crescent Avenue church, last Sunday, in place of the regular evening service. The services were in charge of Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the church, and Rev. Dr. Erskine M. Rodman, rector-emeritus of Grace church and president of the committee in charge of the Netherwood Home, was present, together with Miss Sara Curry and a party of twenty-five of the children from the home. In introducing Dr. Rodman as speaker, Dr. Zelie referred briefly to the work being carried on by Miss Curry and its great need for the support by the people of the parish and the city. Dr. Rodman also spoke of Miss Curry's work, calling special attention to the work Miss Curry has been carrying on at the Little Missionary's Day Nursery on St. Mark's place, New York city, for the past ten years. He said that to him Miss Curry had seemed pre-destined for her work, and referred to the incident which had started the nursery and the Netherwood Home—the time when Miss Curry picked up a little child which had been run over while crossing one of the down town streets in New York and took care of it until it had recovered.

Miss Curry was then called upon to tell something of her work, and spoke simply of her efforts during the years she has been in charge. She said that to a visitor at the Netherwood camp it would seem as though the work were merely with the children, and that the nursery in New York were simply for them. The work she does with the children, she said, is merely a means of getting into the homes of the poor, and of bringing influence to bear upon the mothers and families of those whom she takes charge of at the nursery. She said that during the past season, 2,100 children had been benefited by vacation at Netherwood, and this had been a means of gaining a strong hold upon the lives and character of many of the mothers and fathers. She cited instances which showed how the Christian influence had permeated the lives of the poor, and said that it was to effect this that the work was being carried on among the children. The party from the home then rendered a programme of songs and recitations, showing perfect confidence and careful training. One of the numbers was a patriotic recitation by four of the smallest boys, carrying American flags. Each had a verse to recite and they concluded by singing "My Country 'Tis of Thee" as they stood on the platform, waving the flags.

George Taylor, superintendent of the Green Avenue Sunday-school, Brooklyn, then made an appeal for funds to carry on the work at Netherwood and in New York.

During the service, the following musical program was rendered by the organist and choir quartette: Prelude, Allegretto, Tours; anthem, "Evening Shadows Gently Falling," Miles; response, "Incline Thine Ear;" offertory, "Deliver Us, O Lord," Stainer; postlude, Allegro, from Mendelssohn. A service similar in character will be held at the First Baptist church, Sunday evening, July 29, at which Miss Curry and a party of children will be present.

Hundred Tons of Rain.

One inch of rain on one acre of ground means a hundred tons of water. Rainfall is a condition which has much to do with our health. A wet district with a good deal of subsoil water, making houses damp, is a locality in which rheumatism and consumption are likely to prevail. Over England and Wales the average yearly rainfall is about 34 inches, in Scotland it reaches 46 inches and in Ireland about 38 inches. Possibly the wettest parts of Britain are in Cumberland, where the rainfall may attain 150 inches per year.—Tit-Bits.

The Doctors.

Ever notice the peculiarities of a casual conversation between two medicine men whose diplomas are yet unyellowed by age. It's about like this:

"Ah, doctor, good morning, doctor."

"Good morning, doctor. How are you doctor?"

"Pretty well, doctor; thank you, doctor. How are you feeling, doctor?"

"Well, doctor, to tell the truth, doctor, I don't feel, doctor, quite so well, doctor, as I'd like, doctor."

"Sorry, doctor. But you'll soon be all right, doctor."

"Goodby, doctor."

"So long, doctor."—Albany Journal.

THESE INVADERS DID NOT INVADE

PLAINFIELD FANS DUPED BY AN ELIZABETH AGGGREGATION.

If there are any other baseball aggregations in Elizabeth, besides the invaders, that are looking for county championship honors, they do not want to appear at Crescent Oval unless they have the "goods." The Invaders came to town Saturday looking for scalps and instead they made a miserable showing. Such an aggregation hasn't the license to meet Frank Burke's Stars, to say nothing of numerous other teams in the county. They are more in the class of the Garwood A. C. and similar teams and how they had the nerve to leave Elizabeth in search of the county championship is beyond explanation.

President Rath, of the Elizabeth Baseball Club, known as the Invaders, telephoned Manager Daab early in the week and told him that in his lineup for Saturday there would be Driscoll, Kiernan, Curley, Barry, Linderman, Brogan and Schuman. Believing him, Manager Daab sent notice to that effect to The Daily Press and on the strength of it the team was believed to be all right. Manager Neubeck, of the Elizabeth team, declared on Saturday that he did not know that the players named were to play here and said that it would be impossible to get them for a Saturday game now. If the county seat aggregation hopes to be successful in baseball the club will have to adopt different methods. Manager Daab believed that the players mentioned to him by Mr. Rath would appear here, or would have notified the papers to the contrary before Saturday. The Invaders may have a good team on Sunday, but their Saturday team is not much better than the amateur class.

The fans will be repaid for the disappointment on Saturday, when the famous Philadelphia Quaker Giants, with "Mistah" Monroe, will appear on Crescent Oval.

CENSUSES OF SOMERSET FROM 1726 TO 1905.

And of Union County for the Last Fifty-five Years.

The New Jersey censuses showing the population by counties from 1726 to 1905, shows that there were but ten counties in the State that had a population in 1726. They were Bergen, Burlington, Cape May, Essex, Gloucester, Hunterdon, Monmouth, Salem and Somerset.

The population of Somerset, beginning with 1726 up to and including 1905, is as follows:

1726, 2,271; 1737, 4,505; 1745, 3,339; 1784, 10,476; 1790, 12,296; 1800, 12,815; 1810, 14,725; 1820, 16,566; 1830, 17,689; 1840, 17,455; 1850, 19,692; 1855, 21,022; 1860, 21,967; 1865, 21,911; 1870, 25,510; 1875, 27,455; 1880, 27,162; 1885, 27,425; 1890, 28,311; 1895, 30,447; 1900, 32,948; 1905, 36,270.

Union county's population began in 1850 and from that year it has been as follows:

Profit In Hens.

There is a profit in every flock of hens except for the lazy man, and such a man never would make success at anything worth mentioning. Do not consider poultry on the farm as a side issue in the business, but consider it as the main part of the farm. It takes but a small capital and gives the greatest per cent. of profit.

Handling Ducks.

Never try to catch the ducks by the legs. Pick them up by the head or neck. Do not choke them, but carry them carefully. In this way you will not injure them. Dry lime is more of an injury than a benefit to water fowls. Ducks especially dislike it and cease to thrive if it is cast about their living quarters to any extent.—Feather.

ROBT. ABBOTT COVERS 18 HOLE COURSE IN 67

REINHART HELD RECORD WITH 66 BUT COURSE WAS SHORTER.

Closely following his play in the national amateur golf tournament at Englewood, Robert Abbott, one of the most promising local players and the intercollegiate champion, made the low score record for this year at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday. Weather and course conditions were perfect and the young golfer played a brilliant match in the semi-final round for the club championship. His opponent was W. Lester Glenney, who was beaten by 5 up and 3 to play. Abbott made the 18 holes in a 67, the lowest score made in a long while.

Frank O. Reinhart held the low score record with a 66, but the course has been lengthened since that time, so Abbott's score of 67 will stand for the present at least.

In the other semi-final match, Frank C. Talmadge beat C. B. Morgan, by 2 up, after a hard-fought round. This puts Abbott and Talmadge in the final play for the coming week and some fine golf is looked for, which will no doubt be watched by a large gallery.

In the finals for the Men's championship, consolation cup for second eight, George T. VanBoskerck was the winner, beating Charles A. Stover 1 up in 19 holes and C. B. Morgan won a leg on the semi-scratch cup with a score of 76.

In the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup, C. F. Abbott won first honors with a net score of 74. T. E. Stockton finished second, and W. B. Tyler and J. F. Murray were tie for the one point. These scores were returned for the Golf Committee cup:

C. F. Abbott, 97, 27—70; T. E. Stockton, 85, 10—72; W. B. Tyler, 92, 19—73; J. F. Murray, 93, 20—73; Edward J. Patterson, 93, 17—76; W. D. Riggs, 89, 13—76; Robert Abbott, 75, plus 2—67; Stuart H. Patterson, 83, 11—82; J. A. Hutchinson, 101, 19—82.

In the wet continuation of play for the July cup and Robert Abbott scored a win for it with a 69. The scores were as follows:

Robert Abbott, 67, plus 2—69; Stuart H. Patterson, 84, 11—73; W. B. Tyler, 92, 19—73; James P. Murray, 93, 20—73; Edward J. Patterson, 93, 17—76; W. D. Riggs, 89, 13—76; Morris J. Dumont, 86, 7—79; Henry D. Hibbard, 85, 8—80; J. W. Lane, 91, 11—80; W. Lester Glenney, 79, plus 2—81; J. A. Hutchinson, 101, 19—82.

WANT U. S. SENATORS CHOSEN BY DIRECT VOTE.

Convention of States to Be Held and This State to Be Represented.

New Jersey will be entitled to five delegates at the conference called by Governor Cummins, of Iowa, at Des Moines on September 5 next. These delegates will be appointed by Governor Stokes, and they will represent New Jersey's attitude on the question of the popular election of United States Senators.

The Des Moines conference is a political event of great importance. It may result in completely overriding the senate of the United States, and in establishing a new method of choosing Senators in spite of that body. The constitution, article 5, provides that on the application of the Legislature of two-thirds of the several States, Congress shall call a convention for proposing amendments to that document, and these shall become valid when they shall be ratified "by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by Congress."

Thirty-two State Legislatures have at different times signified to Congress their desire that steps be taken to amend the constitution and provide for the popular election of Senators.

Let Us Have Green Peas.

The farmers of Wolcott are now in the midst of the largest pea harvest ever gathered in this section. All last week the canning factory was rushed, looking after the early peas, and Saturday night did not shut down at the usual time, but continued until nearly 2 o'clock Sunday morning. Farmers are well pleased with the returns and the later peas, which will be fit to cut in about ten days, give every indication of being a record-breaking crop.—Rochester Post-Express.

INVADERS WERE ROUTED

Daab's Team Defeated Elizabeth Nine By Score of Nine to Five.

A POOR AGGREGATION

Heffron's Hard Catch and Snow's Good Work Features of Contest On Crescent Oval.

The Elizabeth "Invaders," so-called, came to Plainfield on Saturday to play the first in a county championship series of games. They failed to have a "look in" and were decisively defeated by a score of 9 to 5. Instead of Manager Neubeck bringing the team here as advertised by President Rath, of the Elizabeth Baseball Association, substitutes appeared, much to the disappointment of the fans. One redeeming feature was the appearance of "Big Bill" Tierney, who kept the crowd in good humor with his original coaching. Tierney said that "Dave" Driscoll sent him here, as "Dave" had an engagement to play first for Long Branch, where "Red" Walker is pitching.

"Kid" Brogan played second base, Curley short and Reilly, formerly of Rahway, was on third base. It was announced that Linderman injured his knee on July 4, and had not pitched since, and as for Farmer, he got hurt a few days ago and was not on hand. Barry, who has been advertised to appear here several times, could not be found. Schuman, who, it is said, pitches for Hartford, occupied the box for the visitors, and did well until the fourth inning. That was his downfall, when Henriques, Reardon, Leonard and O'Neil each touched his delivery for two bases. O'Neil also hit the youngster for three sacks in the third inning, while Henriques did the same thing off of Fitzhenry in the fifth inning. Fitz being sent to the box and Schuman relegated to left field.

Elizabeth tallied one run in the first on a free pass given Seward, a couple of sacrifice hits and a single by Tierney. They did not score again until the fifth inning, when Seward, Seery and Schuman tallied on two singles, a double and an error by Connolly. They got another run in the seventh inning on a couple of errors by Snow and one by Connolly. That ended their run getting.

Plainfield tied up its first run in the third inning when O'Neil drove the leather to left field for three bases and came home on Connolly's single. The merry-go-round was in the fifth, when Henriques, Reardon and Leonard followed each other with two base hits. Heffron got past Snow a single and O'Neil a double. The spasm ended when Curley, Brogan and Tierney made a pretty double. The same trio also made a double in the second inning. Five runs were scored in the fourth and two more in the fifth when Henriques made a three sacker, and Reardon and Leonard each a single. Three more hits in the sixth by Connolly, Goodman and Smith netted another run in the sixth, making a total of nine.

There were a few bright spots in the contest, notably Heffron's hard catch after a long run in the second inning, Snow's sharp work at short and Curley's clever left-hand catch of a hot line drive in the eighth inning. Seward also distinguished himself in right field by catching a difficult fly.

It is safe to say that the Invaders will not look a second time for county championship honors in Plainfield until they strengthen up. The score:

CIRCUS WITH 600 PEOPLE TO VISIT VILLAGE OF 100

SEEMINGLY QUEER ACTION OF PAWNEE BILL'S ROUTING AGENT.

The unusual spectacle of a circus showing in a settlement that has one-sixth the number of inhabitants carried by the tented organization will be witnessed at Picton next Thursday when Pawnee Bill's Wild West plays an afternoon and evening performance in that little hamlet. It carries 600 employees and Picton can scrape together about 100 natives all told.

When the date was first announced almost everybody exclaimed, "why, what could the routing agent be thinking of," and others are still firm in the belief that this same gentleman is a fit subject for the "Forget Factory." Nevertheless, Pawnee Bill and his horde of tame and untamed savages, East Indians, buffaloes, band wagons and calliope will invade the sleepy Middlesex village and give its residents something to talk about for months to come. The lot selected for the location of the tents is already being proudly pointed out by young and old and will be the chief point of interest in that locality so long as a wisp of straw or the imprint of a wild steer's hoof remains.

An explanation of the Picton date was given a Daily Press man today by one of Pawnee Bill's representatives. As is known to Plainfielders, the show has been at Brighton Beach the past few weeks and was to have remained all summer but the head of the enterprise got a bee in his bonnet over some advertising contracts and suddenly declared he would leave that resort. He naturally had to pick out a route quickly and he decided to follow the Lehigh Valley road up into Pennsylvania and New York State for the circus holds to the one line, its transportation expenses are considerably lessened and so only towns along the Lehigh were designated for performances. Next Thursday remained as an open date and it seemed as if there was no way of filling it except by jumping from Newark to Elizabeth or Plainfield and thus get on another road. The agent cut the Gordian knot by hitting upon Picton and trusting to luck to draw crowds from places surrounding it. The village is but a short distance from Elizabeth, Plainfield, Westfield, Rahway, Woodbridge, Perth Amboy, Cranford and many other small places. Consequently, the show will have a population of 125,000 to draw from and those who have been laughing at the bills which read: "Picton, Pa.," are not such wetsenheimers after all.

ONE BAD INNING GAVE DUNELLEN THE VICTORY.

Raritan Pitcher Touched for Four Hits in the Third, Which Netted Dunellen's Four Runs.

By a happy combination of four hits, a pass and an error in the third inning of Saturday's game with the Raritans, the Dunellen team scored four runs and cinched the game early in the day. The teams met on the Dunellen diamond and a bunch of local fans saw them pull out the victory. Randolph, who was on the slab for the home team, was touched up for six hits, but kept them well scattered, and the team behind him played a steady game, with but two errors checked up against them. Haler, the visitors' pitcher, only allowed one hit in eight innings, but the local batters landed on him for a combination of five singles in the third session, when the local team scored all their runs.

The Best Calf Food.

Separated milk as a food for calves when fed direct from the machine makes a model milk food. Careful experimens show that practically as good calves can be raised on separated milk direct from the machine as can be raised on whole milk, provided the butter fat lost in the removal of the cream is replaced by linseed meal, cornmeal or flour or molasses.—American Cultivator.

WARREN CHAPEL STARTED

First Sod Turned by Rev. J. O. Mc Kelvey When Work Began This Morning.

IT WILL COST $35,000

Edifice of Mission Gothic Style Designed by Architect A. C. L. Marsh—Contracts Awarded.

Ground was broken Monday for the new Warren chapel edifice to be erected at Watchung and Fairview avenues, North Plainfield. The first spadeful of sod was turned by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of the church. The building, which is to measure 90 by 92 feet has been staked out and the work of excavation is now under way. Architect A. C. L. Marsh, of Hillside avenue, drew up the plans, which are of a different design from those announced several months ago. The building has been modeled on the most up-to-date plans for church buildings.

The exterior will be of brick and stucco and the chapel is to be of mission Gothic style of architecture. Inside is to be the main hall, surrounding which are to be fourteen large sunday-school and Bible class rooms. These rooms are so constructed around the main auditorium that they can be connected with the main hall by rolling aside the doors.

The seating capacity of the auditorium will by this means make it possible for 800 persons to be accommodated. In the wing of the building off from the auditorium, which will be but a single story in height, will be two large society rooms, one for the meeting of the larger societies in connection with the church work, and the other to be finished off for a reading room and library for the young men. Here will be the tables and book shelves and religious literature and periodicals will be kept on file. The entire interior is to be finished off in hard wood.

Architect Marsh has announced the various building contracts as follows: Tallamy & Bros., for the mason work; Wyman & Haberle, carpenter work; A. M. Griffin, plumbing and heating; Woolston & Buckle, painting, and Allen B. Laing, electrical work. The total cost of the new building will be about $35,000, and the contract calls for its completion by Easter. The edifice will face Watchung avenue, and is set twenty feet back from the street.

City to Mar Improvement.

Because the city has made no provision for underground work with the fire alarm wires, it will probably be necessary to spoil the attractive appearance of Park and North avenues, by having another pole put up at that corner where the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company is about to remove a large unsightly pole. It will be necessary to do this so that the fire alarm box can be still maintained at the corner.

TAX BOARD FEELS HURT

Union County's Board Resents Derogatory Statement Made By George L. Record.

VINDICATES GOVERNOR

Messrs. Andrews, Scudder and Pollard Tell Candidates to Confine Himself to Facts.

The Union County Board of Taxation has come out with a statement in answer to an attack made by George L. Record on the integrity of the members of the various boards. At a meeting held in Jacobs' theatre on June 28 in the interest of the Colby wing Mr. Record made an attack on the county tax boards. The members of the Union county board—C. C. Pollard, M. M. Scudder and F. H. Andrews—resent Record's remarks. The statement from the Board of Taxation is as follows:

"We have learned that in a speech in Jacobs' theatre, Elizabeth, June 28, Mr. Record is reported to have said that the law passed by the last Legislature creating county boards of taxation was a good law, but that the governor was perverting the intentions of the law by appointing men on the county boards who were in sympathy with the railroads and corporations, and who would protect interests in making assessments of property.

"We, as members of the Union County Board of Taxation, wish most emphatically to deny any such influence, and believe the statement is not borne out by the facts.

"When we called upon Governor Stokes before our appointment, he was unequivocal in his statements that he was most axious to appoint men to the several boards who would faithfully administer the law according to its intent, and that no interest should enter at the expense of any other, but that all should bear alike their share of the burden of government.

"He was clear and honest in his statements to us, with nothing ambiguous in them, and we believe the charge it without foundation in fact, and unjust to the governor and his appointees.

"It will be well for Mr. Record to confine himself to facts.

"C. C. POLLARD,
"M. M. SCUDDER,
"F. H. ANDREWS."

In An Exciting Contest Manager Daab's Colts Win by a Score of 7 to 6.

The St. John's A. C. went up against Hoboken at St. George's Cricket Grounds, yesterday, and was given a good coat of whitewash, Hoboken winning by a score of 7 to 6. "Willie" Deegan let his opponents down with four hits, while Hoboken secured a total of six, including a two base hit by Reardon. O'Neil led in hitting with two singles. Notwithstanding the one-sided score, the contest was an exciting one and was replete with brilliant plays.

SPHERE OF NEWSPAPERS

Journals Are a Part of the Government Declared a Learned Jurist.

THEY ENJOY LIBERTIES

The Papers and Not Grand Juries, Proper Investigations of Administration.

"If a member of a Grand Jury has any criticisms to make of administrative matters, he should go to a newspaper with them and not endeavor to transform the Grand Jury into a machine for investigations on its own account."

Such a doctrine will doubtless prove a severe shock to ultra-conservative persons who maintain that newspapers are too bold; too prying; too wide in their scope; too aggressive. It is not the declaration of an editor or publisher, but of a Judge upon the bench in Philadelphia, and one of the most astute Judges Philadelphia has ever known—Mayer Sulzberger.

Judge Sulzberger's record in the Court of Common Pleas, in the License Court, the Juvenile Court and the Desertion Court in that city has given him a wide reputation for probity, profound knowledge of the law, scholarly attainments and a calm, deliberate judgment which rarely goes astray.

It was only recently that the foreman of the Grand Jury told Judge Sulzberger that the jury desired to make a presentment against a street-cleaning contractor who was said to have failed to fulfill the terms of his contract, according to all its specifications. Much to the surprise of everybody in the courtroom, the Judge refused.

"The mere breach of a contract," he said, "is not a subject for the criminal courts. It is cognizable in the civil courts, unless it reaches the proportions of a common nuisance, which is indictable.

"Short of that, the criminal courts have no jurisdiction. It is true that public administration is always a fair subject of criticism. But the Constitution itself recognizes a free press as such critical agent."

In a further utterance, the Judge elaborated this opinion.

"Philadelphia, with its million and a half of people," he said, "is larger than many States and principalities in Europe. It is absurd to expect that twenty-four men who meet a couple of hours for a few days are able to intelligently criticise all the various technical departments of a government such as we have in Philadelphia.

"We have in the various departments men who have been educated in certain technical lines, and who give their lives to the work in which they are engaged. It is impossible that grand jurors are able to make intelligent investigation of everything that needs investigation.

"Furthermore, it is not their province. What do we have the newspapers for? Why are they granted liberties under the Constitution? It is because they are needed as a part of the government. They are a part of the government; unrestrained, but valuable and useful for that very reason.

"A newspaper can print anything, even to erroneous statements. It can print anything except malicious lies. Its function in the government is to investigate, to pry into the business of every department of the government and to criticise wherever it sees fit.

"It sometimes makes me out of patience with newspapers that all do not realize their function, and that they are virtually a part of the government. It is their duty to find out evils wherever they exist and bring them to the attention of the responsible authorities. They are the great safeguard against corruption in public office.

"And how much better they can do this work than any grand jury. They have their men and women everywhere, nosing into everything. If there is anything wrong they will be sure to find it out. Some one will drop a hint. Then the facts are printed, and they go immediately before the administrative officer who is responsible.

"If he does not act the remedy is still in the newspapers. They can bring the matter of the negligence of the public official to the attention of the persons to whom that official is responsible, and lastly they place all the facts before the people, who at any time can regulate anything under our form of government.

"No, I am not one who believes that the unction of the grand jury has passed away. I have the greatest faith in the value of a good grand jury. But it is not the function of a grand jury to investigate and criticise purely administrative matters. It will have all it can do to consider cases of crime brought before it."

Judge Sulzberger also has his own views of the cause of graft in public office. He does not condone graft, or deny that there is graft in public office, but it is his opinion that American graft is of a much less sinful type than the graft of other countries.

"I believe," he said, "that good nature is the cause of the greater part of all the graft in the United States, whether it is in public office or in a corporation. American people are good natured is a fault.

"And when we know that a man neglects to do what he should do, or does that which he should not do, for the sake of a friend, to be accommodating, out of the goodness of his heart, I do not think we can take such a gloomy view of it. I tell you that there is more good nature, more humanity in the Americans than in any other people on the face of the earth.

"Look at the slaughter house scandal. I've no doubt that the horrors printed are true, but if you could see into the same institutions in other countries I'll warrant you would find the conditions worse. Here, if anything is wrong, we flood the country with information. We spit the whole thing out, and everybody knows it. Thus, evils are soon corrected.

"Most of our evils are industrial, due to our rapid growth. Only a short time ago the cattle were running wild over the plains, and every city did its own slaughtering. Suddenly a great industry springs up in Chicago; it grows to enormous proportions before we are aware and before any necessity of regulation has been made apparent. Soon all these abuses will be properly regulated by the government, but not under the socialistic theory."

Former Judge and Mrs. W. R. Codington, son and daughter, of Sedgwood avenue, left last night for Wilton, Maine, where they will remain at their cottage for an indefinite time.

DISAPPOINTS GOVERNOR

Stokes Says Present System of Electing Assemblyman Helps the Bosses.

J. F. DRYDEN PLEASED

In His Next Annual Message Governor Will Suggest Amendment to Constitution.

The opinion of the Court of Errors declaring unconstitutional the Assembly districting act was no surprise, although a disappointment to some of the "regular" Republicans who were responsible for its introduction.

During the session it was known as an administration measure pure and simple, having the indorsement of Governor Stokes and States Treasurer Briggs, who, as chairman of the Republican committee, had Randolph Perkins, leader of the majority, introduce the bill in the House.

Its appearance was long deferred for two reasons. First, the leaders wanted to know the attitude of the court as near as that could be ascertained in advance before the bill was introduced. Second, the Governor had announced and everybody else agreed that the district lines submitted by the various Republican organizations should be accepted lines in the bill, and that was impossible everywhere except in Essex.

The delegation from this county would not stand for the county committee lines, and finally the State organization, backed by the Governor, accepted the Colby lines for Essex, and the bill in that shape was introduced. When placed on final passage it was somewhat unexpectedly defeated in the Assembly. One week later it was resurrected, passed and went through the Senate and was duly approved by the Governor.

The rest was plain sailing. Just as its sponsors had predicted, the constitutionality of the act was raised before Supreme Court Justice Reed, the sole survivor of the branch court which declared the district plan void thirteen years ago. As predicted, the Court of Errors gave it over-night approval on the cases and the argument began two weeks ago. The first day the promoters of the plan realized that something had gone awry.

Questions propounded by Chief Justice Gummere, Chancellor Magie and Justices Pitney, Swayze and Garrison led to the belief that these jurists did not look with favor upon the act.

Governor Stokes returned to Sea Girt from Millville shortly after noon yesterday, and when seen by a reporter and asked for his views on the decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals, he dictated a statement in which he took occasion to condemn the boss system in districting, and stated that he is just as firm a believer as ever in the districting scheme, and that the next recourse would be to a constitutional amendment. He added that in all probability he would recommend the next Legislature that that body submit the matter to the people.

The Governor's statement is as follows:

"I shall not discuss the legal aspect of the question of Assembly districts. Any comment thereon, on my part, would be highly improper. The highest court in the State has decided the question from a constitutional point of view, and their decision is law and should be unquestionably respected by every loyal Jerseyman.

"I have not, however, changed my opinion as to the merits of the system itself. The Assembly district system is representative in character and accords with the principles of our government. It secures more independence of thought and action in the Legislature than does the county system.

"Each Assemblyman then represents a constituency to whom he is alone responsible and can act without the influence of the overshadowing control of a county organization. So long as the county system prevails the delegation from the counties, especially of the larger counties, will always be controlled by some strong and dominating personality. Call him boss, leader or whatever you will, all bosses look alike to me.'

"Under the county system the Assemblymen might all come from one ward or from one section of the county and leave the rest of the county unrepresented. Under it the members are necessarily nominated by a large convention and by delegates with whose constituency they are not necessarily in close touch and contact.

"Such delegations in the Legislature receive their nomination at the hands of the county powers, whoever they may be, and naturally feel responsible to them for their legislative action. In my opinion this is a very poor method in representative government, since it conducts to centralization of power in the hands of the few rather than its distribution among Assembly units to the promotion of independence of thought and action among the legislators.

"I recommended this system in my message and suggested that three were two ways in which it might be accomplished, one by constitutional amendment, which last year was impossible under our Constitution, which requires that no amendment to the Constitution can be submitted to the people except once every five years.

"The other possible way was to pass an act creating Assembly districts for the purpose of bringing it before the Court of Errors and Appeals for final review. This is necessary in view of the previous decision of the Supreme Court declaring a similar act unconstitutional.

"In my message I clearly set forth that the object of this act was to get an ultimate decision on the question, and that was well known in advance by the people of the State and thoroughly discussed. The decision of the court has settled the question so long as our Constitution remains as it is.

"I think that a very large majority of the county organizations throughout the State prefer the county system. Indeed, I personally know that to be the case, with but few exceptions. This is very natural, as it concentrates the power. To this I am strongly opposed as a policy of government, and indeed, as a political policy, for I think the best governmental policy is the best political policy.

"I shall, in all probability, in my next annual message discuss the question, and recommend the submission to the people of an amendment to the Constitution, providing for an Assembly district system, with the proper restrictive safeguards against gerrymanded. Next year the constitutional time limitation will have so run that constitutional amendment can be considered by the Legislature."

JOHN A. M'CALL DIED WITH LITTLE MONEY.

The Late Insurance President's Property in New York is Worth But $40,385.

After deducting his debts, the net personal property in New York owned by the late John A. McCall, former president of the New York Life Insurance Company, amounts to only $40,385, according to an appraisal filed in the Surrogate's Court, New York.

Mr. McCall's gross personal property in New York amounted to $74,-$15. From this his funeral expenses, commissions of executors and expenses of administration, aggregating $33,415, were deducted. The balance of the debts enumerated is $23,000, money borrowed on Dec. 30 last from Darwin P. Kingsley.

Mr. McCall owned no real estate in New York State but had extensive holdings in New Jersey. He had a $50,000 interest in the Broadway Real Estate Syndicate and held small blocks of stocks in various New York corporations.

CONFLICT IN TAX AFFAIRS

State Board of Equalization Divests State Board of Taxes of Its Powers.

THE NEW LAWS EFFECT

Union County Board For Equalization, However, Expects No Interference.

Quite a stir was created in taxing circles today by the announcement that a close reading of the act under which the State Boards of Taxes were created left them without any authority over the assessors in the several taxing districts and placed all authority in the hands of the State Board of Equalization.

Under section 4 of the act in question the county boards are to have the supervision and control of the assessors in their respective counties and provides that the assessors shall be governed by such rules as may from time to time be formulated by the county board. But the section goes on to say that "Before making any such rules, orders or directions, such county board shall submit the same to the Board of Equalization of Taxes of New Jersey for its approval, and no rule, order or direction shall be considered adopted by said county board until the same shall have been approved by the said board of equalization."

This, it was claimed, nullified the effects of the heart-to-heart talks the county board has been having with its assessors. A member of the Union County Board of Taxation claimed that while the section might seem to take the authority away from the county boards, it really affected them in no way. The county boards, he said, anticipated no interference by the State board.

Yesterday instructions were sent out from the State Board of Equalization to the effect that all books of assessors must be revised on August 7. It is said there will be scarcely any of these books ready by that time for revision by the board. The instructions from the board of State because there are several of the boards to be appointed yet. In this city some of the assessors will have a hard time to come up to the requirements of the law.

Throughout the county it is said there will be some rare fun when the day of reckoning comes and mistakes made by those assessors who have carried on their work in the old way are laid bare. One feature of the assessment of local property that will cause trouble that might have been avoided will be the jump in the assessments that will be necessary in some districts. Assessors in the past years, instead of raising the assessments as property increased in value, have gone on making their estimates from the books of the previous year. Had they made increases with the rise in values much trouble with property-owners and a great deal of dissatisfaction might have been avoided.

No one knows when the remaining boards will be appointed. Until they are the general meeting of all the county boards with the State Board of Equalization at Trenton will not take place.

Members of the Union county board feel that the only instructions that will be given by the State board at the meeting will be to impress upon the minds of the different county boards the fact that the law in all its provisions must be enforced to the letter without fear or favor.

An Interrupted Game of Poker.

Talking about America, here is a story I heard the other day. I can hardly believe it is true. I wouldn't only a citizen of the great United States tole it to me.

John B. Bloggs and Silas K. Shuttle tre both canned goods packers in Chicago. They are fierce rivals. They both happened to start off to "do Europe" at the same time. The other Sunday morning chance threw them into the same pew in a London church.

When the collection plate came round Bloggs took it in his hand, put in a $5 bill, held it under the nose of Shuttle, and said: "I'll raise you anything you like to go."

Shuttle deposited a $10 bill.

Bloggs sat down, put the plate on his knee, and with a cheerful alacrity took out his wallet to find $15.

And they might have been at it still if the horrified church warden had not interfered.

Of course, if you don't understand the American national card game of "poker" you won't understand this story.—M. A. P.

Chicago Summer Resort.

The young man from the city, while taking his first stroll around the popular summer resort, had been inveigled into a large pavilion which was comfortably filled with men, women and children.

After listening a few moments to the remarks of one of the speakers on the platform he turned to the young woman whom he had traveled a long distance to see.

"You told me this was a vaudeville," he whispered. "It's more like a Chautauqua."

"Chautauqua is the word I was trying to think of," she answered demurely. "Did I say vaudeville."—Chicago Tribune.

PLAINFIELD MILK O. K; MR. THURLOW VIGILANT

HEALTH BOARD OFFICER CLOSELY WATCHES THE LOCAL DAIRIES.

While people in other cities are complaining about the poor milk supply furnished, Plainfielders are congratulating themselves that no such condition exists here. During the past few weeks newspapers throughout the State as well as in New York have been discussing at great length the importance of having a better milk supply and they are urging health authorities to take some action.

Ever since the local Board of Health took full charge of the milk supply here and secured a proper sanitary code, Plainfield has had no trouble from the supply. Milkmen are now compelled to take out a license and Health Officer Leon Thurlow is always on the alert watching for any irregularities or violations of the code. Mr. Thurlow's report presented to the Board of Health on Tuesday, shows that during the past month he made seventy-three visits to dairies and examined twenty-five samples of milk. In making these examinations Mr. Thurlow is extremely particular and if the sample shows a greater number of bacteria than it should or more than the law warrants from that source is shut off after the proper warning is given. In speaking of this matter, Mr. Thurlow says that all of the local licensed dealers are now anxious to co-operate with the Board of Health in maintaining the high standard set for the milk supply. While making some examinations yesterday Mr. Thurlow discovered that one or two samples contained an unusually large number of bacteria and he will at once notify the sellers of that milk of the fact with the understanding that they must improve content.

A majority of the samples examined showed a small percentage of bacteria and this is encouraging not only to the Board of Health, but consumers of milk. There has been no outbreak of contagious disease resulting from the milk supply and the Health took charge of the supply and this is entirely due to the eternal vigilance of the board. There are records on file in the office giving the name of every retail dealer and every source of supply in and out of town. At this time of the year it is very important that the milk supply be watched as it is likely to carry disease especially to children, if not produced under proper conditions.

BOOK 13 UNLUCKY FOR HOST OF HEIRS.

Attorney's Revelation a Blow to Hartsfield Claimants to Gotham Land.

United States District-Attorney W. H. Atwell, of Dallas, Tex., visited the office of the Register of Deeds in New York yesterday for the purpose of inspecting the records in connection with the prosecution of Jos. I. Cowan, of that city, who has been indicted for the fraudulent use of tax seals.

Cowan professes to represent a syndicate organized for the purpose of purchasing the interests of the heirs of one ames Hartsfield, who died in New York years ago. District-Attorney Atwell estimates that Cowan has received from the heirs more than $100,000 in the last two years since the alleged scheme was evolved.

Cowan, according to Mr. Atwell, represented that Hartsfield, in 1795, had leased for ninety-nine years to the city of New York 160 acres of land between Seventy-fifth and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth streets, running along either side of Broadway and Fifth avenue, which is worth hundreds of millions today. According to Cowen, the lease expired ten years ago and the property should now revert to Hartsfield's heirs.

Cowan represented that the first twelve libers of the records were missing from the Register's office, and that the record of the deeds and transfer were in the eight books. This was where the greatest difficulty appeared in proving the claim. Then the heirs poured in money on Cowan.

The examination of the records yesterday by Attorney Atwell revealed that Book 13, the first of the existing records, recorded transfers as far back as 1685, establishing the fact that a record of the lease alleged would appear in a later book in existence. This was an important fact for the prosecution.

Cowan, he stated, was indicted about a month ago on the complaint of a Baptist minister, one of Hartsfield's heirs, who had paid him considerable sums of money.

"Cowan visited New York about a year ago," said Mr. Atwell, "ostensibly for the purpose of investigating the claim. He said that J. P. Morgan wanted to buy up the interest of the heirs for $250,000,000, but that he was holding out for $500,000,000. The story he told the heirs was believed by rich and poor among them and all contributed to the cause."

District-Attorney Atwell added that letters and remittances still come to Cowan. The latter is out on bail and the District-Attorney said he hoped to bring him to trial in January.

A. S. Wales, of Central avenue, is visiting at his former home in Connecticut.

SCORER SAYS PRESS WON

In First of Series of Contests, Courier's Team Bites the Dust.

A NOVEL EXHIBITION

Comic Reproduction of the National Game On Crescent Oval—Squire Nichol Had Glass Arm.

Laying aside the responsibilities of getting a newspaper put together, two teams representing The Daily Press and the Courier-News, played an alleged game of baseball on Crescent Oval, Wednesday afternoon and evening. There have been better contests on the field but according to everyone of the twenty-three people who lingered through the nine spasmodic innings, the exhibition was well worth the car fare both ways. The score is given as 14 to 9 in favor of The Daily Press but the runs were tallied by the circulation manager of one of the papers whose propensity for juggling figures has been the one dark spot on his journalistic career, so there is room for argument.

Every baseball game has its features and the feature of this one was the number of its features. There were seven. The umpire forced it and The Daily Press has had "scoops" in the past month and the players were juggling around oftener than the Constitutionalist changes its last page make-up. Chauncey Colthar started in the box for The Daily Press and held the honor until the seventh inning when the opposing batsmen "pied" his curves all over the stone—beg pardon, the lot. He was then replaced by "Riverside" Scott, who had originally been brought out to look after the bats, but when pressed that he knew something about baseball because he has set up the National and local scores for three years.

"Squire" Nichol was the original Courier-News twirler but his reputation fell quicker than it takes "Bish" Hoffman to cover an assignment and "Seltzer" Waters was substituted. He stayed long enough to show that he had been deluding himself that he could handle the sphere and as no one else wanted the place, the Holy Cross Choir battery, Vail and Moran, were pressed into service. They did good work and succeeded in stopping the Press men from sending the ball wherever they wanted it.

"Tom" Lynch, who has spent nineteen years in seeing that each copy of the Daily Press gets a sufficient amount of ink, surprised the players and spectators by making a creditable base running and Chauncey Stout, the Courier-News circulation press agent, easily led in hauling down flies. "Jimmie" Kermode had several opportunities to distinguish himself in the field but he persisted in practicing the Lancashire clog and woke up too late several times. "Willie" Lambert, the author of the Courier-News' suburban serials and editor of the query-column, was conspicuous by his errors(something new for him) and modest Colonel A. Hacquer, of the Daily Press staff, was seen at his best when any shouting was to be done. He also caught two flies and made one assist.

When the game started, there were two umpires, Elmer D. Cutting and V. W. Nash, Jr., but both were quickly dropped. The former kept ringing in croquet and domino terms and had the players badly confused, while his confrere had to consult a rule book after every time his opinion was asked. T. Muir, who had promised to act as scorer, was unable to be present because he had just received a copy of "The Billboard," the theatrical weekly, and had not had time to read it.

Both sides are still talking of the remarkable knowledge of the game displayed by George Ballentyne, who asked to be put in the right garden to head off the dangerous grounders and high flies that frequently go that way. He proved a most valuable man and covered his end in the same keen-sighted manner that characterized his method of landing a fat advertising contract.

The complete line-up for the two nines was as follows:

Daily Press—Lynch, c.f; Jeffrey and Kermode, rf; Francisco, lf; Colthar, p. and 3b; Vail, c; VanHorn, 1b; Hacquer, 2b; Scott, 3b and p; Dressell, 3b and ss.

Courier-News—Waters, c. p. 2b; Nichols, p. c. cf; Stout, lf; Dunn, ss; Morrison, rf; Lambert, cf; Koechlein, 1b; Sullivan, 2b and c; Banghart, 3b.

Rev. G. A. Warner Engaged.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Holy Cross church, and Miss Ottalie H. Lohrbe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Lohrbe, of 101 Prospect street, East Orange. Miss Lohrbe is prominent in the society world in Orange. Mr. Warner formerly lived in Orange prior to becoming rector of the Holy Cross church. No date has been set for the wedding.

APPORTIONMENT OF STATE SCHOOL MONEY ANNOUNCED

PLAINFIELD IS TO GET $278,14.84, AN INCREASE OVER LAST YEAR.

The apportionment of the State school money for Union county for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1906, has been announced. It shows a considerable increase over what was allotted to the county last year. The total sum to be divided in the districts of the county is $161,937.98. This is an increase of $15,526.-73 over the county's apportionment last year.

Plainfield is to get $27,814.84, an increase for the city over last year's amount of $6,668.54.

The total of $161,937.98 comes from four sources. The sum of $10,-074.87 is apportioned from the State appropriation of $200,000. The sum of $53,188.43 is taken from the State appropriation of $1,110,419.85. From the $0 per cent. of the State school tax the county gets $88,900.-66. And from the reserve fund by the State Board of Education the county receives $9,773.92. All these separate items are higher than last year.

The $161,937.98 will be divided among the districts of the county as follows:

Clark	$ 310.78
Cranford	7,942.11
Elizabeth	65,849.91
Fanwood	2,835.62
Garwood	876.99

CHARLES M. DOLLIVER AND BRIDE "AT HOME."

Newly-Wedded Couple Held a Delightful Reception Last Thursday Night.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Marvin Dolliver, who were recently married, gave a delightful "at home" reception Thursday at 32 Fairview avenue, the borough, their future home, which was attended by a company of forty people. The affair was quite informal and afforded many persons unable to attend the wedding an opportunity to meet the bride and groom and extend congratulations. The house was appropriately, but effectively decorated with flowers.

The guests were received at the door by the parents of the groom and then escorted to the parlors where they were introduced to the bride and groom. During the evening the guests enjoyed a delightful piano selections by Miss Lillian A. Force, Mrs. Fred Green and Miss Ida Dunham. Later refreshments were served. Those in charge in the dining room were the Misses Relber, sisters of the bride; Mrs. Joseph Dunham and Miss Nellie Arnold. The large collection of handsome gifts received by Mrs. Dolliver were displayed in two rooms and were much admired by all.

Charles Marvin Dolliver and Miss Alberta Elizabeth Relber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Relber, of New York, were married on Wednesday, June 27, at the Thirty-third Street Baptist church, New York, by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Holloway. The bride was attended by Miss Mabelle Smith, of Hempstead, L. I., as maid-of-honor, and Miss Cora S. Relber and Miss Mathilde P. Relber, sisters of the bride, as bridesmaids. The best man was Asa F. Randolph, of this city, and the ushers were N. Douglass Drake, Joseph S. Dunham and Raymond V. Carpenter, of this city, and William J. Relshaw, Jr., of Richmond Hill, L. I. After the wedding the couple went to Maine where they enjoyed their honey moon. They returned home a few days ago.

Setting Him Right.

Borroughs (angrily)—When Marjory loaned me that $10 I think I overheard you remark that you wondered when I would pay him back.

Kandor—No; you're mistaken.

Borroughs—O! I guess not.

Kandor—Yes, you are. I didn't say "when," but "if."

Saving.

Galley—I'm not drinking at all now; stopped over a month ago.

Goodley—That's good. You must be saving money.

Galley—Think what! In another month I'll have enough for a ripsroaring time.

Modest.

"Elmer had a poem accepted by Scribner's Magazine—"

"Yes, and he's taken to the backwoods."

"What for?"

"He says he hates like thunder to be lionized."

Judging From the Size.

"But, Papa," asked the little tot, "where did the 'Old Woman That Lived in a Shoe' come from?"

"I don't know, my child," replied Papa, "but it's a pretty safe bet that the shoe came from Chicago."

OFFERED A CLUB HOUSE

Watchung Hunt Club Can Have Use of House on C.D. Freeman's Farm.

MAY NOT BUILD YET

Club Members May Have Place at Iselin and Defer Building Till Next Year.

Through an offer made by Charles D. Freeman, master of hounds of the Watchung Hunt Club, the local followers of the hounds will probably have their club house and kennels for this fall at Iselin, where a farm house owned by Mr. Freeman will be refitted as a club house for the Plainfied hunters. A hunt club dinner was held at the Casino last evening to discuss the question of building a club house and kennels, and a business meeting of the followers of the hounds was held at the conclusion of the banqueting, which was managed by Mazo Edwards. An excellent dinner was served to the twenty-eight members who turned out to the affair.

When the question of building was brought up there was discussion regarding the purchase of land for the erection of a club house. Mr. Freeman offered to allow the club the use of a large farm building at Iselin for a club house during the coming year. Iselin is about six miles from this city, and the only drawback to an immediate acceptance of the offer was the distance. The members were very enthusiastic over Mr. Freeman's offer, and those present were highly in favor of accepting it. The hunt club had planned to buy property near this city and erect a club house, but this would necessitate a great expense, and Mr. Freeman's offer was considered an excellent opportunity for the club until another year, when the followers of the hounds will be better able financially to build a club house and kennels. A meeting of the entire club will be called within ten days, when a vote will be taken upon Mr. Freeman's proposition.

The club has increased in membership since there has been so much interest taken among local horsemen in riding to hounds, and there are now eighty members. During the fall season just concluded, the club has held two very successful steeple chase meets, attracting a large number of entries, which include the best horses in the Metropolitan district. It is planned to have several such meets, drag hunts and early morning rides with the hounds during the coming fall season.

TO CLEAN HARD WOOD,

Especially If It Be Very, Very Soiled.

Spread paraffine oil on the soiled woodwork and let it stand for an hour or more to soften the dirt, then wash with soap and warm water and wipe dry.

Next rub on a mixture of paraffine oil and turpentine—one-third turpentine and two-thards oil. Polish with soft old flannel. Let it rest an hour or two, then polish with soft old linen.

If the surface is very dull, dirty and scratched, instead of washing with soap and water, add more oil and sprinkle powdered rotten-stone over it. Rub gently and regularly, first with a circular motion and then with grain of the wood. When the surface is smooth and bright wipe off the rotten-stone and finish as you would after washing with soap and water.

Wellington's Favorite Charger.

Copenhagen, the Duke of Wellington's favorite charger, is buried in a paddock at Strathfieldsaye, Hampshire. The interment took place with military honors. The inscription on the stone placed over the grave reads:

Here lies Copenhagen, the Charger ridden by the Duke of Wellington the entire day at the Battle of Waterloo.

Born 1808. Died 1836.

Hail, Bacchus!

Who that once has known him can ever forget the great Gallaspy, who "drank seven in hand; that is, seven glasses so placed between the fingers of his right hand that, in drinking, the liquor fell into the next glass, and thereby he drank out of the first seven glasses at once."—London Spectator.

Takes It Out of Him.

TEACH THE BOY.

To be true to his word and work.

To face all difficulties with courage and cheerfulness.

To form no friendships that can bring him into degrading associations.

To respect other people's convictions.

To reverence womanhood.

To live a clean life in thought and word as well as in deed.

That true manliness always commands success.

That the best things in life are not those that can be bought with money.

That to command he must first learn to obey.

That there can be no compromise between honesty and dishonesty.

That the virtues of punctuality and politeness are excellent things to cultivate.

That a gentleman is just what the word implies—a man who is gentle in his dealing with the opinions, feelings and weaknesses of other people. —Mother's Magazine.

Raisin Cookies.

Cream one-half cup each of butter and sugar, add one well beaten egg, two tablespoons of milk, one and seven-eighths cups of pastry flour sifted with one level teaspoon of baking powder and one-third cup of chopped raisins. Roll thin, cut in rounds and bake in a moderate oven. The dough will roll easier if well chilled before this is attempted and a little more flour may be needed if the egg is large.

Delicate Omelet.

Beat the yolks of six eggs and the whites of three until light, add a slightly rounding tablespoon of corn starch, one cup of cream, half a level teaspoon of salt and a dash of pepper. Melt one teaspoon of butter in an omelet and pour in the omelet and set in a moderate oven. When set, pour the stiffy beaten beaten whites of three eggs over the top, return to the oven and color lightly. Serve at once.

Escalloped Salmon.

Make a sauce of one-quarter cup each of flour and butter and two cups of milk. Cook five minutes and season with salt and pepper. Open a can of salmon and drain, also prepare two cups of bread crumbs. Arrange alternate layers of flaked salmon, crumbs and sauce in a buttered dish and have last layer of crumbs. Set in a quick oven until heated through.

Poached Eggs.

To keep the eggs in shape the water must simmer, not boil hard. Salt the water and put in several muffin rings. Drop an egg into each water and dash the hot water over the top of the egg until the white is set. Lift out with a flat skimmer on to slices of buttered toast, dust with salt and pepper and add a bit of butter. To tempt a weak appetite lay a sprig of green parsley beside the egg.

Currant Catsup.

Weigh five pounds of currants and mash them; add six even cups of sugar, two cups of vinegar, one tablespoon each of cinnamon and cloves, one teaspoon of salt and one of pepper. Cook together thirty minutes, stirring all the time, then seal in the smallest size of fruit jars.

Cucumber Pickles.

Pick the cucumbers when not over three inches long and soak twenty-four hours in brine strong enough to bear up an egg so that the side just shows above the water. Take out, rinse in cold water and wipe with a cloth and lay in a jar. To one gallon of vinegar, add two tablespoons each of dry mustard, powdered alum, cinnamon, cloves and one cup of salt. Heat the spices and vinegar to the boiling point and pour at once over the pickles. Add a few pieces of horseradish root and half a dozen of the very small red peppers.

Meat Shortcake.

Make the cake from two cups of sifted pastry flour sifted again with four level teaspoons of baking powder and a saltspoon of salt. Rub in a rounding tablespoon of butter and mix with nearly one cup of milk. Divide in halves, roll out, brush one-half with soft water, and lay on the other half. Bake in a quick oven. Chop cold meat or chicken and heat in a little gravy, or in a cream or white sauce, seasoned well. Separate the cakes as soon as they come from the oven and spread on the meat. Cover with the second cake and serve at once.

FOR THE FURNITURE.

Have you noted the coverings?

Aren't the dainty new coverings a delight?

Blossomy cretonne is one of the newer materials.

The blossoms often look the prettier for a striped background.

Garlands of rosebuds in pinky hues are dainty on a blue and white stripe.

Gorgeous red poppies are effective on a white ground with an occasional cluster of black stripes.

Considerate.

"Why does the conductor collect the fares just as we are entering the tunnel?" inquired the stranger.

"That is the company's order," explained the native. "It's to cover the conductor's confusion when he blushes for having to collect any fare at all on this line.—Chicago Tribune.

Ice Up Five Cents in Rahway.

Ice dealers at Rahway have increased the price of ice from fifty to fifty-five cents per hundred this week.

THE SUMMER COLORS.

Dyed lace will be used a great deal upon the summer dresses, and it supplies the tone so often needed. There can be a little blue lace used as an edging to a gown of blue batiste, the whole carried out in a very pale shade.

Skirts of washable dresses will be made in three ways, all of them familiar to the home dressmaker. There will be the plaited skirt, the fitted skirt and the circular skirt, and to these may be added the shirred skirt. These models have held good for two seasons, and yet there is nothing at all to replace them. They seem to cover the whole field and to supply every need that the fat woman can have, as well as all the necessities of the thinner sister.

The pretty shades for summer will be pink, which will be worn a great deal, and lobster, buff, shrimp, cocoa, biscuit, swansdown and lemon. A pure pink cloth suit, thin and made in the style of a linen suit, will be appreciated all summer.

Brown is not supposed to wash well, yet there are shades of cocoa brown that come out nicely. One very pretty brown is found in the batistes and also in the foulards, and it is likewise to be had in the cotton challis. It is rather a soft shade of cocoa, the very color that goes well with pink, and it should be made up with pink frills and, if possible, with little touches of lace-dyed pink. Anything and everything for the preservation of the dress artists call the harmonies.

THE SUMMER BOARDER'S DECALOGUE.

1—Don't expect too much. Paradise never takes in summer boarders.

2—Don't encourage sudden friendships. Sudden friends make gradual enemies.

3—Don't attempt to take with you everything you would have at home.

4—Be a "moral monkey;" don't see, don't hear, and don't talk of the personal affairs of others.

5—Don't have elaborate cloths made especially for the summer outing.

6—Don't refer to the refinement or luxury of your own home.

7—Don't feel that because "nobody knows you" it doesn't matter what you do.

8—Take long walks and let your lungs expand; don't cramp them by leaning over your writing table.

9—If you can play or sing or help to entertain the other guests do so ungrudgingly.

10—Be punctual at meals, kindly and considerate toward those who serve you.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

Only one woman in 100 insures her life.

Ellen Terry is passionately fond of cats.

Patti sleeps with a silk scarf about her neck.

Brides in Australia are pelted with rose leaves.

Sara Bernhardt has a huge bed fifteen feet long.

In Africa wives are sold for two packets of hairpins.

A woman's brain declines in weight after the age of 30.

New York has 27,000 women who support their husbands.

Hottentot women cut off a finger joint when they remarry.

Drunkenness is rare, smoking common, among Japanese women.

HAT PINS.

Aren't they beauties?
One chooses with care.
They match or contrast.
At any rate, they must harmonize.

Jet heads look well on black or white.

Pink pearls stand ready to skewer pink hats.

Crystal makes a lovely hatpin for many chapeaux.

Opals are charming with hydrangea color combinations.

Turquoise-topped pins are delightful in a blue and white hat.

While some more or less odd shapes are good style, the grotesque should be avoided.

POINTER FROM PARIS.

The scarf's the thing.
It drapes the shoulders.
The ends flutter beautifully.
It is mostly made of mousseline.
It is chosen to match the one color or costume.
It may be a few shades deeper or much paler.

With a white dress it is usually colored and matches the hat.

Chameleon mousseline in the delicate hydrangea shades was selected to wear with a white costume, the hat being trimmed with these flowers.

Restful.

Gasser—I noticed your friend Knox at my lecture last night.

Kandor—Yes, and he enjoyed himself immensely.

Gasser—Yes, I noticed he stayed until the end; he didn't get tired at all.

Kandor—No, he told me he was in a part of the hall he couldn't hear at all.

Surprised and Suprisor.

Jack Huggard—Miss Rooley's father made a surprising statement to me last night.

Tom Ascum—What was that?

Jack Huggard—He sneaked into the parlor and said: "Ha! I caught you kissing my daughter."—Philadelphia Press.

SOME GEMS.

Vigorous thought must come from a fresh brain.

Don't save your money and starve your mind.

Tens of thousands of people fail because they love their ease too much. They are not willing to put themselves out, to sacrifice comfort.

By proper training and depressing emotions can be practically eliminated from life, and the good emotions rendered so dominant.

A man may build a palace, but he can never make of it a home. The spirituality and love of a woman alone can accomplish this.

If we are contented to unfold the life within according to the pattern given us we shall reach the highest end of which we are capable.

"Keeping alive that spirit of youth," Stevenson used to say, was "the parennial spring of all the mental faculties."

Every time you crowd into the memory what you do not expect it to retain you weaken its powers and your authority to command its services.

No life amounts to much until it has a programme—something definite, something particular. Nothing else can take the place of it. Education cannot, talent cannot, genius cannot, hard work cannot. Until there is a definite aim, the energies will run to waste, the ability be squandered. The faculties deteriorate when working without a definite aim.

Business is not only a great civilizer of nations and of people, but also the greatest educator and developer of character in the world, for it is a perpetual school, a great life university, where we do not go to recite and hear lectures for three or four hours a day for a few years, but where we are constantly studying and practicing, almost from the cradle to the grave.—Success Magazine.

EXAGGERATING HABIT.

Exageration is simply a dressy form of untruthfulness. Very often as much harm is done by exaggerating a fact as by actually telling an untruth.

It is all a matter of habit, and can be cured if one takes the trouble to try hard enough. The trouble is that with some people the cold fact never seems big enough. They must enlarge on it. Hundreds become thousands, inches become yards under this pernicious habit. They feel that they cannot impress people unless they can make a big story.

In reality, people soon grow to place no reliance on the stories told by the exaggerator. They know that if he tells the last story he tells a crowd of thousands of people, it was really only a crowd of a few hundreds. If he tells them he has met a perfectly beautiful girl, they know she is moderately pretty and so forth. His stories are of no value because they cannot be relied upon, says the Philadelphia Bulletin.

Some people seem constitutionally unable to tell the truth. They lie on all occasions, even when they have nothing to gain by it. One reason for this is that they cannot bear to appear not to know everything. No matter what you tell them they will have had similar experiences.

They boast of knowing people whom they have never met. They tell marvelous tales of experiences they have never gone through. And they never seem to imagine that there is a limit to the credulity of their listeners.

The habit of telling petty untruths is a horrid one, and can't help but have its effect on character.

It grows by degrees. But it can be cured, and for the sake of a reputation of reliability and honesty, it is certainly worth while to stamp it out.

Five-Minute Naps.

Every housewife should cultivate the habit of five minute naps. After working for a few hours a woman is apt to feel sleepy or "dragged out," and imagines that it is only that ordinary sin of the flesh—laziness. But if she gives in to the feeling and rests for a short time on a comfortable lounge she will feel wonderfully freshened and will do better and quicker work than if she had foregone her cat nap. A successful business man declares that he owes his long life and great youthfulness to "five minutes naps," which he has always taken in his chair.

For an Invalid.

Beat a new laid egg with a little water, beat a glass of sherry, and add to it half a glass of cold water, and a little sugar. The amount of sugar is to be regulated by the taste and condition of the invalid. Pour the beaten egg, sweetened wine and water into a saucepan, set in a larger one of boiling water. Set over the fire and stir one way until thoroughly heated, but do not allow it to boil. Serve in a high tumbler set on a plate, accompanying it with a piece of thin, dry toast or plain crisp biscuit.

Take Care of Manure.

Thousands of tons of fertilizer are wasted annually by trying to grow new barns from manure thrown against barns built in the ordinary way. Take care of manure. It is valuable.—American Agriculturist.

Handy Word.

Assistant—"What shall I put under the bride's picture? She's homely as a mud fence."

Editor—"In that case we always say 'accomplished.'"—American Spectator.

LITERARY.

In the sense that Attorney-General Hadley, of Missouri, did not seek the office he holds he is an incident. Leader of a faction in one of the forlorn hope conventions, as it was supposed, of the Republican party in the State, his mission was to defeat the nomination of a certain man for attorney-general. He was successful, but in the confusion which followed he found himself named against his will. While a handful of his followers swept him like a football in the midst of a flying wedge to the rear of the hall, he was chosen by acclamation. His first impulse was to decline at once, but he heeded the warning of his best friends that in imperil his political future by refusing to make a campaign. That he would be elected seemed hardly a possibility. He worked hard, canvassed the state from end to end, voted and then went quail hunting. He was returned from Appomattox three days later he was greeted by the greatest surprise in his career. He had been elected with the remainder of the Republican ticket, except the candidate for governor, and by a safe majority.—American Magazine.

In any list of patents granted to male inventors one is sure to find a good many oddities and quite a sprinkling of positive freaks, writes Rene Bache in Technical World Magazine for August. Among those credited to the women are fewer absurdities, proportionately, but some such are discoverable. For instance there is a very funny sort of boat, which is supposed to be propelled by swallowing water at the bow and expelling at the stern. Another curiosity of feminine origin is the "hair persuader"—a simple contrivance, intended to be fastened to the ankle of a chicken, to prevent it from scratching in the garden. It consists chiefly of two long prongs extending rearward in the shape of a fork. Much more sensible, perhaps, is a rocking-chair for a bald-headed man, which keeps flies off of the occupant's polished occiput by means of a tasseled cloth that swings from above as he rocks.

ETIQUETTE OF THE TELEPHONE.

Telephones are now in such common usage, in private life as well as in business, that it would seem as if everybody ought to know how to handle one and how not to abuse so great a convenience.

But many do not seem to.

Women in particular, probably because their voices are, as a rule, thinner and higher pitched than the average man's, commonly speak in tones that reverberate and set up a confusing buzzing in the ear.

It is a common fault, too, to shout through the 'phone as if the transition of the message depended on the noise made.

In using the 'phone remember that your voice does not actually have to carry to the other end of the wire. It is simply reproduced there.

Consequently, you needn't scream.

Just speak in a low, distinct voice, and a low and distinct voice will be reproduced at the other end.

Here are some rules of telephone etiquette it might be well to master:

Never telephone in a private house too early in the morning or too late at night. The hours are governed by the customs of the household.

Never telephone during the meal hours.

Never use the 'phone of a person of slender means without at least offering to pay for its use.

Employees should never use the wire in a business office for long and protracted conversations with personal friends.

Don't forget that even if you are not seen across the 'phone wire you are probably being overheard by a third party, possibly by others.

Don't shout out your private affairs over a public 'phone.

Don't, when some one is speaking at the 'phone within your hearing, stop your conversation. Or, on talking or ear out of hearing distance.

Don't talk for effect. Your conversation may be amusing to the friends beside you, but will prove puzzling to the person at the other end of the wire.

Learn to speak in well-modulated musical tones.

An invitation delivered over the 'phone is most informal and is only possible between close friends.

Don't be unmindful or lackadaisical when "'phoning." Speak up in a healthy tone of voice.

Keep the mouthpiece and the telephone receiver clean and sterilized by swabbing both off with a cloth dipped in alcohol.

Don't be in a hurry.

Don't lose your temper.

Street Improvements.

Street Commissioner Gavett has had a new crosswalk laid at Park avenue and Second street, leading from the corner occupied by Druggist Schreiner to that of the Plainfield Trust Company. Owing to the widening of the street the walk is laid at an angle. Othre arrangements will have to be made for the electric light at the corner as the old pole must come down.

Biker for U. S. Senate.

Chandler Biker, of Essex county, is a new candidate for the United States senatorship.

Mayor Fagan's Vacation.

Mayor Mark M. Fagan, of Jersey City, will take a vacation this year. He will leave the latter part of this month and be absent about four weeks.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 22.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Christ's Life VII. How Christ Prayed and How We should pray.—Matt. xiv, 23; xxvi, 36-44.

There is nothing more impressive in the life of Christ than His habit of prayer. If a sinless humanity, linked to divinity, needed to hold communion with God, how much more does a weak and sinful humanity need "to carry everything to God in prayer!" Why Christ prayed need be no question of ours. The reason for His praying may be left with Himself, while we address ourselves to the great and important fact that He did pray. That He prayed is abundantly evident from the testimony of the Scriptural histories of His life. This is all we need to know in order to find in Him an example and an inspiration to prayer. God tells us all we need to know and keeps the rest to Himself, and he is a foolish man indeed who spends his time in trying to pry into the "secret things of God," while at the same time he fails to profit by "the things that have been revealed." Christ prayed. That is sufficient for the practical purposes of our lives. His example teaches us to pray, and His methods in prayer may well be taken as our models.

Prayer with Christ meant, for one thing, petition. He asked God for power to raise Lazarus from the dead, and before the event He said, "Father, I thank Thee that Thou hast heard Me, and I know that Thou hearest Me always." He prayed for Simon Peter and in so doing won a victory over Satan, who had also asked for Peter. In His intercessary prayer He prayed for the disciples and for His church, especially for its unity. In the garden of Gethsemane He prayed for Himself, yet in full submission to the will of God. To pray with Christ is for us also to come to God with requests, and we also have the assurance that our petitions will be granted. "Ask and ye shall receive." We, like Christ, should pray for ourselves, for the work of God; we, like Him, should pray for the safety of those nearest and dearest to us, and not only for them, but for the church universal and for the world; like Him, we should also pray for ourselves, but always in the fullest submission to the will of God. "Not my will, but Thine, be done." God knows what is best for us, and whether He gives or withholds it is for our good. What seems to us good may really be ill, and what seems to our limited vision adversity may be a blessing. Let us be thankful, therefore, that we have One who does know what is best and is interested enough in us to decide the question for us.

Prayer with Christ meant spiritual communion with God. It was His custom to go apart and spend nights in prayer, alone with God. We cannot think that these hours in the silent night were given up to requests. The more precious of these hours of silent hours were spent in communion with God. He was a Son absent from His Father's house, and it needs no imagination to realize that He would frequently seek fellowship and communion with His Father. Our model our prayers be limited to petition. God is also our heavenly Father. Heaven is our home. We also are away from home and need to "speak oft with our Lord," with God, our Father. We are spirits as He is a Spirit, and we should rejoice in the possibility of fellowship with God and should hold communion with Him, as child with parent, as friend with friend, as created beings with their Creator.

Every phase of prayer is illustrated in Christ's life of prayer. He addressed God reverently as His Father. He prayed in secret and in public. He prayed amid the duties and cares of everyday life, and in the great crises of His life He spent hours in prayer. As He prayed let us pray, and we will make no mistakes in our praying, and God will hear us.

More Young Men.

Secretary Chaplin of the British Christian Endeavor union recently took a census of 3,000 societies and discovered that 40 per cent of the members were young men—"a far greater percentage of male members," he asserts, "than the churches would show."

A Seed Bed.

"The seed bed of the church is Junior Christian Endeavor," said the Rev. Mr. Wynkoop in the Christian Endeavor conference at Landour, India.

Endeavor.

"Endeavor" is the watchword of the present age; it will be increasingly the watchword of the new.

O Christ, I will endeavor
To serve Thee every day!
Help me to make Thee ever
My Life, my Truth, my Way.

Strive, endeavor, it profits money
To fight and fall than on Time's dull shore
To sit and idle ever.
For to him who bares his arm to the strife
Firm at his post in the battle of life
The victory falleth never!
Therefore in faith abide.
* * * * * *
Abide thou and endeavor.

"Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I promise Him that I will strive to do whatever He would like to have me do * * * and that throughout the whole life I will endeavor, by His grace, to lead a Christian life."

O Jesus, I have promised
To serve Thee to the end;
Be Thou forever near me,
My Master and my Friend.
I shall not fear the battle
If Thou art by my side
Nor wander from the pathway
If Thou will be my guide.

July 22: "How Brethren Can Help Each Other: In the Christian Life. In Everyday Affairs."—Gal. vi, 10; I Cor. vi, 1-5; Lev. xxv, 25, 47-49; Acts iv, 32-37; xi, 27-30; Heb. x, 24; viii, 13-17; Jas. v, 16-18.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Unless people helped each other it would be impossible to live. That is stating the fact very strongly, but, not more so than is warranted by the facts.

Did you ever watch sitting at the dinner table of a family? The commissary department of the commissariat army had worked to put that food on the table for you? Try it sometimes. Leave out no one. Begin with the dishes. Do not stop with waiters who placed them, but trace back through all salesmen and transportation to the workmen who shaped and decorated them. Include in your estimate all laborers who tended cattle, raised vegetables, grew tea and coffee, made vessels and railroads, and you have a task taxing the most active imagination. Yet all this is sober fact. All these and multitudes you do not count have worked to put that dinner on your plate. Complicated indeed is this civilized life.

Apply the test to the Christian life, and the lesson is not less emphatic and impressive.

Begin with the Bible. How many have worked and died to bring that precious volume to you? Scan what Christian literature you know, and how the field enlarges! Enter the church and in the service which gives you comfort and uplifts consider how many have labored to make it possible —what architects, builders, decorators, musicians and fellow worshipers as well as preachers!

Surely we have had many helpers!

What can we do to help others?

Much in every way by simple fidelity in everyday duty. Whatever your position in life, let it be your part to put it in the very best possible manner and it will hold the world together. Neglect the duty and however insignificant it may have seemed, something—many things—will suffer.

Beyond this, a cheerful heart and sunny face and joyous tongue. Be sunny inside and let it shine out. Better this than vain efforts to be great and wise and powerful.

When you see a person in any need, whether of money, advice, counsel or cash, consider carefully his condition and yourself and see if you cannot help him. See how best to do it. It will take more than a sympathetic impulse.

Whatever else you give or fail to give you can and should give him a brother's interest. That is worth more than bank accounts or long moral dissertations. Have a heart and don't be afraid to show it. But don't spend all your strength in crying over the poor fellow. After awhile tears become wearisome. Have some grit, some grip to the hand and help pull him out of the hole into which he has fallen. But more than all, help him to help himself. Use some brain power about it. An ounce of muscle backed by a pound of brain is better than a ton of muscle with an ounce of brain.

Love Above Liking.

"One of the most reassuring thoughts about life," said a man whose duties called him into association with all sorts of things and people, "is that you do not have to like the things and people you have to bring yourself in contact. Nowhere in all the tests applied in Scripture to Christian character do I find a word about liking or disliking people or work. Neither will you find yourself called upon to resent hatred, envy or spite. Love is of the charity which 'thinketh no evil,' is not easily provoked' and gains its dignity by ignoring rather than by resenting those seeming slights or abuses which in others are offenses or faults of manner that intentional injury."

Love is not liking. It may or it may not be associated with liking, but liking is of no particular consequence. Love is the thing of consequence, says Forward. And love is simply the will to serve men for the sake of God. Perhaps those who most need our love are those most uncongenial to us. It was so with Christ. The Pure One came into a world of sin and shame and uncleanness. He was love, not liking, that brought Him. Love brought Him where everything was most unlike Him. True character is not loving only. It is lofty. The petty things cannot reach it. It is not seeking its own, and the "little soul" of its own cannot destroy it. It asks nothing from others and is therefore unchanged when it receives nothing or receives unlovely return. It is such love as this that makes us free.

Giving to the Lord.

There is always the practical question of how much we should give. In order to be always assured against giving too much or too little, divide the setting aside of a proportion. Undoubtedly he would have said that one-tenth is quite little enough. And then we ought to cultivate loving hearts to tell us in the presence of need when still a larger share ought to be given. Let us place ourselves never to ignore evident need, no matter what our own circumstances are.—Nolan R. Best.

Sacrifice.

The road of progress is a road of pain
That's stained by blood of martyrs.
Through the heights
Beyond is crowned with glory infinite.
Around us are the corpses of the slain!
The bones of sacrifice are here and there.
The men who dared for the oppressed to fight,
Who stood for justice, liberty and right,
The God led rebels against custom's reign.
And yet the armies led by Mammon's might
Before the hosts of Truth are swept away.
Above the shadows of the human night
The dawn of ages now is growing gray.
The earth sweeps on into the sweeter light.
The glory of the long expected day.

ARE YOU A BUTTERFLY?

He wishes good value for every dollar expended and finds that by incessant labor he can only command a small salary.

He marries a girl as poor as Job's turkey, but blessed with the grit of New England thrift, even if they do no more than respect each other and love is not thought of, he and she may be happy.

But if he marries for love and the one he loves and who loves him is a shop-hunter and a bargain-hayer, and a general spendthrift, the time will come when love will seek other lodgings.

That is, if one speaks dogmatically.

As a matter of fact there are foolish, spendthrift wives who have nose-to-the grandstone husbands who are glad to wear their noses to the bone if oly their wives are happy and well dressed and get keen enjoyment from their shopping.

But to speak only to you who need the advice:

If you husband is a hard-working, poorly-paid man, why not try to ease his burdens by seeking your pleasures in other places than the shops!

An English observer and humorist now travelling in this country says that what strikes him is the mad desire of American city women for mere pleasure, their lack of a sense of responsibility.

To be sure, he has only seen a fraction of the women, but it is probable that he met you, my dear wife, when one of your purse-empty shopping expeditions. And he saw your poor, faithful husband playing the tired ant to your butterfly.

Try being an ant.

The Power of Flattery.

"Really, Jane," said Mrs. Simperton to her maid, who was not considered as being over-willing desire to work hard, "you are the laziest girl I ever knew. You can't even do what you're told. I don't think you have one redeeming quality. You must leave me the first of next month." "Yes, ma'am," said Jane, who knew that her mistress was not proof against flattery, "how can I do me work when I 'ear you a-singing and a-playin' on the piano that beautiful that 'I simply can't 'elp stoppin' to listen to you? It isn't my fault that I love good music!" "That will do, Jane! You may stay!" —Stray Stories.

TAX RATE MAY BE $1.35

The Total Valuations Will be About $19,000,000, an Increase of $600,000.

JERSEY CENTRAL KICKS

Objects to Assessment On North Avenue and Netherwood Stations

—North Plainfield Hard Hit.

The Plainfield Board of Assessors is busy these days completing its work of assessing real and personal property and meeting with dissatisfied taxpayers. The new law gives the assessors much additional work and as they are obliged to make their returns within a specified time, they say it is a case of hustle all the time.

While it cannot be definitely stated now what Plainfield's tax rate will be for the coming year, as near as one can ascertain it is likely to be about $1.35 per hundred valuation. There has been an impression that it would be between $1.25 and $1.28, but inasmuch as the county has an increase of $45,000 to meet because of new bonds and other increased expenditures, including a new court, it is hardly probable that the rate will be as low as $1.28.

Plainfield's increased valuation will be approximately $600,000, the total being about $19,999,000. While there is no complaint noticed on the part of taxpayers, there is the usual percentage to be considered. The New Jersey Central, through its representatives, has been protesting against the assessment levied on its property in this city and, although their claims growing out of the alleged cloud upon the State's title, awaits claimants at the State Treasury.

"Third.—There is no sound basis for a legal claim against the State of New Jersey growing out of the alleged donation or conditional grant of lands by Joseph Brittain for the purposes of a State Capitol.

"Fourth.—There is no sound basis for a legal claim against the State of New Jersey under the statutes of 1824 and 1872, the amounts appropriated by the statutes having been paid in full to the beneficiaries thereunder."

The researches made by Counselor Hartpence disclosed that Joseph Brittain sold three of his lots fronting on West State street, running west from Delaware street, to private parties for $100. Then it was that in January 19, 1792, Joseph Brittain and his wife, Susannah Brittain, donated to the State of New Jersey grounds in the rear of these lots for the sum of one shilling, sixteen acres in all, deed to the State forever. This land was worthless to the State, for it was on the river front and needed filling very badly.

As the land was utterly worthless without the controlling land on West State street, then known as "the road from Market House to Beatty's Ferry," the State on February 4, 1792, took title from Joseph Brittain and his wife, Susannah Brittain, for the property immediately adjoining the three lots first deeded to private parties fronting on what is now West State street for a consideration of fifty-seven pounds ten shillings. This is an absolute grant in fee simple, by warranty deed, as disclosed by the deeds on file in the Hunterdon County Court House.

Reciting the deeds to the State as given above, the Counselor says: "Britain received about $500 for the tract which now comprises the Capitol tract at the time the transactions occurred. This must have been a most adequate remuneration for the land. The transaction in its entirety, therefore, loses its romantic aspect, and from beginning to end has the appearance of a bargain in which the vendor received good value for the property disposed of. All possibility of a donation is dispelled by the deeds themselves, which show the grants to have been in each instance for valuable considerations. The grants were also in fee and without condition."

TRADITION DISPELLED ABOUT JERSEY'S CAPITOL

LAND ON WHICH IT STANDS DOESN'T REVERT TO THE BRITTAIN HEIRS.

Trenton, July 17.—For many years it has been generally understood here that if at any time the State should cease to use the grounds on which the State House stands, the land would revert to the heirs of the late Joseph Brittain. It has always been supposed that he gave the site for the building to the city.

John A. Hartpence, a lawyer of this city, was retained some time ago by the living heirs of Joseph Brittain, Miss Emma M. Brittain, of Butler, Penn., his great-great-great granddaughter, and John Brittain, of Allegheny City, and J. F. Brittain, of Maryville, Tenn., her brothers. The heirs desired to know if there was any title residing in them, so that they might ask the Legislature's permission to sue the State and test its claims to the grounds. After a careful search of all the records, Mr. Hartpence has rendered the following opinion to his clients:

"First.—There is no foundation for the tradition that the land upon which the Capitol stands would revert to Joseph Brittain or his heirs in case it should cease to be used for any purpose than that originally intended, either upon the ground of a donation or conditional grant.

"Second.—There is no foundation for the tradition that a fund appropriated by the State of New Jersey for the benefit of the heirs of Joseph Brittain, or for their use, their claims growing out of the alleged cloud upon the State's title, awaits claimants at the State Treasury.

"Third.—There is no sound basis for a legal claim against the State of New Jersey growing out of the alleged donation or conditional grant of lands by Joseph Brittain for the purposes of a State Capitol.

"Fourth.—There is no sound basis for a legal claim against the State of New Jersey under the statutes of 1824 and 1872, the amounts appropriated by the statutes having been paid in full to the beneficiaries thereunder."

STILGER HELD FOR TRIAL

But Only After He Had a Good Opportunity to Make His Escape.

BAIL FIXED AT $500

Borough Justice Very Much at Sea As To What Prerogatives His Office Carries.

But for the fact that Charles Stilger is a very obliging young man and not inclined to take to his heels when he knows that a charge of burglary is staring him in the face, he might have escaped the clutches of the law, yesterday. In fact, he was absolutely free for the space of a few hours and it was not until late Monday night and that the man who had caught him in the attempt of robbing his home succeeded in having him locked up.

It was on Monday's Daily Press, Stilger lives at Dunellen and broke into the home of Louis Frederickson, situated just back of Washington Rock, while the family was absent, Sunday afternoon. Frederickson returned just in time to catch the intruder as he was packing up all the valuable in sight and marched him at the point of a revolver to Constable Sorenson's house. The latter took charge of Stilger and placed him in the North Plainfield jail for safe-keeping.

At the request of friends, Justice of the Peace Thomas Snape gave the prisoner an immediate hearing and though it is not within his jurisdiction admitted him to bail. A further hearing was held over Stilger's head Monday afternoon and at that time Stilger reappeared with his counsel, John P. Owens. The lawyer asked if there was any written complaint and on receiving a reply in the negative, he demanded the discharge of his client. Justice Snape very graciously complied and the defendant was sent out a free man, despite the protests of the man whose house he had entered.

Frederickson hurried to the office of Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and informing him of the facts, was advised to procure a warrant without further delay. This he did and it was given to Constable Sorenson to serve. Stilger was quickly found at his home and was promptly brought back to North Plainfield and once more placed in a cell. Another hearing was set for 8 Monday night, the prisoner, Lawyers Owens and Hetfield and a large gathering of witnesses and friends being on hand.

Frederickson and his wife testified as to what had happened and the details were not denied by Stilger. The specific charge against him was breaking and entering with intent to steal. His lawyer tried to show that the prisoner was mentally unbalanced but was checked in his attempt by the declaration from Lawyer Hetfield that Justice Snape's decision was not the place to prove it. When the presiding official was finally convinced that the prisoner was accused of a serious offense he stated that he would hold him.

This led to another plea from Lawyer Owens that bail should be fixed and the matter was threshed all over again. Hetfield contended that Snape could not fix bail but before the justice would admit that it wasn't his privilege he had Chief Weiss call Borough Counsel Charles W. Reed on the 'phone. The latter said "no bail" and so at last Stilger was formally committed.

Early Tuesday, the prisoner's mother consulted the county authorities and Judge Schenck fixed bail at $500. The amount was furnished and the case now rests until the next session of the Somerset Grand Jury.

"EV'RY LITTLE BIT HELPS."

"Clover Club Presents Miss Curry With Sum as Result of Fair.

"The Clover Club," an organization made up of ten boys and girls of the West End, has fallen in line with others which have given fetes to raise money to help Miss Sara Curry in the work she is carrying on among Manhattan's poor at her nursery in New York city and at the Netherwood Camp. Russell Cratsley, the club treasurer, turned over $11.76 as the net result of a lawn fair and party held at the home of John D. McAleer, of West Third street, Saturday afternoon and evening. The affair was worked up entirely by the club, of which Richard Scott is President and Fred McAleer, vice president, and Joseph Pennington, secretary. Tents decorated with bunting and were erected on the lawns and the little people gathered up the stray pennies of the neighborhood for the good work. The entire club was present at the services at the camp yesterday afternoon.

Those in charge of the various booths at the fair were: Miriam Emery, Bessie McAleer and Madeline Pennington, in the ice cream tent; Bessie Gunselman and John S. McAleer, at the cake and candy table; Fred McAleer and Joseph Pennington, at the lemonade and root beer tent; and Theodore Martin and Richard Scott at the moving picture tent, where a stereopticon was worked in the evening. Russell Cratsley and Louis Nelson were in charge of "Happy Hooligan," Mike's baseball shooting gallery. Benjamin Wainwright acted as sergeant-at-arms for the club affair.

HAVE NOT WITHDRAWN FROM THE "NEW IDEA"

MESSRS. TITSWORTH AND BARROWS SAY THEY ARE STILL COLBYITES.

Reports to the effect that David E. Titsworth and E. T. Barrows, both of the Third ward, had withdrawn from the "new idea" movement were emphatically denied by them last night. How the story started neither one professes to know, but they both dismiss the subject with an unequivocal denial.

Mr. Barrows, who has been mentioned as a candidate for mayor, told a Daily Press man last night that he is a Colbyite so far as the county and State are concerned but does not believe there is any need of a "new idea" in Plainfield's government. He has resigned from membership on the executive committee for reasons not stated other than he does not care to serve as he puts it.

Mr. Titsworth was much surprised to hear of the report that he had deserted the movement and stigmatized it as ridiculous. "I withdrew as chairman of the Third ward committee," he said, "because I have not got the time to devote to the work. I have no intention of leaving the Colbyite movement and cannot understand how such a story originated."

STREET DEPARTMENT TOP SURFACING ROADS.

Needed Repairs Being Made to City Streets and New Work Completed at Netherwood.

During the past week, the street department has been busy with several gangs of men at work resurfacing and maintaining some of the streets which most needed putting in condition. The work on Park avenue, between North, the railroad bridge and Second street, where the roadway is being widened, is at a temporary standstill, owing to the fact that the sidewalk in front of the McLoughlin property is not yet completed. There are also several electric light and 'phone poles to be moved back along this stretch before the work can be completed. The South avenue hill at Netherwood has been resurfaced and the roadway is now in first class condition. This is a stretch that is hard to keep in good condition, because it is constantly being washed out and the surfacing destroyed by the heavy rains.

At Marion avenue, several loads of slag from the sewage deposit plant are being put on the roadway and with this top-surfacing, the thoroughfare will soon be in first-class condition. The work of remaking the gutter on East Front street between Park avenue and Watchung avenue is now completed and storm sewer connections have been made.

MONROE AVE. CONGREGATION MAY ENLARGE EDIFICE.

Congregation Becoming Too Large for Present Seating Capacity.

Ever since Rev. E. E. Roberson became pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, the congregation has steadily increased to such an extent that if it continues at the present rate it will be necessary to enlarge the church edifice in order to provide for a greater seating capacity. This matter has been under consideration by the official board and steps toward building an addition may be decided upon before long.

Even during the summer season there does not appear to be any decrease in the number of people attending the regular services and this is taken to be an indication that during the fall and winter months the present building will not comfortably seat all wishing to attend. The church has sufficient ground to make any addition it desires and it is estimated that such an improvement would not cost a great deal. Owing to the way in which the church was founded and in accordance with certain bequests, it is impossible to mortgage the property, but if it is necessary there would be sufficient funds to build an addition.

Progressing With New Bridge.

The large and heavy frame work for the new West End avenue bridge is about in position and next week the workmen will begin to fill in with concrete. The height of the structure will necessitate to raising of the grade of West End avenue on both sides of the brook. Hundreds of yards of trees will be placed over the wooden frame work before the concrete is used and after this material sets, the wood will be removed. It being expected that the wires and concrete will be strong enough with no place to stand the heaviest weight or the biggest freshet that might put it to a test.

Funeral of William Reed.

The funeral of William Reed was held at his late home on Liberty street, yesterday afternoon. He was in charge of Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, of which he had been a member for four years, and was attended by a gathering of relatives and friends. The body was afterward taken to South Branch, where a further service was held in the Reformed church there. The interment was at South Branch.

P. P. A. OFFERS NO HOPE

Mr. Depew Says No Action Will Be Taken on Ice Question Until September.

MR. HOOLEY ACTIVE

Banker Places Matter In Hands of His Lawyers and Expects Results In a Short Time.

It has developed that there is no hope that the Plainfield Protective Association will bring about any reduction in the price of ice for this season at least, and if there is any satisfactory change in the immediate future it will be due solely to the efforts of Edwin S. Hooley, who is working out the problem on his own hook. The P. P. A.'s committee having the ice matter in charge will hold no more meetings until September, that announcement being made to a representative of The Daily Press by President R. Henry Depew last night.

Mr. Hooley's interest has not subsided in the least since he first interested himself in the question whether there is ice trust in this city and he intends "to fight it out on that line if it takes all summer." He has nothing to say at present intimating that work not talk counts. It was stated by him, however, that the matter is now in the hands of his lawyers and that he expects to have some definite report in a few days to lay before County Prosecutor English. The purpose is to have prosecutions brought against the ice dealers provided it can be shown that there was a conspiracy or a combination to restrain trade.

It was said by Mr. Depew that he intended to leave town for the remainder of the summer season on Friday and that the other members of the P. P. A.'s committee would also be away a good part of the time until September. He stated that they had received the letter from the Ice Dealers' Association and that the matter would be fully considered by them before the meeting in September.

Mr. Depew explained the P. P. A. committee's reasons for the suggestion that the price of ice be reduced to the small consumer ten cents a hundred and to the butchers and other large customers be increased ten cents a hundred. He said that during the past few years there had been very little increase in the price for large quantities but that the small buyer had been pinched time and again. In summing the price fact, large orders of butchers as stated would only increase the price of meat about one-tenth of a cent he declared, and they would not be warranted in raising prices in their business while at the same time the reduction to the small consumer of ice meant much.

PAINFULLY BURNED BY GASOLINE EXPLOSION

WILLIAM G. DEBELE MOMENTARILY ENVELOPED IN FLAME.

While attempting to repair some trouble with the gasoline engine used to run the ice cream freezers at Debele & Stahl's ice cream place, on Somerset street, early Tuesday morning, William G. Debele painfully burned about the face and eyes by the blowing out of a cylinder. The engine is of the type in which a small cilnder at the top is heated by a gas flame.

Debele was making cream this morning and was in the basement with his son Howard. The boy noticed that the gas flame was unsteady and that there seemed to be something clogging the tube. He called his father and the latter, after scarcely made a dozen revolutions after the draw was closed, when the rocker-arm pin snapped in two. The engineer and fireman tried everyway to repair the damage until they could reach Elizabethport, but were unsuccessful. Finally, another passenger train in the rear pushed the disabled one to the Port, where it was held until another engine arrived from Jersey City. Had the accident happened while the train was under full speed the results might have been disastrous. George Van Natrick was conductor of the train.

WALTER WARNOCK DEAD.

Former Plainfielder Passes Away at Englewood After Long Illness.

Walter Warnock, a former local resident and brother of W. W. Warnock, the West Front street caterer, died Monday at his home in Englewood, following a long illness from Bright's disease. He was the son of the late Alexander and Lagra Warnock and was widely known in this vicinity. He went from Plainfield to New York, and later to Englewood where he conducted a thriving business. He was thirty-four years old and leaves a widow and two children. Beside W. W. Warnock there is one other brother, Harry, in the Philippines, and three sisters, one of whom is Mrs. Margaret Wilson, of Grove street.

Repair Excursion Successful.

The annual excursion of the First Baptist church and Faith chapel last week was successful financially. There was no deficit and what was still better the receipts exceeded the expenses, leaving a little balance.

DUSTLESS PAVEMENT TO BE TRIED HERE

TARBIA, A SPECIAL PREPARATION, TO BE TRIED ON EAST FRONT STREET.

A new sort of pavement, which has been used most successfully in Montclair, is to be tried in this city by the "new idea" movement were emphatically denied by them last night. How the story started neither one professes to know, but they both dismiss the subject with an unequivocal denial.

Mr. Barrows, who has been mentioned as a candidate for mayor, told a Daily Press man last night that he is a Colbyite so far as the county and State are concerned but does not believe there is any need of a "new idea" in Plainfield's government. He has resigned from membership on the executive committee for reasons not stated other than he does not care to serve as he puts it.

Mr. Titsworth was much surprised to hear of the report that he had deserted the movement and stigmatized it as ridiculous. "I withdrew as chairman of the Third ward committee," he said, "because I have not got the time to devote to the work. I have no intention of leaving the Colbyite movement and cannot understand how such a story originated."

STREET DEPARTMENT TOP SURFACING ROADS.

Needed Repairs Being Made to City Streets and New Work Completed at Netherwood.

During the past week, the street department has been busy with several gangs of men at work resurfacing and maintaining some of the streets which most needed putting in condition. The work on Park avenue, between North, the railroad bridge and Second street, where the roadway is being widened, is at a temporary standstill, owing to the fact that the sidewalk in front of the McLoughlin property is not yet completed. There are also several electric light and 'phone poles to be moved back along this stretch before the work can be completed. The South avenue hill at Netherwood has been resurfaced and the roadway is now in first class condition. This is a stretch that is hard to keep in good condition, because it is constantly being washed out and the surfacing destroyed by the heavy rains.

At Marion avenue, several loads of slag from the sewage deposit plant are being put on the roadway and with this top-surfacing, the thoroughfare will soon be in first-class condition. The work of remaking the gutter on East Front street between Park avenue and Watchung avenue is now completed and storm sewer connections have been made.

MONROE AVE. CONGREGATION MAY ENLARGE EDIFICE.

Congregation Becoming Too Large for Present Seating Capacity.

Ever since Rev. E. E. Roberson became pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, the congregation has steadily increased to such an extent that if it continues at the present rate it will be necessary to enlarge the church edifice in order to provide for a greater seating capacity. This matter has been under consideration by the official board and steps toward building an addition may be decided upon before long.

Even during the summer season there does not appear to be any decrease in the number of people attending the regular services and this is taken to be an indication that during the fall and winter months the present building will not comfortably seat all wishing to attend. The church has sufficient ground to make any addition it desires and it is estimated that such an improvement would not cost a great deal. Owing to the way in which the church was founded and in accordance with certain bequests, it is impossible to mortgage the property, but if it is necessary there would be sufficient funds to build an addition.

Progressing With New Bridge.

The large and heavy frame work for the new West End avenue bridge is about in position and next week the workmen will begin to fill in with concrete. The height of the structure will necessitate to raising of the grade of West End avenue on both sides of the brook. Hundreds of yards of trees will be placed over the wooden frame work before the concrete is used and after this material sets, the wood will be removed. It being expected that the wires and concrete will be strong enough with no place to stand the heaviest weight or the biggest freshet that might put it to a test.

Funeral of William Reed.

The funeral of William Reed was held at his late home on Liberty street, yesterday afternoon. He was in charge of Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, of which he had been a member for four years, and was attended by a gathering of relatives and friends. The body was afterward taken to South Branch, where a further service was held in the Reformed church there. The interment was at South Branch.

COUNTRY CLUB CHANGES

Plans Being Made to Keep Club House Open All the Year Round.

A DECISION SOON.

Westfield Golf Club to Have An 18-Hole Course—Its Phenomenal Growth.

The success of the Plainfield Country Club has been so marked that many that plans are now underway to make it an all-year-round club. With this purpose in view, the officers are now preparing to install a steam plant and a Sicks' gas plant at the club and other improvements that will make the clubhouse an ideal place for winter entertainments and social functions. During the past year the clubhouse was greatly enlarged and all improvements were installed including sleeping quarters and the club now compares favorably with any other in the Metropolitan district.

Among the notable improvements was that of enlarging the dining room whereby private dinner parties can be given. Under the direction of David Shay, the clerk at the club, there has been a decided improvement in the management. This season there have been a great many dinner parties at the club, followed by dances, and the demand for the clubhouse in this respect has impressed the officers to such an extent that it has practically been decided to put in the steam heat as well as a plant for the lighting at first. This work can be done during the summer so that instead of closing the clubhouse in the fall it can be kept open for social affairs, and can also be used by players who desire to use the course late into the fall.

The matter will be decided upon within a short time, and if it is considered advisable, work will be started at once on the improvements. The game of golf has had a big boom in this section this year and it is predicted that it will be by far the most successful since it was introduced here.

During the past season and this year the Westfield Golf Club has been a success for a plan to have it been completed for extensive improvements on the course and at the clubhouse. The plans call for an eighteen hole course instead of nine as at present, and the clubhouse will be enlarged and remodeled more after the style of a country club, with sleeping quarters and all other improvements. The membership of the club has grown so during the past year that the officers of the club feel warranted in going ahead. No doubt this phenomenal growth is largely due to the fact that Sunday golf is permitted on the course and many New York and Brooklyn golfers, as well as a number from this city, take advantage of this, inasmuch there is no other course nearer than Baltusrol that allows Sunday play.

There is a very great tract of land adjoining the present nine-hole course and it would make a fine eighteen hole links for the club. This ground can be purchased and there are a dozen members of the club who stand willing to put up the money to purchase it and put it in fine condition. Of course a mortgage would be put on the property and the club would be expected to take care of that until such time as it could pay it off. The matter has not officially been announced as yet, but there is every reason to believe that the land will be bought and the course extended, plans for remodelling the clubhouse are also underway. The course is right on the main line of the trolley and very easy of access. It is quite possible that when the clubhouse is enlarged and improved it may be made an all-year-round club.

PROMINENT NEW MARKET RESIDENT BADLY HURT.

Charles F. Dayton Rendered Unconscious for Several Hours by Fall from Wheel.

Charles F. Dayton, one of the most prominent residents of New Market and that end of Piscataway township, was nearly killed in a bicycle accident in the village Monday night. While riding a wheel on Prospect avenue near the cross-over bridge of the Lehigh Valley railroad, a bump in the road bounced him in the air and he pitched down an embankment.

He landed squarely on his head and when picked up by people who saw him fall, was unconscious. He was taken home and despite the prompt arrival of physicians he failed to regain his senses until late last night. He was resting easily today but is still in a serious condition.

Poor Trolley Sprinkling.

Residents on West Front street have had cause to complain lately of the poor work of the trolley sprinkler. The sprinkling car occasionally forgets to make a trip over the line and when it does the amount of water put on the street is so small that it dries off quickly and the cars stir up the dust to the inconvenience of people who desire to sit on their porches.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

CLASS DAY EXERCISES

Graduating Class of City High School Held Final Class Festivities Last Night.

A CLEVER PROGRAMME

Topical Songs, Take-Offs on the Class and Entertainment by "The Fays."

With the receiving of diplomas of graduation tomorrow evening, the senior class of the City High School will become alumni. The final festivities and jollification of the class of 1906 took place at the High School last evening at the annual class day exercises. Originality marked the entire programme of the evening, which was worked up by a committee of the class officers. The first number was a song by the class to the tune of the hymn "There is a Happy Land." This was sung by the entire class, forty-seven members, seated on the platform. Each member of the class had a pair of light wings attached to the shoulders and sang the song, the words of which were by Miss Elizabeth Winter, with hands folded as in prayer. The members of the class wore broad belts of the class colors.

Following this was a well worked up burlesque on the Fays. "Mr. Fay," Stewart Freeman, the class president, lead "Mrs. Fay." Miss Louise Klein, up on the platform, and put her in a mesmeric trance before the audience. In this condition, the members of the class "concentrated their minds" on some question and "Mrs. Fay" answered these questions in a way that developed many local hits on the members of the class.

Following this was a song to the tune of "Robinson Crusoe" from "Moonshine." The words of this were by Miss Elizabeth Winter. Malcolm Davis sang the verses and the class joined in the chorus. Class statistics were next in order, and "prize ribbons" were awarded by Stewart Freeman to "superlative" members of the class. Ribbons were awarded to the boy and the girl who had done most for the High School, for the class, to the "superlative" athletics, to the handsomest, the brainiest—then the "heaviest," the biggest "faculty rushers," "fussers," "butterflies," and "flames."

"Give Our Regards to the High School"—to the air of "Give My Regards to Broadway," proved a clever success as written by Miss Gertrude Hunter. This was a song by the class—a farewell to the school from the senior class.

Miss Gertrude Hunter read the class history—Summing up the achievements of 1906 during their school career. The programme was interrupted by the arrival of His Satanic Majesty Satan, who forcasted the fate and treatment of the members of the class in the hereafter. This was full of local hits on the class.

After Miss Elizabeth Winter had read the class poem, composed by her for the occasion, the class sang their farewell to the school in song, the concluding lines of which were: "Where oh where are the grave old Safe now in the wide wide world." Informal dancing concluded the evening's entertainment.

SINGING SECTION HONORED.

Reception Tendered Prize Winners by the Gesang Turn Verein.

The Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein tendered a reception to the Singing Section, last night, in honor of its capturing a silver trophy in the recent contest at Union Hill. There was a large attendance and the singers were cheered and applauded repeatedly. Supper was served and in the social intermissions addresses were made by Henry Haurand, president of the Singing Section; Herman Eichorn, its leader, and August Wolf. The Section sang the selections that won prizes for it at Union Hill and Trenton.

The tables in the supper hall were tastefully decorated with flowers gathered and arranged by Rudolph Spiegel.

The committee which had charge of the reception consisted of August Wolf, Ernest Seiller and Paul Nachtway.

Miss Laura Runyon Honored.

Miss Laura L. Runyon, professor of history in the Missouri State Normal School at Warrensburg, Mo., formerly of this city, recently received the degree of master of philosophy at the University of Chicago and sails June 20 on the Potsdam for Europe.

Mrs. James Clark, of West Seventh street, left today for Wequeposing, Mich., where she has a cottage. She will spend the summer there, going later to St. Louis, where she will make her home.

PEARCE GETS A LICENSE

Divinity Student's Belief is Sound Enough For Elizabeth Presbytery.

TO BE A MISSIONARY

Had Denied the Immaculate Conception, But Is Said to Have Modified His Views.

Rev. Henry Arthur Pearce, of Essex street, was licensed to preach by the Elizabeth Presbytery at its quarterly meeting held in the Presbyterian church, Connecticut Farms, yesterday. Owing to views out of harmony with the Presbyterian church, Mr. Pearce failed to secure a license at the meeting of the Presbytery held in Elizabeth a number of weeks ago, and his examination was laid over until yesterday. One of the Plainfield delegates who attended the meeting says that everything was harmonious, that Mr. Pearce's views conformed to the doctrine of the church sufficiently to warrant the granting of a license. So far as is known now Mr. Pearce will take charge of a mission station in the mountains of North Carolina. He was given until July 1 to accept or decline the call, and it is the belief that he will accept. He will be married on Thursday, June 28, to Miss Viola Walker, of Schenectady, N. Y., and will likely go South soon afterwards.

Mr. Pearce was graduated from Union College in the Class of '03 and from Union Seminary in the Class of '06. Several weeks ago he appeared before the Elizabeth Presbytery for examination and for the purpose of securing a license to preach. At that time, it is said, he gave the Presbytery a great surprise by stating among other things that he did not believe that Christ was born of the Virgin Mary. It was also said that he expressed other views which were greatly at variance with the creed of the Presbyterian church. It seemed impossible at the time for the Presbytery to harmonize the candidate's views with those of the church and it was decided to lay the whole matter over until yesterday, in the hope that Mr. Pearce's ideas might change on the more essential points.

It is said that Mr. Pearce has not changed his mind as to the views he expressed at the meeting of the Presbytery in Elizabeth, at least the more important ones, but that they were modified sufficiently to meet the requirements of the Presbyterian church.

At the first examination Mr. Pearce said that his views were in harmony with the teachings at Union Seminary and this again surprised those in attendance, who could scarcely believe the young man's statements to be true.

Rev. William Stuchell, of Rahway, presided at the meeting, and Rev. Dr. Kerr, of Elizabeth, was the clerk. Those present from Plainfield were Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Rev. L. R. Howard, Rev. C. E. Herring, Rev. F. D. Tildon, Rev. Henry A Pearce and H. C. Squier.

WOMAN'S SUDDEN DEATH.

Stricken With Convulsions, Mrs. Irene Washington Dies.

Officer John Payne was patrolling his beat on West Second tsereet at 11 o'clock last night when a man rushed up to him and said a colored woman was dying on the sidewalk at Madison avenue. Hurrying to the spot he found Mrs. Irene Washington, of East Second street, in the last throes of convulsions. He called Dr. Martha Rose Stillman but the woman died before the physician arrived. She had evidently been stricken as she was on her way home.

Mrs. Washington was fifty years old and leaves one son, Edward Washington. She had been employed by Mrs. J. H. Truell for the past twenty years. The funeral will be held from her late home Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Halstead C. Compton, of West Front street, have de*cided to spend their summer* vacation at Orr's Island, Maine, and will leave for that place soon. Mr. and Mrs. Compton have received word of the safe arrival of their son, Alfred H. Compton in Nebraska. He will remain there for several weeks.

Strawberry Festival.

The strawberry and ice cream festival held at the Christian church last week, will be repeated tonight on the church grounds on Grove street. The proceeds will be used to buy paint and supplies for painting the church.

Sentence Day at Elizabeth.

Today was sentence day in the Union County Court, but aside from the case of Daniel Harvey, colored, charged with stealing a pair of shoes, there were no Plainfielders arraigned for sentence.

GRADUATED SEVENTY-FOUR

Annual Exercises of the Plainfield Grammar Schools Are Held Today.

Radford, James Richardson, Thomas E. Ricketts, Frances Rittenhouse, David W. Rogers, Josephine Romond, Howard J. Runyon Jr., Harold W. Schenck, Helen L. Smith, Caroline E. Somerset, Stephen M. Staats, Nettie G. Stillman, Ida May Tier, Lewis M. Timpson, Joyce S. Ulrich, Margaretie G. VanZandt, Harry VanZandt, Beulah M. VanWinkle, Josephine M. Walden, Geo. W. Walsh, Jeremiah Walsh, Elwood Weber, Florence Wilson.

Secures An Absolute Divorce.

Chancellor Magie has granted a decree of absolute divorce for Mrs. Albert Canfield, of this city, with the privilege of resuming her maiden name, Edith Hand. Mr. Canfield at the time of the marriage was a resident of Summit, but now lives in Newark. The appellant was represented by W. S. Angleman.

Preparing for Excursion.

Superintendent George E. Hall, of the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday-school, has appointed Joseph M. Hawkins, Henry F. Cuming, Frank Vail as an excursion committee. The school will go to Asbury Park some time in July. The exact date will be announced next week.

Alumni Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the Plainfield High School Alumni Association at the new high School, tonight. Several matters, including the adoption of bylaws, will come up. The graduating class has been invited to meet with the association.

To Exchange Pulpits.

Rev. Dr. Charles Wesley Parsons, of Grace M. E. church, and Rev. E. N. Crasto, of the Methodist church, Somerville, will exhange pulpits Sunday morning. Dr. Parsons and Mr. Crasto were classmates at Drew Theological Seminary in the Class of '74.

Miss Bruce, of Chicago, is visiting her cousin, Mrs. A. E. Force, of West Front street.

Miss Ada Stone, of New Milford, Conn., is visiting Miss Jessie Patterson, of West Front street.

PASTOR SAYS IT'S NO SIN TO BE WEALTHY

EVERYTHING IS ALL RIGHT IF USED RIGHTLY, SAYS MR. MAC MURRAY.

Rev. John MacMurray, pastor of Browne M. E. church, Jersey City, and former pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, in this city, preached an interesting sermon on Sunday night, entitled: "Is it a sin to be a millionaire?" He said that Christ mingled alike with the poor and the rich and made no distinction between classes. The pall-bearers at his funeral were two millionaires of Jerusalem and Jacob, Solomon and Joseph were what would be termed millionaires.

"It is not a sin to be a millionaire, though many millionaires are sinful," he said, "and it is not sinful in itself to own and acquire wealth. If a man has a right to own his own house, he has a right to own a larger territory. The right of possession is a divine right. If it is right to have five dollars in the bank, it is right to have a thousand or a million. We would not be justified in saying that it was a sin to be the rightful possessor of a million dollars, if that million were earned by one's ability. The sin lies only in the mode of its acquisition, or in the manner of its use. A man may acquire a million dollars honestly and in the sight of God or he may never possess more than five cents and yet acquire that dishonestly.

"Some men are so physically and mentally constituted that they have a capacity amounting almost to genius for the acquisition of wealth. The millionaire is very often the man who incessantly works while others dream, and saves, while others spend and these qualities are commendable.

"Use of wealth is sinful only when used to corrupt the electorate, to unduly influence legislation and when it makes men reckless of their misdoings."

HORSE CASE ENDED.

Fritz Myers Wins In Action Brought by John J. Coryell.

The case of James J. Coryell against Fritz Myers, of this city, was tried Monday and yesterday in the County Court at Somerville, and resulted in an almost immediate verdict in favor of the defendant. The cause of action arose out of a horse deal. The plaintiff claimed that he had purchased a team of horses of the defendant and had paid a part of the purchase money, the balance to be paid when the horses went to the second horse which was to held one month by the defendant; that he went within the time with the balance of the money and demanded the horse but that it had been sold by the defendant to another purchaser. His suit was brought to recover damages for the breach of the contract.

The defendant claimed that the plaintiff had purchased but one of the horses and that he was to have one month within which to purchase the second horse but that he did not put in his appearance with the price. There have been two trials of the cause and the court house at Somerville was visited on both days with interested spectators from the neighborhood in which the cause of action arose.

Myers was represented by Codington & Swackhamer, of this city, and Coryell by Horace Codington, of Somerville.

Miss Martin Graduated.

Miss Elizabeth Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace J. Martin, of Marion avenue, was graduated from the Madame Krause-Bolte Kindergarten Academy, Seventy-second street, New York, Monday, with unusually high honors. For merit in her work she was made valedictorian in a class of thirty-two and was also credited with exceptional proficiency in studies during the entire course. Classmates elected her president and she presided at their gatehrings in connection with the closing exercises. This was the first time in the history of the school that a public commencement was held, the graduation hitherto being conducted quietly. *Miss Martin will go to Point Pleas*ant soon and with a classmate organize a summer school in kindergarten work. In the fall she will assume an important position in teaching.

In Judge Swift's Place.

District Court Judge Newcorn sat on a jury case in Elizabeth this morning, in place of Judge Swift. The case was taken from the jury because it was discovered that an agreement that figured in the suit was made on Sunday.

Frank Weeks' Funeral.

The funeral of J. Frank Weeks, who died suddenly yesterday morning from an attack of apoplexy, will be held at his late home on Grand avenue tomorrow afternoon at 3:30. Interment will be made at DeRuyter, N. Y.

TUMULTUOUS APPLAUSE RESOUNDS THROUGH PLAINFIELD THEATRE AS COLBYITES DEAL SLEDGE HAMMER BLOWS AT POLITICAL CORRUPTION

PANDEMONIUM REIGNS AS RUNYON DECLARES HIMSELF A CANDIDATE FOR THE ASSEMBLY

A Wonderful Demonstration Lasting Five Minutes Follows Announcement.

In an atmosphere surcharged and throbbing with the New Idea, City Judge William N. Runyon announced his candidacy for the Assembly nomination on the reform platform at the Colbyite mass meeting in the theatre last night. The announcement was greeted with a tumult of applause that bordered on a frenzy of enthusiasm.

The announcement came as a surprise. It was understood that the Colby candidate for Assembly might be presented at the meeting, but no direct hint of the nomination or of the nominee was made until the Judge raised his standard on the platform. The declaration came as the enthusiasm aroused by ringing speeches by Corporation Counsel George L. Record and Senator Everett Colby was stirring in the breasts of the audience. It brought the emotions that had been quickened to climacteric pitch, and men and women in the seats all over the hall gave way to their feelings with*out restraint.*

For full five minutes after the Judge had made the formal statement of candidacy tumult reigned in the auditorium. A rattle of handclaps swelled to a roar of cheers, sustained and throaty; cheers that strong men give when something inside them seems to be tearing its way out through their throats. As the tumult died down, it welled again and yet again; gray-haired men cheering as lustily as the youngest men about them, until the cheerers gave way to weariness.

Judge Runyon was deeply affected by the tribute of trust and popularity. Trained as he is to public speaking, his composure gave way before the spontaneous display of feeling that greeted him. His voice shook with emotion as he continued his speech, and he was breathing deeply when he finished.

Chairman Henry L. Hall called Judge Runyon to the platform after Corporation Counsel Record's speech. In bringing him forward from a seat at the front of the auditorium, Mr. Hall described him as "a man at the acme of popularity; a man who knows his own mind; and a man to be trusted."

Full-throated cheers and thunders of applause greeted the Judge when he stepped to the front of the platform. The men who knew the announcement he was about to make foresaw then the tremendous acclaim that greeted it. Before and after that one great outburst, applause and cheers punctuated the speech at every opening the crowd could seize upon. A second sustained burst marked its close.

Judge Runyon's speech was as follows:

"In 1896 fresh from college and with the ideas and ideals that every young man should take some part in politics, I allied myself with the regular Republican organization and since that time have labored hard and long and faithfully, and such what success I leave others to say. All I maintain is that I have given it of my best. Tonight I stand unalterably opposed to the organization with which I have trained since the beginning.

"From time to time circumstances have arisen which have caused me to have suspicions as to whether everything was right. But it was not until indubitable proof was brought home to me that those in whom I had faith were not active in good faith that I withdrew. In so doing I proposed remaining outside of political life for the rest of my days. Within a few days, however, of that time, Senator Colby called upon me and after he had presented to me the condition of affairs in the State as told by him to you tonight, I felt that I should be doing much less than my duty did I not attempt in a small way to bring about a better condition of affairs.

"In pursuance of that resolution, not for the sake of the office, but because I honestly believe that I may in some measure help those who have labored for the accomplishment of the objects stated tonight, I announce myself a candidate for the regular Republican nomination for the office of Assemblyman from this district. And I propose to fight as hard as I know how to accomplish this end. I need the help, however, of every man who believes in righteousness and civic purity, and if you believe in me I solicit your support no matter whether your influence be great or small.

"Of course I expect undivided support of the Plainfield machine. On two separate and distinct occasions I have been proclaimed as their candidate for the office of State Senator and they have discoursed on my eminent fitness for the position. If they were really loyal to me in regard to so important an office as State Senator they must be doubly loyal now when I seek the mere office of Assemblyman. Do you think they will be for me? Decidedly not, and why? If there were in influences working behind the scenes? I know I could have their support, but under the present situation with orders coming from high sources I expect to be opposed by them solidly. If you believe in the principles of the Colbyites and believe that I will be faithful to my trust, I ask your support."

MINISTERS STIRRED BY REFORM MEETING

CLERICAL MEMBERS OF AUDIENCE APPLAUDED SPIRITEDLY.

Clerical opinion on the new idea in politics was well represented at the Colby mass meeting last night. Rev. Dr. Schenck, of the Reformed church; Rev. George Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church; and Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, of the Congregational church, were in the audience, and none was more interested or enthusiastic.

They listened with close attention to all the speakers, and every point scored by the reform orators received vigorous clasp from clerical hands. They joined in all the demonstrations of enthusiasm that marked the meeting.

The meeting had peculiar interest for Mr. Goodrich. He was a schoolmate of Mr. Record in early life in New England. He went onto the platform after the meeting to shake his hand for the first time since those days. Both were delighted over the meeting.

GOLD MEDAL TROUPE CELEBRATE SEASON'S CLOSE.

Management Tenders the Artists and Guests a Dinner at Maul's.

Members of Muir's Gold Medal minstrel troupe and guests to the number of twenty-five in all, were tendered a full course dinner at Maul's hotel in the Notch, last night, by the management, in celebration of the success of the past season. The menu was excellent and the blackface artists enjoyed it immensely. Following cigars and coffee the entire first part of the Gold Medal show was given just as it was presented at Scotch Plains, New Market and other stops on the Kerosene circuit with the exception that all the end men introduced a batch of new gags.

During the dinner, Manager B. C. Firstbrook responded to a call for a speech in which he announced that the company would reorganize in September and that in the winter of 1906-07 entirely new territory would be visited. New costumes have been ordered and special scenery will be carried, if the press agent can be relied upon.

Adjourned Owners' Garage Meeting.

An adjourned meeting of automobile owners interested in organizing an owners' garage will be held at the Casino tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. In addition to those who have already signified their approval of the plan, the committee extends an invitation to all automobile owners who are interested in the movement to be present at this meeting.

Assigned to Paterson.

Rev. Father John J. Butscher, of this city, who was ordained to the priesthood on June 9, was yesterday assigned by Bishop O'Connor as curate of St. John's church, Paterson. He will be one of the assistants of Rev. Dean McNulty and will assume his new duties Friday. The field is an important one and will call for Father Butscher's best work.

Colby, Record and Fagan Expound "The New Idea" Convincingly to Representative Throng.

ELECTRIFY AUDIENCE

Machinations of Republican Organization in New Jersey Laid Bare —250 Recruits Mustered In to Reform Ranks.

Citizens of all degrees, from wage-earners to men of wealth and high places, filled the Plainfield theatre last night to hear the apostles of the new idea in politics sound the clarion call to the voters of Plainfield. The mass meeting was a tremendous success. Enthusiasm marked it for its own from beginning to end.

It was the kind of audience that men with a message seek. Taken as a whole, it was beautifully complete as a representative of the best in every station of the Plainfield electorate. From the helper in the ma*chine shops up through the skilled* mechanics, small tradesmen and professional men to the wealthy commuters, the types were there. Even the old settler was in evidence. And they were all in earnest. One could almost imagine that he caught their echoing thoughts as the speakers told of the conditions that brought them to the fighting line and the battle that was to be fought. They showed the feelings that moved them in the tense interest they paid to everything that was said. Middle-aged men said it was the finest political meeting they had ever attended.

Women were in evidence among the audience. Their handclaps swelled the plaudits, and some of them were vigorous in giving expression to their enthusiasm as their escorts.

The meeting started promptly on time. The crowd was in the seats by eight o'clock and Chairman Henry L. Hall opened it a few minutes later. He made a most admirable chairman.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said in opening, "we are here for business, and we will get down to it at once. I will be brought Senator Ever*ett Colby forward* as the first speaker with the briefest of brief introductions. That was the nearest approach the chairman made to speechmaking during the evening. He introduced the other three speakers with Spartan brevity.

Senator Colby's companions in the trinity of Reform, Corporation Counsel George L. Record and Mayor Mark Fagan, of Jersey City, spoke after him. Mr. Record's speech was the pre-eminent one of the evening. Eloquent, logical, forceful and convincing, he worked on the audience and aroused them to a pitch that carried them beyond themselves. Judge Runyon's announcement of his candidacy for the Assembly nomination, which came after Mr. Record's speech, aroused the greatest show of feeling that marked the meeting, but that was a display of heart interest. Mr. Record scored the triumph of pure oratory. The man who started the story that George Record was not an interesting speaker was proven a liar last night.

There were some people at the meeting who interested the audience, in a way, almost as much as the men on the platform. Senator Ackerman was there, and so was Former Senator Charles A. Reed, and Mayor Smalley, and Charles J. Fisk, who is chairman of the Republican City Committee, Tax Commissioner F. H. Andrews, and Tax Commission Clerk Thomas Hanks, and George Weaver, who is assistant city clerk and stenographer to City Clerk Mac-Murray. James E. Martine was there, frankly delighted with the re*sounding whacks administered to* party corruptionists. He jumped up on the platform after the meeting and shook hands warmly with Record and Fagan.

Senator Colby had left earlier in the evening.

"It makes me feel good to see rascals of any stripe pilloried," said the former orator. "There is no city any needler for reform than this."

Senator Colby's speech was not extended, but it was crammed full of meat. He told the story of his awakening of how his eyes had been opened to the way in which the legislative machine worked, and fight

DIPLOMAS GIVEN IN PUBLIC AND PRIVATE SCHOOLS

Commencement Exercises at Scotch Plains, Dunellen High Schools and Leal's School.

SOME GOOD SPEECHES

Rev. Mr. Herring Addresses Plains Pupils—A. H. Clark at Dunellen—Lists of the Graduates.

Commencement exercises were held at John Leal's School Friday morning and at the Dunellen High School and the Scotch Plains high schools last night.

Leal's School.

The closing commencement exercises of John Leal's School for Boys' occurred Friday morning, when the pupils of the lower grades took part in a programme consisting of recitations and prize orations and awards were made for proficiency in studies. The exercises were, as usual, attended by a large number of parents and friends and the affair was a pleasing one for all.

The graduating class this year numbers nine young men, although there were fifteen in it one year ago. The others were obliged to give up school for various reasons. Those in the class of 1906 are John Valiant, president; Edward Browne, secretary; William T. Glenney, David Guttierez, Lawrence C. Stryker, Charles P. Lyman, Stanley E. Bates, Lawrence Smith and Charles Chapman. It is expected that a majority of the young men will continue their studies next year in colleges. Those who have decided to do so and have passed their examinations are Stanley E. Bates, Columbia; Charles P. Lyman, Lehigh, and Lawrence C. Stryker, Princeton.

Mr. Leal made a few remarks at the closing exercises and awarded the honors as follows:

English—Clifford A. Hall, Lyman Campbell, W. W. Wilson, T. M. Day, 3d, Thomas Foote, Donald B. Fullerton, A. F. Randolph, Otis Averill. History—Clifford A. Hall, L. G. Carman, Richard Depew, Lyman Campbell. German—Murray Townsend, A. F. Randolph, Russell Lawrence. Algebra—A. F. Randolph. Geometry —Stanley E. Bates. Arithmetic—Clifford A. Hall, W. W. Wilson. Cicero—A. F. Randolph. Elementary Latin—W. W. Wilson, Lyman Campbell, Thomas Foote, Clifford A. Hall, John Valiant. Prize in penmanship—Donald B. Fullerton.

During the exercises there were mandolin and violin selections by several pupils of the school.

Last night the Class of '06 placed its banner on the front of the school building and the members jealously guarded it. The junior class did not make any attempt to remove the banner.

Scotch Plains.

The annual commencement exercises of the Scotch Plains public school were held in the Baptist church, Thursday, it all probability being the last of the department to take place in the village. In the future all local pupils who desire to take the higher courses will become members of the Plainfield High School at the township's expense. The arrangements have been perfected by the Boards of Education and will go into effect at the close of the summer vacation.

Music by Suhr's imperial orchestra opened the programme, the church by that time being filled with graduates of the school, parents and friends. On the platform back of the prettily decorated pulpit were the members of the class of '06, Miss Elsa Mae Cooke, Miss Helen Augusta Southard, Miss Maud Octavia Mercier and George Joseph Brick. An immense flag covered the background, the combination of patriotic and floral colors and white graduation gowns forming a pretty picture.

Prayer was offered by Rev. T. Moore-Smith and the first essay of the evening was read by Miss Cook. It was entitled, "Book Friends" and told in an interesting way what an important part books play in the lives of young and old. In another essay George Joseph Brick related important facts in connection with "The United States Postal Service" and Miss Southard reviewed "The Mistakes of a Night" in a well written composition.

Rev. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian Church, delivered the following address:

Matthew Arnold, the English poet and essayist, said: "There is a power not ourselves that makes for righteousness." Someone commenting on that remark added: "It is the power not ourselves that makes for civilization and it is because we have learned to lay hold on that power that we have made progress in the world." From one point of view education is the discovery of self. From another point of view, education is the discovery of the power not ourselves.

Education reveals to us the world that is outside of ourselves. It tells us how we may grapple with that power, and make it subservient to our wills. Ajax of ancient story possessed such gigantic strength he could lift great masses of rock and hurl them at the enemy. But contrast that strength with the great lifting machines the Pennsylvania Railroad is using in New York in the construction of its great tunnel. Man without the strength of the great Ajax lays holds of the power not himself. These machines not only lift great rocks but seem to obey every will of the man in control. It demanded great muscular ability to wield an oar on a Roman galley. It is doubtful if we could find men with similar strength today.

In this sort of strength these men exceed us. But we have added another strength that they knew nothworked on the single word "specta." I said into the phonograph "specta, specia," but the instrument responded "pecia, pecia, pecia." It was enough to drive one mad, but I held firm and I have succeeded.

The power not ourselves most is always obstinate and refuses to obey. We are driven mad, but we must be so mad as to persist. The great Sir Isaac Newton said that the only point in which he was superior to others was in the power of concentrating his attention.

Concentrated attention, indomitable perseverance, eventually wins. In the Parables recorded in the fifteenth chapter of Luke, did you ever notice how the word "until" figures? The ing about, and we are to what they never could do with all their muscular ability. We have laid hold of the power not ourselves; the power of steam and we have so studied its laws and the best way to apply it, that we can drive a twenty-four thousand ton liner across the ocean in a week's time, and not become exhaust*ed with the effort either.*

In one of these liners it would take at least twenty strong men to manage the rudder if they had to do that with unaided strength. Yet one man performs this task and performs it with ease. He can steering gear exactly obeys his thought and will. Think of the soldier in the middle ages clad in the armor such as one finds in the armories of Europe, then add to this armor a sword or spear that men today find difficult even to lift. Think of the strength these men must have possessed, yet we know very well they would have stood no chance against the soldiers of today.

What is the difference? Simply this, that while our natural strength has not advanced beyond that of our ancestors, we have exceeded them in this that we have laid hold of the power not ourselves. The purpose of education, is this, then, to show us the power behind ever matter. Knowledge certainly is power. Power in the broadest meaning of that term.

Education, therefore, trains the mind to grapple with the power not ourselves. And we have grappled with it, and by it we command it to obey our wills. We have made gravitation, heat and electricity work for us.

There is a great hue and cry against the desecration of that great national wonder, Niagara Falls, and rightly so. The greed and graft of the age is so great that everything is being estimated in terms of dollars and cents. Yet men have told us of the great loss of power there is in preventing the Niagara cataract from simply a spectacle without making it work for us. Years ago, Tesla said he could light Chicago and New York with the power of Niagara.

There is an abundance of unused power in the world. Only when that God wills men should discover power to bless the world.

It was a conceit of the ancients that the Pillars of Hercules or the straits of Gibraltar marked the boundaries of the world and that there was practically no more beyond. And even in the days of Columbus men had a very limited view of the extent of things. But Columbus believed there was more beyond, and he had the courage to investigate.

Just before the Columbian Exhibition in Chicago in 1893, there was brought from Spain three vessels or caravels that were exact in size and shape to those Columbus and his fellows sailed when they sailed to discover India and found America instead.

So small were these vessels and so peculiar in structure that no sailors could be found to follow the example of Columbus and sail them across the Atlantic. Don't suppose the danger of such a voyage in such vessels troubled Columbus, so intent was he in his mission. It was a difficult task in every way for Columbus. But no difficulty deterred him, and he was rewarded.

The power that is not ourselves does not yield to the control of man at the very beginning. There is an instructive story in the life of Edison that preaches a great lesson of perseverance. He was telling a friend of the difficulty he experienced with the phonograph in his efforts to make it repeat an aspirated sound. He said from eighteen to twenty hours a day for the last seven months I have shepherd searches for his sheep until he finds it. The woman hunts for the lost coin until she finds it. The father waits for his son until he returns to his home. Every young man has opportunities for laying hold of the power that is not himself. That is what school is for—to train his mind to think and to observe. Did I say every young man? I mean it. I did not say young men of genius unless you define genius as the capacity for taking pains then I'll say young men and young women of genius, who possess the ability a friend said Sir Walter Raleigh possessed—"the ability to toil terribly." "A man reaps what he sows," someone has said. "Those who sow dunce seed, vice seed, laziness seed, usually get a crop. A man of mere capacity undeveloped is only an organized dab with the skin on it."

The discovery of that power not ourselves frequently comes through failure. There is nothing truer than the motto failure is the stepping stone to success. The chemist in his laboratory discovers that which he has been seeking but the experiment has not been entirely a failure. What he has considered a failure has really been a discovery. The failure has had a cause. Now his endeavor should be to discover the cause.

In Tom Brown's school days we are told how Tom obtained his skill in wrestling. Tom was not naturally a good wrestler, but he determined he would learn how. So beginning at the bottom of the ladder he worked his way to the top. A particular thrust or tip threw him on his back and he studied why? He failed to throw his antagonist but he never considered himself conquered. He thought about that fall "at his meals, when in his waking dreams," make in bed, in his dreams." Never did he say I will never try again. Young Disraeli was laughed at in the House of Commons when he made his first speech. Had he given up then we would never have known Disraeli, England's Prime Minister. When a man fails there is cause for it. It should be his endeavor to seek the cause.

I admire the young man that is not losing any valuable time but is seeking to gain more of the power outside of himself that is not already in his control. Most of us have time to do the things we really want to do. That sounds like an extravagant statement, but let us think of it awhile. Perhaps we shall discover that there is more in it that we will admit at the beginning.

A young man has no opportunity or money to attend a business school or college but he has his evenings and he at once joins a correspondence school and fits himself for something higher. He has ambition and he discovers the way to realize that ambition. He is not satisfied. He has no right to be satisfied. Let us be as Paul—contented—but also as Paul—not satisfied—who said, I count not myself yet to have laid hold of all God has planned for me, but I am reaching forth to lay hold. God has greater things for every one of us—mental possessions and spiritual possessions. Let us reach forth to lay hold of them.

He was followed by the class valedictorian, Miss Mercier, who gave an essay upon the "Wonders of Nature," mentioning her handiwork in America, The Niagara cataract, the Grand canon and also the beauties of the Old World. The exercises closed with the presentation of diplomas by Dr. F. W. Westcott, president of the Board of Education, and music by the orchestra.

According to the annual custom, a reception and dance followed in the assembly room of the school, continuing until midnight.

Dunellen.

Dunellen's last high school commencement exercises were held Thurs*day. The five graduates of the old* two-year local course, which will be replaced in the fall by the four-year course at the high school here, received their diplomas in the presence of an audience that taxed the Presbyterian church, where Dunellen commencements have been held for years, to its limits, and overflowed into the vestibule.

The church was prettily decorated. Daisy clusters at every pew were a striking feature of the decorative scheme. The platform was a mass of color. *At the back hung a big Amer*ican flag, and across the arch was stretched a streamer with the class motto, "Semper procedens," in green and gold, upon it. In the center sat the graduates: Pearl Dodwell, Kathryn Samson, Catherine Mohan, Emma Voorhees and Benjamin Dodwell. The latter was valedictorian and Miss Voorhees salutatorian.

To the right of the graduates sat the members of the Board of Education, County Superintendent H. Brewster Willis, and Superintendent Lester Meseroll. To the right was a large chorus of girls of the Whittier School. Back of them sat Dunellen's famous Ladies' Orchestra.

The programme was long. The exercises began at 8 o'clock and it was 10:20 before they ended. They opened with graduates' march, by Meta Pennock, and the invocation by Mohan. The invocation was offered by Rev. Frank Fletcher, of the Baptist church, and an overture by the orchestra, under the leadership of Otto Muller, fol*lowed. The rest of the first part* was divided between essays and a declamation by the graduates, and music by the orchestra and the chorus, under the direction of Miss Rita Brokaw.

Miss Voorhees, the salutatorian, delivered an essay on "The Red Cross," Kathryn Samson delivered one on "Veneer;" the valedictory essay, by Miss Mohan, was on "The Passion Play." Pearl Dodwell delivered an essay on "Table Talk," and Benjamin Dodwell rendered a declamation, "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The speaker of the evening was A. H. Clark, of Peekskill, N. Y., a historian. His address, on "A Glance at the Early History of Education in New Jersey," opened the second part. He traced the establishment of the first public school in this State at Bergen, in 1661, from the beginning of education in the New Amsterdam colony, and showed how the initial impetus to the educational work of the colony and of the State came from the French-English settlers of Elizabeth, the Scotch-Irish group and the Quaker. He paid a high tribute to the worth of the Scotch and Quakers as supporters of the uni*versal education ideal. Lotteries,* he said, helped early education in New Jersey. Princton College got much money through them.

In closing Mr. Clark gave the graduates a new trinity of R's to which to cling: Reliance, Rectitude and Responsibility.

Following Mr. Clark's address, Superintendent Meserolt presented the graduates to the Board of Education. County Superintendent Willis presented the diplomas. In making the presentation Dr. Willis spoke briefly to the graduates.

They were at the cross-roads of life, he said, and could choose the path upward or the road downward. As they stepped out into the world the choice was fairly easy, but years would bring them difficulty in retracing their course or changing their direction, as time went on choice became habit, and habit became fixed and unchangeable distiny. He congratulated them and the borough of Dunellen on the splendid opportunity for high*er studies that was open to them by reason of the new arrangement with* Plainfield. No other place in Middlesex county had such high school facilities open to it. The speaker gave enthusiastic expression to his high regard for the Plainfield high school.

In the formal presentation of the diplomas, Mr. Willis called attention to the fact that Miss Samson had not missed a school day in ten years, and the blushing graduate was vigorously applauded.

Diplomas were given to the primary and grammar graduates, who were massed in the seats before the platform. The graduates were:

Grammar, Helen Shively, Theodore Day, Katie Vail, Rosie Wilson, Corwin Apgar, Edgar Starker, Violetta Smalley, Ethel Lapham, Edna Shively; primary, Hazel Runyon, Irving Bush, Ruth Haven, Lillian Fisher, Paul Maurer, Elizabeth Taylor, Florence Gray, Edwin Lapham, Annie Mohan, Earl Haver, Peter Mohan, Helen Swackhamer, Allen Fredericks, Beatrice Frantius, Willie Block, Meifne Vail, Benjamin Cole, Horace Williams, Fred Fleming, Annie Benward and Dorothy Shafer.

A large number of prizes were given out. Besides the usual scholastic rewards, prizes were given to sixty-six pupils who had attained a high record for punctuality and attendance during the school year. The *algebra prizes went to Emma Voor*hees, Meta Randolph and Catherine Mohair; arithmetic, eighth year, prize was won by May Day; the composition prize went to Meta Pennock; the U. S. History prize to May Day; fourth year arithmetic prize to Annie Mohan and Earl Haven; first year writing prize, Catherine Maier; writing prize, other classes, Addie Reusch and Arthur Jennings; Susie Lowrie received special prizes for playing at assembly and class exercises during the year.

The prize winners for punctuality and attendance are as follows:

First year, Charles Haver, Hazel Humble, Helen Davis, Margaret McGovern; second year, Julia McGovern, Richmond Ritterbusch, George Jennings, DeWitt Swackhamer, Naomi Snyder; third year, Fred Noble, Viola Bowlby, Benjamin Block, Lila Stiles, Leslie Bowlby, Meta Pennock; fourth year, Ruth Haver, Nellie Wahl, Peter Mohan, Benjamin Cole, Annie Mohan, Hazel Runyon, Florence Gray, Edna Jennings, Allan Frederick; fifth year, Bessie Morris, Gertrude Bailey, Arthur Jennings, Clarence Jennings, John McFadden, John Rinehart, Stella Reynolds, Bessie McGovern, Bosworth Coriell, Sylvester Rinehart; sixth year, Laura Todd, Edward Gray, Charles Wahl, Susie Giles, Charles Dineen, Ruth Voorhees, Elsie Lowrie, Mabelle Pierson, William Brennan, Gertrude Bowlby, Ethel Tinsman; seventh year, Ora Bush, Jessie Stites, Kittie Liable, Maggie Mohan, Florence Haver, Lillian Garretson, Carl Nook, Lucy Clawson, Irma Baldwin, Florence Long, Arthur Dodwell, Albert Ritterbusc; eighth year, May Day, Rosy Wilson; ninth year, Edith Bush, Meta Pennock, Susie Lowrie, Lizzie Reusch; tenth year, Kathryn Samson, Catherine Mohan, Emma Voorhees.

The high school graduating class presented the school with a bust of McKinley. Miss Dodwell, class president, made the presentation. Superintendent Meserolt received it.

A violin solo by Otto Muller and choruses by the girl choir were the last numbers on the programme. Rev. E. C. Dutcher, of the Methodist church, pronounced the benediction.

The ushers were Rulif Fisher, Arthur Bogardus, Stephen Kennedy, Robert Lowrie, William Giddes and William Kennedy.

FREEMAN-DANIEL WEDDING

Miss Genevieve Daniel the Charming Bride of Arthur Fraleigh Freeman.

A BRILLIANT FUNCTION

Ceremony at Crescent Avenue Church Largely Attended—Daughter of Leslie M. Daniel.

Miss Genevieve Daniel, daughter of Edwin Moore Daniel, of West Eighth street, and sister of Leslie M. Daniel, and Arthur Fraleigh Freeman, eldest son of Mrs. William A. Freeman, of Sandford avenue, were married in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends from this city, New York, Brooklyn and other points.

Miss Daniel was attended by her sister, Mrs. Charles Bush, of Brooklyn, as matron-of-honor, and Mrs. George Geyser, of Easton, Pa., and Mrs. Frederick Green Smith, of Brooklyn, as bridesmatrons. Edith Beers, niece of the bride, was flower girl, and Donald Geyser, of Easton, Pa., acted as page and ring bearer. Fred H. Freeman, brother of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were Joseph F. Duffy, of Port Chester, N. Y.; Frederick Green Smith and George Tremaine Morse, of Brooklyn; Arthur Killmer, Albert D. Beers and Edwin M. Daniel, 2d, of Plainfield.

The bride was gowned in white embroidered chiffon, over white silk, trimmed with duchesse lace and she carried a bouquet of white orchids. The matron-of-honor and bridesmatrons were gowned in white lace over *blue silk. The matron-of-honor car*ried a bouquet of pink carnations and the bridesmatrons carried white chiffon parasols, over blue silk. The flower girl was dressed in white with pink and she carried a basket of pink roses. The page was also dressed in a suit of white and he carried the wedding ring.

Victor Baier, organist and choirmaster of Old Trinity church, New York, was at the organ. He gave a half-hour recital prior to the arrival of the bridal party and then rendered the wedding marches. Mr. Baier is an intimate friend of the groom and was his musical teacher for a long time.

The ushers led the way, followed *by the page, flower girl, bridesma*trons, matron-of-honor and the bride escorted by her father, who gave her in marriage. At the altar the party met the groom, best man and the officiating minister.

After the ceremony the flower girl led the way for the bridal party, strewing roses in the pathway of the bride and groom as they left the church. A small reception followed at the home of the bride's father, 9 West Sixth street, which was attended only by the relatives and a few *intimate friends. Later in the even*ing Mr. and Mrs. Freeman left on a wedding journey. Upon their return they will live at Bretton Hall, New York, where the groom is engaged as manager.

The bride received a large number of costly gifts and in the exchange of remembrances among the bridal party, the groom gave the bride a pearl lavalliere, and she gave the groom a scarf pin of oriental pearls and diamonds. The bride gave to the matron-of-honor and bridesmatrons blue feather boas and to the flower girl and page gold pins. The groom gave to the best man and ushers were scarf pins of green and gold leaves and pearls.

Both the bride and groom are well known here in society circles. They have frequently attended social affairs at the Park Club, as well as in this city. Mr. Freeman is in the choir at Grace church for several years and as often taken part in musicles here and in New York. His wife is a most estimable woman and enjoys the acquaintance of a large circle of friends.

Catching the Idea.

Tommy—Pa, what does it mean to say "people disagree"?

Pa—Well, when people think alike they are said to agree and so when—

Tommy—Oh, I see! When only one people thinks alike he disagrees.

Taking Him Down.

"Well," said Mr. Marwyat, during their quarrel, "you'll give me credit for a good disposition, at least."

"Not at all," replied the wife; "it isn't that you have a good disposition, but that you're simply too lazy to kick."

Fourth Invitation Musicale.

The fourth invitation musicale by the pupils of Miss May Vincent Whitney will be given at the Park Club on Friday night, June 22. Miss Whitney will be assisted by Miss Grace Carroll, contralto. Admission will be by card.

$75,000 Gift to Vassar College.

Vassar College has so many alumnae and friends in this place, and Dr. James Taylor, the college president, and Dr. Henry M. Sanders, of New York, are so well known here that the announcement of Dr. Saunders gift of $75,000, in memory of his wife will be full of interest to Plainfielders.

JOINT COMMITTEE UNANIMOUSLY FAVORS CONSOLIDATION OF THE CITY AND BOROUGH

Organization Affected and Resolutions Recommending Merger of Municipalities Passed Without Dissenting Voice.

CHAS. J. FISK CHAIRMAN

Representation of Plainfield Common Council, North Plainfield Council and Board of Trade All Speak in Approval of Proposed Union.

With one harmonious voice, the joint committee, appointed to ascertain the feasibility of consolidating Plainfield and North Plainfield, at a meeting in the City Common Council chamber, Thursday, expressed their heartiest desire to see the scheme consummated. There was not one discordant note sounded throughout the conference and every member of the respective committees had something to say on the subject. The upshot of the matter was an unanimous agreement to recommend the proposition to the bodies which the delegates represented.

By resolution it was proposed to the governing bodies of the two municipalities that a special election be held during the latter part of September for the people to signify their choice in the matter and, providing they desire to see the union brought about, to elect commissioners to arrange all necessary details. It is *proposed to hold the election simul*taneously in the borough and city.

In order that the voters may cast their ballots intelligently, it is also proposed to hold a series of mass meetings. These will no doubt be held under the joint auspices of the two municipalities and general invitations will be extended for any taxpayer to voice his views. It is also likely that separate meetings will be held in the two places for free and open discussion.

At Thursday's conference, the Plainfield Common Council was represented by its public affairs committee, Chairman Herbert Buxton and Councilmen W. L. Gloak, F. W. Randolph and R. I. Tolles, being present. Councilmen L. B. Woolston, A. Daniel and George P. Mellick were absent. Mayor James F. Buckle was also there ex officio. The entire special committee of the North Plainfield Council, consisting of Chairman Charles A. Lee, Frank Krewson, E. P. T. Smith and M. C. VanArsdale was on hand.

*The Board of Trade was repre*sented by its own committee, made up of Chairman Charles J. Fisk, W. G. Debele and the president of the body, L. B. Woolston. Former Mayor William L. Saunders, father of the scheme, and former Mayor Charles Place, both of North Plainfield, were also present.

L. B. Woolston called the meeting to order and briefly stated its object. By an unanimous vote on motion of Councilman Buxton, former Mayor Charles J. Fisk was chosen perma*nent chairman, and Councilman Lee,* of North Plainfield, was selected as secretary. Without any loss of time, Mr. Buxton expressed the opinion that the time had come for an union of the two municipalities and declared that after an investigation of the proposition he was heartily in favor of it. He briefly pictured the many advantages that would come from a merger under one government, stating in addition that he could see no common sense reason why the idea was not perfectly feasible.

*Every other man at the confer*ence spoke in like vein. Former Mayor Saunders was most optimistic. The reviewed what had been done and came direct to the point in declaring that it was a duty of the present generation to provide one government for the community. In every respect, save in the eyes of the law, he said, North Plainfield and Plainfield are one. Their interests are identical though under present conditions they are separate. He pictured the manifold advantages that would emanate from a merger, adding that Plainfield particularly would benefit by joining hands with North Plainfield.

President Woolston, of the Board of Trade, commented on the disadvantages the borough labors under as a separate government and gave his unqualified endorsement of the present movement. He declared it his duty to future generations today owe to future generations. The matter had been hanging fire long enough, he added. Councilman Lee, of North Plainfield, stated that he had been a bitter enemy of both annexation and consolidation four years ago, but that he had come to the conviction that he was wrong on the question of merger of the two municipalities. He was now open, he said, to receive the views of the citizens of the two places. He emphasized the fact that the matter should be left entirely to the people and for one wanted to let them have the opportunity of voting on it.

Chairman Buxton, of the city's committee, said he had thoroughly studied the subject pro and con and that he could see no reason why there should be two governments for one community. He promised to do all he could to further the object and wanted the taxpayers to have an opportunity to express their views. Councilmen Tolles, Randolph and Gloak, of the city, voiced their sentiments in favor of the scheme, as did also Mayor Buckle, who has always been with Mr. Saunders on the subject. Councilmen Smith, VanArsdale and Krewson, of North Plainfield, said they were in accord with the other delegates. Mayor Smalley was not present. Mr. Debele, of the borough, who opposed annexation four years ago, also seconded the proposition to unite the two places.

The resolutions, published in another column, passed unanimously, which will take the shape of a recommendation to the Common Council of Plainfield, the Council of North Plainfield and the Board of Trade. Secretary Lee was instructed to send copies of the resolutions to the respective bodies. On recommendation of Chairman Fisk, it was unanimously decided to give the utmost publicity to all proceedings of the joint committee and an invitation was extended to the local newspapers represented at the future meetings.

Former Mayor Saunders today received a dispatch from Pittsburg that the "Greater Pittsburg" election on Tuesday, which resulted in a decisive majority for the consolidation of the cities of Pittsburg and Alleghany, does not change counties or county lines.

The Somerset Unionist-Gazette, of Somerville, which bitterly opposed the annexation of North Plainfield four years ago, says editorially today:

"Somerset county can offer no objection to consolidation as now proposed if the present law is sufficient to cover it."

THE RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, Natural conditions favor the growth of Plainfield and North Plainfield along the lines parallel with the tracks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and with the dividing line between the city and borough, and

Whereas, This dividing line runs close to and parallel with Front street, which is the main business artery of Plainfield; and

Whereas, North Plainfield is the natural overflow from Plainfield; and

Whereas, The interests of both city and borough are identical; and

Whereas, In every respect, except in law, these two places are in fact one; and

Whereas, In the interest of enlarged and stronger schools, for better fire and police protection; in questions of public health and welfare; in economy of government; in the extension and maintenance of streets and sewers; in the influence of Plainfield in the State and Nation; for the interests of business, and in the value of property; in helping to keep down taxes; in the protection of the people against extortion; in the interest of public and municipal progress; it is better that these two places be united and not divided; therefore,

Resolved, That consolidation of the local government is desirable.

Resolved, That this committee recommends to the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, and to the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield, that a special election be held in accordance with Assembly bill 155, of 1902, now on the statutes of the State of New Jer*sey, and entitled "An act to unite* and consolidate the municipal corporations of the inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, the Borough of Union, and the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield."

And this committee further recommends that this election be held in the month of September, 1906, and before this election, it is agreed and understood that the plan proposed involves no change of county lines.

And that North Plainfield is to re*ceive a fair and just representation* in the Plainfield common Council.

That the property in the borough to be assessed and taxed on the same basis as Plainfield property, and that *all the details involved in the pro*posed merger, and the preparation of legislative acts, if such be found necessary, is desirable, so elected or appointed, they shall choose a fifth member, who shall be a citizen of Plainfield.

All the acts of this commission shall be subject to the control of the governing bodies of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

An After-Dinner Story.

A MASTER OF PAINTING.

Roderick St. Brieuc was half French and half English, speaking both languages with equal facility, and blending in his life a curious mixture of English breeding and French studio ideals, that made him rather a puzzle to those who knew him best.

But the charm and cleverness of his portraits were indisputable, and the fame of these led the beautiful Miss Ormond to sit for him.

The first time that she came he suggested that the portrait might be finished for the following Academy, whereupon she looked rather pleased.

Nevertheless he had unlimited trouble over the very first sketch. The likeness—all very well, but the soul of the thing—absolutely dead. Yet how was a man to put expression into a face that perfectly lacked it? The features were Greek, the coloring exquisite in its delicate, pearl-escent tints, but the soul was asleep.

St. Brieuc, pacing the floor of his studio after the lady had departed, stopped short with a shrug. "Unless the picture is to be a dead failure, I must make love to her; it is the only way."

There he found no difficulty, having had much experience in Paris and in Rome. He knew the exact moment when Miss Ormond's companion would be far enough away, or absorbed in a book or the dog, knew the exact words that would call up the expression and the tint that he wanted. He was skilful in making manipulations of drapery that suggest caresses. He looked everything and said nothing, and said everything with a manner that belied his words.

She gazed at him with sincere eyes and believed it all. Wooed she had been for her money, admired for her beauty, loved only by men so obviously her inferiors that their devotion she considered an insult. But now, day after day, she opened her soul to this magician, artist, and cunning-ly-he transferred its loveliness to his canvas. And day after day, when she had gone, he stood before his work and exulted: "It will outstrip everything that I have done—that most of my contemporaries have done. It is not once in a century that a man gets a model as I have found—and made!"

On the day of the last sitting, Miss Ormond came late, a little breathless and alone. "We were delayed, and Miss St. John had an important errand," she explained. "She will be here presently. I thought you might like to begin while the light is good."

Somehow the work went badly that day. Perhaps he was over-fastidious in regard to the finishing touches. Certainly her face was rather sad and dull; the eyes seemed appealing, almost frightened; not at all as he wanted them to be. Moreover in his impatience at the way the work was going, the pretty phrases did not come easily, and things grew worse instead of better. At last he put down his manistick and palette, and went to stand before her, with his hands in the pockets of his velveteen jacket.

"What's wrong today?" he asked abruptly. "Are you troubled about anything?"

"Oh, no!" she began, but the tears rose to her eyes and stood there, and her lips trembled so that in a second inspiration came to him, and he kissed her—not once, or twice, but until the quiver became the exquisite smile that he was struggling to represent. Then he drew back a little and looked; she was perfect.

"Julia! Julia!" he murmured softly as he took up his brush.

"It is really nothing—at all," she protested, for the pleasure of being contradicted.

After that there was no difficulty with the picture. St. Brieuc decided that another touch to the face would be superfluous, but the hands—the slender, long, white hands, like those of a medieval Madonna—the stood for character, and would repay attention. He went over to place them more exactly, and as she trembled under his touch, and looked up expectantly, he was obliged, though with a reluctance that seemed to him strange, to kiss her again.

"I wonder," she said, smiling happily, "that you have not married long ago."

But the eyes were bent critically upon his canvas. Yes, he had certainly caught the expression; it could not be improved.

Still, her last words troubled him with a sense that, unless he began speedily to retrench, she might have him bound by a promise, and then—michief! Where was that woman, Miss St. John? What the dickens was keeping her so long?

As he painted the hands, he began to talk—smoothly, smiling, easily—with perfect ease—about the claims of Art, the sacrifices one made for her, the wrongs that were done in her name.

At first Julia Ormond was sympathetic and happily responsive, then she wondered a little, and at last she was silent.

"Do you know," he said at length, with a laugh intended to rob the words of all meaning, "I may get myself hanged some day. Suppose I were to strangle a man—slowly—in order to get exactly his dying expression?"

She sat very still, and her face had lost the look of the portrait, but as he was doing the hands that did not matter. When he spoke again she turned her face to him reluctantly, as if fearful of what she should see. "I think we may call it finished," he was saying. "Will you come and look?"

She came and stood by his side in silence.

"Do you think it will do?" he asked, eager for appreciation.

"Ah," she said, without interest, and then faced him squarely. "Did you make love to me in order to paint my expression?"

"My dear lady," he began.

"Art is non-moral," she continued, as if repeating a lesson. "Oh I understand—perfectly! Would you mind ringing for my carriage? And ask the footman to come up?"

There was a look on her face that he dared not disobey. When he returned she held out a blank check, with the ink of her name still wet.

"I don't know your terms," she said, "but I suppose you are not a thief. I shall take the portrait with me."

"It is wet," he answered, flushing dark red under her contempt.

"We can manage it."

"But the frame—the exhibition—"

"I do not care to be exhibited," she added quietly—"any further."

He was genuinely alarmed. Any means must serve until he had won his point. He had no other work half so good.

"Julia!"—he held out entreating hands that endeavored to seize hers.

"Don't try that again," she said with curling lips.

Through all his rage, and shame, and determination to exhibit the masterpiece his crowning emotion was the sense of her magnificence in scorn. Paint her again he must and would.

"Julia, by our love, by my love for you," he began. "I swear—"

"Swear by something of more importance," she interrupted.

"My name would be made by this picture—for ever"—he appealed to her generosity.

Her eyes became cruel. "Then let it be posthumous. It won't hert you to wait until you're dead. I shall not destroy the portrait."

He turned away with a gesture of despair. Perhaps the sight if his bowed head touched her a little; perhaps she heard the approach of the footman. She came swiftly behind him and laid her hand on his arm. "You waked me to love and now you are handling me. You kissed me often for the sake of your fame. Kiss me once for myself—that I may forget, for a single instant, the rest—and I will be generous."

He shrank away from her at first, and then slowly—almost freafully—he clasped her in his arms and bowed his face to her; his punishment was complete, with the awakening sense that he loved her.

The footman knocked at the door. "I had intended to ask you to carry this picture down, Bowers," said Miss Ormond composedly, drawing on her gloves, "but I have changed my mind."

"Miss St. John has just arrived and asks if she shall wait in the carriage?" said the man.

"Yes, I am coming down at once," she replied.

As she turned to St. Brieuc she saw the fragments of her check fluttering to the floor.

"I shall send you another by post," she said quietly, "and I do not wish you to give me further trouble by destroying it."

"Julia, do you not see—"

"That you think you love me—now—at this moment? What matter for that? Art is your mistress; return to her! Good-by. You art a master of painting, but—not a man at all! And so your penitence is of no use. You cannot make yourself a man. Goodby!"

The success of Miss Ormond's portrait was bitter enough to the artist, his regret for that other picture that might, but for his folly, have been finished by now, was even deeper; but the pain at his heart which gave him no peace day and night was harder to bear, and led finally to his suicide at the age of 39.

His masterpiece, the portrait of Miss Julia Ormond, has lately been placed in one of the national gal*leries.—Philadelphia* Telegraph.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic for the Week Beginning June 24.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—What and how should a Christian read?—Phil. iv. 8.

The importance of what a Christian should read, and especially the young Christian, is an open question, as well as how what is read should be read. "Of the making of books there is no end." And if this were true in Solomon's time how much truer it is today. There are papers, periodicals and books without number. All that is written and printed cannot possibly be read, and hence the increased necessity of extra carefulness in the selection of what we read. The dangerous character of much that is written adds also to the importance of selection. Not so many years ago there was little choice in selection. In Christian homes there was little variety of reading matter. A home was fortunate to have a few books, and in Christian homes these were usually limited to a few religious books written by pious men. Under such conditions the young could hardly go astray, but how different the conditions now! Not only in the home without its library and its quota of magazines and papers, and in addition to reading matter to be found in the home the multiplication of circulating libraries of one kind and another has made access to books of all kinds accessible to all readers. Under these changed conditions the selection of what we read and the methods of our reading assume a very grave importance.

The purpose of reading may assist us in the solution of these problems. The main purpose in reading should be to develop thinking, and thinking should inspire action. "Read, know, think and be wise." Such a purpose should guard against reading being made one of the prevalent sins of today. Much reading means little thinking. It produces mental inertia instead of mental inspiration. Intellectual indigestion through overreading is as possible and as serious as physical indigestion through overeating. Since reading is to produce thought and action this purpose should determine a Christian's reading. It demands the reading of honest literature of just literature, and, above all, of pure literature. Christians should have pure thoughts and live pure lives, but how can they if their minds be fed upon that which is unclean and impure? But let it be known that a book is off color morally, that it speaks with impurity, and how eagerly it is sought and read. And yet nothing so insidiously destroys the purity and sweetness of a young mind and heart as an unclean book. Its foul breath is breathed into the innermost recesses of mind and heart and blasts the purity of both. And thus millions of young, sweet, pure minds, hearts and lives are blasted. Above all, the young Christian should read clean and pure books. Girls should never read a book which they would be ashamed to have their mothers see and which brings the blush of shame to their own cheeks. There are too many sweet and beautiful romances even to make such literature a necessity. The least taint of impurity in a book should forever debar it from a place on the list of books we are to read.

The purpose of reading should suggest less light reading and the reading of books of a more serious character. Much of present day literature is light and frivolous, to say the least. Nor is light literature altogether to be decried. There are times for reading such literature to while away an hour, to rest the mind or for entertainment and amusement. But, after all, life is serious, and while it would not be healthy to be always reading "Baxter's Saints' Rest" or Thomas a Kempis, yet serious, uplifting literature should receive our chief attention—poetry, history, biography, the masterpieces of fiction and of course the best religious literary productions and, above all, the Bible. When we think how rich the world's literature is in that which inspires noble thoughts and noble deeds, in that which is "honest, just, pure, lovely and of good report," the wonder is that we waste so much time on books unworthy to be called by the name of literature.

Endeavorers, let me plead with you to exercise supreme care in your reading. A book is a most intimate companion. No human companion gets so close to your hearts. One book may make or mar a human life. Read only the books that make manhood and womanhood. Shun the others as you would a deadly poison. A poisoned mind is far worse than a poisoned body. From the body it may be removed, but the mind never. Above all, make God's book your daily companion. The world's greatest men and women have done so, and it has been their inspiration, their life. "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

June 24: "Surprises in People"—Matt. vii. 22, 23; xxv. 20-30, 44; xxiv. 44-51; I Pet. iii. 10-12; II Pet. iii. 10; Rev. xxii. 12.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

"Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to render to each man according as his work is."

This life is so full of surprises that it does often seem to be fact that it is the unexpected which always happens.

Many of these surprises come because we have never traveled this track before, and new combinations of circumstances are continually forming, so that no human foresight could possibly have seen how things would occur.

Many more of our surprises come from our lack of attention to what is happening. Often we could have known what would take place if we had given proper thought to the matter. Two people run into each other on the street, are surprised and usually angered because of the other person's heedlessness, when the truth was that each was walking one way and looking another. Both run up against people's prejudices, opinions, rights, duties and sentiments, shock them and anger ourselves because our toes turn one way and our eyes another. We all were told when very little to "look where you are going," but we still persist in thinking that we can violate the rule when we please, while every one else should keep it.

It will be much the same in the next world as it is and ever has been in this one. There will be many surprised ones in the morning, those who will find that the laws of the moral universe have not been suspended for their special benefit.

Some never really mean any great harm, but when they see a sign, "Keep off grass," "No trespassing," "Dangerous passing," "No admission," "Street closed," or any warning of similar character, they seem possessed by some spirit of contrariness to do the thing prohibited. Then when disaster follows they blame the man who put up the sign to "tempt them," as they call it.

There is another spirit in us quite as dangerous but not so easily detected as this last, which leads to unpleasant surprises in the end.

Christians should have pure thoughts and live pure lives, but how can they if their minds be fed upon that which is unclean and impure? But let it be known that a book is off color morally, that it speaks with impurity, and how eagerly it is sought and read. And yet nothing so insidiously destroys the purity and sweetness of a young mind and heart as an unclean book. POLITICAL EPIGRAMS.

In the course of his remarks at the graduating exercises of Union College, of which Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond, former pastor of Trinity Reformed church, is president, Mayor George B. McClellan framed some maxims and epigrams that will make his speech rank as one of the best commencement day addresses of the season. The distinguished son of "Little Mac" gave a practical lesson in politics, urging the college youths to adopt public life as a profession and not as a trade. Here are some of his sagely sayings:

A professional politician may be a statesman; a political tradesman may be a criminal.

Politicians are no more made to order than are lawyers or doctors or clergymen or soldiers.

Those of you who are called to the profession of politics should answer.

There is no such thing as "honest graft."

If you abuse a public man long enough and viciverly enough you will end, by making him either famous or infamous.

The public is a hard master to serve.

Politics, as well as religion, has its martyrs.

We are cursed by the worship of opportunity.

Mediocrity swims with the tide, while greatness struggles against it.

It takes courage deliberately to breast the popular current.

It is not always the man who fills the most columns of the newspapers that accomplishes the greatest results.

We Americans are a curious combination of scoffers and hero-worshippers.

Civilization increases and public morals improve as the years go by.

The rank and file of the politicians in this country are sound.

A partnership, even with Providence, cannot be one-sided.

Too few men enter politics as a profession.

There is a sad over-supply of political tradesmen.

There is no royal road to success in politics.

The prizes (in politics) are few, but they are as numerous as in any other profession.

THE PEOPLE TO BLAME.

In his address at the North Plainfield High School commencement exercises Friday night, State Senator Thomas J. Hillery struck the nail squarely on the head when he said: "If men who are leaders in a political way assume arbitrary powers it is only because it is permitted through the inattention and inactivity of the people themselves." In other words, the Senator says that the voters are to blame for allowing political machines to flourish, and he never spoke any truer words.

A handful of professional politicians, or professional tradesmen as the case may be, can and do control the governments of municipalities, counties and States, and it is only because of the gross neglect of the duties of citizenship on the part of the people. These few men arrogate to themselves the control of affairs, dictate what laws or ordinances they desire to have on the statute books, and put in office their favorites, who are generally men chosen rather for what they can gain by the bosses than for any real ability.

Now and then the people do awake to the responsibilities that are entrusted to them by the Democratic form of government and throw off the yoke of bossism. Recent instances may be cited now in which when the citizens become aroused, the political tradesmen are easily exiled. La Follette, in Wisconsin; Folk, in Missouri, and Weaver, in Philadelphia, are men of the hour for their victories over bossism. What the country needs now is more of such men, men who know how to handle the muke rake in the political garden, and men who know how to weed out all that is bad and to plant the seeds of good government.

TRIBUTE TO MR. FISK.

It is generally accepted that a "propper" is not without honor save in his own country, and it is equally true that a good citizen is never fully appreciated until after he is dead. But there are exceptions to almost every rule and Plainfield is about to furnish one in the case of the "good citizen." A few years ago, when former Mayor Fisk was apparently at death's door, the good things said about him would make any mortal besproud. The prayers said in Catholic and Protestant churches alike were answered and Mr. Fisk lives to continue the good deeds which had endeared him to the populace.

In recognition of his self-sacrificing labors on behalf of Plainfield, its institutions and individual citizens, leading men have spontaneously resolved to pay him tribute. In his honor, "a formal subscription dinner"—so the notice reads—will be given on Wednesday night, June 27. Former Mayor Gilbert will be the toastmaster and other leading men will be the speakers.

Such an occasion should be marked by the presence of every local business man and every commuter. Consequently if the report be true that the committee intends to place the subscriptions at ten dollars, it has made a serious mistake and one that it should rectify. A "popular" subscription dinner would be better than a "formal" one. Ten dollars a plate will keep away many citizens. A "dollar dinner," as it is commonly called, on the other hand, would make the occasion an affair of the proper magnitude; one that would be remembered for years to come. It is not too much to say that every man in the city would welcome an opportunity to be present. By all means, lower the subscription rate and thus make the occasion a memorable one.

MAYOR SMALLEY.

Those who have the best interest of North Plainfield at heart express much regret over the position taken by Mayor Newton B. Smalley on the question of consolidation of city and borough. From his record one would naturally expect to find the fighting mayor in the front rank of advocates of the scheme, especially when it is recalled what valiant service he rendered in the lost battle for annexation four years ago.

The mayor is quoted as saying that he does not look with favor on the present movement. His opposition is based on his contention that North Plainfield should first become an integral part of Union county. But Mr. Smalley must know that another attempt to have North Plainfield separated from Somerset county at this time would meet with defeat. The ultimate object of annexation was consolidation. If annexation cannot be had then it will be conceded that the next best thing is consolidation alone. Lawyers say that there are no constitutional or statutory bars to such an union and the wise thinking people of North Plainfield, we feel safe in saying, will give it their endorsement.

This paper has frequently commented on the admirable administration Mr. Smalley has given as chief executive of the borough and it believes it oices the sentiment of the majority of his constituents in regretting the mayor's new stand.

Prominent boroughites are wondering why the Colbyites could not find a more popular man for their chairman than W. W. Howland.

The LL. D. given former Senator James Smit.. does not mean that he is a Long Lost Democrat.

ELIZABETH MAN NEW DEPARTMENT COMMANDER

MAJOR GENERAL F. D. GRANT PROMISES PATERSON MILITIAMEN.

Alfred Atkins, of Ulric Dahlgren Post, Elizabeth, was unanimously elected as department commander of the Grand Army of the Republic at the State encampment at Paterson Friday. Other officers chosen were: Senior vice-commander, Arthur W. Powell, Post 4; junior vice-commander, A. L. Winans, Post 2; medical director, Dr. H. P. Roden, Post 11; council of administration, Robert P. Hillman, Post 5; D. D. Keefe, Post 1; W. W. Mendel, Post 25; E. D. Hill, Post 7; J. J. McDonald, Post 13; delegates to the national convention, John Grimes, Post 3; Joseph Ettinger, Post 35; Frederick Stoll, Post 11; John C. Belcher, Post 1; W. H. Smith, Post 14; Edwin Burch, Post 44; Frank A. Haring, Post 101; E. C. Beichelm, Post 29; George M. Cadmus, Post 58, and James Gordon, Post 8.

Commander Cole, of Trenton, offered a resolution extending a vote of thanks to the people of Paterson for the splendid reception given to the Grand Army. Several delegates, in seconding the motion, declared that not in all the history of the Grand Army in New Jersey had the old soldiers received such a splendid and hospital greeting as was tendered by the citizens of Paterson.

Reports showed the net loss of men during the year to be 195. Assistant Adjutant General Stinson reported that owing to the decrease in membership the per capita tax was insufficient to defray expenses of administration conducted on proper lines. Department Inspector Parsons gave reports from 105 posts, with a total membership of 4,794.

Major General Frederick Grant, who came here yesterday to review the Grand Army men, was greatly pleased with the appearance of the 3d Battalion, 5th Regiment, N. G. N. J., which formed part of the escort of the veterans. The battalion presented arms as the general drove slowly up Church street. He said he had never seen a finer body of men.

"The great thing that marks 'a good soldier,'" said General Grant, "is immobility in rank, and this battalion has that down to a fine point."

The general made other complimentary remarks about the 5th Regiment men and seemed thoroughly pleased with the way the command bore itself.

AMUSEMENTS.

The most successful summer show which has ever been brought into New York is "His Honor the Mayor," which is presented by Alfred E. Aarons at the New York theatre. Its reception at its initial performance was widely enthusiastic and the New York papers the next day pronounced it the most tuneful and most laughable entertainment of its kind that Broadway has seen in many years. The Messrs. Aarons and Sill have made no claims that "His Honor the Mayor" is a pretentious production, but have merely asserted that it is a light, breezy entertainment, not calculated to overtax one's mentality during the hot period. Miss Blanche Ring, who is a popular favorite with theatre-goers, has the leading role and she shares the honor with the famous original English Posy Ballet. These eight young women are a sensation wherever they appear. The other principles, which include Lew Hawley, Harry Kelly, Fletcher Norton, William Black, Arthur Earnest, John Pratt, E. Van Rensselaer, Mabel Hollins, Madelyn Marshall, Lora Lieb and Lois Tabor, are all well known and are admirably suited for the parts which they assume. The company numbers one hundred persons and the production itself is of rare beauty. There are twenty-two musical numbers in "His Honor the Mayor," written by Julian Edwards and Alfred E. Aarons. Mr. Edwards is one of the best known of American composers, he having written the score of such successes as "Dolly Vardon," "Brian Boru," and "When Johnny Comes Marching Home." Mr. Aarons is the composer of "Mlle. Awkins," "The Knickerbocker Girl" and other popular successes. The book is from the pen of R. M. Skinner and C. E. Campbell, two well known western librettists. For this engagement at the New York theatre the prices have been fixed by the management at one dollar for the best seats, with very desirable locations at 25, 50 and 75 cents.

New York's beautiful mid-air playhouse, Wistaria Grove, on the New York and Criterion theatres, opened for the season on Tuesday night, the 5th instant, in circumstances of uncommon success. The immense programme of new matter provided by the management, Wm. A. Brady and Joseph Hart, proved, of itself, a revelation even to the metropolis, accustomed for the past dozen years to "big" entertainment in its roof-gardens. Hardly less of a surprise was the surpassing beauty of the Grove itself. Months of work on the part of the painters, decorators, and artists showed eloquently in each superb detail. But none in all of the immense first-night gathering as its members stepped off the big electric elevators high in the air. The wistaria note was carried out in everything, so that the mise-en-scene resembled nothing so much as a genuine Japanese vista, and one looked about as if in expectation of seeing a bevy of smiling geisha-girls or hearing the tinkle-tinkle of gently-twanged mandolins.

Joseph Hart's summer extravaganza, "Seeing New York," went on at 9:45, and proved to a great medley of mirth and melody. Hits were scored by Carrie De Mar, Al Leech, Clifton Crawford, Cheridah Simpson, and the entore cast, including the Three Rosebuds, Tom Fortune, and Fleurette De Mar. All New York is now whistling "My Blushing Rose," "I'm Not Built Similar to Many Gown," and "He Walked Right In," and rushing to buy tickets to see Mr. Hart's new comic device, whereby the windy-day aspects of the Flatiron building are realistically reproduced.

Mulford Agency Busy.

During the past two weeks Armstrong Mulford, the North avenue real estate broker, has effected the following sales: William H. Chamberlain, of Westfield, has purchased 558 feet of ground on Berkeley avenue and Seventh street, at Netherwood, and 305 feet of the same has been sold to W. W. Coriell, of Netherwood. The property at 937 West Sixth street, corner Lee place, has been sold to Mrs. O'Keefe, of West Fifth street. William T. Gough, of Franklin place, has purchased the Carman house, 317 Franklin place. T. J. Mumford has purchased a lot on Madison avenue of E. E. Dorman. Mrs. S. Grieb, of Dunellen, has purchased two lots on West Front street near Compton avenue, belonging to William F. Moore and C. Spried. A. C. Wilmerding, of Netherwood, has purchased the house and lot known as 518 Belvidere avenue, Netherwood. Charles Slocum has rented 217 Franklin place and will take possession July 1.

FISK DINNER PLANNED BY IMMEDIATE ASSOCIATES.

Committee Member Explains There Has Been a Misunderstanding of the Purpose.

It is announced by a member of the committee in charge of the complimentary dinner for former Mayor C. J. Fisk that the affair is being arranged by his immedate associates in the hospital board, Riding and Driving Club and other institutions and associations in which he is prominently identified.

According to the member in question, it is not proposed to make the affair a popular demonstration although others are invited to attend the affair. For that reason the subscription rate was not made lower.

DR. SLIGER SPEAKS ON "CLIMATE OF THE MIND"

UNITARIAN DIVINE MAKES ADDRESS AT OPEN AIR MEETING.

Dr. Thomas R. Sliger, pastor of All Souls' church, New York, made an admirable address Saturday afternoon at an open air meeting held at Interhaven Park, at the end of the Somerset street trolley. He spoke on the subjects, "The Climate of the Mind" and "The difference between the worth of a motive and the strength of a motive." He emphasized his contention that the real business of life, is the growth of a human soul. Dr. Sliger said he preferred to make the meeting entirely informal, which gave those present an opportunity to cheer acquaintance with so able an exponent of the best modern thought.

Being a personal friends of many years' standing and knowing Miss Finnigans' practical work in the treatment and cure of the sick at Atlantic City, he spoke most intelligently of his methods and commented on the character and beauty of the quiet, restful place, where the weary may gather up the frayed ends of their nerves and renew their strength that each may again take hold in the good world.

Those who braved the elements and made their way up to the camp at Interhaven Park were well rewarded for their walk up the mountainside. It is the intention at the camp commencing with next Sunday and every Sunday thereafter, until further notice, to have addresses by able and helpful speakers.

NEW AUTO LAW IS TO BE ENFORCED

MORE LICENSING AGENCIES SELECTED TO ACCOMMODATE JERSEY MOTOSISTS

The new Frelinghuysen automobile law will go into effect next July 1, and the State Automobile Department created under the act, with Assistant Secretary of State J. B. R. Smith Chief Commissioner, is fully prepared to meet the requirements of the law and enforce its provisions, no matter how drastic they may be. It is believed that the autotsts of the State, who will benedit particularly by the good roads of the Commonwealth, will abide by the new regulations.

Of the 17,000 automobilists registered in this State 3,000 have secured licenses and about an equal number of drivers have been licensed under the new law. From now on there will be a rush for registration, and in order to accommodate as many as possible of the tardy autotsts, Commissioner Smith has decided to open a number of sub-stations to issue licenses in addition to those authorized some time ago.

The regular sub-stations are at Jersey City, Newark, Phillipsburg and Camden. The additional agencies are Charles Crisman, Branchville; Frank Reigerman, Scabright; Augustus R. White, Freehold; C. R. Zachariah and F. L. C. Martin, Plainfield; William Evans, Bridgeton; S. S. Smith, Rahway; William H. Minors, Edgewater; John B. Brooks, Hackensack.

The State House is always open during regular office hours for transacting automobile business. Commissioner Smith has given out the following statement:

"It is the purpose of his department to make automobilists obey the law, and we do not anticipate any trouble. I believe that the great majority of the users of motor vehicles are law-abiding citizens, and we will have no trouble with them. It is the intention to make the new law respected by everybody alike. Pedestrians have rights on the highway; horses have rights as well as autotsts. So far the Department of Motor Vehicles Registration has turned into the State treasury over $11,000 collected for registration fees for the use of the State Road Commissioner in repairing roads."

W. N. RUNYON TO STUMP STATE FOR "NEW IDEA."

Reported that Union County Reform Leader Will Speak in Various Cities.

It is practically certain that Judge William N. Runyon, president of the Union County Equal Taxation League, will speak in many parts of the State on behalf of the "new idea" early in the fall. An effort has been made to get the gifted young reform worker to stump New Jersey and from what can be learned it has been successful. The Colbyites declare that his appearance on the stump will attract hundreds of votes wherever he speaks and they have impressed this fact upon him.

The fact that he will stump the State does not mean that the judge will neglect his duties as head of the movement in Union county. His friends say that he will direct the campaign and will frequently be heard in the various voting districts. He will also have charge of the literary bureau of the Colbyites.

COMMANDERY AUXILIARY HOLDS A MUSICALE.

Delightful Programme Presented for Sir Knights and Friends.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., a delightful musicale was given in Masonic Hall, Friday night, for the sir knights, their families and friends. There was a large attendance and the programme was greatly enjoyed. Miss Bertha vanNuis Willis was the soprano, Miss Mae J. Colt, of New York, the reader, George C. M. Smith, violinist, and J. Edmund Skiff was the accompanist. As this was one of the first public appearances here of Mr. Smith since his return from aboard, where he completed his musical education, there was unusual interest in his performance. His work was of the highest order and won great applause.

Miss Willis was a favorite, as usual, and she sang several numbers in a manner that pleased all, while Miss Colt as a reader left nothing to be desired in making the programme complete. The work of Mr. Skiff as accompanist was entirely satisfactory. This programme was presented:

"May Morning," Denza, Miss Willis; "Biff Perkins' Tobagan Slide," Pauline Phelps, Miss Colt; Air on the "G" String, Bach-Wilhelm, George C. M. Smith; "Scene from Ingoma and Parthenea," Sheridan, Miss Colt; "Spring Song," Well, Miss Willis; "Romance, Op. 23, No. 1," Camilo Siviori; "Obertass, Op. 19, No. 1," Wieniawski," Mr. Smith; selected, Miss Colt; "Absent," Metcalf; "Nightingale Song," Nevin, Miss Willis.

After the entertainmedt there was a social time and ice cream and cake were served by a committee from the auxiliary.

Contractor Kane Keeping Busy.

In addition to securing the contract for tearing down the former Martone dwellings on Hillside avenue, Alex. Kane has been commissioned by E. H. Booth to demolish a large barn in the rear of his property on Central avenue. It will make the thirty-first local building that Kane has raised in the past year.

—A party of Y. M. C. A. men will go to Camp Northfield, to attend the Students' Conference from June 22 to July 1. Ever since the camp was started in 1896, the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. has been represented at it. W. D. Murray, of this city, who is prominent in Bible study, will have one of the classes at the conference.

PLEASING SOCIABLE OF TRINITY ENDEAVORERS.

One-Act Farce Feature of an Enjoyable Programme; Game for Children.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of Trinity church held its second sociable of the season Friday. It was largely attended and a great success.

Games of various kinds were played. The feature of the programme was a one-act farce, "While Brober Phil Was Walking." Miss Marion Marsden, a young lady of considerable courage, Miss Anna C. Randall; Mrs. Marsden, Miss Jessie Garthwaite; Phil Marsden, Marion's brother, Irving Martin; Jack Cresham, an unwilling burglar, LeRoy B. Woodhull.

The playlet was funny, and the cast acted itswell. They were roundly applauded. In the farce, Irving Martin played a piano solo.

Special arrangements were made for the entertainment of the younger people. While the Endeavorers and their friends were having fun in a "cobweb" the young folks had a donkey party under the direction of Miss Anna Randall.

Refreshments were served. The committee in charge was made up of Miss Harriet C. Randall, chairman; Miss LucyCoriell, Miss Anna Randall, Mr. and Mrs. William Kriney and Henry Seader.

Cemetery Private.

In order to protect lot-owners and to make the place more private, the trustees of the North Plainfield cemetery on Chatham street, have caused signs to be put up in several places in the cemetery forbidding trespassing. Should this method fail, the borough police will take a hand in the matter.

Concert for Men's Club.

Under the auspices of the Men's Club, the male quartette of Atlantic University will give a concert at Hope chapel Friday night. It is composed of R. M. Smith, P. H. Williams, W. R. Watson and L. P. Oliver, considered among the best colored singers appearing in public. Following the concert, the Ladies' Aid Society will conduct a sale of ice cream, strawberries and cake.

Inventive Plainfielders.

Among the patents granted to Jerseymen in the past month are the following to Plainfielders: Governor, F. O. Ball; air brake apparatus, H. P. Bickel., pulverizing mill, S. R. Krom; side register for sheet-folding and other machines, C. A. Sturtevant.

CRAIG A. MARSH SPOKE AT STATE BAR BANQUET.

Annual Session of Lawyers of New Jersey at Atlantic City.

The annual meeting of the State Bar Association was held at Hotel Chelsea, Atlantic City, on Friday and Saturday, June 15 and 16. Craig A. Marsh and S. S. Swackhammer were present from the Plainfield bar. At the annual banquet, Judge Allan Edmonds, the retiring president, acted as toastmaster. He set toasts which responded to by Supreme Court Justice Swayze, E. M. Colie, of Newark; Craig A. Marsh, of this city; Circuit Judge Parker, of Jersey City, and Col. W. W. Fuller, of Jersey City.

Gilbert Collins was elected president of the ensuing year. Craig A. Marsh was among the trustees elected.

The meeting held on Saturday morning to hear an address from a distinguished member of the Pennsylvania bar and to consider the proposed custom house amendments was not as largely attended as was expected. The vote in favor of the proposed amendments was 22 to 17, and this was thought to be of little significance on account of so large a minority against the amendments, and the small attendance, the vote was reconsidered and it was arranged to hold a special meeting early in the fall for a fuller discussion and more mature consideration.

TESTIMONIAL DINNER FOR FORMER MAYOR FISK

Formal Subscription Affair to be Given in Honor of Plainfield's "First Citizen."

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert to Be Toastmaster—To Announce Speakers Later.

AT THE CASINO, JUNE 27

Charles J. Fisk will be tendered a testimonial banquet at the Casino on June 27. The affair is being planned by his friends among well known citizens of the city, as a tribute of appreciation for his years of work for the advancement of Plainfield and its institutions.

Mr. Charles J. Fisk

The dinner will be a subscription affair. Sherry or Delmonico will serve it, and it will be one of the most elaborate and brilliant of its kind ever held here. The subscription is said to be $10 a plate.

The decorations will be noteworthy. The Casino ballroom will be transformed into a veritable bower. A musical programme of the highest standard will be a feature.

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert will act as toastmaster. Associated with him in the selection of speakers are J. B. Dumont and O. T. Waring.

Well known men are assisting in the arrangements of the details. Among them are L. G. Thompson, George A. Besjon, Frederic W. Butler, J. M. Sheldabarger, Benjamin Wood and Henry L. Hall.

It has been suggested that some gift, suitably engraved, be presented to Mr. Fisk at the dinner, to mark in a permanent way the esteem in which his fellow citizens hold him.

PIANO RECITAL.

Miss Carrie C. Dewey's Pupils Give a Creditable Performance.

The annual piano recital by the pupils of Miss Carrie C. Dewey was held in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Saturday afternoon. The room was decorated with flowers, there was a large attendance and the pupils showed a marked improvement in their work. Selections were rendered by the following pupils:

Lawrence and Elmer French, Miss Edith Lowrie, Miss Ruth Voorhees, Frederick Harrington, George Murray, Walter Harrington, Miss Martha Camp, Miss Caroline Slauson, Miss Constance Pittis, Miss Laura Bristol, Edward Bingaman, Miss Kate Elliott, Miss Edith Richards, Miss Hannah Bingaman, Walter Conroy, Miss Florence Conroy, Miss Jennie Nelson, Miss Barbara Fleming, Miss Florence Smalley.

MRS. BRANTINGHAM.

Mother of Thomas Brantingham Succumbs to Paralysis.

Mrs. Catherine A. Brantingham, mother of Thomas Brantingham, died suddenly Sunday morning at 1 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Bunting, of Piscataway. Death was due to paralysis of the brain. She was well as usual on Saturday and retired that night enjoying good health.

Mrs. Brantingham, who was seventy-eight years old, was born and always lived in the place where she died. She was an exemplary Christian and was one of the oldest members of the Stelton Baptist church. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. George Bunting and two sons, Thos. and Charles Brantingham.

Collyite For Congress.

John S. Gibson, of Newark, has formally announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Representative in Congress for the Seventh District, to succeed Richard Wayne Parker. He will at once begin work with the purpose of getting the delegates at the primaries to insure his nomination in the Congressional convention.

ASSAULTED HIS MOTHER AND HIT A NEIGHBOR

MOODY HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY AND JAILED FOR 90 DAYS.

Daniel Moody, 25 years old, of New Market, was sent to jail for ninety days by Justice Von Minden, of that place, Monday, for hitting William VanNuis, a fellow-townsman, on the village street Sunday night. Before that action, Moody was held under $200 bail for the Middlesex county Grand Jury, for assaulting his mother.

Moody acknowledged both charges when arraigned. He was arrested in the first place on the complaint of VanNuis, who came to Justice Von Minden's house Sunday, and said that Moody was beating his bother and his wife in a brutal manner. The Justice sent Constable Pierce after Moody. The latter had heard that VanNuis went after the police, and he started to hunt for VanNuis. The constable, VanNuis and Moody met at about the same time. Pierce placed Moody, who had been drinking, under arrest, but the latter broke away and smashed VanNuis in the jaw. Pierce piled on him, and yanked him to jail.

In court Monday, the mother, Mrs. Bertha Moody, pressed a complaint of assault. Her face was badly battered. It is said Moody knocked her down twice, and dragged her and his young wife back into the house from the street when they fled from the house after he started to run amuck.

Moody did not appear to be penitent when arraigned, and the justice sentenced him sharply. His wife pleaded hard for him when the sentence was passed, but the court could not see that any leniency was deserved.

CHURCHES OBSERVE CHILDREN'S DAY

THREE PRESBYTERIAN CONGREGATIONS HOLD SPECIAL SERVICES.

Children's Day exercises were held in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and Warren and Hope chapels Sunday.

Crescent Avenue Church.

Special Children's Day exercises were held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Sunday morning. At the regular service, the members of the school met and sang a number of appropriate songs and took part in Scripture and responsive readings and the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, preached a special sermon for children which was very helpful and interesting.

At the close of the service the Sunday-school session was held in the chapel. The feature was the talk given by Superintendent H. J. Cochran on China, and at the same time he exhibited a number of Chinese curios and other things he collected while in China in 1900. Among the things shown were swords, women's shoes, a robe which belonged to the royal family and numerous other things. The children also sang special hymns and the primary department, under the direction of the superintendent, W. D. Murray, had its weekly birthday exercises, that is the children whose birthdays occur during the week are supposed to contribute as many pennies as they are years old. This is a custom established some time ago and tends to instil the habit of regular giving.

Warren Chapel.

Children's Day exercises were held in Warren chapel Sunday afternoon. Despite the threatening weather, *there was a good-sized attend*ance. The platform was decorated with roses.

The programme included songs by the infant department; trio, "He Is My Father," by Grace and Elsie Van Denburgh and Anna Reynolds; duet by Edith and Ida Wheeler; solo, "Jesus, I My Cross Have Taken," Gilchrist," by Miss Nora Schenck.

The address of the occasion was made by the new superintendent of the Sunday-school, E. E. Parvin. He spoke of the Sunday-school as a mine, and said it must be worked to get its riches out. He called the children nuggets.

F. H. Andrews, the former superintendent, and Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of the chapel, also spoke. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of Crescent Avenue church, spoke the benediction.

Hope Chapel.

Exercises appropriate to Children's Day were held by the members of Hope chapel Sunday-school Sunday afternoon. The programme was prepared by Assistant Superintendent I. W. Travell and was given in charge of Superintendent H. C. Squires. Recitations and choruses were given by children from the various departments and an address was made by Rev. John C. Bliss, of New York, a former pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Members of the Crescent Avenue church choir rank two selections. The platform of the chapel was prettily decorated.

COLBYITES' INVASION

he made to beat its allies and its influences in his county.

In opening Mr. Colby spoke of the big crowd and what a measure of success it promised here. In Essex, the first meeting had been of a handful of men in a private house who met to pledge adherence to the doctrine of the new idea in politics. He explained what the new idea meant; the discussion of political matters openly and by all the people, not by the machine behind closed doors.

Some people had said, he continued, that if the idea was carried out it would be too dangerous, that the fathers of the country had meant to guard against that, and they pointed to the electoral college as a support of that contention. That had been a machine argument since Tweed's day. But time had changed; newspapers and the habits of the people, the spread of education had made it easy for the people to exchange views rapidly, and the people of today knew what they wanted. There was no reason for a political machine.

For 12 or 15 years the people had allowed the management of their affairs to go into the hands of a few men while they chased the almighty dollar. The few had learned that they could combine business and politics, and the corporations had allied themselves with the machine. The government of the State now rested in the hands of about six men. It was time to take away their power and put it where it belonged, with the people.

For the guidance of the young man in politics, the speaker, with an apology for the personal allusions, traced his own experience. He told how he had been picked up and nominated by the boss of Essex county and how his first year at Trenton he had done as he was bidden. The second year, at the request of his constituents, he had sought to establish the principle of limited franchises, and his eyes were opened. He was warned by the leaders that if he pressed a limited franchise bill he would lose every friend he had in Essex county. In no way, asked Mr. Colby, was he then supposed to be facing the loss of all his friends? Because he was trying to give his constituents what they wanted.

The speaker told how every influence of the corporations was arrayed against him in the places of legislative power, and recounted his battle for the principle on the floor of the house. He told how a state leader had called him to his office, where he sat with P. S. C. officials, and he was told that "your friends here were very much annoyed by his resolution. They had amended it, and would let it pass as amended." Mr. Colby then asked how they came to be dictating what the legislature should do, and he was told "not to be ridiculous."

His experience with railroad taxation reform was the same. He had gone into a party caucus with a bill on it, and no man there could give him a good reason against it. He went to one of them afterwards and asked them why the bill was not supported by the caucus. "Don't you know, Colby, that the Pennsylvania Railroad will raise h——?" was the answer, and it was the only one he got.

He went back to Essex and started his fight at the primaries. He found all the corporations and the entire organization against him. Not because he was not honest, not because he was incompetent—worse than all been sent to the legislature by the organization—but because they couldn't afford to have a man in the legislature who would introduce bills on his own hook and for the good of the people. He was too apt to ask awkward questions and start the people talking.

Mr. Colby showed how bills were smothered in committee, and how pernicious legislation went through quickly while good bills were shuffled away and killed in the dark. He spoke for the passage of a law compelling chairmen of committees to report bills when a certain percentage of legislators demanded it.

He said he believed the great majority of legislators were honest, and only needed a chance to vote for a good bill. Bosses and backstairs methods killed the good bills and exalted the bad ones. The movement for reform was spreading to every county, but the independents must work to carry it to successful issue by default. They must leave work and family for a time and think of representative government as it should be, and no power could prevent their success.

Corporation Counsel Record said that the existing situation reminded him of Rip Van Winkle's story. The country had just awaked to the fact that things were wrong politically, and men were looking at one another and asking what it all meant. It was a splendid time, the beginning of an era, but in 1830 when the anti-slavery agitation started. The conviction that a wrong was anchored somewhere in the laws was beginning to take hold of the people.

The wrong had its different phases, political, commercial, religious and social. He felt he had a message to tell of the political side.

Mr. Record told the story of his own political experience, recounting his entrance into the Democratic party when he came to Jersey City from New England as a young man, and how he had gradually realized the fact that the party was controlled by gangsters and corruptionists. How he went over to the Republican party in search of representative government, and how the awakening to the fact that things were wrong then came on him.

He told of Fagan's nomination as a forlorn hope, his election by 5,000 majority over the non-issue of the Democratic boss, and the beginning of the battle for reform that has now spread through the State. Mr. Record told, as he did at Elizabeth when the Colby league was organized, how the corporations were understood, and how they fought to block an increase, using Republican leaders as facilely as they had used Democratic ones. He told how the State leaders declared they must not press an equalization of taxation bill, and how they showed their teeth when the Jersey City reformers dared to go it, and sought to destroy them.

There was no politics between the leaders of the two parties, Mr. Record said, simply business, with the P. S. C. and the associated railroads of the State in control of the whole machinery. The corporations did not care what party won the election, so long as the regular organization made the "regular" nominations.

A generation had grown up that stayed away from the primaries, and the machine men controlled nominations. They had a nice little system of furnishing legislative dummies. It was not common for them to send outright grafters to Trenton. They usually picked respectable nominees, but men of negative character and no courage. Men who were led by slaps on the back and hearty greetings from the "great" men. Resolutions were slipped into their hands and they introduced things "by request." They were either too simple to see they were being used or too weak to protest. Young men had been ruined by the insidious flattery of the leaders and the tempting bait of future officers and other forms of "easy money."

The way to cure the evils, Mr. Record said earnestly, was to speak everywhere of the new idea and to come out at the primaries. He urged that September 25 be observed as a new day of independence—Primary Day, the beginning of the voter's independence of the boss. He would speak as if they were are Republicans, he said, and urge them to go solidly to the primaries of the party. To go to Democracy was to jump from the frying pan into the fire and an independent party was a wasted effort. Let them rally as members of the Republican party and wrest the control of nominations from the clique.

Mr. Record urged the voters to make every candidate pledge himself to definite things. Under the new idea he believed that in five years young men would come forward. The independent movement was the hands of the people, with high ideals of politics and personal honor, and the Democratic party, seeing the manner in which Republicanism flourished in decency and righteousness, would be rejuvenated on exactly the same lines; then the people would control nominations and not the corporations.

The Colby leaders had been charged with ambitions. Of course they were ambitious. No decent, warm-blooded man, who amounted to anything, was without ambition. Their ambition was decent and seemly; they were ambitious to win honors from their fellow citizens, not rewards from corporations.

Mr. Record referred to Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, as the type of ambitious young men with the new idea. He aroused a storm of applause in referring to the departure of the two senators of New Jersey from the Senate when La Follette spoke on the Rate Bill, by saying, "The people within six years the people will permanently vacate the seats they left temporarily that day."

A new way must be established, the speaker said. The secret system for office must come before the people in the old-fashioned way. Two questions only concerned the people: Are the principles of, and the services promised, by the candidate what the people want; and can he be believed? Those questions answered, what difference does it make to the people if the candidate presents himself or be named by a clique.

Mr. Record made his one personal illusion of the evening at this point. He was a candidate for the United States senatorship, he said, because he did not purpose to see the fight for the people's rights slip out from under. He greeted the statement. "Don't let any man go to the assembly this year unless he tells you who he is for," said Mr. Record. "Insist on a declaration."

That would put the candidate of the machine in a dilemma, he said. If he said he was for Dryden he stood no chance of election; if he said he was against Dryden, he couldn't get a cent from the machine.

Mr. Record closed with an urgent appeal to turn out at the primaries. If they did that and made the candidates say who they are for, nothing, no political machine, no association of wealth could stop the onward march of the movement.

Mr. Fagan arose to speak after 10 o'clock. He said it was too late and too hot to speak at length, and he made a very brief address. If the citizens wanted political reform, he said, they must begin at home and take an active interest in their party organization. He urged the voters to remember Primary Day, "Your Independence Day," he called it.

He intimated that he would return to the city at another time and tell what he knew of the things that made the reform movement necessary. It was not a spasm, he said: it was as broad as it was deep, and was spreading. Broadcast over the State. Every night, in every corner of the field they have covered, the reform leads have met the same large, earnest audiences.

Before the meeting closed enrollment cards were passed through the audience. Judge Runyon asked those who believed in the principles of the League to sign them, and announced that steps for the organization of ward branches would be started shortly. He repeated his exposure of the threats that had been made by the organization to attack the supporters of the Colby movement, and he pledged himself to keep secret the names of those who were vulnerable to the attack.

Over 250 signed cards and turned them over to the Judge as the audience filed out.

Among those who gave him his card was D. E. Titsworth, of the Potter Press Works. "Don't keep my name secret," he said with grim earnestness.

Rev. George Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Mr. Titsworth's pastor, shook the Judge warmly by the hand. "I am going to work for you," he said.

Mr. Shaw is also pastor of Frank H. Smith, chairman of the Republican county committee.

RUNYON VS PERKINS

Hottest Sort of Fight Ahead In Reformer Enters Contest Against G. O. P. Leader.

NEWARK NEWS' VIEW

Editorially Says Plainfielders Would Win at Primaries and Be Elected by Overwhelming Majority.

The New Evening News, on Saturday, said editorially:

"In no county in this State would there be a hotter or a heavier political fight than in Union county, if Judge Runyon were to consent to enter the contest against Leader Perkins. Whether he will do so or not remains to be seen, but his friends are already urging him to accept the Assembly nomination on the Colby ticket. That he is not seeking office is well known, since he declined appointment as circuit judge and as county judge. Yet to accept a nomination in the interests of reform is very different from office seeking.

"Leader Perkins is a man of resources and ability. He is entitled 'by party usage' to a renomination next fall. Further than this, he is the 'regular' leader in the House, and there can be no doubt that his attitude, last winter, on all legislation affecting corporations was such as to insure him every influence they can exert in his favor. He would be the *candidate of the machine, the organ*ization, the bosses and the corporate interests in Union county not only, but in the State. His incessant hostility to the reformers was but one of the signs of his loyalty to those who would back him to the limit for re-election.

"Judge Runyon was formerly 'the brains of the machine' in Plainfield, until his brains and his conscience and his political experience compelled him to renounce bosses and bossism, join the Colby movement and become the reform leader in Union county. He is much better known personally, and is much more popular than Perkins. He is an experienced lawyer, a fine orator, a man of splendid education and a wide knowledge of events, and would undoubtedly make an excellent and trustworthy legislator.

"A contest between these two men would be a political event of prime importance. It would, on the one side, be Perkins, entrenched behind party usage and backed by partisan and corporate influences of every description, and on the other side Runyon, with strength behind him as the *justice of his cause and the confi*dence of the people. Were it not for the third element, which has to be taken into consideration, viz., the Democratic party which polls 8,290 out of the 29,139 votes in the whole county, the chances would favor Runyon, for the Colby sentiment has taken a firm hold in Union county and is growing.

"This is assuming that both Perkins and Runyon would run in the county at large, as at present. If the Court of Errors and Appeals upholds the constitutionality of the Perkins act, restoring the Assembly district system, then Perkins and Runyon would both be in a solidly Republican district, and there is hardly a doubt that Runyon would win at the primaries and be elected by an overwhelming majority. Such an event would be a splendid victory for reform and a richly deserved rebuke to the bosses and machine."

Quietly Wedded.

Miss Evelyn Martin, of Watchung avenue, and John J. Madden, of Dunellen, were quietly married by Rev. L. R. Howard at his home Saturday night. The young people were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morley, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Madden will make their home in this city.

RULING ON JURY TRIALS IN THE DISTRICT COURT

JUDGE NEWCORN MAKES IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT UNDER NEW LAW.

Judge Newcorn announced a ruling in reference to jury trials in the District Court Tuesday. Hereafter in cases where a jury is desired, the notice must be filed within a day of the date of return of summons, or the jury right is deemed to have been waived and the trial proceeds before the District Judge.

This ruling is in accordance with the provisions of the laws of 1905. Judge Newcorn called the attention of the bar to the law, before making the announcement, in pursuance of its provisions.

The session of the court was very brief, none of the actions being contested. The disposition of the list was as follows:

Elias Genot against James Trimmer, settled; International Textbook Company against Herbert Randolph, contract, adjourned to July 3; Frank Ashton against T. S. Moore, contract, adjourned to June 26; A. B. Seidel, inc., against J. B. Coriell et als, doing business as the Plainfield Brass Foundry, contract, Judgment for $50.28, C. C. Gallup appearing for the plaintiff; Adam Young against Edwin Potts, judgment for possession of premises; New Jersey Produce Company against George Schriber, judgment for $343; Joseph Harrigan against J. F. Doty, judgment in full, W. L. Hetfield, Sr., appearing for the plaintiff.

The case of Swift & Co. against Peter Schlichter et als, on contract, will be tried this afternoon. The action will be stubbornly contested.

Justices Establish New Rules.

Observing the strict methods in vogue at the District Court in the city, the justices of the peace in the borough have posted up new rules. Hereafter everything will be conducted on a cash basis, and all forms of trust have been tabooed. In addition they announce that when a case is called for 10 o'clock it means exactly that time and not twenty minutes later. The word is being passed around to the local lawyers who have been in teh habit of dropping around to the courts at any old time.

Plainfielders Selected for Judges.

James R. Joy, associate editor of the Advocate; Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and Richard Richards, of Orange, brother of Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, have been selected as judges of the compositions for the Potter prize at Yale.

EXERCISES AT Y. M. C. A.

Rev. Mr. Warner Delivers Invocation and James R. Joy Presents Diplomas—Valedictory and Salutatory.

Twenty-one students, comprising the class of '06 of the North Plainfield High School, formally concluded their course as far as local conditions are concerned, Friday, when the annual commencement exercises were held. They took place in Y. M. C. A. hall and the auditorium was barely able to accommodate the gathering of parents and friends.

The class is the largest but one of any that has ever left the school and the graduates formed a pretty picture seated on the platform. With them were James Richard Joy, president of the Board of Education; Superintendent H. C. Krehs and Professor Heicker, of the faculty. The graduates and the courses they completed were as follows:

William Herman Burtis, 4 yr. scientific; Mary Etta Cain, 3 yr. commercial; Charles Henry Doughty, 4 yr. general; Leola Henderson Dunham, 3 yr. general; Arthur Webb Dunning, 3 yr. general; Wilbur Groendyke Dunning, 4 yr. Latin-scientific; Bertha Pilling Englehardt, 3 yr. commercial; George Stanley Fisher, 4 yr. scientific; Mabel Frances Gano, 3 yr. commercial; Dorothy Isabel James, 4 yr. modern language; Leo Ellsworth Kenny, 4 yr. scientific; Ralph Mortimer Kutz, 4 yr. scientific; Edith Miriam Mager, 3 yr. general; Mary Gertrude Neal, 4 yr. classical; Marion Frances Overton, 4 yr. classical; John Pyper Peacock, 4 yr. classical; Mary Alice Robley, 4 yr. classical; Arthur C. Van Arsdale, 3 yr. general; Frank Oceolo Webster, 4 yr. scientific; Bessie May Wyckoff, 4 yr. English; Marion Elizabeth Wyckoff, 3 yr. commercial.

"Invocation by Rev. George A. Warner, pastor of Holy Cross church, opened the programme, and two musical numbers, "Awake, Awake, the Flowers Unfold," and "Evening" were sung by the High School chorus. This organization is composed of mixed voices and the harmony produced was very pleasing. Herbert Lloyd, director of music, led the singing and Miss Myra Emmons presided at the piano.

The salutatory was given by Ralph Mortimer Kutz, the honor having been won through proficiency in studies. His method of delivery was commendable and the remarks well chosen. In part he said:

"In considering the studies that have been pursued during the past four years all seem to be of great value, but as a preparation for the duties of modern life, there is perhaps no subject of as much practical usefulness as science. The study of mechanics is at the basis of all manufactures. Tracing for example the history of the common glass tumbler, from the mining of the constituents of the glass until its completion everything is done by machinery. Street paving materials cannot be produced without machinery. The study of chemistry gives us the science of medicine with its marvelous cures of diseases hitherto regarded as incurable. Agriculture is nowadays carried on in a scientific manner. Science seizes hold of waste products and converts them into useful articles. Sociology or the science of society bears directly on manufactures and industrial success. The science of history considers facts and occurrences of past ages and traces therefrom truths that bear on modern life. Moreover the mental habits that are formed in the study of science are a valuable training for practical life. Science takes nothing for granted and admits nothing unless established by proof. This leads to accuracy of thought and of statement. Science gives the laborer the comforts of life. It makes his work easier and enables him to complete it in a shorter time."

The salutatorian was followed by the speaker of the evening, Senator Thomas J. Hillery, of Boonton, who was introduced by Mr. Joy. The Senator is no stranger in Plainfield, as he so remarked at the outset, having made one of the addresses at the Board of Trade dinner last winter. He has devoted a great deal of time to the study of taxation and school matters in New Jersey and his address contained a brief history of the educational system that proved extremely interesting. After extending congratulations to the students and saying kind words for the instructors, he continued:

"To be accorded the privilege of saying the parting word to this class when you are about to leave the quiet harbor which has thus far sheltered you from life's storms, is an honor to be prized. If that word will advise or encourage or will throw even the dimmest light upon the broad sea of life that awaits you and over which you must steer your course, my object shall have been attained.

"The occasion is a happy one, surrounded as you are by admiring friends and relatives who have come to tender their congratulations, and whose presence is evidence of their interest in the work which you have accomplished and their concern for your welfare. The longer the service, the greater the effort, the more tedious and complex the problem, the greater is the satisfaction in its achievement.

"The mountain climber who traverses the rugged slopes finally rests upon the summit and views with satisfaction the obstacles which lay in the path which he traveled. The engineer, who has labored for years upon a difficult construction, finally views the accomplished fact with a satisfaction which he alone can feel because the achievement belongs to him. To no one in this assemblage does this occasion come so much as to you. Through the long years of study and preparation you have earned the satisfaction which you must feel in this event. If the way had been easy, simple and smooth, if your patience and energy had not been tested, if the work had not seemed dull and tiresome and had not required your persistent and constant effort, this event would seem to you a very ordinary one. As it is, it is one to which the mind will ever revert with pleasure; it is a mile stone in your career; it is a beacon light that will shed its rays along the highway that leads into the future.

"It is said that school days are the happiest time of life, and looking back from middle life when responsibility has piled up about you, from that standpoint it would seem that childhood days, when the world's cares and responsibilities are unknown were indeed the happiest, but viewing from the school period, the time when one longs to reach the period of manhood and womanhood when they may take their places in the world to achieve success and to gain renown, the period of middle life seems the happier one. I believe you will find that period in life the happiest when you have the self-consciousness and satisfaction of knowing that you are 'acting well your part,' whether it be in early or middle life or in your declining years.

Instructors.

"With all the joy and pleasure of this event there is mixed an ingredient of sorrow, the result of leaving the old school home and your patient and faithful instructors. To them is due your gratitude, and only in the years that follow will you thoroughly appreciate their virtues. To them fell the duty of making the first indentations upon the tender intellects and you will bear through life the impressions made upon you by them during school life.

"This condition is hardly less one of great satisfaction to them than it is to you. They rejoice in your success, and it is their hope that the future may be kind to you; that you will take advantage of the opportunities which it holds in store, and I venture that no one will take greater delight or feel more than those who have laid the foundation for it with their own hands.

Your State.

"The State of New Jersey is a watchful and a bountiful parent in the cause of education. As early as 1664 history has it that an old Dutch school master was following his profession in the town of Bergen which is now Jersey City, and in some of the earlier charters and colonists were 'enjoined' to the appointed manner to endeavor to find out ways and means whereby they might support a minister and a school-master, so our forefathers who hewed out their homes in the forest gave their first attention to both the church and the school. As early as 1693 the Assembly of East Jersey enacted a law which recognized the principle of taxing property for the support of the public schools, and was said to be at that time the most advanced legislation on the subject in America.

"The beginning of the school fund was in 1817. The act of the Legislature in that year made certain appropriations for the establishment of a permanent school fund. The present school fund exceeds four millions of dollars. It has been the aim, and I hope it will continue the policy of the State of New Jersey, to provide the necessary means to furnish an education to every child of school age within the borders of the State. By the establishment of a free public school, our forefathers in their wisdom and foresight laid the foundation for the future greatness of our country. They saw that if the resources of the new country were to be developed, if their country was to some day rank with the nations of the world, that 'education,' as they expressed it, 'must be as fere as the air we breathe.'

"As the recipients of these favors at the hands of your State, you owe her the duty of loyalty and devotion to her interests. New Jersey ranks among the foremost States of the Union. You should be proud of her history and traditions. On the first pages of your school history you became familiar with the names of men and places that makes New Jersey renowned throughout this union of States. Her soil has been baptized in the blood of the early patriots; she has not only been loyal to the cause of education and the cause of freedom, but with men and money, with blood and treasure, she demonstrated her loyalty to the cause of the Union.

"By becoming earnest, active and loyal citizens of your State, by defending her institutions and her honor, by doing your part in the progress and development that still awaits her, you will discharge the obligation that rests upon you.

The Future.

"Your face is now turned toward the future. If today you were to be convinced that your store-house of knowledge is filled or that your best effort had been expended, your chances of future success would indeed be small. To gain success should be your greatest aim. Future success is the structure which you must mold with your own hands. You will be your own architect and builder. In these years of preliminary work you have shaped the granite blocks for its foundation. The stability, the symmetry and the beauty of the superstructure will depend upon the work which you do from day to day. Hard, earnest work and application is the price that men pay for genius and greatness. Talent, which is nature's gift, is not a pre-requisite. The plodding, earnest worker will achieve greater success than the talented though lazy one. In the old copy book were these words: 'Time is money,' which meant that time was valuable. It is the proper employment of time, it is its daily, constant and continuous employment that makes a genius, makes experts and brings renown to men in the various professions. The poet well expressed it when he says:

'Count that day lost whose low descending sun views from thy hand no worthy action done.'

Countless examples could be enumerated of men whose names are recorded on the brightest pages of history, who take advantage of the opportunity that time affords. Lincoln pouring over his 'Blackstone' on the counter of a country store, and Garfield translating his Latin for recreation gives us a clue to the method which these men employed in 'ascending to the dizzy heights of fame.'

"To acquire both fame and wealth with honor is a laudible ambition. It was well expressed by someone who said when fame and wealth are not nobly acquired, 'honor becomes dishonor, fame only notoriety and wealth the possession of stolen goods.' While I believe the world grows better daily, it would seem there is still a demand both in public and in private life for the old-fashioned conscientiously honest man.

Country Needs Men.

"Our country stands continually in need of such men. Her great wealth and her rapid growth multiply and intensify and make more complex governamental problems. The pulse of a nation is measured by that of its component, the individual, and that pulse indicates a feeling of unrest from a political standpoint. The development of wealth in this country is unexampled in the history of the world, some of which is without doubt has been acquired by improper methods, by the control of privileges that were not granted by the people. Our country is rich in natural resources, and I believe the greater part of the wealth of the country has been acquired in the development of these resources by the brains and energy of those who were fortunate enough to secure and develop them.

"The true interpretation of the doctrine of 'equality before the law' forbids the ownership of privileges that are special, but permits every man a fair and equal opportunity in the pursuit of wealth. False teachers will rise up and continue to preach the transformation of that doctrine into absolute equality, promising thereby to change the very handiwork of God. While they cannot hope to change the virtues, the energy or the talents of men, they preach the equal distribution of the product, which is wealth. To attempt a limitation of wealth or to hope to make the industrious man share with the laggard is a doctrine that is as dangerous as it is false.

"As long as the world lasts there will be those who will acquire and retain a larger share than their neighbor of the world's goods, and when conditions are such that every man has an equal opportunity, there can be no just complaint from him who fails to get what he considers his share. The dissemination of knowledge by the public schools and other institutions of learning have done much and will continue to do more even distribution of wealth than any other force which is working today. We have our own opinion as to the use of wealth for the betterment of the race, and we sometimes feel that if some of the wealth produced by the 'horny handed toiler' were used to provide a roof tree for himself and family it might answer a higher purpose than the building of marble halls for the storage of books that are seldom read.

Citizenship.

When later you assume the duties and responsibilities of citizenship you will be called upon to discharge the highest duty you owe to your State and country. If you receive no further training you are prepared to take up the questions that will interest you as citizens and perform your duties as such, and you can do your duty well only by taking an active interest in public matters whether they be local, State or national.

"If men who are leaders in a political way assume arbitrary powers it is only because it is permitted through the inattention and inactivity of the people themselves. In a representative government like ours it should be a high aim and a laudable ambition to perform the duties of public official. If the duties of citizenship weigh heavily upon the private citizen, they increase a hundred fold when he accepts a public trust for his public acts will effect the citizens of his town, his State or his country, and in the conduct of his office the advices that he receives may be as variable and as numerous as the ballots in the box that elected him. There is, however, a general consensus of opinion which every public man should heed, and if he uses his best judgment and keeps within his shield, honesty and truth, his position will always be impregnable. He will not escape the jealousy, envy, the prejudice or even the slander of disgruntled ones, but sooner or later the false prop that supports their accusations will be shattered by truth which is ever enduring."

Another selection by the chorus, "Rowing Homewards," was rendered after the audience had liberally applauded the Senator's remarks, and Rev. Mr. Warner then announced. It was given in a manly, straightforward manner by Frank Asecio Webster, who stood at the head of the class when examination points were computed and in the four years he was never absent from the school's peaceful pupils. His subject was "The Advantages of Present Day Education" and in part was as follows:

"The advantages of the present day education can be best appreciated by comparing the conditions of today with those of years ago. The school of our fathers convened in a building that was poorly adapted for educational purposes. Little regard was paid to proper lighting, heating, ventilation and sanitary conditions. The seats and desks were homemade and of but two sizes for all pupils and the teachers in the main were meagrely educated. Discipline was secured by force, and whipping was the universal remedy for misbehavior. The text books usually consisted of an arithmetic, speller and a New Testament as a reading book. In few schools were there any histories, geographies or supplementary readers.

"These conditions have entirely changed. School buildings are constructed according to the best ideas of ventilation, lighting, heating, sanitation and convenience. The teachers are vastly better educated than in former years, moreover more attention is given to the character and personality of the teacher than formerly. The subjects of the old school are all taught and in addition to those many others of great value. Science is taught by means of experiments in suitably equipped laboratories. Attractive text books in all subjects are supplied.

"Methods of securing discipline are also of an entirely different nature. The individual pupil is constantly studied by the teacher. Nervous children are treated altogether differently from phlegmatic children. When punishments are necessary which is comparatively very seldom, each pupil is treated as seems best for his reformation. Instead of treating all pupils alike the modern idea is to treat all pupils differently. Instead of using corporal punishment, which seldom does any good, pupils are led to see their error and inspired to correct it. This makes them more self-reliant than the old plan of unquestioned obedience.

"Of course, today, as always, advantages are only beneficial to those who take advantage of them. However great the opportunities, if pupils do not avail themselves thereof these might as well not exist.

"May the class of 1906 honor themselves and their school by seizing every opportunity to make themselves noble and useful citizens."

Preceding the distribution of diplomas, Mr. Joy took occasion to remark on the unusually large number to receive them and stated that in the ten years that North Plainfield has had a high school grades it has sent out 124 graduates. Many of them are making their mark in the world and those before him were given a few last kindly words of advice as to their course in the future. As had been the custom in the valedictory, Mr. Joy mentioned the advantages that had been provided them but he asserted the Board of Education would be fully repaid for all it's efforts if they would determine to make the best use of the opportunities. A final selection by the chorus, "Comrades Today," brought the programme to a close.

Miss Irene M. Galvin to Wed.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Galvin, who make their home in this city when not traveling with their theatrical company, have issued invitations for the wedding of their daughter, Miss Irene M. Galvin, to John H. Miller, of Emporium, Pa. The ceremony will be performed in St. Mark's church, Emporium, Thursday morning, June 21, at 8 o'clock. Several local friends will attend.

Borough Couple Quietly Wedded.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss J. Augusta Emmons, daughter of Freeholder John Emmons, and J. W. Knox Clark, of 142 Duer street, the borough, which took place on Saturday, June 9, in New York. Rev. Knox Milligan, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, New York, performed the ceremony. The couple is residing at the home of the bride's father.

LITTLE ONES PLAY FOR SWEET CHARITY

COMEDY AND SALE NET $100 FOR THE CHILDREN'S HOME.

For the benefit of the Plainfield Children's Home fair and play given Friday afternoon on the lawn at the home of Dr. E. W. Hedges in Watchung avenue, by the Children's Club, composed of a number of young girls. The affair attracted a good crowd and netted over $100 for the Home. The grounds were attractively decorated for the occasion by the young people and the management of the entire affair by the club was very creditable.

The play given was entitled "Madame De Portment's School," and it was cleverly presented by this cast of characters:

"Madame De Portment," principal, Frances Hyde; pupils, "Mabel Frolics," Frances Zelle; "Gertrude Smiles," Gladys Chase; "Jennie Slow," Katherine Brown; "May Frisky," Edith Foster; "Bridget, a maid, Beatrice Hedges.

After the play there was a sale of candy, ice cream and novelties and a grab-bag furnished much amusement for all.

The members of the Children's Club under whose auspices the affair was given are as follows: President, Beatrice Hedges; treasurer, Katherine Brown; Frances Hyde, Gladys Chase, Esther Brownlee, Alice Smith, Frances Zeelle, Edith Foster, Mary Rushmore, Lelia Hedges, Marjorie Brown, Frances Snell, Ella Beers, Marguerite Ramsay, Harriett Moody and Mildred Brownlee.

LAWN PARTY.

First M. E. Church Epworth League Holds Last Social Event.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church held its last social event of the season, Friday night, at the home of Miss Gertrude Sharp on East Second street, the affair being in the nature of a lawn party. The lawn was prettily decorated with many Japanese lanterns and bunting. The young people to the number of sixty divided their time between playing all kinds of games in the house and the social features out-of-doors. The porch was also decorated and illuminated.

A pleasing diversion was the singing of popular songs. The social committee under whose direction the affair was held served ice cream and cake. A feature, not on the programme, was the serving of ice cream to the motormen and conductors on several trolley cars which were stalled in front of the house for some time. The trolley-men appreciated the hospitality of the Epworthians.

JUNIOR ENDEAVORERS HOLD CLOSING EXERCISES.

Good Reports of Money Raised by a Trinity Church Society.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church held its closing exercises for the summer Friday afternoon, when the treasurer's report was presented and the young people took part in an entertainment.

The treasurer's report showed the receipts for the year to be $84.58 and the disbursements as follows: Arabian Mission, $16; Indian Mission, $16; Miss Winn's work in Japan, $12; Children's Home in Amoy, China, $10; Neherwood Frame Air Home, $2, makin a total of $56.

Juniors who were rewarded for regular attendance during the year were Margaret VanDeventer and Ida VanArsdale; honorable mention, Louise Layton, Elsie Layton, Howard Willett, Alfred Willett, Mildred Premier, Alice Auten.

The programme for the afternoon was as follows: Piano solos, Elmer Frensh, Adelaide Cole, Ernest Stevens, Helen Woolley, Elsie Tier; recitations, Madeline Strader, Alfred Willett, Helen Roberts, Mildred Preimer, Maud McAfee, Adelaide Cole, Elizabeth Winn, Rosamond Rogers, Howard Willett, Raymond Stevens. The Juniors also sang the first Psalm and there was a duet by Helen Leitheusser and Charles Beckman. After the entertainment refreshments were served. The society will not meet again until fall.

First Bridge of the Kind Here.

The construction of the bridge on West End avenue over Green brook is being watched by many masons of the city for the reason that it is the first bridge of this kind to be built in Plainfield or vicinity, and they are curious to see how the work is done. The structure will be of concrete, similar to those to be found in Central Park, New York.

Ray Stevens Now a D. D. S.

Raymond Sperry Stevens, of Grandview avenue, was among the graduates of the University of Pennsylvania department of dentistry Wednesday. He was a classmate of Edward Carroll Galbraith, of West Fourth street. Dr. Stevens has not announced his plans as yet.

Found Old Newspapers.

In looking over some old things in the garret of his house this week, F. L. Lancaster found the first volume of the Philadelphia Ledger, published in 1836. The late Dr. Lancaster, the grandmother, lived in Philadelphia at that time.

MUHLENBURG'S SURPLUS

Hospital Is Stronger Financially Than It Has Been Ever Before.

ALL RECEIPTS $31,840

Strengthened By Benevolences and Money From Freeholders, the Institution Starts New Fiscal Year With Balance of $4,231.

Muhlenberg Hospital is in better financial shape than it has ever been before. It begins with a surplus of $4,231 in the treasury, a condition it never attained before.

Benevolences and donations figured very largely in filling the hospital treasury. They amounted to $17,925. Other receipts from other sources together about $4,000 less.

The treasurer's statement for the year ending June 1, on the different receipts is as follows; it was made public this morning:

Current Receipts: Patients' pay account, $11,228.11; patients' pay account, contract with City of Plainfield, $1,900; board received from special nurses, $382.25; ambulance service, $317.50; rents, $45; interest, $2.18; interest on trust funds, $753.10; miscellaneous, $197; total, $13,625.14.

Special receipts were $27,609.41, an excess of $13,594.27 over such receipts; this excess was offset by the gifts, and receipts from other sources, as follows:

Individual cash donations, $2,873.88; hospital Sunday collections in churches, $1,311.36; charity ball, $1,727; from Union County Board of Freeholders, $4,800; carnival, 1906, $7,100; total, $17,925.40.

POLICE WILL STOP ALL PREMATURE CELEBRATION

NO FIREWORKS TO BE ALLOWED ON STREETS UNTIL THE FOURTH.

Chief of Police Kiely announced this morning that the law regarding the sale and the use of firearms and fireworks would be strictly enforced from now until after the Fourth of July spirit had waned.

The chief will pay particular attention to the cartridge and toy pistol business. Dealers will be held strictly accountable for every firearm that may be sold to boys under fifteen years old, which is the limit set by the law. Every revolver sold must be registered by the dealer, the number of the weapon as well as the name and address of the buyer, being put in the record.

No firecrackers will be allowed on the streets until the dawning of the Fourth, unless special permission is granted. This rule will be rigorously executed, and small boys who try premature celebrations will find themselves in trouble if a cop catches them at it. Even the humble torpedo will be taboo on the streets.

Auto Association Growing.

The promoters of the Owners' Garage of New Jersey, which was organized at the Casino a week ago, have decided to meet at the Casino on Thursday night, June 21, to perfect the organization and take steps to become incorporated. The number of signers to stock has been increased slightly and new members are constantly being received.

Silence.

Trying to Secure Son's Release.

Mrs. William Ross, of East Second street, is circulating a petition for signers for the purpose of securing, if possible, the release of her son from State Prison. He was sentenced to three years, after being convicted of a serious charge. The petition will be sent to the proper authorities in the hope of securing favorable action.

Runyon or Perkins?

Judge William N. Runyon, the leader of the Colby movement in Union county, is now being boomed for the assembly. The courts contain the acting county election districts Runyon and Perkins will both be in the same district and will have to contest for the nomination or election.—Westfield Leader.

Lost Boy Like Lost Umbrella.

The artist stopped at the little cabin where an old colored mammy was bending over a big tub.

"Good morning, mammy," greeted the tourist.

"Mawnin', sah," responded mammy.

"Where's your son Sam?"

"Gone, sah; I dunno when."

"Well, he always was a bad boy, mammy."

"Dey he was, suh. He was dess lak dat blue umbrella Ah los' in de thunderstohm. He was hahd to raise, he suttenly hahd to raise, an' ahtah Ah did raise him he jes' jumped away f'um me, an' Ah ain't seen him since."

LION ATTACKS A HORSE

'Bob' Fitzsimmons' Pet Breaks Loose and Tries to Kill.

HORSES SAVED BY FITZ

He Thumps the Lion With a Hammer and Puts It To Sleep—Then Patches Up Victim.

Bob Fitzsimmons's pet lion cub, "Senator," tried to eat a horse Friday afternoon. Fitz saw the attempt and checked "Senator's" epicurean onslaught with a mallet. The horse is in pretty good shape today, but Senator feels very rocky.

The horse is one of a team owned by Henry Gallagher, of Gallagher's Corner. Gallagher drove the team on the Fitzsimmons place, at West Dunellen, with a load of cinders for walk construction. He scattered the cinders about the paths, and in the course of the work, the horses came within the sight of "Senator," chained on a spike arrangement. Senator is a good-natured cub and would never think of hurting a man, but he feels toward horses pretty much as dogs do toward cats, only more so on account of his appetite.

"Senator" looked at the Gallagher team with gleaming eyes, and tugged restlessly at his chain. The chance looked too good, and the cub finally launched into a tremendous leap. The pole that held down the chain came loose, and "Senator" leaped for the nearest horse.

Gallagher watching Gallagher scatter the cinders and he saw "Senator" coming. He picked up a hammer and went for the lion. "Senator" managed to land one lick on the horse before Fitz got to him, but after that he was up against it a good deal worse than the horse. Fitz banged him with full-swing blows, and "Senator" gave up notions of horse slaughter to sleep on the ground. When Fitz got through with him, the cub knew what a knockout felt like.

The horse's shoulder was badly torn. Fitz himself stitched it up, and made matters right with Gallagher. For some reason the horses did not bolt.

"Bob" is in fairly good shape, and will be back in harness in a day or two, but "Senator" feels ill. His head is sore.

FITZSIMMONS REFUSES $2,500 FORFEIT MONEY

ASSERTS HE WILL STAND BY TUXEDO CLUB IN ITS HARD LUCK.

Plainfield's favorite athlete, Bob Fitzsimmons, the local pugilist who is known as "The Grand Old Man of the Ring," has further endeared himself to the hearts of sports by refusing to take the $1,000 forfeit due him when the Tuxedo Athletic Club, of Philadelphia, failed to get permission for his bout with Tommy Burns to go on. One of the stipulations of the contract was that each fighter should receive that amount in the event of the match being called off and yesterday Burns declared he was out and demanded the money. It was promptly paid him and the officials of the club immediately afterward communicated with "Bob" to know how he stood. This is the reply that was sent back from the Dunellen farm:

"I do not want to make it a business travelling over the county claiming club forfeits because the promoters strike a bit of misfortune. My business is boxing. Get the club that is another competitor for me, since Burns is so eager to crawl out of a match. I do not care who it is —O'Brien, Hart, Kaufmann, Berger or any boxer in the world. I never felt better in my life. When Burns quibbled down the size of the ring I was satisfied that he was convinced that I could outgeneral and outbox him. The Tuxedo Club officials I have found to be fair sportsmen, and I am proud to assert myself as one of the company. They have had hard luck, and you can say that Bob Fitzsimmons will stand by them."

This attitude of Bob's was surprising to the officials but their good feeling toward him was increased 100 per cent and sporting circles in general are saying "Fitz is all wool and a yard wide." The former champion was convinced from the first postponement that the fight would not be allowed and without any "kick" whatever, paid all his training expenses out of his own pocket and simply waited developments.

Arithmetical.

"Yes," said the old mathematician, with a gleam in his eyes, "I've always looked at it that way. Marriage is addition, when the little ones come it's multiplication, when dissensions looms up to cloud the horizon of their happiness it's division and when the final parting comes it's subtraction."

"And how about divorce?" asked the listener.

"Oh, I guess that would come under the denomination of fractions."—New York Press.

NEW LAW FOR N.G. OF N.J.

Three-Year Enlistment Term To Improve the Service.

DROP MEN FROM ROLLS

Law Approved by Governor Is Put In Pamphlet Form — Its Substance.

The State military bill, which was approved by Governor Stokes on May 16, has been put in pamphlet form, and copies of it are being distributed to the officers of the command. It contains many interesting features. Probably the most important to the majority of the rank and file is the provision in paragraph 79, which makes the maximum strength of each of the companies 107 officers and enlisted men. Another feature—one that is pleasing to the company commandants as well as to the higher officials in the various regiments—is the three instead of five year term of enlistment, which should tend to increase and improve the membership in the various commands. Company commandants, under the new bill, are empowered to have dropped from the roll names of men who are engaged in such employment as will prevent them from properly attending to the duties required of them as guardsmen.

The three-year term of enlistment has already had a good effect in the regiments. Many men have enlisted under the three-year term who would not have done so if they were compelled to serve the longer period of service. In this way the company commandants will have a much easier time in keeping their respective commands up to the mark, and, by having power to drop from the old roll men who are unable to attend to military duty, will find it much easier to make a favorable showing at the inspections conducted by the State and regular army officers.

The companies, as they will be made up under the provisions of the new law, will be comprised of one captain, one first lieutenant, one second lieutenant, one first sergeant or one quartermaster sergeant, four sergeants, eight corporals, two cooks, one artificer and eighty-seven privates. Formerly the strength of a company was three commissioned officers and eighty-one enlisted men. The minimum strength was fifty, as it will also be under the provisions of the new law. No man who has been dishonorably discharged from any military organization of this State, except those who have been discharged for the non-payment of a fine and have subsequently paid the same, will be eligible for enlistment, and men who have been discharged by reason of disbandment or for physical disability, if re-enlisted, shall receive credit for the period of service served prior to their discharge. Every man who enlists or re-enlists will have to pass a physical examination before being mustered into the service.

Paragraph 103, relating to "dropping from the roll," which will be of interest to the men of the various commands, reads as follows:

"An enlisted man who shall remove his residence from the State or to such distance from the armory of his organization or enter into such employ as in the judgment of his company, troop, battery, signal and telegraphic corps, or a naval reserve commander, will render it impracticable for him to perform his duties properly, or who, after due diligence, cannot be found, or who shall be convicted of a felony, may be dropped from the roll by order of the commanding officer of his division. An enlisted man dropped from the roll by reason of his removal or character of employment, may be taken up at any time upon his return to the State or change in his employment, in his former organization or in any other organizations, upon the approval of the commandant of the organization to which he formerly belonged, and men thus taken up shall receive credit for the time served before having been dropped."

Paragraph 114 of the law provides that the colonels of the five regiments and the senior officer of the naval reserve shall be added to the State Military Board, which board will have full charge of armories and shall issue from time to time regulations for the control and use thereof, and also will prepare and submit such rules to the commander-in-chief as they may deem wise for the betterment of the organization.

In the future a musical organization of the regiment will be classified as a company and when the appropriation for the maintenance of the respective regiments is made the musical organization will figure as it it were a regular company of infantry, the figuring to be upon the eleven-[illegible] provides that on the first Monday of April in each year, for the purpose of procuring drill rooms or armories, or to defray other expenses incident to the existence of such regiments or other organizations, the following sums will be paid, respectively: To the commandant officer of each troop of cavalry, $2,000; Battery A, $1,750; Battery B, $750; signal and telegraphic corps, $1,750, and to each regimental commander a sum [illegible] equal to $500 for each company and musical organization of his regiment; this money to be expended by the board of officers of the respective commands, subject to the approval of the commanding officer.

The bill also created a new medical department, which will be known as the "medical department of the militia," and will be under the control and direction of the surgeon general. All candidates for appointment as medical officers will be ex*amined as to their ability to dis*charge, in a satisfactory manner, all the duties of surgeon, assistant surgeon, or hospital steward, such examination to be conducted by the surgeon general.

A sum of $30 has been allowed every officer of regiments, troops, batteries, companies, signal corps and naval reserve commands, for purpose of aiding them in providing themselves with the arms, uniforms and equipment as provided by the regulation and bill of dress of the State. The appropriation will not be forthcoming this year, owing to the fact that no provision was made for such in the appropriation bill which was recently passed by the Legislature.

MISS EDITH G. VAIL WEDDED YESTERDAY

BECOMES MRS. FRANK KNIGHT BY FRIENDS' CEREMONY.

In the Friends meeting house on Watchung avenue, Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Miss Edith Gertrude Vail, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert Vail, of East Sixth street, and Frank Corman Knight, of Elmwood place, pledged themselves as man and wife. The ceremony was conducted in accordance with the Friends custom, the vows being taken in the presence of a committee appointed by the sect, and the families and friends, no clergyman officiating. In all there was an attendance of 150, guests being present from Jersey City, Lakewood, North Branch, Dunellen, Fanwood, Easton, Phillipsburg and New York.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mabel Vail, as bridesmaid, and John Knight, Jr., was best man. The ushers were Clarence B. Vail, Harry Knight, Horace Vail, Percy Vail and Harvey Vail. The bride and bridesmaid entered the meeting house and proceeded up one side to the front where they were met by the groom and best man who had walked up opposite them. Standing before the gathering the bride and groom recited the marriage obligation after which they shook hands and kissed. The bridal party then took seats beside each other and the head usher produced the wedding certificate which was signed by all four. This completed it was passed to Margaret Vail who read it aloud. W. D. Williams and Mrs. C. B. Vail made appropriate remarks and Rev. C. C. Herring, the groom's pastor, was introduced and offered prayer. In conclusion the young couple were greeted by the Friends' Committee consisting of W. D. Williams, Mrs. Thomas S. Young, Catherine Webster and William Angel. All present were afterward invited to append their names to the certificate.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, and Mr. and Mrs. Knight received congratulations. They left in the evening for a wedding trip of a week or ten days and on returning will make their home on East Sixth street. The groom is an employee of the Pond Tool Works and is widely known in the city and borough. The bride received a large array of gifts comprising silverware, cut glass and articles of furniture.

At the ceremony, the bride's mother wore the gown of pearl gray silk in which she was married *thirty-two years ago tomorrow. The meet*ing house was prettily decorated with flowers and at the house a color scheme of green and white was maintained.

No Wonder.

"Yes," said the bottle of ginger ale, "I hate these temperance cranks."

"My! You don't say?" exclaimed the lemon-squeezer.

"Yes," said the other, "if I'm ever drunk it will be on account of them."

Hopeless.

"Oh, see here!" exclaimed the patient friend, "if you don't like your job why don't you get another one?"

"I would," replied the chronic kicker, "if I was sure I'd like it any better."

New Zealand to Broadway.

That "All roads lead to Broadway" was exemplified a few evenings ago in the Marlborough rathskeller. A New Yorker from the west was dining an old friend of years ago, whom he had met in the "main street" a few moments before. They were discussing "meals I have eaten," when the guest remarked:

"The worst deal I ever got was a plate of wheat cakes served in Auckland, New Zealand, about ten years ago, while I was spending a few weeks there."

"I served you those cakes, sir," remarked the waiter, who was listening to the conversation. "They certainly were the limit."

A short talk with the waiter proved that he was right, and it earned him an addition to the usual tip.

SENIORS PRESENT PLAY

"The Bachelor's Congress" Produced at the N.P.H.S. Class Day Exercises.

IT PROVES AMUSING

Following the Entertainment at Park Club a Dance Is Enjoyed By Graduates and Their Friends.

Class Day exercises which are looked forward to by the members of a senior class with an interest second only to commencement, were held in the Park Club Wednesday by the graduates of the North Plainfield High School. The capacity of the clubhouse was tested to the limit by the parents and friends. The programme, a little different than those of the past, took the form of a play in three acts, entitled "The Bachelor's Congress," and it afforded plenty of amusement for all. The cast was an excellent one and each one took his or her part exceptionally well.

The plot was a light one, but was sufficient to hold the attention of the audience from first to last. The play opened with a prologue in which the scene was the drawing room of Jack Benton's bachelor quarters at Groveland on the Delaware, and the finale was the same as the prologue. The second act represented "The Bachelor's Congress," a dream of Jack Benton, the action of which takes place in the town hall. Jack Benton, a millionaire, which part was taken by Jack Peacock, was in love with Betty Sawyer, which part was taken by Mary Robley. She was him down by mistake, becomes disgusted with all the women and vows he'll have nothing to do with them. Count Alphonse Jaquette, an amateur hypnotist, Frank Webster, puts Peacock in an hypnotic state and the second scene, the congress of bachelors is a dream, in which the young met set forth the advantages of single life. Particularly good was the acting of Frank Webster, and a song, "Ma Honey," by Clarence Steiner, also won much applause. There were other specialties which kept the audience in continual laughter. In the finale Peacock is awakened from his trance, he forgives Betty and everything is lovely.

The women who were present at the congress watching the proceedings, became boisterous and finally so disgusted the men that they give up their seats to the fair sex and retire. The young women then take hold of affairs and entertain with recitations, songs and instrumental music. There was a vocal duet by the Misses Edith Mager and Mabel Gano, while Miss Myra Emmons played several selections on the piano. Miss Mary Robley read the usual paper, in which every member of the class received a share of "roast." Those taking part in the play were all in costume of old-fashioned style.

Following the play the seniors and their friends remained for a dance. Miss Mary Collier presided at the piano.

The characters in the prologue and finale was as follows: Jack Benton, a millionaire in love with Betty, Jack Peacock; Count Alphonse Jaquette, an amateur hypnotist, Frank Webster; Hezekiah Conover, professional mesmerist, Ralph Kutz; James, Jack's valet, William Burtis; Mrs. Percy Benton, Jack's mother, Miss Mary Neal; Helen Benton, Jack's sister, Miss Mabel Gano; Julia Benton, Jack's sister, Miss Bessie Wyckoff; Betty, a housemaid, Miss Marion Overton; Betty Sawyer, Miss Mary Robley.

The cast of the play follows:

Raymond de boursey Shakespeare, an actor, Ralph Kutz; Willie Severhood, Jack Knight of the wood, Charles Doughty; Percy Claudo Birdhead, a dude, George Parsons; Longfellow Tennyson, Harry Smith; Judge Blackstone Blowhard, lawyer, Wilbur Dunning; Dr. Caromel Pillmaker, physician, Frank Webster; Medford Slasher, reporter, Arthur Dunning; Thomas Edison Westinghouse, inventor, William Burtis; Always Reddy, fireman, George Bailey; Sheik Abou Ben Abraham, necromancer, Stanley Fisher; Hon. Dudley Slick, politician, Leslie Powlson; Paderewski Ivory Pounder, pianist, Arthur Van Arsdale; Zeb West, policeman, Leo Kenney; Slave of Sheik, Clarence Steiner; Miranda Powdermaker, M. D., Dorothy James; Prunella Charlotte Poppleton, Edith Mager; Henrietta Albertint Spicer, Mabel Gano; Philopena Drinkwater, Bertha Engiehart; Patience Sparrowgrass, Leola Dunham; Araminta Sourdrop, Marion Overton; Sophronia Angelina Loveless, Bessie Wyckoff; Polly Ann Bowersox, Mary Neal; Concertina Brown, Myra Emmons; Mehitable Spooner, Mary Cain; Gladys Edna Perkins, Mary Robley; Georgetta Spearmint, Maud Emmons; Betsy Jane Squeers, May Wyckoff.

The Little Woman.

Mamma—The groceries only came to ninety cents; there should be ten cents change from the dollar.

Esie—Why—er—they were selling some molasses candy at ten cents a pound and it seemed such a great bargain I didn't think you'd want to miss it.

GRADUATION EXERCISES OF PISCATAWAY SCHOOLS

HELD LAST NIGHT IN THE NEW MARKET BAPTIST CHURCH.

Before an audience that filled the auditorium to its limits, the graduating exercises of the Piscataway township schools were held at the New Market Baptist church Wednesday. The church was prettily decorated with flowers.

The graduates numbered twenty-two, nine boys and thirteen girls. They were: Harriet Smith, Maud Ruppell, Joseph Morecraft, Jr., John McDonough, 10th year; Anna Willis, Anna McCullough, Bessie Lichendort, Ethel Foreman, Ethel Jones, Edith Giles, Frank Conklin, Helen Bunting, Jennie Dunn, John Scheuck, James Whitney, Merle Randolph, Myrta Dunn, Marjorie Soper, Paul Whitford, Patrick McDonough, Sarah Dayton, William Brown.

Joseph Morecraft, Jr., was the valedictorian, and Bohn Jacobs the salutatorian. The chief address was delivered by Rev. Dr. John H. Raven, of Piscataway.

The programme was opened by Rev. H. N. Jordan, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, with prayer. After the salutatory, John McDonough recited "The American Flag;" and then followed the graduation song, essays by Maud Rüppell and Harriet Smith, recitation by Merle Randolph, essay by Sarah Dayton, recitations by Marjorie Soper, Helen Bunting and Jennie Dunn. Joseph Morecraft's valedictory oration was on "Character as an Element of Success."

Dr. Raven spoke after the valedictory. Otto Muller played a violin solo. W. P. Metz, the township superintendent, presented the class to the audience and Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the church, addressed them.

The diplomas were given out by D. J. Perrine, president of the Board of Education. Rev. Mr. Jordan spoke the benediction.

After the graduation, a social was held in Friendship Hall, next to the church, under the auspices of the Farther Lights Society.

A New Auto Garage.

Excellent progress is being made with the alterations to the property on West Second street, owned by E. M. Laing and his son, Allen B. Laing. The dwelling will be converted into two stores and four flats of six rooms each with bath. The entire front will be of brick, three stories high. A driveway will be provided for on the north side of the building to the rear of the property, where Allen B. Laing will erect a large auto garage. This will be erected close to the Bolce, Runyon & Co. coal and lumber sheds and will be built of brick.

MISS HURLBUT TO WED.

Daughter of Former Plainfield Pastor to Become Wife of Minister.

Miss Bertha Hurlbut, daughter of Rev. Dr. Jesse Lyman Hurlbut, formerly pastor of the First M. E. church, this city, and now pastor of the M. E. church at Bloomfield, will be married on Thursday, June 21, to Rev. George Prior Dougherty, pastor of the Broad Street Methodist church, Trenton. Miss Hurlbut was graduated last week from Vassar College.

William Nesbitt, a classmate of the bridegroom-elect, will be the *best man, and Miss Jessie Kur*sheedt, of New York, will be bridesmaid. Frederick Witte, of Trenton, and Louis Architect, of New York, will be the ushers. Mr. Dougherty has been pastor of the Trenton church for two years.

A Christening Ceremony.

A christening ceremony took place recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Clinton Wilmerding, Belvidere avenue, Netherwood. Katherine Lincoln Wilderding, aged seven months, being baptized by Rev. Dr. Burrus. Miss Esther Bigoney acted as godfather and Mrs. Arthur Plimpton, of New York, was the godmother. The home was beautifully decorated, and after the ceremony luncheon was served. Among those present besides the host and hostess were Miss Katherine Rutgers Lincoln, Mrs. Thomas A. Wilmerding, Miss Henrietta Wilmerding, William E. Wilmerding, Jr., Stoney, Mrs. Arthur Plimpton, Dr. Charles B. Matherson, Miss Elizabeth Matherson, Mrs. Sidney S. Schuyler, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic L. Small, J. Lynch Pendergast, G. VanNest and the Misses Lawrence, Mrs. W. Gahagan, Masters Pelham Clinton Wilmerding and Hamden Bache Wilmerding and Miss Madeline Rutgers Wilmerding.

KUENLEN CASE WHERE IT WAS AT THE START

MOTHER RETURNS HOME, CONVINCED "MISS DIEM" IS NOT HELEN.

Mrs. Marie Kuenlen, of West Front street, whose daughter, Miss Helen Kuenlen, disappeared from home on April 21, returned last night from Lancaster, Pa., feeling assured that it was not her daughter that stopped at the home of Mrs. Mary Malbert, a few days ago. The girl thought to be Miss Kuenlen was not seen, but when Mrs. Kuenlen was told that she had blue eyes and a head of light hair, she felt convinced that the woman was not her daughter, because she has brown eyes and a heavy head of hair. In many other respects the woman answered the description.

The result of the trip to Lancaster leaves the searchers exactly where they were a week after the girl disappeared. They knew then, approximately, in what neighborhood she was likely to be found. She had been seen in Newark, and later in Roselle, and the search was carried on between here and the State metropolis. As the days went on, and it was seen that no further news of the girl could be found in this neighborhood, the police and the other searchers threw their hands up, and waited for outside information. It was felt that the girl was as likely to be in Germany as Union county, and that feeling has returned.

One day last week Chief Kiely received an anonymous not telling him that the girl was still alive, but not much attention has been paid to it. The chances are that it was written by a crank who has been wrought up over the case.

"This is one of the most puzzling cases I ever handled," said Chief Kiely this morning. "What I would like to know, first of all, to a certainty, is how much money the girl had with her when she left. Mrs. Kuenlen says she doesn't know. The money question is important, because the distance she travels and the amount of time she can keep herself in retirement depends on the sum of money Miss Kuenlen had with her."

FEMININE PHILOSOPHY.

Man's description of the ideal woman: The other fellow's wife.

Whether flattery is pleasing or not depends to a large extent upon the flatterer.

To Have Sweet Peas All Summer.

When the sweet peas come into bloom, cut their flowers off as soon as they are done. All writers in The Outing Magazine, prevents them from forming seed, and the plants, in their efforts to perpetuate their kind, will straightway produce more flowers, and keep on doing this as *long as interfered with. In this man*ner flowers are secured throughout the entire season. But, if seed is allowed to form, you will have comparatively few flowers during the latter part of summer.

Plainfield Assessors Progressing.

The Plainfield Board of Assessors is making excellent progress in its work and thus far the assessors have not encountered many obstacles aside from the customary general kick. The assessors are obliged to complete their work so as to report to the Union County Board of Assessors on or before July 1, at which time the county rate is fixed, after which the local rate will be determined. The Common Council will examine the books and they must be returned to Tax Collector John W. Murray, Jr., by October 1, so that he can have them necessary time to collect the taxes before December 15.

SECRETLY WEDDED A YEAR DAVIS - BOWEN NUPTIALS

Dr. Sidney Titsworth Married at "Little Church Around the Corner."

Miss Marion Plummer Bowen Wedded to Archibald D. Davis Today.

HAS JUST GRADUATED A HOME CEREMONY

In College At Time He Fell In Love With Miss Snydecker, a Nurse at Good Wright Hospital.

Rev. Drs. Richards and Zelie Officiate—Bride a Daughter of Henry P. Bowen.

Dr. Sydney R. Titsworth, of West Fifth street, who was graduated Wednesday from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, surprised his family and friends today by announcing that he had been married for a year. His bride was Miss Ethel M. Snydecker of New York.

The marriage was the culmination of a romance of hospital work. A year ago Dr. Titsworth, then still pursuing his studies at college, was interne at the J. Good Wright Hospital, New York. Miss Ethel M. Snydecker was a trained nurse at the institution, and the two became acquainted. Their friendship rapidly became something warmer, and one June day they went to the Little Church Around the Corner. When they came out Miss Snydecker was Mrs. Titsworth.

Dr. Titsworth did not care to make his marriage known at that time, and the matter has been closely kept. A few days ago he brought his wife to Plainfield and announced the marriage. His mother was as much surprised as anyone to hear of it.

Dr. and Mrs. Titsworth are in town today. They will spend a short time here, prior to going to Bridgeport, Conn., where Dr. Titsworth has been appointed an interne in a hospital. They will be there eighteen months.

Dr. Titsworth was born in Plainfield and has always lived here. He was graduated from the Plainfield High School, after which he entered *Columbia University, where he be*gan his preparation for a professional career.

COURT PRECEDENT AS TO CROP-SHARING

JUSTICE DECLARES WORKING PARTNER MUST DELIVER SHARE.

By a verdict rendered Wednesday, in the case of Christopher Herlich against George Bowers, of Warrenville, Justice Brampton, of Bound Brook, has established a precedent in relation to farming on shares. The ruling is, that if one where there is no express agreement as to other disposition, the working partner must deliver the other's share to him, as well as harvest it.

Herlich and Bowers entered into an agreement to share the crop grown on Bowers' farm in Warrenville. The yield was 160 stacks. Bowers put his share, eighty stacks, in his barn, but allowed Herlich's to rot in the field.

Herlich sued for the value of his share, on the ground that Bowers should have delivered it at his, Herlich's barn. Bowers contended that he was not required to deliver the Herlich share. Evidence was brought, however, to show that it was the custom in such cases for the one who harvested the crop to deliver it, and Justice Brampton ruled against the defendant on this evidence. He gave Herlich a verdict on a basis of the market value of the corn, which is thirty cents a stack. With costs, the verdict against Bowers amounted to $28.

F. J. Blatz, of this city, appeared for Herlich. Bowers' lawyer was Horace Coddington, of Somerville.

Degrees for Plainfielders.

Among the graduates from Princeton University, this week, is George Stewart Simons, jr., of this city, who is to take up the practice of science. In the academic senior class Frank Peterson Simons, of this city, received the degree of bachelor of arts.

J. E. Flannery's New Location.

J. E. Flannery, the blacksmith and carriage man, whose shop on East Third street was recently bought by D. C. Smalley, has decided to locate across the street. He has purchased from the heirs of former Tax Collector John Johnson the property at Church and East Third streets, and will remove the present one on it to the rear of the house face the former thoroughfare. He will then build a two-story modern structure for the continuance of his business.

The Scotch Plains school system stands at present without a principal, the recent resignation having declined to serve. Howard White, who had held the position for five years, recently tendered his resignation, and J. B. Stauffer, of Lancaster, Pa., was named as his successor. Mr. Stauffer met the Board of Education a few days ago and when he learned that the High School course was to be eliminated, he decided not to take the place. Several other candidates are under consideration and the position will be filled during the summer.

Miss Marion Plummer Bowen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Elliot Bowen, of this city, and Archibald Deming Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. Davis, of Lakewood, N. J., were married this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, 740 Watchung avenue, Rev. Dr. William R. Richards and Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie officiating.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Pierrepont Beers Foster, of New Haven, Conn., and Mr. Davis had for his best man Lefferts Mason Dashiell, of Lakewood. Little Miss Dorothy Greenleaf McKenzie, of this city, acted as flower girl and Master Charles Dickerman Williams, of Netherwood, as page.

The bride was attired in a white satin gown trimmed with point lace. She wore a tulle veil and carried a bouquet of white sweet peas. The matron of honor, Mrs. Pierrepont Beers Foster, was gowned in white silk mull and lace and wore a black ostrich plume and her bouquet was pink sweet peas.

The rooms were decorated with flowers and palms, the ceremony being performed under an arch of vines and June roses. Following the wedding a reception was given to the relatives and a few intimate friends.

Mr. Davis and his bride will make their home in Lakewood, following a honeymoon of two months' duration.

PLAINFIELD YOUNG MAN CLIMBING FAME'S LADDER

DR. EDWARD GALBRAITH'S GRADUATION RECALLS HIS RISE FROM A POOR BOY.

At the annual Commencement exercises of the dental department of the University of Pennsylvania, held in the American Academy of Music, Philadelphia, Wednesda, the degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery was conferred upon Edward Carroll Galbraith, son of Maria and the late Peter Galbraith, of 1004 West Fourth street, this city. In addition he received a special diploma for oral surgery from the mayor and health authorities of Philadelphia in recognition of his work and research in the connection of the palate closer of the mouth and oral deformities pursued under the celebrated oral surgeon Prof. Cryer, of Brockley hospital.

Dr. Galbraith's graduation and rise to the dental profession is an example of what can be done by pluck and perseverance and he represents a distinct type of the self-made man. Only a few years ago he was a poor boy in Plainfield, but on leaving St. Mary's Parochial school he determined to make his mark in the world and all through since has been devoted to climbing the latter of success. Without resources at the start he has worked himself through the New York Preparatory school, securing the degree of A. B., completed a three years course in New York College of Dental Surgery and took the full course in the University of Pennsylvania which he finished Wednesday.

While pursuing his college career, the young man was active in other directions and held the position of private secretary to Dr. Stack, one of the best known politicians in Hudson county and who was candidate for mayor in Hoboken last Fall. He directed all of Dr. Stack's campaigns and was successful many times. He enjoys the confidence and respect of many of the State's prominent officials and while at the U. of P., formed the acquaintance of Drs. William Goyheneix and Beltrami, of Paris; Sociologist Wagner, of Berlin; Booker T. Washington and other celebrated scientists and educators.

After a month's vacation in the woods of Maine with some college friends, the doctor will take up the practice of dental and oral surgery in New York and make his home in Plainfield.

Mrs. Davis Addressed Society.

The Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel held the last meeting of the season, Friday afternoon, at which a large attendance of members was addressed by Mrs. Isabelle Charles Davis former secretary of The King's Daughters' Union. The society recently received an appeal from the Presbyterian board for aid in restoring the San Francisco missions destroyed by the earthquake and Mrs. Davis talked of her experience in that city while on a visit two years ago. She described scenes in Chinatown and other districts and told what a good work had been carried on. When she concluded the society voted $10 to the cause. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

CHARGES WATER HOLD-UP

E. M. French Says Company Is Working Against Highland Park.

DENIAL BY COMPANY

Asks Only What Has Been Customary, and Mr. French Is First One To Refuse Guarantee.

Through a hitch in the arrangements between the Water Company and Elston M. French, owner of Highland Park, the water service designed for the Park tract has been held up. There is a deadlock, according to Mr. French, and he says it may be necessary to build a private water works to give the Park service. He states that he has already begun to figure on that line.

Mr. French declares the company is trying to work a hold-up. It has demanded a guarantee of ten cents a foot for every foot of pipe laid on the property, for five years, he says, before it will consent to lay in mains. Fifteen thousand feet of pipe are required, making the total amount for which the promoter is to be held responsible $7,500. Moreover, according to Mr. French, the company demands that the bond be furnished by a surety company, which would require him to put up collateral and keep it tied up until the bond had expired.

"It is a outrage," said Mr. French this morning. "They are trying to work a hold-up and nothing else."

Steps have been taken, Mr. French said, for the erection of a private water supply system. C. F. Schring is figuring on the contract for sinking wells and erecting a pumping station.

"It is customary in all such cases to ask for a guarantee of ten cents a running foot on unimproved property," said a water company representative when asked about the case. "Other promoters give it and there is no reason why Mr. French should not. The guarantee does not cover the money we sink in the ground in such cases, and we take the risk of the property benefiting when it is calculating on a return investment.

"William Cooper, of Siegel-Cooper Co., president of the Central Land and Improvement Company, which is building up property on Evergreen, Martine and Prospect avenues, guaranteed the water company for 5,000 feet of pipe, without demur. He said the guarantee was very reasonable and was quite willing to pay it. We are not asking Mr. French any more than we ask other people; the guarantee has always been the rule, and Mr. French is the first man who has refused to pay it. We laid a long line of pipe on Evergreen avenue for Mr. French, on his assurance that he would build a number of houses and he only built one.

"It is not true that he has asked for 15,000 feet. He has asked for 2,500."

MANAGER BURKE GETS HIMSELF INTO A MIX-UP

SAID TO HAVE BROKE AGREEMENT OF ASSOCIATION AND COVERED GAME.

Manager Frank Burke of the Elizabeth Stars has started to hoodwink the baseball public (it is said, as well as the Inter-State Baseball Association, of which he is a member, by having published in the New York papers on Monday mornings fake scores of games played on the Star grounds on the preceding day. An instance of one of his alleged tricks was revealed yesterday morning in the New York Press, which credited the Stars defeating the Watchung team by the score of 2 to 0, when as a matter of fact, it is said, the Stars violated the rules of the Inter-State Association by playing the Philadelphia Giants, which team is now controlled by the Not Strong-Schlicter syndicate. Elizabeth won the game 1 to 0.

Burke originally had a game booked with Chicago but Manager Bernham put a stop to it, it is said, on the claim that Chicago was violating the rules of the National Commission, in respect to the "five men to the limit." Burke afterward booked the Manhattans but when he discovered the Philadelphia Giants had an open date and would go on at a cheaper figure, it is alleged that he booked the colored "outlaw" team and threw overboard the Manhattans which club is also a member of the Inter-State Association.

Murderer Hid in This City.

Frederick Lang, the young man who murdered his cousin, Katie Gordon, at New Brunswick recently, detailed his wanderings after the crime for the first time Saturday. He told the Middlesex county authorities that after shooting the girl he fled to Plainfield and spent the night in this city. In the morning he boarded a Jersey Central freight train and went to Bethlehem, Pa. From there he went to New York, thence back to New Brunswick, where he was captured.

COUNTY TAX BOARD MEETS HERE FRIDAY

LOCAL ASSESSORS TO RECEIVE INSTRUCTIONS AS TO THEIR DUTIES.

The Union County Board of Tax Commissioners will convene in the Common Council rooms on North avenue, Friday morning, for the purpose of meeting the local Board of Assessors and giving it the proper instructions in its work of assessing, which means that personal and real estate must be assessed at true value. The meeting will be held at 10 o'clock.

With the exception the county board has talked to all of the assessors in the county, but how that one escaped no one seems to know. According to the announced intention of the board to see that the law is strictly observed, if the one assessor who escaped is not properly enlightened he may meet with some surprises.

The work generally throughout the county seems to be progressing satisfactorily, although some of the assessors are plodding along at their same old gait. Those who have "sized up" the new commissioners at their true value foretell for these a time of sever tribulation when the day arrives for the making up of the books and the hearing of their work by the county board.

The assessor in one of the wards of Elizabeth is reported missing and it is understood that he is working somewhere in New York. Although the members of the board will not give any hint as to the conclusions they have arrived at it is generally admitted that the members are well satisfied with the progress of the work.

STATE CHARGE WILL BE MADE AGAINST SEADER.

Counsel Not Satisfied With City Court Disposition of Boy Shooting Case.

Adam Seader was arraigned before Judge Runyon in the City Court this morning on a charge of discharging firearms in the city limits, growing out of the injury to 10-year-old Walter Marienschieck Monday forenoon by one of the shot from a shell that he fired at a cat in his chicken yard. It was shown that Seader had been troubled a good deal by the cat and that the shot did very little harm to the boy, and Judge Runyon suspended sentence with a warning against indiscriminate shooting.

A few minutes after the hearing, Counsellor W. S. Angleman, who has been retained in the case by Frank Marienschieck, the boy's father, came into court. He said Dr. Hughes had found that it would be necessary to operate to get the pellet out of Walter's jaw, and he was not satisfied with the disposition of the case. He announced that the case would be carried on under a charge of assault.

"It may be a pretty serious matter," said Mr. Angleman. "The shot penetrated some distance, and the consequences of the wound may be much more than trivial."

PERSONAL NOTES.

The Paris "Matin" has offered John D. Rockefeller $1,000 for a fifteen-minute conversation with him.

Frederick Underwood, president of the Erie road, is second in the list, with 72 directorships, and W. K. Vanderbilt if fourth with 65.

A Family Reunion.

A reunion of the Force family, of which Charles L. Force, of Mercer avenue, is a member, was held at the latter's home a few days ago. Twenty in all were in attendance, the guests being from Clinton, Clover Hill, Baroone and North Branch. Dinner was served and a general social time enjoyed.

DRY SUNDAYS COMING

Bishop's Law Will Be Rigidly Enforced and Scotch Plains Will Be Dry.

RESIDENTS THANKFUL

Police And Township Officials Responsible For Lawlessness And Disorder Now Prevalent On Sundays.

When the Bishop's bill goes into effect July 4, the illegal sale of liquor will be stopped in the various townships and districts where the officials have been lax in the performance of their duties in failing to put a stop to selling. The new law is hailed as a God-send and is a cause of much rejoicing throughout Union county especially by the residents of Scotch Plains who have been forced to endure disgraceful orgies Sunday after Sunday.

The provisions of the new law require that all screens be dispensed with on Sunday as well as side-doors and rear rooms being closed at all times. Heretofore, and at the present time, it is said, there is more rum sold in Scotch Plains on a Sunday than in all the other days of the week being put together. The enforcement of the new law will be strictly up to the State officials and it is reported it will be enforced to the letter.

Scotch Plains it is alleged has been notorious for its Sunday brawls and fights which have went on without interruption for years. Respectable men and women have been insulted on the streets while waiting for trolley cars time and time again by the rowdies who congregated on the corners in maudlin conditions.

The new law will also blot out the Sunday trolley excursions from this city. Young men and married men have been in the habit of going to saloons at the place and remaining there all day and returning to Plainfield drunk.

PLAINFIELD COUNCIL NAMES NEW OFFICERS.

George B. Cratsley Nominated for Councilor of New Organization.

Plainfield Council, No. 293, Jr. O. U. A. M., met Monday and nominated officers to be elected on Monday night for the ensuing term of six months. These persons were placed in nomination: Councilor, George B. Cratsley; vice councilor, Dr. Rolland D. Tomlinson; junior past councilor, Winfield S. Angleman; financial secretary, W. W. Webb; treasurer, G. W. V. Moy; recording secretary, Ernest H. Craw; outside sentinel, John Williams; inside sentinel, Alfred H. Peck; warden, Samuel Cratsley; conductor, Charles Leland; trustee, eighteen months, Samuel Cratsley; representative New Jersey Funeral Benefit Association, W. S. Angleman.

After the nominations two candidates were initiated by the team from Somerset Council, No. 104, the work being performed in a highly satisfactory manner. Several propositions for membership were also received. In the good and welfare there were remarks by Past Councilors Latourette, Walter Walker and William Creveling.

Massaging the Face.

The skin should be perfectly clean before the messaging of the face is begun. Use the complexion brush, with warm water and pure soap. When rubbing in a cream always have the motions upward and outward. Send the flattened palms from chin up to the ears. Move the finger tips about in little circles, pressing inward gently and being careful not to push the flesh up into tiny lines. Do this always at night, and every morning bathe the face with cold water, drying with gentle pats with an old soft towel.

New York's First Sidewalk.

The first sidewalk in New York was laid in front of Mrs. Samuel Provoost, about 1716. She was an importer and merchant and laid the sidewalk for the convenience of her customers. She had importuned the authorities to do it, but they refused, saying it was impossible. After her object lesson paving and curbing gradually came in, but for some time her sidewalk was so famous that people journeyed even from Philadelphia to see it.

Street Improvement.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett has made a decided improvement at Park avenue and Front street by removing the objectionable catch basin on the corner and installing a smaller and less slightly one on Front street, opposite the City National Band. The old basin was put in another part of the city.

Plainfield Man Usher.

Among the ushers at the wedding of Miss Margaret T. Gamage, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Gamage, of Gloucester, Mass., to Harry Mortimer Specht, of New York, will be Harold L. Smalley, of this city. The wedding ceremony will take place June 30 at the home of the bride's parents, over 600 invitations having been sent out for the reception.

THURLOW OPPOSED BY F. N. SAUER

JERSEY CITY CANDIDATE FOR HEALTH OFFICER OF THAT PLACE.

Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow, of this city, was not elected to succeed Health Officer Henry Smellie at a meeting of the Board of Health of Jersey City, as was expected. The matter was laid over until Monday night, July 2, the next regular meeting of the body.

It is now known that the selection of Mr. Thurlow will not be made without opposition. Commissioners Delaney, Sprouls and Ziegener believe a Jersey City man should be chosen for the position and they favor Dr. Ferdinand N. Sauer, of Jersey City. Dr. Sauer is at present employed by the Board of Health as superintendent of the Bureau of Contagious Diseases.

While Mr. Thurlow's decision has not yet been made known and the Jersey City Board of Health has not elected him to the new position, the local board has been making preparations to fill his place here in case he leaves. The board has been in communication with the Boston Institute of Technology for the purpose of securing a graduate of that institution if another man is needed.

FANWOOD CRUSADE AGAINST ADV. SIGNS

JUSTICE SCHEELEN BEGINS WAR ON OBJECTIONABLE CARDS.

The officials of Fanwood are conducting a crusade against the promiscuous posting of advertising signs throughout the borough. It has been undertaken by Recorder Chas. Sheelen and a large number of offenders have already been summoned before him. Six merchants from various parts of the county received instructions to tear down offending advertisements, last week, and last night four Plainfielders appeared before him. They were fined the costs of court and let go with the promise that they would have every sign in Fanwood tacked on trees and fences by their men torn down.

The ordinance under which the recorder is acting was passed by the borough council several years ago, but has never been enforced until now. As a result the local landscape has been dotted with all manner of glaring signs, generally extolling the virtues of Dr. Cureum's pills or advising everyone to buy furniture on the "dollar - down-and-dollar-when-you-catch-me" plan. The recorder declares he will rest the eyes of residents and the committee on beautified view of trees and hedges and his crusade is already bearing fruit.

Governor on Teachers' Bill.

Governor Stokes, in signing the Arrowsmith teachers' retirement fund act, adopted the somewhat unusual course of accompanying it with a memorandum setting forth his reasons for approving the measure. This memorandum, which is dated this week, Send the flattened palms from chin up to the ears. Move the finger tips about in little circles, pressing inward gently and being careful not to push the flesh up into tiny lines. Do this always at night, and every morning bathe the face with cold water, drying with gentle pats with an old soft towel.

TO CHECK AUTO SPEEDERS

Dunellen Plans For Flank Attack on Scorchers Nearly Complete.

WILL MAKE ARRESTS

Constables With Stop-Watches Will Spot Speed Cranks As They Shoot Through the Main Street.

Plans for the checking of automobile speeding have been all but completed by the authorities of Dunellen. Several specials have been picked out to assist Marshal Moban in timeing the machines, and if the other details are arranged in time, the auto spotters will go out next Sunday.

A half-mile stretch on a straight-away bit of road through the borough will be marked off, and the officers, with stop-watches, will be stationed along it. Signals will be arranged between them, and all speeders will be spotted on the system now generally in vogue in this section. Beyond the turn of the road an officer —the huskiest and most determined of the lot—will be stationed where a signal can be given to him, and every violator of the law will be arrested as he comes up.

The Dunellen authorities say that too much, and too dangerous, speeding has been done in their town, and the example set by Metuchen, Bound Brook and other places nearby has moved them to take action. The autoists captured will be arraigned at once, and from the temper shown by the officials it is safe to assume that $25 fines, with occasional extras, will fall in a subduing shower on the scorchers.

The legal side of the crusade is being looked after by Borough Counsel VonMinden. He has studied the speed and licensing laws thoroughly, and will be on hand all through the campaign to advise the police and to prosecute cases that may require anything more than formal arraignment and the testimony of the spotters and their stop-watches.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

A very simple method for the removal of warts is, namely, a flannel over which is spread some sapo viridis, placed over the wart for a period of fourteen days, by the end of which time the wart will become so soft as to be easily shelled out.

The majority of people who take quinine to break up a cold make the mistake of taking it in large doses. Two or three grains, four hours apart, are quite sufficient, while larger doses open the pores and render them liable to an additional cold.

Camphor liniment and ammonia liniment are both good rubefacients. They are useful to apply to sprains, bruises, rheumatic joints and stings of insects. They are also used externally in inflammatory affections of the throat.

To make camphor liniment dissolve one ounce of pulverized camphor in four ounces of olive oil.

One part water of ammonia to two parts olive oil makes ammonia liniment.

FRANKLIN ON CATCHING COLD.

It is well known, says the New York Evening Post, that Franklin made a particular study of colds and had his own theory about them, which we believe is pretty much the theory of today. One of his assertions was that catching cold does not come from mere cold, but from unequal temperature over the body and from undue moisture. To prove this he made a number of observations on occasions when he and did not suffer. A few of these follow:

By putting on a damp shirt on a dry body—yes.

By putting in a dry shirt on a wet body, though this wets the body ten times more—no.

By sitting in a room where the floor has been newly washed—yes.

By going into a river and staying there an hour (no sheets so wet)—no.

By wetting the feet only—yes.

By wetting all the clothes through the body and wearing them the whole day—no.

By sitting in a room against a crevice—yes.

By sitting as long in the open air —no.

Miss Martha H. Compton Weds.

Miss Martha H. Compton, of Metuchen, and George H. Hagedorn, of Rahway, were married Saturday evening at 8:30 o'clock at the home of the bride. There were persons present from Plainfield, Rahway, Newark, Elizabeth and Metuchen. A reception followed the ceremony. The bride received a large collection of gifts. The couple will reside in Rahway.

Mulford Estil Going Abroad.

Mulford Estil, of Park avenue, will be the only Plainfielder to join the A. V. D. Honeyman tourist party which sails on Thursday on the Scandinavian steamer Oscar II on a trip to Copenhagen and Denmark. The party expects to visit Sweden, Norway, Ireland, Scotland, Wales and England, and will sail from Liverpool on August 15 on the steamer Baltic for home.

ELECTION ON CONSOLIDATION MAY BE POSTPONED

Advocates of Scheme Favor Postponement Until After Regular Election.

FREE FROM POLITICS

Former Mayors Saunders and Fisk Express Opinion That Special Election Should Not Be Held in September.

It may be prophesied that the special election for consolidation will not take place in September as originally planned. Neither is it likely to be held until after the regular November election. Leading friends of the movement on both sides of the brook do not desire any factional politics to be mixed up in the campaign for merging the two municipalities and they do not hesitate to say so. Their idea is that the discussion of the subject should be divested of any politics and it is more than likely that the campaign will not be launched in earnest until after all political quarrels on both sides of the brook are settled.

This will not deter progress in the matter for it has been suggested that the Common Council of Plainfield and the Council of North Plainfield appoint the proposed commission to decide upon a definite plan of union without waiting until a vote is taken by the people. The object of this is to let the voters know just what is proposed before they are called upon to cast their ballots. The report of the commission would show just what North Plainfield would receive, what representation it would be entitled to and what benefits it would obtain.

When approached last night on the subject of deferring the special election, former Mayor William L. Saunders, one of the most ardent champions of the movement, said that he fully agreed that it would be better to bring the matter up for final decision when the public mind is not centered on regular primaries or elections. "You can say for me," he declared, "that the matter is too important a one to be decided on a hand or when the voters are interested in something else."

Continuing, Mr. Saunders said: "I see no reason why the legislative bodies of Plainfield and North Plainfield should not at once name the proper commission to obtain for the people all necessary facts and data. Such a plan would be of great benefit to the people for then they could settle for themselves in a most intelligent way whether consolidation is as meritorious as we claim it to be."

Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, chairman of the Board of Trade's committee on consolidation, also agrees that it would be better to postpone the special election until after the regular November election.

BOSS MASONS TABOO SUB-CONTRACT WORK

ACTION TAKEN AT MEETING OF ASSOCIATION LAST NIGHT.

An important action was taken at the meeting of the Boss Mason's Association, Monday, when it was unanimously decided not to take sub-contract work in the future. In the future the boss masons will take contracts direct. The reason for this action is that there are so many irresponsible contractors that where mason work has been sub-contracted various complications have arisen causing not only trouble over the work, but loss of money as well, so it is alleged.

By taking contracts direct the masons alone will be responsible for their work. The Master Masons' Association not only of Plainfield, but throughout the State, is taking practically the same stand and is interested in a legislative measure that will compel all contractors to take out a license attesting their ability and responsibility.

All but two boss masons are members of the Plainfield Boss Masons' Association and in the case of the two exceptions they do not employ union labor.

DIED WHILE VISITING HER AUNT IN THIS CITY.

Miss Clegett Came Over from England Only Four Weeks Ago.

Under exceptionally sad circumstances, the death occurred Monday night of Miss Minnie Beatrice Clegett, who came to this city from England four weeks ago to visit her aunt, Mrs. Fred Ivamy, of West Second street. She had been enjoying splendid health after the ocean voyage but a sudden illness developed one week ago that led to congestion of the brain and caused her demise.

Miss Clegett was eighteen years old and was the daughter of Friend and Alice Clegett, of Maidstone, Kent county, England. She was an exceptionally bright and amiable girl and had made many acquaintances in Plainfield through a former long visit made two years ago. She had taken such a liking to the surroundings that it was her desire to come here and remain indefinitely, despite ending the stay. The news was cabled the bereaved parents.

The funeral will be held at Mrs. Ivamy's home tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock and interment will be at Hillside.

WALKED TO NEW YORK.

Young Plainfielders, Moved by Weston's Example, Make Good Time.

Moved by the example of Edward Weston, the old six-day walker, Percy Phillips, Jr., and Fred Martin walked to New York Sunday a week ago. They made the trip for their own amusement, and gave out no announcement of it, but they hustled to make some sort of a showing against the veteran's time. They started at five o'clock in the morning and reached the City Hall in New York in eight hours, including all stops.

The passes were two in number, both times for eating. Figuring out the few minutes lost in that way they covered the distance at the rate of about three and a half miles an hour. They were not as tired as might be expected after the long bit of footwork, but tucked away a big dinner with more than ordinary enjoyment. They expect to try the walk again in an effort to lower the existing record, getting official time on the way.

IZAAK WALTON, FISHERMAN.

Serene secure, beside some stream
He kept his vigil, dreamed his dream;
No vision came of fair romance
Of famous deeds with horse and lance,
But battles waged his foemen shy,
By weapons such as line and fly.

Day after day the fisher spent,
Beguiled so a supreme content,
In snaring crafty silver trout,
Or perch, if mulberry buds were out;
Sequestered with the falling rain,
The song of thrush or lark's refrain.

With some choice friend who loved as well
The wonder of that liquid spell,
He watched how swift the' salmon sped
Across an amber river bed,
Or how the grayling, of the race,
Went gliding smooth from place to place.

Past cowslip meadows, jasmine bowers,
Hedges with honeysuckle flowers,
They wandered slow to some quaint inn
That smelled of lavender within,
Where he could sip some homely wine
And boast the prowess of his line.
—Martha Hale Shackford, in Everybody's Magazine for June.

HUNGRY PYTHIANS GET LITTLE TO EAT

TWELVE COURSE DINNER TURNED OUT TO BE HAM, TOMATOES AND SALAD.

While Willie Deegan was pitching winning ball against Jersey City in Hoboken Sunday afternoon, more than 400 hungry Knights of Pythians were clamoring at his hotel for something to eat. Sunday was memorial day with the Pythians, and following its annual custom arrangements were made by Crescent Company No. 13, Uniform Rank, to entertain the visiting knights from Brooklyn, Jersey City and other places at a dinner. Robert Jahn was chairman of the dinner committee and he arranged with Willie Deegan, or thought he had, to provide a bounteous repast for the occasion. Either Willie did not hear or failed to understand the needs of such a large crowd. At any rate the bonifacs-ball player was glad of the opportunity to distinguish himself in the hotel line and proceeded to have a dinner of 12 courses ready for the multitude.

According to the terms of the agreement he was to receive 50 cents per plate. Willie sub-let the contract to a local baker at 25 cents, who in turn sub-let it to a local restaurant man at 25 cents per plate. There was nothing said about the 12 courses, and when supper time came, the menu that presented itself was cold ham, bread and butter, sliced tomatoes and potato salad. A great howl went up from the hungry Pythians, and Chairman Robert Jahn was kept busy explaining matters.

In District Court.

M. L. Crosbie has started an action for possession of premises against R. M. Radcliffe, of Halsey street. It is set down for next Tuesday.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVIII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JUNE, 28, 1906 NO. 30.

"Support the Constitution, which is the Cement of the Union, as well in its Limitations as in its Authorities."—Madison.

THEY CAME BACK TO WED

Newark Couple Kept Promise Made to Justice Hand Weeks Ago.

BRIDE HAD BACKED OUT

Feared She Wasn't a Legal Widow, But Her Scruples Faded After a Month or Two of Consideration.

Frank Harral and Mrs. Elizabeth Bull, both of Newark, were married yesterday afternoon by Justice Hand, at his office. The marriage was the sequel of an interesting incident in the justice's office two months ago, when Harral and his bride came there one afternoon.

They wanted to set married then, and were on the point of entering on the ceremony when Mrs. Bull was seized with scruples over her legal status before the altar. Her husband had left her several years before and she had heard nothing of him, and she believed she was a widow. But the fact of her husband's demise had never been proven, and she feared to go on with the ceremony at the crucial moment. Harral, who is very much in love, pleaded with her earnestly to go on with the marriage, but she shrank from it, and finally insisted on delay. She said she would think over it a week and give her final decision then. She took a little longer than that, but finally gave in to the importunities of the groom.

When they went away from the office, the first time, the couple promised to come back to be married if the marriage became an assured thing, but the justice, who was cast down by the sudden cessation of the Hymenal song, was hopeless of seeing them again. He was correspondingly delighted when the couple reappeared at the office yesterday, and announced, with conscious pride and modest blushes, that nothing stood in the way of the happy event.

The justice busted next door and got Architect Fred L. Lancaster, and telephoned downstairs and brought up Councilor Francis J. Blatz, for witnesses, and joyously, with delight beaming from his face, he joined the couple in wedlock.

"This is the best thing that has happened in this office since the day the Union County Court put us in the Down and Out Club," said the Judge as he implanted a resounding kiss on the blushing cheek of the bride.

"This is the best thing that ever happened to me," said the groom stoutly, as he slipped a ten-dollar bill in the Judge's hand.

There was a handshake all around, and the beaming bride and groom left to start on a honeymoon trip by trolley to Philadelphia, where Harral has relatives. The will spend a week or ten days on the honeymoon, after which they will live in Newark, where the groom is employed in a machine shop.

New Storm Sewer Works Well.

Employes of the trolley cars and others, residents in the vicinity, have made gratifying reports concerning the efficiency of the Richmond street storm sewer during the heavy rain on Saturday. The sewer carried off the surface water quickly and there was no flooding of any account at that point. Plans are now before the Common Council for an extension of this storm sewer which will include that part of the street under the Richmond street bridge, which is considered one of the worst points during a heavy rain. A public hearing on the proposed ordinance will be given at the next regular meeting of the Common Council.

Plainfield Graduates at Williams.

Four Plainfield young men, Kerro Knox, Erwin Briant Leland, Harold A. Nomer and Brockholst Kip Miller, will be graduated from Williams College tomorrow at the 112th commencement. During the summer Nomer, who was graduated with Erwin Briant Leland from the Plainfield High School, Class '02, will engage in college Y. M. C. A. work and in the fall will teach in the Brooklyn Polytechnic. At the same time he will take a course of study in the New York Law School. Miller also intends to take up the study of law. Leland and Knox have not yet announced their intentions.

Will Repair Evona Avenue.

The next work to be undertaken by the street committee will be that of repairing Evona avenue, where it is proposed to spread a large quantity of slag from the Pond Machine Tool Works. The work was started some time ago but never completed. The slag contains considerable iron and is a fine foundation for the making of good roads.

Fine Tour to the Berkshires.

Send postal for circular to the office of Honeyman's Private Tours, 181 North avenue, Plainfield, N. J. Tour starts August 27 for the Berkshire Hills and White Mountains, with extension to Quebec.

MR. AND MRS. LARRABEE FIFTY YEARS WEDDED

LITERARY CRITIC AND HIS WIFE HOLD AN INFORMAL RECEPTION.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Larrabee, of 79 Willow avenue, celebrated the golden wedding anniversary of their wedding Monday night. About fifty people gathered to extend their best wishes to the couple and join in the festivities of the occasion. The couple received a large number of gifts in gold as pleasant remembrances of the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Larrabee were married in New York in 1856 and for many years have resided in North Plainfield. Mr. Larrabee is a literary man of high standing and a critic of recognized ability. For many years he wrote leading editorials for Harper's Magazine and he has also written articles for The Century. In the selection of books for the Plainfield Public Library his judgment has always been relied upon and it is largely due to his efforts that the local library has the reputation of being one of the best in the country. One of Mr. Larrabee's notable works is a book on the subject of "How Volcanoes Are Made," published some time ago.

CONFERENCE MEMBERS GATHER AT LEBANON

MRS. A. M'CREA PRESIDES AT SEMI-ANNUAL MEETING.

Members from almost every missionary society in the Elizabeth district, Newark conference, congregated in the Methodist Episcopal church at Lebanon yesterday to attend the semi-annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Elizabeth district. Morning and afternoon sessions were held, and were presided over by the president, Mrs. A. C. McCrea, of this city.

The morning session opened at 10:45 o'clock, with a devotional service conducted by Mrs. G. W. Brown, of Elizabeth. Rev. H. W. Ewig, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Lebanon, made the address of welcome, which was responded to by Mrs. Andrew Henry, of Clinton. Reports from the district officers indicated that the good work being done in the different sections is on the increase, and that more money than ever is contributed toward foreign mission work. The greetings from auxiliaries were received, after which Mrs. J. H. Knowles, the secretary of the conference, read an address on mission work. A hymn, "Jesus Shall Reign," was sung, and committees appointed. The noontide prayer and memorial service for Mrs. E. Clark, Jr., were conducted by Mrs. Winter.

After the Mizpah benediction a basket luncheon was partaken of.

The afternoon session began promptly at 2 o'clock. Mrs. L. A. Walters, of Lebanon, led the devotional service. Miss Blackford, of Plainfield, gave a message from the Young Woman's Society missionary, Miss Jennie V. Hughes. Hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers," was sung. Miss Isabelle Waldman made an address on "What We Owe Our Young Women." A song service by the choir followed. The address of the day was by Mrs. Mary C. Meek, of Kwala Lumpor, Malaysia, a returned missionary, who explained the conditions existing in that country and told of the great work being done there. Committee reports were made, and, after prayer by Mr. Knowles, adjournment was taken.

I. P. Runyon a Member of Committee.

As Craig A. Marsh, who has identified himself with the Plainfield Bar Association, will sail for Europe on July 5, he said that it would be impossible for him to serve as a member of the committee appointed to draft bylaws and report at the next meeting. He requested Isaac P. Runyon was made a member of that committee in his place.

Sunday-School Teachers' Picnic.

The members of the Plainfield Primary and Junior Sunday-school Teachers' Union will hold their annual picnic tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Brundage in Cranford. They will take the trolley car leaving the Watchung avenue stand at 9:38 o'clock.

Injured Motorman Leaves Hospital.

Edward Drake, the trolley motorman, who received a severe electric shock last Saturday, while operating a car on West Front street, was discharged from the hospital, yesterday, and returned home. He expects to go to work in a few days.

Rev. T. Logan Murphy left today for Newportville, Bucks county, Pa., to visit one of his boyhood friends, Dr. Henry Birkey.

NEGRO CROOK A MYSTERY

Refuses to Make Statement Regarding Himself to the Police.

ONLY GIVES HIS NAME

Tells Who He Is and Where He Claims He Lives, Then Closes Up Like a Trap—Chief Kiely Investigating.

After removing the padlock from his lips only sufficiently to let his name, age and address to escape, the negro burglar captured after an unsuccessful attempt to rob A. W. Kleinecke's house on Monday, relapsed into stony silence again yesterday afternoon. Hopeful from the prisoner's attitude yesterday morning, when he seemed to be on the verge of unbosoming himself, Chief Kiely expected a detailed statement from him, and the head sleuth was correspondingly disappointed over the crook's refusal to say anything of his record.

The man gave his name as Fred Wilson, forty-seven years, a laborer, living at 16 Minetta lane, New York. Minetta lane is in the heart of a negro colony. That was all he would say. He was put through all the degrees of cross examination, but steadfastly refused to say anything of his past.

Chief Kiely had him remanded this morning, pending investigation. The police of New York and all the surrounding cities will be furnished with photographs and descriptions of him, and the chief expects to know a good deal about him in a few days. He is convinced, from the prisoner's attitude alone, that he is down on the records of some department, and his criminal pedigree, if he has one, will be easily run up after a day or two of inquiry.

The first step in the investigation was taken by Chief Kiely this morning, when he went to New York to find out if the police there know his man. Wilson was photographed for the Rogues' Gallery yesterday afternoon, and the chief took the pictures with him. He believes the New York authorities know Wilson. If the prisoner turns out to be an old hand, he will receive a severer sentence than if his attempt on the Kleinecke house was his first bit of crooked work.

SEWER WORK PROGRESSING.

Contractor Callahan Has Large Gang of Men Employed.

Foster Callahan, the contractor for the new extension to the sanitary system of sewers, is making excellent progress with his work. Thus far a portion of Sixth street, east from Richmond street, has been completed to accommodate Daniel Dugan, who is renovating his houses; also Columbia avenue and Leland avenue, connecting Columbia and North avenue. Other portions completed include East Seventh street, between Leland and Berkshire avenues; Park lane and the men are now at work in Park Terrace.

Mr. Callahan has been on the job every day since the work was started and in many instances personally does some of the more difficult parts of it. He has a large gang of men employed and with a continuance of favorable weather there will be no difficulty in completing the contract at the specified time. Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett is much pleased with the work thus far.

Knights to Donate a Medal.

Watchung Council, No. 552, Knights of Columbus, has announced that beginning next year it will annually donate a gold medal to be contested for by the pupils of St. Mary's parochial school. The prize list at the school has now become quite large, among the other donors of medals and money for excellence in studies being Rev. Father P. E. Smith, Mrs. E. Slevin, Mrs. E. A. Gross, George J. Tobin, C. A. Faust and Messrs. Swartz and Kirwin.

Steam Roller In Commission.

The city steam roller, which has been out of commission for some time because of a broken shaft gear, was put to work yesterday on South avenue, where the progress of the repairs has been delayed in consequence. The Public Service Corporation would like to borrow the steam roller to finish up its work on Front street, but the street committee has made no decision as yet in the matter.

Somerset Club's "Big Doin's."

The Somerset Club's "open house," set for tomorrow night, promises to be one of the events of the summer in the borough. About 500 invitations have been issued and from the interest manifested the majority will be responded to. Part of the entertainment is to be furnished by members of the Primrose minstrel troupe, a number of them having volunteered to attend.

VETERAN FIDDLER DEAD

"Sam" Frazee, Familiar Figure at Dances For Years Crosses "Great Divide."

WITH MEDICINE SHOW

"Music by Prof. Frazee" Stereotyped On Dance Announcement Cards —Aged Seventy Years.

Following an illness that first affected his early in the year, Samuel D. Frazee, the widely known musician, died at 1:35 this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Geo. Voehl, of West Front street. He had been semi-conscious for the past two or three days and his death had been expected momentarily during that time. Although he suffered greatly the last few days, the fortitude that characterized his whole life was apparent to the watchers and he made no complaint.

Samuel D. Frazee, or plain "Sam," as he was known almost from one end of New Jersey to the other, was born in Plainfield seventy years ago and had lived here practically all his life. When a little boy he showed a natural aptitude for the violin and he made a study of the instrument, becoming exceptionally proficient. He adopted music as a profession and "Sam" and his "fiddle" were features of almost every gathering in Plainfield up until a comparatively few years ago. When public dances were given no one gave the advertising cards a second thought unless "Music by Frazee" was a part of the wording. His options were not confined to this city as he was sought after by clubs or societies in all parts of the State and his name is as familiar in Hunterdon or Somerset counties as it is in Union.

In the days when travelling medicine shows were important organizations, "Sam" and several associates journeyed by wagon from New Jersey to California selling "Flagg's Relief" and "Wizard Oil," medicines that were "guaranteed to cure almost every ill that human flesh is heir to." The combination boasted an orchestra led by "Professor Sam Frazee" and the musicians entertained the crowd between exhortions as to the merits of the patent preparation. "Sam" also sold bottles among the willing purchasers and further helped things along by giving a song and dance now and then.

The profits of the trip amounted to many thousands of dollars and "Sam" invested part of his share with his brother, James Frazee, now of Trenton, in the erection of the "Rock House," the big summer hotel at Washington's Rock. It started out successfully but was destroyed by fire and with it went the greater part of the Frazee brothers' money. The hotel was never rebuilt although there were many schemes projected. His father, Anson Frazee, kept the old Buena Vista hotel on West Front street where Shaw's drug store is now.

In after years. "Sam" divided his time between furnishing orchestral music and working in local hotels. He continued to play the violin until last January when his illness first mentioned itself and he left the field to younger men.

When a young man, "Sam" belonged to the Plainfield fire department and almost all the local clubs but he gave them up one by one. He was a clever entertainer and a most happy, genial disposition, these proving important factors in making his so popular.

Besides Mrs. Voehl, there are surviving two daughters, Mrs. Anthony Kregar, of Liberty street, and Mrs. Sarah Stillwell, of Long Island, also two sons, Frank T. Frazee, of New York, and Sidney E. Frazee, a driver in the local fire department.

The funeral will be held at Cole's undertaking parlors tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Jury Acquits Colored Woman.

Mrs. Agnes Stewart, colored, of Westfield, was acquitted this morning in the Union County Court on a charge of assault, said to have been made on Leo Leek, a thirteen-year-old boy, of that place. The lad, it as said, provoked the attack by calling the defendant names, and that in the scrimmage he slapped the woman's face.

To Live Abroad.

Mrs. J. Ringel, of Carlton avenue, sailed for Europe on Wednesday, June 13, to be gone an indefinite time. She has leased her house for the summer to N. DeHagard, of New York, and will take possession on Monday. Mrs. Ringel's daughter, Mrs. Hille, is living with her sister on Westfield avenue, Westfield.

TO SUE SCHOOL BOARD

Local Dealer in Second-hand Material Alleges Architect Broke Agreement.

AUTHORITIES "KICKED"

Planned to Build New Market School of Old Brick and Lumber. Contractor Declares.

Because of what he calls a repudiation of the contract, Alex Kane, who was engaged to furnish 130,000 second-hand brick and $700 worth of second-hand lumber for the new $11,700 High School at New Market, has retained S. S. Swackhamer, Esq., and demands that he be allowed to furnish the materials or else be paid for them.

According to Mr. Kane's story, C. Powell Karr, the architect for the new building, gave him every assurance, both verbal and written, that he would furnish the brick and lumber in question. George Dennick, of Elizabeth, who received the contract for the mason work, being the lowest bidder, paid Mr. Kane $75 on account of the brick, and the contracts, Mr. Kane says, were awarded with the understanding as stated above.

Then the Board of Education of Piscataway Township "kicked" because second-hand material was to be used and objection was made to Mr. Karr. The members wanted new materials and it was made to appear that they wanted Mr. Kane to furnish new instead of second-hand stuff. This he has refused to do and says that the contractors will either use his bricks and lumber, eg agreed, or they will pay for the same.

Mr. Kane was to receive $5.75 per thousand for 130,000 brick, delivered, and $6 per thousand for 100,000 or less, and the price agreed upon for the lumber was $700. Mr. Kane says that he is still holding the brick and the lumber, although he has had opportunities to sell. Under the circumstances considerable delay is occasioned in starting the work of building the school. Unless the matter is adjusted soon the school will not be ready for the fall opening in September.

BAPTIST WOMEN HOLD A LAWN FESTIVAL.

Park Avenue Congregation Raising Funds for a Carpet.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church held a successful lawn fete on the grounds about the church, last night, for the purpose of raising funds with which to purchase a new carpet for the edifice. It is believed that about $75 will be realized as profit.

The lawn, which was illuminated with Japanese lanterns, was occupied with several booths decorated appropriately. The mystery table, candy and cake booths were trimmed with the national colors and the lemonade well was made attractive by the use of greens and a profusion of lemons which hung in clusters.

Those in charge of the mystery table were Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson, Mrs. Walter Freeman, Mrs. Harry Johnson and Mrs. George E. Hall. Those at the candy booth were Mrs. B. A. Krom and Miss Essie Thompson. Mrs. Theodore I. Runyon and Mrs. Charles VanWinkle were at the cake booth and Miss Alice Brown and Miss Nellie Miner presided at the lemonade well. Mrs. Adelbert Runkle and Mrs. W. S. Lowry had charge of the ice cream booth. Those who served as waitresses were the Misses Violet VanWinkle, Hillyer, Giles, Whitney, Cuming, Stryker, Peterson, Brokaw and Harral.

An extra attraction last night was the auto trip given by George E. Hall in his large touring car. For a small fee Mr. Hall would give any one desiring a trip about the city.

The affair was arranged by the Ladies' Aid Society, the officers of which are as follows: President, Mrs. Frank T. Ostrom; first vice president, Mrs. H. H. Moore; second vice president, Mrs. Lottie A. Udell; secretary, Mrs. Walter Freeman; treasurer, Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson.

Timbo Club Plans Outing.

At a meeting of the Timbo Social Club, last night, final arrangements were made for the third annual outing, which will be held on July 12 and Lake Hopatcong will again be the destination, this resort having proved satisfactory in every way last year. The committee to have charge consists of William Doud, Henry Wiegers, George Voehl and Frank Schuck.

Petit Jury Not Satisfactory.

TO HOLD MASS MEETING AT SOMERVILLE FRIDAY

PLAN ORGANIZATION OF SOMERSET CO. POPULAR GOVERNMENT LEAGUE.

Gardner Colby, brother of State Senator Everett Colby; John S. Gibson, of Newark, and other prominent leaders in the "new idea" movement, will address a mass meeting of the Somerset County Republican League for popular government, to be held in Forester's Hall, Somerville, on Friday night at 8 o'clock.

At this meeting the organization of the "Somerset County Republican League for Popular Government," will be perfected and the report of the committee on permanent organization received and acted upon. The leaders in this movement in Somerset county have been busy sending out application cards for members, accompanied by a copy of the platform of principles. It is expected that a large delegation from North Plainfield and vicinity will attend the meeting.

It is planned to hold a mass meeting in North Plainfield early next month.

TRAYNOR ACQUITTED OF SPEAKEASY CHARGE

PROSECUTION FAILS TO PROVE NORTH PLAINFIELD LICENSE VALUELESS HERE

Peter Traynor, one of the five men gathered in by the police last week under charges of selling liquor illegally, was acquitted by the jury in the Court of Common Pleas yesterday. Jules Mastodonate and Thomas Brown, last of the five arraigned, changed their plea to nonvult, and were remanded for sentence.

Traynor's case involved a point of law raised by the prosecution. He is a driver for Mrs. Lena Hoerster, a wholesale dealer on Somerset street. It was charged that he sold goods on Sunday, Oct. 15, 1905, to Robert Yettmas, John Seay, James Burke and Frank Gillette testified to giving orders for stuff to Traynor, but the goods were not delivered until from an hour to—in one case—a week afterwards. The defense was that Traynor simply acted as driver for Mrs. Hoerster and only delivered, as the testimony showed, on order. Mrs. Hoerster's license in North Plainfield was offered in evidence and admitted. In spite of the objections of the prosecution. The prosecutor contended that the North Plainfield license gave Mrs. Hoerster no right to sell on this side of the brook. The court said it couldn't see the law in just that way, and the jury's verdict showed that it also failed to see the force of the prosecutor's reasoning.

Chief Kiely was disappointed over the result of the case.

"I wish the case had gone the other way and been appealed, so that the question could be definitely decided. It strikes me as queer that anybody with a license from North Plainfield can sell here."

"There is nothing odd about it," said Lawyer W. L. Hetfield, Sr., who with John F. Voorhis defended Traynor and the other four.

"The law governing the delivery of original packages on order covers the case. Do you imagine it is wrong for the big department stores, the Kentucky distillers or the Milwaukee brewers to deliver the goods your order from them—as has been done and is being done right along? The Traynor case was exactly parallel. They would get the same sort of decision if they carried it up."

The four defendants whose cases are still to be finally disposed of, will be arraigned for sentence on July 11. Thomas Brown, who pleaded non-vult yesterday, is the son of James Brown, convicted last week.

Daughters of Rebekah Busy.

GOSPEL TRIP BY AUTO

Novel Way In Which Pastor Will Go on His Vacation.

TO HELP LIFT MORTGAGE

Rev. Phil. A. Parsons Will Preach All Along a 1,200-Mile Journey to Hamilton, Ill., in Old Runabout.

Rev. Phil. A. Parsons, pastor of the First Church of Christ, Grove street, will start on an automobile trip tomorrow morning, that is to combine a vacation jaunt, the spread of the Gospel, and the raising of a church mortgage. The trip, made in an old-time runabout, will be to Hamilton, O., where Mr. Parsons' parents live, a distance of 1,200 miles.

At every town of any size on the way, Mr. Parsons will stop and preach the Gospel from his auto, on the most populous corner he may be allowed to occupy. A phonograph will be used to play hymns. From each gathering a collection will be taken up for the benefit of the fund that is being raised to lift the mortgage on Mr. Parsons' church.

The pastor's brother, Lester Parsons, a machinist, will accompany him. They will take a camping outfit with them, and live in the open on the way. At Hamilton, Mr. Parsons will interest his friends in the mortgage-lifting, and expects to collect a tidy sum there.

The start will be made at 7 o'clock tomorrow morning. Stops will be made at Round Brook, Somerville, Whitehouse, High Bridge and Rothsville, in this State, and tomorrow night the automobile crusaders expect to put up at the Delaware Water Gap. From there they will go on by way of Batavia, N. Y., Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Erie, Cleveland, Chicago and Springfield, Ill. They expect to cover about 100 miles a day, reaching Hamilton in twelve days.

Mr. Parsons expects to return to Plainfield in the middle of August. The trip is part of a month and a half vacation that was voted him by the congregation. Mr. Parsons felt that the vacation should not be wasted in idleness and hit upon the gospel trip by auto to make it profitable to christianity and his church.

AUGUSTUS FEIRING HURT.

Sustained a Broken Leg and Bruises in Fall From Tree.

While attempting to saw a limb from a tree at his home, yesterday afternoon, Augustus Feiring, Sr., met with an accident that will disable him for many weeks. He fell heavily to the ground, a distance of twenty feet, receiving a broken leg and severe bruises.

The tree limb was in the way of painters who were working about the house and without telling anyone of his intentions, Mr. Feiring decided to cut it off. He had barely started when he lost his balance and went down. He was picked up by William McMullen and members of his family and Dr. Adams was summoned. The break was in the right leg and there are evidences that it will require two months to mend. Mr. Feiring being well advanced in years. .

P. S. C. Improvements.

The Public Service Corporation is preparing to lay new rails and ties in Watchung avenue, between Front and Second streets, and from North avenue to Richmond street, through East Fifth street. Last Sunday a new curve was installed at Watchung avenue and Fifth street. When this work is completed the company will practically have new rails and ties from East Front street and Park avenue to Richmond and East Fifth streets, something that has been needed for a long time.

HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMAS GIVEN TO 48 GRADUATES

Dr. Canfield Tells the Largest Class in its History Meaning of Education.

VALEDICTORIAN'S ESSAY

Miss Hunter's Valedictory of Unusual Merit—Miss Winter Delivers a Splendid Address

As Salutatorian.

The thirty-sixth annual commencement of the Plainfield High School was held Thursday at the First Baptist church, when forty-eight young men and women were graduated with the usual honors. The edifice was thronged with parents, friends and former graduates. The platform was occupied with the graduates of the Class '06, members of the Board of Education and invited guests. Frank's orchestra, of New York, furnished the music at the church and the reception which followed. While the orchestra rendered a popular selection the graduates entered the church and took seats on the platform.

The programme opened with an overture, "Beautiful Galathea," Suppe, by the orchestra; the invocation by Rev. Dr. William S. Hubbell; Tone Poem, "Moonlight," Motet, by the orchestra.

The salutatory and essay, "A Deep Sea Mission," was given by Miss Elizabeth Winter, as follows:

We are a prosaic people living in a prosaic age. From the humdrum monotony of our life of today we look back and wonder, incredulity, even, at the fairy-book existences of men of old. Truly, they make excellent reading,—Vikings, braving rocks and tempests in their rude ships; Crusaders, journeying over a weary stretch of continent to fight and die in a strange, far-off land; Knights and Pathens, Squires and eYomen,—they lived when the modern world was young, when civilization was still in the making and there was much to be done.

This indifferentiy are we prone to relegate to the remote past heroism, self-sacrifice and uncomplaining service of our fellow men. But even this romantically unfruitful century may produce men worthy of a place beside any ardent Elizabethan or zealous sea-king. There are still wrongs to be righted and sufferings to be relieved, and there are still men fitted to undertake such tasks for the betterment of mankind.

We need not look so very far for illustrations to prove our text. Upon the desolate coasts of Labrador and Newfoundland a young Englishman is living out his life among the deep-sea-fishermen and sparsely scattered settlers of those waste regions. For fourteen years Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, Oxford graduate and physician, has been ministering, summer and winter, to the destitute inhabitants of a bleak land. Summer and winter he has labored among them, striving to allay their suffering, to cheer and uplift them, and to give them a "fair chance" in life. And how well he has succeeded, only Dr. Grenfell and his people can fully appreciate.

Years ago, while still a medical student in London, Dr. Grenfell became interested in the work being carried on among the deep-sea fishermen of the western coast of England. He joined the staff of the Royal National Mission, and worked as only he can work to establish it firmly among the fishermen. When everything was running smoothly, and there were no more obstacles to overcome, his attention was drawn to the necessity for similar work in Labrador, and in 1892 he left England for Canada.

Labador is a large country—larger than all England, France and Austria put together. The interior, however, is practically uninhabitated; along the sea-board is scattered the constantly increasing population. In the summertime these settled districts are visited by some twenty thousand fisher folk from Canada and Newfoundland. They, of course, must be cared for, too, when the "catch" is small, or an epidemic breaks out, and their attendance through the short but strenuous season sensibly increases the burdens of the physician-missionary. Fortunately, or not, as we may regard it, the season is short,—barely four months in duration. For the remaining eight months of the year Labrador is shut off entirely from the outside world. Then come the hard times; before the winter is over, most of the people are starving to death. For they are desperately poor, these Labrador fishers. To have enough tea, flour, and molasses,—their staple articles of food,—is with them, to be in flourishing circumstances.

In the summer, at least, they have enough to maintain existence; but in the winter they have little or no employment by which they may earn a living, and their condition is pitiable. Even while the fishing is good, they never realize the half of what their labor should bring in to them. Unsuspecting and illiterate as they are, they are readily fleeced by unscrupulous traders, who practically own them before many years. After a hard winter they start handicapped. In order to procure the wherewithal to begin work, they must needs mortgage the prospective catch, and thus, living from hand to mouth, they are obliged to continue as long as there are fish to sell.

Such was the state of the Labrador coast before Dr. Grenfell's arrival. There was but one physician to be had—and his visits were few and casual,—a brutal creature, who as often as not refused to attend the people, succored them or left them to die, as the spirit moved him. Here was a condition of affairs sadly in need of reformation. And the man was not wanting. Dr. Grenfell came and immediately set to work, with an energy and precision which bespoke a well-ordered mind. In a short time there was a hospital established at St. Anthony on the coast of North Newfoundland, and the new doctor was known over some two thousand miles of sea-board. All his efforts were directed to the extermination of the race-plague—tuberculosis—which the insufficient nourishment and hard lives of the folk rapidly produced.

To gain his end, Dr. Grenfell must in some way improve the physical condition of the people,' else his work would be totally useless. As a first step, he determined to release them from theb ondage in which they were held by the traders, and to this effect he established "co-operatives, as it was called. So he started a co-operative store. This succeeded so well that now there the eight or ten more scattered along the coast of Labador and Newfoundland, and the people are in much happier circumstances than ever before.

But the assistance of the fishers during the winter was a matter of much concern to the missionary. Little could be done for them, as they scattered as soon as the cold weather fell, in the hope of being able to trap a few fur-bearing animals. Thus widely separated as they were, nothing could be done to educate the children. The problem then was, to provide for the men employment which would bring the families together into a small community. But what problem could Dr. Grenfell not solve? Taking up a large grant of government land, he had soon built a saw-mill, gathered the people about it, giving them plenty to do for the terrible winter time, and provided a school for the children.

But quite as important as these medical and missionary stations are the movable ones in which Dr. Grenfell controls the hearts of hearts with him health and cheer. In summer he carries on his work by means of his little steamer, the "Strathcona;" in winter he visits every accessible corner of his territory in his dog-sleigh, dubbed the "Land-a-hand."

The "Strathcona" sails up and down the coast from St. John's to Cape Chidley, stopping at the various missionary stations, the three hospitals and the Orphan Asylum, and answers calls from all quarters. No weather is rough enough, no gale too strong to keep the "Strathcona" in harbor when a call comes from other desires. It is not an aspiration mixed with perspiration, but a spirit of self-denial today that you may enjoy more tomorrow. You must remember that an individual represents a unit of power that is not to be overlooked. You as graduates are now free to chose your own way. Less than ever before you are required to go with the crowd and everything before you. You may set your prow into the open rather than enter the enemies' harbor. You may solve problems in your own way, but remember that freedom is a dangerous thing to one not under self-control. This is the day of the telegraph, the telegraph and the telephone and if you want to be on the band wagon you must travel with the electric car and learn to use the modern appliances and must understand the mechanism of how the world is small and reduced when it is larger than ever.

"There must be integrity. The kind that will weigh an honest bushel of wheat during the week as conscientiously as one attends service on Sunday. Undefiled religion through the daily life in thought, word and deed is needed, so that the breadth of vision will teach that it is best to serve. We select the physician that is best able to serve us and true competition in trade is not the kind that drives the weaker fellow to the wall, but rather the spirit of serving the public the best we know how. The un-repaid and voluntary work after all is the best. What pay does your teacher or member of the Board of Education receive, or what pay does the man receive who devotes his time to building up hospitals and similar institutions that abide?

"Out of our great educational institutions I believe there will yet come that simplicity of life so much desired. The essentials as I understand them include education, integrity, unselfishness and simplicity, combined with self-control, an efficient desire and service."

Another selection, "Loveland," by the orchestra, preceded the presentation of rewards by Under Sheriff Lovell, member of the Board of Education. The awards will be found in another part of the paper. The selection, "Dolly Dollars," by the orchestra followed the awards and then Miss Gertrude Laura Hunter delivered the essay and valedictory, entitled, "The Triumphs of Youth." It was as follows:

"There is one respect in which the aging world and the aging individual are alike. With each the limit of usefulness advances as each increases in years. The boy who at ten considered the man of forty as ready for the chimney-corner and Taylor's 'Holy Dying,' himself at forty is carrying a banner of red or orange or blue to football matches, and is splitting his throat over valorous deeds on the diamond or gridiron. So it is with the world. Part of it elected a 'young' man of forty-three to the presidency a year or so ago, and insistently spoke of his youth in connection with such a position of trust. Over a century ago, however, William Pitt, a man twenty years his junior, was managing the office of chancellor of the exchequer, becoming premier of England at twenty-three. We are in the habit of referring to Alphonso as 'the little king of Spain,' imagining him with the curls and socks of childhood. Perhaps he does. He is doing! Perhaps he answers himself. "I am no martyr," he exclaimed impatiently to a friend who put to him a like question. Indeed no. He is a healthy, hearty, humorous man, eager to get out of life all there may be in it for him. Martyrdom has no charm for the risk and the danger, glad of his freedom, always merry and brave, cheerful and strong. His ideal of existence seems to be expressed in the words he so often uses: "The great joys of this life are its opportunities for service."

After a selection, "George Washington, Jr.," by the orchestra, the address of the evening was delivered by James H. Canfield, LL. D., librarian at Columbia University and former Chancellor of the University of Nebraska. The speaker took for his subject, "Education." He said that true education is a force which binds men together. A tax is levied for it the same as for anything else and it is not because the taxpayer gets returns that he contributes towards education. Dr. Canfield said that many a man pays taxes for a highway over which he never rides, or for a library or museum he never sees or from which he never gets any direct benefit. The State knows little of its wards, but it does not seek the higher life as in religion. Continuing, Dr. Canfield spoke in part as follows:

"The State has no royal highway of its own, but obtains force in the development of intelligence in the individual. What is the duty of the State seeks? What has it done for you? It is the duty of the teacher to impart self-control so that you can put yourself to a given task and win out. So long as you attain that point it does not matter so much about the process after all. If you find certain mental food disagreeable you must be able and willing to take it, and when you absorb more than another it shows that you are like a sponge.

"There must be an efficient desire which is something different

An After-Dinner Story.

THE DEPOSIT

Ravanot held the position of cashier in the same bank for ten consecutive years.

During all this period there was no ground for criticism of his work. His books were well kept and no errors were found in his accounts.

He lived by himself, shunned all new connections, visited no public resorts, had no desire for female attachments; in short, he seemed to lead a peaceful and contented existence.

When any one remarked in his presence "It must be a great temptation this handling of such great sums," he quietly answered: "Why? Money which doesn't belong to one is simply no money."

He was the embodiment of rectitude, and all delicate questions on finance were left to him to decide.

One evening he failed to return to his lodgings. The thought of any fraudulent act never entered the mind of those who knew him; all they feared was that he had met with some accident. The officials examined his last day's work. All his checks had been promptly presented; the last one had been cashed at Porte Montreaux about 7 o'clock. What he had taken in up to that time amounted to 200,000 francs. No trace of him was to be found. Searchers were sent in all directions and telegrams to all frontier stations. All in vain. Finally the directors of the bank, as well as the police, came to the conclusion that he had been foully dealt with. They even went so far as to say they had found evidences which led them to believe that this plot had been prearranged by crooks long before it was carried out.

One man in the whole city of Paris shrugged his shoulders on reading these notices in the daily papers, and that man was Ravenot.

While the most experienced detectives were getting off his track, he was skirting the oltlying boulevards leading to the river. Under the arches of one of the bridges, the night before, he had hidden a civilian's suit. After putting this on, and safely stowing away the 200,000 francs in his pockets, he made a bundle of his discarded uniform, tied a stone to it, and threw it in the river. He quietly returned to the city. He had ample time to take a train and get beyond the frontier, but he was clever enough to know that a few hundred kilmonetres would not keep him out of the clutches of the gendarmerie. He clearly knew what awaited him if caught. Accordingly, he reasoned along entirely different lines.

The following morning he put the 200,000 francs in an envelope which he sealed five times and went to a notary. "Sir," he said, "I ask your services. This envelope contains papers of great value, which I wish to place securely before starting on a long journey from which I know not when I may return. Will you take charge of this? I hope you do not object?"

"Not in the least, I simply give you a receipt."

Ravanot acquiesced. Suddenly he bethought him what he should do with this receipt—where to hide it—to whom to entrust it. He lealized these complications which he had not taken into account, and said in a natural voice: "Mon Dieu! I am alone in the world, without relatives or friends. Th voyage I'm about to undertake is long and dangerous; I might lose the receipt or it might be stolen from me and destroyed. Could you not keep it in your archives? On my return all that will be necessary will be to mention my name to you or to your possible successor."

"Yes, but—"

"You will make a note on the receipt tha it can only be claimed in that way."

"Very well. Will you be good enough to give me your name?"

Without hesitation, Ravenot answered: "Duverger, Henri Duverger."

On regaining the street he gave a sigh of relief. The first part of his programme was ended. They might arrest him now; he knew his booty was safe.

He had coolly reasoned in the following way: "When I shall have served my sentence, I shall draw out my deposit. No one will be in a position to dispute it. Five or six years in prison will soon be over, and then I shall be rich. This is less stupid than to grind one's days to the end. I shall live in the country and be known to everybody as Monsieur Duverger. I shall reach a peaceful old age, and do good without any remorse."

He waited another twenty-four hours in order to be sure that the numbers of the bank notes were not known; then he gave himself up.

Many a man in his position would have invented some kind of a tale—he preferred to tell the truth and confess to the theft. Why lose time?

During his preliminary examination, even before the jury, he would not say what he had done with the money. All he would answer was: "I do not know. I went to sleep on a bench and was robbed."

Owing to his hitherto exemplary character, his sentence was minimized to five years' imprisonment. Without the quiver of a muscle he took it. He was but 34—at 40 he would be free and rich, so he looked upon the punishment as a small, necessary sacrifice.

While serving his term he was considered as exemplary a convict as he had been an official. He patiently watched the days go by and had no concern except as to his health. At last the day of his liberation dawned. His little savings of about ten francs were paid out to him, and his first thoughts were the notary and the deposit. How he had longed for this hour. He drew a mental picture of the scene as it would be enacted.

He hurried to the well-remembered office. Would the notary recognize him? He looked at himself in a mirror. In truth he had aged considerably, his features were drawn. No, the notary would surely not recognize him. Ha! ha! that would make the matter more interesting and comical still.

"What can I do for you, sir?"

"I am here about a deposit which was left with you five years ago."

"Which deposit?" Under what name?"

"Under the name of Monsieur —" Suddenly he stopped. "This is strange, indeed. I cannot for the life of me think of the name I gave."

He thought and thought, but the name would not come to him. Feeling himself getting nervous, he sat down, and muttered to himself: "Keep cool—patience. If I could only find the first letter. Monsieur —? Monsieur —?" The name would not be conjured up.

For an hour he searched his memory; searched for a hold, a sign. The name seemed to stand before his eyes, turned about him; he saw the letters scatter and the syllables take flight. Every moment he had a sensation that he could grasp it—it was on the tip of his tongue—still it would not materialize. From being simply vexed, he now became excited and suffered actual physical pain. Hot and cold waves ran up and down his spine, his muscles contracted, he could not remain quietly in the same place; his hands twitched and he bit his parched lips until they bled. He wanted to weep and fight at the same time. Yet the more he tried to concentrate his thoughts the more the name eluded him.

He rose, and stamping his foot he remarked: "Why try any longer? It will come to me when I shall cease looking for it."

But this was easier said that done. Do what he might the same question was ever uppermost in his mind—"Monsieur —? Monsier —?"

Night came on. The streets began to be deserted. He went to a lodging house, asked for a room, and threw himself on the bed—worn out by the strain. He slept until daybreak and felt much refreshed, and for a moment forgot his dilemma. Suddenly it all came back back with redoubled fury.

The sensation of fear now came over him, fear of never finding the name again. Like one possessed, he walked about the notary's house by the hour. For the second time it grew dark. He buried his nails in his scalp and groaned, "I shall go mad!"

Here was his terrible position. He possessed 200,00 franes in bank notes—to be sure, they were stolen property, still he would take possession. To have them he had served five years in prison, and now he could not get them. They were within his reach, but a name, a single name, which could not come, cheated him out of it all. He beat his head, for it seemed as if his reason were leaving him; he ran against the lamppost reeling like a drunken man. He had no more fired ideas—madness possessed his whole being. He seemed now convinced that he should never find the name. Strange voices whispered to him and passers-by point their fingers in derision. Headlong he rushed through the streets, regardless of anything in the way, in a mad desire that something might crush out his brain. "Monsieur —? Monsieur —? Oh, the name!

He came to the river. In the green, indolent waters of the Seine the sars were reflected. He wept aloud— "Monsieur—? Oh, what is the name?"

He ascended the steps leading to the lower bank, and lay down near the water's edge so that he might cool his face and hands. He breathed heavily. Gradually the water drew him nearer and nearer until he felt his eyes—his face—his whole body. He felt himself drawn into it without making the slightest attempt to hold on to something. Then he fell; the icy cold stang him. Involuntarily he struggled, his arms flew up, he raised his head—then he sank. He rose again to the surface, then suddenly, during a last desperate effort, his eyes bulging out of their sockets and his mouth contorted, he shrieked, "I have it. Help! Duvergerrrrrrrrrr!"

The banks of the river were deserted. The waters splashed against the bridge, and its dark arch reechoed the name Duerger. Lasily the Seine drifted on; red and green lights glanced on its mirror. A deadly calm pervaded the scene.—Louise Waring in Philadelphia Telegraph.

AMERICAN HEIRESSES ARE VERY UNFORTUNATE

"Several ladies whose names have been so unhappily mentioned in connection with the Castellane scandal have gone into temporary seclusion," says the London World, which, taking that as a text, proceeds to moralize thus: "It is curious how many American women have become martyrs in their matrimonial experiences with European noblemen. Especially is this the case in France. The conjugal misadventure of Comtesse Boni de Castellane, nee Anna Gould, puts one in mind of the many more or less unhappy marriages recently made by wealthy American girls with French noblemen. There is the much-to-be commiserated Duchess de Valancay, who, as Miss Helen Morton, was a gne type of the accomplished American heiress and an orphan to any money. Brought up in the most refined manner, and with literary attainments, she married the dissolute Duc de Valancay, fascinated by the glamour of his title. She suffered for several years from the indignities and cruelty of her husband, and though she saved him his husband's family from absolute ruin and his family property from the brokers by paying one hundred thousand pounds, she afterward discovered that not only the whole of her dowery had become forfeited to the society of her husband, but also that she had no right to bear the soiled, mud-be-spattered title of Duchess de Valancay. There, too, is the miserable example of Bettie Curtis, who became the Marchioness de Talleyrand-Perigord, of Mrs. Oliver Belmont's unfortunate sister. Though the Vicomtesse Fontilliat, who on her deathbed must have regretted that she had ever changed her name from the plain Mimi Smith.

"Further afield than France, there is the example of Eva Julia Bryant Mackay, who married the Prince Colonna Stigliano, a scapegrace if ever there was one. Quite recently this lady, when she desired to marry her daughter, found herself obliged to buy her husband's consent to the marriage. What a pleasure, oh, it must have been to the family of the St. Louis girl who married the Spanish adventurer, Count Peneloza, to hear, after her divorce, that the count had been arrested on a charge of forgery. There are many other family instances known which show, that, as a rule, the marriages of cultured and well-bred American women of wealth with continental noblemen do not turn out successfully. It is to be noted that these French, Italian, Russian and Spanish noblemen do not marry beautiful American *without money, nor American ac*tresses, however much they might be inclined to associate themselves with dancers and singers. No; it is to the English nobility that the penniless Miss Robinsons and the Miss Frances Donnellys have to go to make marriages of love. The French and other continental noblemen want money and nothing else, and but for the money which comes to them in the shape of dowries they would seldom, if ever, go to America for their wives."

So much for this English view of the question. Not long since Baron Max von Schweidler-Schwartzenburg, of Germany, who was in Cleveland endeavoring to secure from his wealthy father-in-law an increased allowance unburdened his soul in the course of an interview and voiced the European view of the mating of titles with money. A title, he declared, has an actual market value. In his opinion, this value should be arranged to a sliding scale of prices ranging from a prince down to a baronet or knight. "Of all European titles," claims Baron Max, "those of Germany and Spain are the oldest. Newness of titles in England and France interferes with their value. When a nobleman who, as I do, enjoys privileges at court and in the salons of Europe, marries a woman without title he loses social caste. He should be recompensed for this loss. Moreover, an untitled woman marrying into a titled family should expect to pay for it." That quite a number of wealthy American women agree with the baron is evidenced by even a partial list of the many who have wedded titles of recent years. Some of these, with the amounts of their dowries, the names of their artistocratic husbands are: May Goelet, dower $20,000,000, husband, Duffe of Roxburghe; Anna Gould, $15,000,000, count de Castellane; Consuelo Vanderbilt, $10,000,000 Duke of Marlborough; Mary Leiter, $10,000,000, Lord Curzon; Julia Leiter, $5,000,000, Earl of Suffolk; Alice Thaw, $2,000,000, Lord Yarmouth; Cornella Martin, $2,000,000, Earl Craven; Helesa Zimmerman, $2,000,000, Duke of Manchester; Virginia Fair, $4,000,000, count Dewhurst; Miss Brewster, $1,000,000, Count Frankenstein; Maude Burke, $2,000,000, Sir Bache Cunard; Lita Garner, $4,000,000, Marquis de Breteuil; Miss Gillender, $5,000,000, Marquis di San Marzano; Miss Caldwell, $2,000,000, Baron von Zedwitz; Miss Forbes, $1,000,000, Duke Choiseul-Prasdin; Matilde Davis, $2,000,000, Duke Santa Monfeltrio; Frances Lawrence, $1,000,000, Lord Vernon; Cornelia Roosevelt, $1,500,000, Baron G. Stokes, $5,000,000, Baron Halkett; Mrs. Frederick Stevens, $7,000,000, Duke di Dino; Miss Wheeler, $1,000,000, Count Pappenheim; Miss Sperry, $1,000,000, Prince Poniatowski; Miss Tynags, $1,000,000, Lord Lister Kaye; Miss *Hazard, $1,000,000, Prince Anen*sperg; Miss Gallatin, $1,000,000, Count de Rohan-Chabot; Miss Spencer, $1,000,000, Prince Vicovaro; Miss Berwind, $1,000,000, Baron Bocklinson; Miss Satterfield, $1,000,000, Count von Larisch, etc.

RECIPES.

Charlotte Russe.

Soak three-quarter level tablespoon of granulated gelatine in one-quarter cup of cold water for half an hour, then set the dish in another of hot water and stir until the gelatine is entirely dissolved. Beat one cup of thick cream, add the powdered sugar and vanilla to suit the taste and then the lukewarm gelatine. Pour the gelatine in slowly and bring the mixture up from the bottom of the bowl while stirring. Line five small molds with lady fingers or sponge cake sliced thin and fill the with cream. Set away to harden.

Malosses Fruit Cake.

Cream two-thirds cup of butter, add one cup of sugar and beat again, two cups of molasses, one cup of milk, five cups of flour sifted with one level teaspoon of soda, four well beaten eggs, one level tablespoon each of ginger and cinnamon, one level teaspoon of grated nutmeg, one cup of raisins and one cup of currants rolled lightly in flour. Bake in a large loaf in a moderate oven for one hour.

Caramel Frosting.

Put one and one-half cups of granulated sugar into a small sauce pan, water and cook until it smokes, being careful that it does not burn. Add one-half cup of milk and cook until a thick syrup is made. Beat as it cools until smooth.

Brown Bread Toast.

Heat four cups of milk, add four level tablespoons of flour made smooth in a little cold milk, and cook ten minutes. Add four level tablespoons of butter, a saltspoon of salt and a level teaspoon of sugar. Toast slices of brown bread on both sides and lay in a deep dish; pour the toast gravy over and serve before it has stood and become soft and mushy.

Potatoes in Gravy.

Pare a dozen small potatoes or if new scrape off the thin skin. Put into a sauce pan with a tablespoon of minced onion, another of chopped parsley and cover with any kind of meat or chicken gravy. Add a seasoning of salt and pepper, cover and cook until tender. Strain the liquid into a small sauce pan add a tablespoon of butter rolled in flour, cook three minutes and pour over the potatoes.

Cottage Pudding.

Sift two cups of pastry flour with four level teaspoons of baking powder and a pinch of salt. Beat one egg, add one cup of milk, and stir in *to the flour, add one-half cup of sug*ar and two tablespoons of melted butter. Bake in gem pans heated and buttered. Serve with a liquid sauce, and if liked, a spoonful of mashed and sweetened berries in addition.

Salmon Leaf.

Drain the juice from one can of salmon and chop the fish fine. Add the yolks of four eggs well beaten, one-half cup of fine bread crumbs, four tablespoons of melted butter, one-third level teaspoon of pepper, one-half level teaspoon of salt, and a teaspoon of finely minced parsley. Beat the whites of the eggs stiff and add last. Put into a buttered baking pan and bake half an hour. Serve with a sauce poured over the loaf as it is turned from the pan.

For the sauce add the juice drained from the salmon to one cup of milk, one rounding tablespoon of butter and the same of flour rubbed together and cook five minutes. Add one beaten egg, cook one minute and it is ready to serve.

For tomorrow—Serving a boiled fish; twin biscuit, cream cake, green pea soup, lemon pie, breakfast corn cake, omelet for one, brown bread.

TABLE OF MEASURE TO HELP THE COOK.

July 1: "Christian Citizenship"—Ps xxxii, 2s; I Pet. ii, 23; John xix, 12-16; Acts xxiv, 25, 27; Mic. iii, 1-11; Ezr. iv, 12, 13; I Kings xxi, 17-19; Prov. xi, 10, 11.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Never before has the nature of civil government been so carefully studied as during the past few years. Never have the rights and duties of citizenship been so thoroughly discussed as now.

The cause of this is not far to seek. The old forms of government where the will of the one or the few prevailed gave no opportunity for the mass of the people to develop in citizenship. Their place was to obey without question the commands of their superiors.

In recent times the government by the whole people has necessitated an entire readjustment of the theory of government and in consequence a different conception of the civic rights and duties of the individual. Many wild schemes have been proposed and many fantastic principles propounded. Out of all this confusion order is gradually emerging. But it would be premature as yet to say that the really Christian nation has appeared. It is in process of formation, but has not yet come.

In our own land the duty of every young person, whether male or female, to learn the true nature of our government and the duties of citizenship is pressing. Our leagues should make this a subject of special study, as much as they study missions and revivals.

The adoption of the principles of the world lies considerably within the power of our own nation. This is no wild or fanatical dream. The events of the past two years have shown it to be a very sober and momentous fact.

The whole question of the course of action lies in the hands of our young people. That sounds familiar and is commonplace, but it should not be passed as empty platitude. That also is very solemn and momentous truth.

If our young people find the proper ground of human government, learn how to embody in man made laws the eternal principles of righteousness and *then succeed in putting in effective op*eration these same right enactments and statutes and themselves live according to divine law of supreme love to God and equal regard for fellow man, then is the future of the nation and world bright with promise. If they fail in any particular, no power can avert a disaster in which the wreck of San Francisco shall seem trivial.

God rules, and human government must be a reflex of the eternal will and nature of Jehovah. This is basal. Immovable.

Iniquity of rulers against even the poorest or oppression and corruption by the rich and powerful will wreck the nation. This is inevitable.

Neglect of performance of duty by any person risks the destruction of the whole fabric of government. Each must do his share or all shall suffer.

Much light has come to us; more will come if we seek.

Much of true patriotic sentiment has been born in us. It needs larger and more vigorous growth.

Much of loyalty to God is felt and willed by us. Greater depth of devotion to God and man is needed to develop the highest Christian citizenship.

Prayer to Gain the Final Victory.

God of all patience, help me, I pray Thee, to be patient with myself. When temptations conquer me, again and again, help me not to give myself up. When my endeavors fail, again and again, maintain my courage and confidence. When sorrows gather thickly around me be Thou my abiding sunshine. Endow me with Thy perseverance. May I never abandon myself while Thou dost abide with me. May I rise undismayed from every fall, rising into Thy loving, outstretched arms. Not to grow carelessly secure, resting too easily in Thy forgiveness. Not to become deadened against sin, forgetful how Thou dost hate it, but only to have strength to fight, only to get on my feet again, and yet again and always again, till in Thy strength and by Thy grace the final victory comes to me. This I ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.—Gilbert Fairchild.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 1.

By REV. F. B. MEYER, M. A.

Topic—Humility, the foundation of virtue.—Matt. xx. 20-28; I Pet. v, 5.

The foundation of the Christian's life is faith, and faith is a gift of God. "By grace are ye saved, through faith, and that [faith] is not of yourself; it is a gift of God." Upon faith the Apostle Peter declares that the Christian is to build his character by adding one Christian grace to another until he reaches the supreme grace of charity or of love. The first thing to be added to faith, according to the apostle, is virtue. "And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue." The Greek word translated "virtue" does not mean chiefly, but courage, valor, manly strength. The necessity of adding virtue in this sense to our faith is apparent. Faith is frequently tested. Our God is an infinite God, and cannot be fully comprehended by the human mind, which is finite. Christ is set forth in the sages has been the subject of attack by skeptics, infidels and atheists. Courage must therefore be linked with faith. Otherwise faith itself may be lost or we may be overwhelmed and tormented by doubt and mistrust. The christian needs to be strong. In the face of all doubt and unbelief he must be able to stand firm and unshaken, believing in God, though he cannot solve all the problems of God's being or understand the dealings of God's providence with him, or "justify the ways of God to man." If our knowledge of God and His ways were full and complete, faith would be no element in our religion. Knowledge eliminates faith. But in religion faith is the element and condition. "We walk by faith and not by sight." And walking by faith requires courage, strength, valor or, as the apostle puts it, virtue.

Since virtue is so essential to faith and life, based upon faith, whatever conduces to virtue is of great importance to us. The topic suggests that humility is the foundation of virtue. The truthfulness of this position cannot be denied. The truly humble man is the strong man. He is strong with God. The pride of Pharisee exalted himself in prayer, while in humility the publican exalted God and debased himself, yet he went down to his house justified rather than the other." Jesus warned disciples and John that high place in the kingdom was to be attained only by humility. Human pride cannot force an entrance into the kingdom of God or receive its honors. Humility is necessary for entrance into the kingdom, and he that "humbleth himself shall be exalted." It is a law of the kingdom of Christ. The humble man is strong with his fellow men. Sincere humility gives a man strength in relation to men so far as his faith is concerned. Humility is not understood by mankind upon its birth. It bows before God in submission and seeks not by presumptuous understanding to search out God. Humility makes a man strong in himself. "When I am weak," says the apostle, "I am strong." The realization of personal weakness sends us to God, in whom is all strength and from whom we derive our strength. Therefore "serve the Lord with all humility of mind."

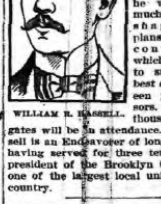
A State Convention Chairman.

The next biennial convention of the New York State Christian Endeavor union is to be held in Brooklyn on Oct. 9,10 and 11. William R. Hassell of Brooklyn has been chosen as the chairman of the convention committee, and he will have much to do with shaping the plans for this convention, which promises to surpass the best of its eight predecessors. Several thousand delegates will be in attendance. Mr. Hassell is an Endeavorer of long standing, having served for three terms as the president of the Brooklyn City union, one of the largest local unions in the country.



WILLIAM R. HASSELL.

Christian Endeavor's Principles.

First.—Deep religious devotion. There is no such compelling and attractive power as this. "For Christ and the church" has always been the motto of the society.

Second.—Service for all and all for service. "No impression without expression," the latest word of the psychologist relating to adolescent youth, has been practically wrought out in Christian Endeavor methods.

Third.—"Fellowship with fidelity." "Brotherhood with all, loyalty to one's own"—these are the watchwords which are heard in Christian Endeavor circles all over the world and which, incarnated in deed, have given the society its power.

What of the future?

Let the historian of the fiftieth year of the society prophesy after the event, but it can be said in a general way that the outlook was never so bright as today; the society was never making its way so rapidly in all lands; its critics were never less destructive or more helpful, its supporters were never so numerous and courageous, and, with augmenting years, increasing flexibility, enlarging scope and variety of service and a firmer grasp than ever on its fundamental principles, it is entering upon its second quarter century with more than the vigor, hope and expectation of its earliest years.—Dr. Francis E. Clark in Outlook.

THE MAN AT THE DESK.

The Man at the Desk has a patient look,
As he wrotes and writes in his open book,
And he bends his back to the task before
Like a galley-slave to his rubbed oar.
Columns of figures he marshals by,
Piled up decimals mountains high
Which seem to sing to his well-ruled brain
His long, monotonous life-refrain:

"Debt, credit, voucher, pay,—
Discount, balance, day by day;
Carried forward, interest, dues,—
So the monotonous river runs."

The Man at the Desk with the patient look
Has followed the rule of the copy book,
"Early to bed and early to rise,"
Yet he's neither healthy, wealthy, nor wise.
Honest, industrious, sober, chained
To his office cell, he has long remained
Dead of ambition, busy of pen,
Adding up figures for other men.

"Debt credit, remit, amount,
Carried forward, close account;
Daybooks, draftbooks, interest, dues—
So the monotonous river runs."

The Man at the Desk with the patient look
Has written his life in the open book,
Has charged up Youth with a small amount,
And crossed off Love as a closed account.
Yet bright are the tears in his faded eye
As the column of figures marches by,
Black of ink and with mourning brave,
Like a last parade to a yawning grave.

"Debt, credit," the bugles play,
"Discount, balance, voucher, pay,
Carried forward, interest, dues,—
So the monotonous river runs."
—Wallace Irwin in Success Magazine.

HOW CANDY WAS DISCOVERED.

Scheele in 1783 laid the foundations for the manufacture of cyanide of potassium. With prussiate of potash for its base, dried animal matter of any and all kinds was dumped into the superheated vessels containing the potash, together with iron fillings and borings. A stonelike black mass resulted from the cooling, and other processes brought the final lemon colored crystals which resulted from evaporations of the solutions. From these crystals prussic acid was evolved, of which a 2 per cent solution is the pharmaceutical preparation, yet so powerful that four drops will kill a large dog. A chemist, putting a cyanide solution in a gold lined dish in 1844, discovered that the gold was dissolved in the liquid. This was the beginning of the gold plating process by the use of cyanide and the further involvement of the poison came about the electroplating, in photography and in treating refractory gold ores.—Technical World.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

Published a.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

THURSDAY, JUNE 28, 1906.

PLAINFIELD AHEAD.

It is a matter of pride with Plainfield that the provisions of the Bishops' bill will necessarily work no change in the regulation of its saloons. The reason is that this city has been away ahead of the times in New Jersey in controlling the liquor traffic. For instance, there is an ordinance, which has been obeyed to the letter, that screens must be removed from the bar rooms on Sunday. Another reason is that no saloon-keeper has ever been accused of selling to minors nor of allowing those under age to frequent his establishment. Again, there is no "side room" evil. The presence of women in "side rooms" is almost unknown and it is safe to say that no one ever heard of young girls being allowed in such annexes. Two things that the new law does make compulsory, leaving Plainfield still ahead of its times, is the closing of all liquor places at 11 o'clock at night. That is not all for Plainfield has actual high licenses and is the only city in New Jersey that has. A fee of $1,000 a year and the restriction of the number of saloons has made the proprietors all the more guarded in living up to the strict letter of the ordinance that were in force long before the Bishops' bill was ever agitated.

CITIZENS' CO-OPERATION.

An appeal is made by the committee on lights and trees of the Common Council for the co-operation of every resident. Frequently there are matters needing the immediate action on the part of committees, but as they are not brought to its attention nothing is done. To expedite the work, reports from individual property owners or taxpayers would be welcomed. Wherever branches on shade trees are so low that they touch pedestrians or passing vehicles, wherever there are dead branches on trees in the streets, or wherever lamps or lights are not lighted when required, the committee should be notified by communicating direct with the Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett.

CUT OUT DRY ROT.

Another seat of learning has heeded the sagely advice of successful business men of the day in cutting out dry rot from its curriculum and substituting something that will be of direct value and use in every day life. Washington and Jefferson College is the institution in question. For 100 years, Greek has been required in its regular classical course. The new order dispenses with it.

USING SOFT COAL.

The attention of the city authorities is called to the use of soft coal in this city. The smoke coming from the gas plant stack and from the stationary boiler used by the railroad at the Park avenue bridge as well as from passing coalers are cited as instances. Where is the Board of Health?

U. S. SENATOR GRIGGS?

While John F. Dryden, George L. Record and Edward Casper Stokes are receiving due attention as Senatorial possibilities, little is being said of John W. Griggs. Just keep your weather eye on the man from Paterson.

How very patriotic are those upright "business" men who cry out because the President has ruined this country's foreign trade in the rotten stuff by condemning the alleged embalmed beef and canned poison. They would sacrifice America's reputation and the lives of human beings by smothering up the scandal rather than allow the guilty to suffer any pecuniary loss. Patriotism with the dollar mark attached is a poor brand to say the least.

It is announced that George L. Record has engaged United States Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, to come here and speak for him. When a man running for a public office is compelled to go outside of his own State to get somebody to sing his praises, he is in a bad way.—Trenton State Gazette.

And how about the man who has to get his son-in-law to announce his own candidacy for office?

In New York it takes about five year after an arrest to dispense justice to an offender. In Philadelphia a kidnapper was arraigned, indicted, tried, found guilty and sentenced to life imprisonment in less than three hours. And yet they do say that Philadelphia is slow.

Mrs. John Heath, of Tarrytown, N. Y., has been spending several days with her niece, Mrs. James Manning.

The New Market Juniors held a delightful social at Friendship Hall last night. It was entirely informal, but was enjoyed the more for that reason.

AMUSEMENTS.

There can be no further doubt in the minds of the amusement loving public that Dreamland has within its beautiful gates the feature shows of "dear old Coney Island." The inception, evolution, realization, destruction, incineration and resurrection of San Francisco has made a terrific hit and though the doors of this gigantic spectacular production were only thrown open to the public on Saturday night last it has already been viewed by tens of thousands of delighted spectators. The production of San Francisco calls into requisition a cast of 350 persons, 100 horses, 50 dogs and 75 full-blooded Sioux Indians. The cost of the spectacle is close to $100,000. Too much cannot be said in favor of Roltair's dramatic illusion Pharoah's Daughter. This wonderful illusion tells a dramatic story in its most absorbing form; it deals with the people of Egypt 1,500 years before the coming of Christ. The Egptians were steeped in vice and plague descended upon the land; a high priest arises and proclaims deliverance provided a maiden who is pure shall sacrifice herself in the River Nile. A beautiful maiden from the North of the Land, Lota by name, comes forward and offers herself as a sacrifice; she is accepted and her form bound in chains of garlands and flowers; she is then cast into the waters of the onrushing Nile. The plague as once ceases and the river runs harmlessly and cooling through the land. As a mark of gratitude the populace erected in the Temple of Isca a statue and named the mile high city of the Nile the Lotus flower in honor of the maiden's name Lota. Hereupon the kings began to prosecute the Hebrews by forcing them to build the pyramids and as a further tyranny they issued the edict that animated to their soldiery to destroy all the children of the Jews. It was at this time that Pharoah's daughter, the Princess Thermuthis, began to grieve for the afflicted mothers whose children had met such an inhuman death. One day, so the Bible tells us, Thermuthis as she went to bathe with the maidens in the Nile was astonished to hear strange sounds coming from the roof of the Temple where the statue of Lota stood. Pharoh's daughter stood in wonderment and prayer; suddenly she notices something strange about the marble face of the Lota statue. A spirit from heaven transformed the mass of marble into life and Lota spoke to Pharaoh's daughter and showed her where the child Moses was hidden in the bullrushes. Moses was thereupon drawn out of the water and later led the children of Israel to the promised land. Creation, The End of the World, the Infant Incubattors, the Moqui Indian Village, the Midget City and the numerous other amusements continue to draw record smashing crowds. The vaudeville bill in the White Garden for the ensuing week consists of Black Carl's Dixie Graduates, the Albertys, Hayes and Wynee, Jerome and Morton and the Lorra Trio.

Three changes in the programme at Wistaria Grove, the pretty summer playhouse on top of the New York theatre, on Monday night, served to do what visitors to the resort had said was impossible—to wit, strengthen the capital entertainment given there since June 5 by Messrs. William A. Brady and Jos. Hart, who have succeeded in showing even blase New York city something new in the way of hot-weather entertainment. "Seeing New York" was given in a new edition—or a new "exposure," to carry on the typography of the day—which in this "musical snapshot," which has provided the Gothamites with more new tunes to whistle, songs to sing, and pretty girls to adore than any Broadway in years. Carrie De Mar added to her triumphs in the role of Dolly Day, the volatils little actress of the Society theatre, by putting on a new specialty of mimicry, in which, attired as a doll, she sang, imitated and danced her way into new favor. Clifton Crawford, Al Leech, Fleurette De Mar, Tom Fortune and Cheridah Simpson continued in their original roles. Then came Ned Wayburn's "Rain-Dears," an exquisite singing and dancing spectacle, five pretty girls showing Dreamland, Toyland, Iceland and Way Down Yonder in the Cornfield. Neva Aymar and eight of the prettiest, most graceful girls ever assembled took part in this, which is a spectacle of Fairyland in miniature. It was the last number in the long, clever bill; but the big audience of Monday night remained until the very last drop of a very realistic rainstorm had made very wet the very pretty girl on what it fell. It was a decisive triumph for Mr. Brady, Mr. Hart, Mr. Wayburn, and all concerned. Indeed, in the matter of success, this change of bill on the 18th quite eclipsed the wonderfully auspicious opening on the 5th.

A new concern, organized for the production of American and foreign dramas and musical plays, was formed yesterday in the offices of Frank McKee, manager of the Savoy theatre, with a paid-up capital of $250,000. The men interested are all members of the so-called theatrical syndicate or are affiliated with it, and have been working together for some time. They now form a corporation, which will extend their business interests. These officers were elected: President, Frank McKee; vice president, William A. Brady; secretary, Joseph Brooks, treasurer, William Harris; board of directors, Messrs. McKee, Brooks, William Harris, Brady, Sam H. Harris, Al. Hayman, Henry W. Savage, A. L. Erlanger and Kenneth K. McLaren; executive committee, Messrs. Hayman, William Harris, Brady, Erlanger and McKee. Al. Hayman is president of the theatrical syndicate and Mr. Erlanger is of the firm of Klaw & Erlanger, booking agents for it. The stockholders include A. W. Dingwall, Charles Frohman, Marc Klaw, George M. Cohen, Henry W. Savage, J. Fred Zimmerman and Alexander Lichtenstein, of New York; Isaac B. Rich, of Boston; A. F. Hartz, of Cleveland; C. E. Ford, of Baltimore; C. A. Spaulding, of St. Louis; Rainford & Havlin, of Cincinnati; Sam F. Nixon, of Philadelphia, and B. C. Whitney, of Detroit.

When the Madison Square Garden Roof opened its doors last night, it could be truthfully said that the "silly season" in New York theatricals was fully under way. The Madison Square Garden Roof is the real roof garden of New York. There are no timbers or glass casings between the audience and the sky, and the moon and the stars dead head their way into the show every night. This season the lanterns sway and the breezes blow an accompaniment on the Madison Square Garden Roof to the tuneful music of a new musical follly which has been entitled, "Mamzelle Champagne." Just what this show is can best be judged from its name. It is one of those bubbling, effervescent, breezy things which are always due in the good old summer time. It consists chiefly of music, comedy, girls and lingerie. It is stated by those critics who witnessed the opening performance that there is not a sufficient plot to distract the attention of the members of the audience from whatever brand of refreshment they may have beside their elbows. "Mamzelle Champagne" is produced by Henry Pincus. The principal comedy role is played by Harry Short, the well-known eccentric comedian, while Edwin Fowler and Miss Maud Fulton are the chief assistant fun makers. The title role of "Mamzelle Champagne" is being sung by Miss Viola De Costa, while Miss Maud Earle, a sister of the possibly better known but no more talented comic opera star, Virginia Earle, is the prima donna. There is a chorus of fifty, and they are mostly girls.

LITERARY.

The much talked about Third International Conference of American Republics will open in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, on Saturday, July 21, and remain in session until September 1. Hon. Elihu Root, our distinguished Secretary of State, will shortly sail for Rio de Janeiro on board the cruiser "Charleston," one of the latest and finest vessels in the navy. The delegates, six in number, headed by Hon. William I. Buchanan, ex-Minister to Argentina and Panama, member of the last Pan-American Conference is Mexico City, will sail from New York on July 2, on the S. S. "Byron." A number of distinguished South American diplomats at Washington have already left for Europe, whence they will proceed to Rio. That our commercial relations with South America are still far from satisfactory is shown in a number of timely and able articles which appear in the current issue of the American Exporter.

D. OF A. ELECTION.

Charles Taynor Head of Martha Washington Council.

Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America, elected the following officers at its meeting Saturday night: Junior past councilor, Mrs. Mary Hoffman; associate junior past councilor, Miss Florence Welsh; councilor, Charles Taynor; vice councilor, Mrs. Hannah Thompson; associate vice councilor, Miss Ethel Bush; warden, Miss Daisy Gary; conductor, Mrs. L. S. Alpaugh; recording secretary, Gilbert Sutphen Martin; financial secretary, George B. Allen; treasurer, Mrs. Mary Bush; trustee, Mrs. Allen; representative State council, George B. Allen.

Initiation followed the election of officers in which the team did fine work and was highly complimented by visiting members of Star of Elizabeth Council. A banquet followed.

HURT IN GYMNASIUM.

Y. M. C. A. Member Cut His Head Open On Parallel Bar.

Arthur Aalholm, of Second place, was severely injured in the gymnasium of the parallel bars at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Saturday afternoon. In springing for one of the bars he struck his head against the apparatus, and cut his scalp deeply.

He didn't realize the extent of his injury, although the blow partially stunned him, until he felt the blood trickling down his face. He went to the office of a physician, where five stitches were taken in the gash.

Genius.

"John's home from college?"

"Oh, yes."

"What's he goin' to do now?"

New interest is added to the Dunphy-Freedman case by the institution of an action in tort by the former. He asks $200 damages.

P. H. S. SENIORS' POEM.

The class poem of the senior class of the City High School, composed by Miss Elizabeth Winter, of the class, was read by her at the class day exercises at the school Tuesday evening. The entire poem follows:

Up, gentle knight, gird on thy shining sword;
Thy vigil thou hast watched; forth to the fray!
Thy mettle in thy Master's cause display,
Thy valor in the service of thy Lord.

The king hath spoken, low his servant bends,
And hastes to do the thing his Lord commands.
His gleaming arms he dons with eager hands,
And gally from the castle gate descends.

Before him stretch the tender fields of spring,
Warmed by the climbing sun of early day;
And louder, as he hurries on his way
The echoes backward sounds of tumult fling.

Straight through the struggling host of friend and foe,
With sword unsheathed and helmet proudly high
His hand untired, undimmed his ardent eye,
The knight, full brave in youthful strength doth go.

And some the stanchly stand and some they fall,
Unnoted, while the battle still roars on;
Here these have lost, there those their conflict won;
The day wears on in ceaseless strife for all.

His helmet gone, his arms no longer bright,
The knight yet plies his sword with heavy thrust;
His garment all befouled with blood and dust,
No pageantries to battle now incite.

A cruel wound is sapping at his life,
Sore tempted he to leave the doubtful fray
To snatch a single hope in coward flight,—
But still he presses onward in the strife.

Nay, now, my gentle knight thou must cease,
Another thrust and thou are pale and still,
Thou seemst with buoyant life no more to thrill;
Thou wert a noble knight. May'st sleep in peace.

Up to the castle gate they bear him.
Yea!
The door is opened. Steps the master down,
"My noble knight! Receive thy Victor's crown!"
And in his arms the drooping knight they lay.

WOMAN APPLIED FOR STATION HOUSE LODGING

BUT SHE WOULDN'T CONSENT TO BE TECHNICALLY ARRESTED.

A middle-aged woman who gave her name as Mrs. Mary Allen, and claimed Reading, Pa., as her home, applied for a lodging at police headquarters at 10:30 o'clock Friday. She said she was travelling from New York to Reading as cheaply as possible, and while not out of money, she had to flare closely and didn't think she could afford to pay hotel or boarding-house rates.

The sergeant explained that the only way he could give her a lodging was to place her under arrest, but she shrank from that even when he explained that the action would be merely a formality. She was not an ill-kept appearing woman and seemed to be what she claimed. She showed the sergeant $1.15 tied up in a handkerchief, and said that was all she had to keep her on the way. She thanked the sergeant and went out to get a trolley westward.

The officers were puzzled to decide the woman's class. They tried to believe her story, but they were afraid she was trying to work a new and very slick con game. There is a suspicion in their minds that she would not have refused a contribution from large-hearted officers moved to compassion by the plight of a "respectable widow woman."

Commencement at Watchung.

The commencement exercises of the Watchung School were held Wednesday night at the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel. The children, over seventy in number, all took part and in a most creditable manner, showing a marked improvement. The programme as published in The Daily Press on Tuesday was given entire. Those who assisted at the exercises were Miss Florence Acker, E. Acker, George and Edward Spear and M. J. Duffy, George A. Schmidt and J. Clark, members of the Board of Education. Mrs. S. S. Higgins is the teacher at this school and she has been very successful this year.

MRS. PERCY H. STEWART ENTERTAINS SOCIETY

DELIGHTFUL LUNCHEON AT THE PLAINFIELD COUNTRY CLUB.

An elaborate luncheon was given at the Plainfield Country Club, Friday, by Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, of West Eighth street, for a large number of society people. The pretty clubhouse was made even more attractive through the lavish decorations consisting chiefly of the rambler rose. This flower was used in profusion on the porch, dining room and for a bower beneath which the famous Hungarian Neapolitan Band was seated. Throughout the luncheon and during the afternoon the band gave one of its best programmes, including many of the popular selections. The clubhouse decorations were in charge of the clerk, David Shaw.

After the luncheon which was served by Mrs. Hellstrom, the steward, the guests spent the afternoon in a social way, thoroughly enjoying the delightful summer day on the hill top.

Among those present were Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, Mrs. A. H. Atterbury, Mrs. Francis DeLacy Hyde, Mrs. Walter Stewart, Mrs. J. K. Myers, Mrs. George B. Wesm, Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Mrs. Jabez Gilbert, Mrs. J. B. Dumont, Mrs. A. L. Otterson, Mrs. W. H. Stevens, Mrs. John Grierson, Mrs. J. N. VanVliet, Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch, Mrs. Edward J. Patterson, Mrs. D. W. Taylor, Mrs. G. H. Beaton, Mrs. Robert Rushmore, Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney, Mrs. J. S. Zelle, Miss Moore, Miss Beaton, Miss Otterson, Miss Stewart and Miss Murphy.

Saved Old Man's Life.

Leo Scheuer, head of the Scheuer groceries, who has a number of friends in the city, saved the life of an old man Thursday morning at the Erie station in Paterson. The old man, in driving across the tracks, became frightened at the approach of a train and pulled his horse up helplessly, directly on its path. He seemed spell-bound and would have been struck had not Mr. Scheuer, who saw his danger, leaped forward and hit the horse over the flank with his umbrella, sending it forward on a run, barely in time to escape the locomotive. The act required considerable nerve, and Mr. Scheuer is receiving the congratulations of his friends.

LITERARY NOTES.

An examination of The Red Book Magazine for July leads to the conclusion that the interest of the stories in the issue is no less great than the charm of the distinctly American canoe-girl whose portrait forms the cover. Some account of timeliness is taken in giving Henry Louis Mencken's Fourth-of-July story, "The King and Tommy Cripps," the first place in the number. Poor little Tommy's patriotic attempt to celebrate his nation's natal day in a foreign land was marked by ill luck for Tommy, but all came aright in the end—even for the king. William Hamilton Osborne's story in the July issue, entitled, "The Wicked Waste at Wilkinson's" is concerned with a girl's extraordinary management of a cotton mill in the face of strikes and trusts; and Campbell MacCulloch's account of "Trimming an Infant," may perhaps deter other infants from being "trimmed." Readers of magazines have learned to look to the far west for those stories of broad humor which make for laughter rather than for smiles.

There is a touch of Edgar Allan Poe in the strong, weird story, "The Hat and the Man," by Henry Irving Dodge, in the Woman's Home Companion for July, that is heightened by Dan Beard's effective illustrations. Among other original tales and sketches are Clara Morris' reminiscence "A Pirate;" "A Nice Little Thing in Blue," by Miriam Michelson; "From the Van Cleeve Jewel-Box," by Anne O'Hagan; "The Adopted Doll," "The Studio Baby," and a touching little Japanese picture, "The Honorable Gust of the Mother Heart." The real feature of the magazine is the strong article by John Spargo entitled "Child Slaves of the Slums," practically the first gun of the great fight the Woman's Home Companion is waging against child labor. Two interesting questions are raised by the articles entitled "Shall We Reform Our Spelling?" by Mary Bronson Hartt; "Has the Club-Women Supplanted the Church-Woman?" by Charlotte Perkins Gilman. "The Vagaries of the Hat-Maker" is an amusing bit of everyday philosophy by Sophie Kerr Underwood.

Scribner's Magazine for July, in the series on "The Railways of the Future, describes a great Canadian Railway project. The Grand Trunk Pacific is an all-Canadian line, from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, and far more than a transcontinental railway. It will penetrate new territory in Athabasca and Northern British Columbia. Experts say that it will open up the greatest wheat-growing region in North America. Hugh D. Lumsden, chief engineer of the government lines, describes the work so far done on this part of the road, and outlines the engineering problems of the remainder. Cy Warman gives a graphic account of the varied regions through which the road will pass, and the tremendous resources which it will make available. The whole project is as romantic and far-reaching as any railroad scheme since the United States backed the Union Pacific. Another article of great practical importance is Frederic C. Howe's account of the advantages of municipal ownership in "Glasgow." Much has been written about this city, but never before has such a complete popular exposition by an expert been made. The marvels of management which the people of Glasgow have achieved—a price for gas that makes our 80 cents seem extravagant, and street-car fares far below the standard of Tom Johnson—are expounded by Mr. Howe, a well-known lawyer of Cleveland, whose book on "The City" has become an authority.

Warm weather creates a desire for easily digested food—both physical and mental. The July number of Lippincott's Magazine responds generously to this demand by making entertainment the key-note of its contents. Jane Bethell contributes a delightful little sketch, "The Heart of Paprika." This, as its name implies, is both sweet and spicy and holds the reader's interest in spite of the thermometer. Its author wanted her story to be a tragedy, but her hero took the matter into his own hands and married the pretty girl. "By Way of the Attic," by Walt Mahee, is a humorous tale of a prospective bride in a real estate deal. "Con Appassionata" is one of Joseph Bethen's most characteristic inventions about a prima donna, and a husband whose jealousy rebels against his wife's fame. Inez Haynes Gillmore presents a human picture in "The Brothers," in which, incidentally, the sisters also play an important part. The contrasts are remarkably well drawn. "The Letters of a Scoffer," by Melville F. Ferguson, is all amusing story which contains an appeal to every lover of cereals. Sarah Comstock's name is making its way steadily into notice. Her story "Paddling in the Road" will bear comparison with any of its kind in originality of plot and keenness of humor. "The Algerian Swordsman," by Fred Gilbert Blakeslee, is the realistic story of a duel with swords. Joseph Blakeslee, author of "Sword Play for Actors."

London, June 27.—The London County Council's Health Committee recommends that the council seek parliamentary powers to enable it to establish food inspection stations and public slaughter-houses in London and to provide for the inspection of all food entering London.

CITY BOMBARDED BY HAIL

Gardens and Farms Suffered From the Fall of Icy Pellets.

HAILSTONES OF BIG SIZE

Thousands of Three and a Half Inches In Diameter Fell in Perth Amboy—Damage Here Light.

Plainfield was visited Saturday afternoon by a severe and remarkable hail storm, accompanied by a heavy downpour of rain and thunder and lightning. The actual damage here was not as heavy as one would suppose, although the gardens and farms suffered greatly. Throughout the early part of the day there were frequent showers, but at 2 o'clock in the afternoon the weather cleared and it looked as though it would remain so. Within the next hour heavy dark clouds gathered in the southwest and at 3:20 o'clock there was a hail storm. It lasted fully fifteen minutes.

The stones were of varied shapes, some round like moth-balls, others jagged and edged and others were pear shaped. Some were an inch and a half and two inches in diameter. A number of horses in the street were frightened and several runaways were reported. At the home of Harry G. Runkle on West Eighth street, all of the glass in the conservatory was broken. In all parts of the town there were reported the breaking of window panes and scarcely a tree eswindow panes. Scarcely a tree escaped damage. The lawns were covered with leaves, while flower gardens and shrubbery of various kinds were cut down as with a sickle. The headlights of engines passing through Plainfield on the New Jersey Central during the storm were smashed into fragments.

The storm followed a peculiar course. In Eastern Pennsylvania it was very severe, resulting in thousands of dollars worth of damage to crops, wrecking thousands of trees, upsetting houses and in some instances several persons were killed by lightning.

While Dunellen and Scotch Plains were included in the storm area, New Market escaped, as did also Westfield. At Perth Amboy the storm was probably the most severe in this part of the State. It swept over the entire place, doing great damage to public buildings, factories and churches. Hail stones which measured three and a half inches in diameter fell in thousands. In one factory over one thousand panes of glass were broken. Manfred Audley, of this city, who visited a relative at Perth Amboy, yesterday, was shown a pail of hail stones which had been kept in a refrigerator. Four of them weighed an even pound.

The storm also visited Iselin, where it reached cyclonic velocity. Frank Cooper, who boasted of the finest and largest tomato patch in this section, comprising twenty acres, reports that the entire patch was laid waste and is nothing but a mass of mangled vines. At the hotel in Iselin the proprietor shoveled up enough hail stones after the shower to fill his refrigerator.

Several instances were reported here of persons gathering a sufficient quantity of hail stone to make a freezer of ice cream.

J. Herbert Case, of Duer street, who was on his way to Bedminster, to spend Sunday, was overtaken by the storm and had a lively time before he reached a place of safety.

In 1895 a hail storm visited Plainfield, but it only lasted for about five minutes. The damage, however, was heavy, much glass being broken. Scarcely a pane was left in Peterson's greenhouses. After that heavy glass was put in which withstood Saturday's storm. The downpour of rain was very heavy and streets in all parts of the city were flooded, the storm sewers being unable to carry it off quickly enough. A sudden change of temperature was looked for after the storm, but the air did not grow cooler until toward night.

Reports were received that panes of glass in trolley cars were broken, but no other damage to the rolling stock of the Public Service Corporation resulted.

TUCKER REFUSES TO RUN

Colbyite Assemblyman Announces That He Will Not Be a Candidate Again.

NOR TOM DEBEVOISE

Elizabeth Man Will Fight On, However, So Will the Summitite —Situation in Rahway.

Assemblyman Everard Tucker, of Elizabeth, made the announcement today that he would not be a candidate for re-election next fall, declaring that his reasons for this are purely personal. It is not believed that any amount of pressure will lead Mr. Tucker to change his mind and again be the Assembly candidate. He says he would continue to give hearty support to the Colby movement and would do all in his power to help it.

If Mr. Tucker sticks to his intention, Colbyites say that another Elizabethan will be picked in his place. There are several prospective candidates as running mates of Judge William N. Runyon on the olbyites' Assemblyman nomination ticket and from among them two will shortly volunteer their services to the "New Idea."

It is settled that Thomas Debevoise, of Summit, will not consent to be one of the two, although strong pressure was brought to bear on him by friends in this city, Elizabeth and Summit.

Rahway has not grasped the "New Idea" as quickly as it was expected to, but the league has in mind an invasion of that city early in the campaign. There have been several volunteers from Rahway who are anxious to take up the work. There will be a mass meeting in Elizabeth Thursday night under the auspices of the Union County Republican League.

ANNUAL EXHIBIT AT ST. GABRIEL'S ACADEMY

DISPLAY OF PUPILS' WORK EXCEEDS THAT OF PREVIOUS YEARS.

The annual exhibit of specimen work done by the pupils of St. Gabriel's Academy during the past year began in the academy building, Jackson and Watchung avenues, Sunday, cordially invited to attend.

To those who have not viewed previous exhibits, the display of different work is almost a revelation, especially that of the painting class. In this department some very well executed specimens are shown from the brush of Miss Rose Gesewein, Miss Margaret Willoughby, Miss Anna Pedeflous, Miss Mary Berkhan, Miss Callahan and Miss Marie Kenney. They comprise canvasses in oil and water, decorated china, tapestries, panels and sofa cushions. Miss Geswein has a very large number that reveal exceptional talent and Miss Helen Callahan has made rapid progress, this having been her first year. Miss Berkhan and Miss Willoughby are adepts at painting china and Miss Pedeflous and Miss Kenney who are advanced in the study, excel in tapestries. The Sisters of the Academy, who comprise the faculty, have embellished the painting exhibit with some of their own work, the whole forming quite a "gallery" and making a pleasing display.

The embroidery pupils again have a large part of the exhibit and the specimens of this work are a great delight to the women visitors. Some splendid table covers, center pieces and hand embroidered pillows are credited to the Misses Mary McCullough, Anna Pedeflous, May Berkhan, Theresa Schneider and Jennie Dineen. Miss Dineen also shows several bits of plain sewing that are very good and Miss Irene Duchesne leads in Mount Mellick work, which as a rule is hard for most pupils.

In needlework, Miss Marie Kenney shows a pretty white hat in eyelet work and an elaborated cushion. Miss Margaret McDonough has a cushion, richly colored, and Miss Bernadette Duchesne a cushion, embroidered in violet.

The regular class work is devoted almost entirely to free hand sketches in ink, specimen pages of arithmetic, geography, algebra and geometry. The pupils who have pen work displayed are the Misses Grace Rafferty, Irene Duchesne, Margaret McDonough, Marie Kenney, Anna Pedeflous, Mary McCullough, May Berkhan, Lillian Pauly, Theresa Schneider and Jennie Dineen. Among the juniors who are represented are Henrietta Pedeflous, Madeline Noonan, Marie Sullivan, May Duchesne, Margaret Longman, Valentina Coombs and Marie Tobin. Miss Margaret McDonough exhibits a splendid free-hand map and examples of various kinds of class studies are given by the boys, George Noonan, Frederick Coombs, Joseph Noonan and Walter Longman.

Mrs. Frank Manchester, of Lafayette place, who has been very ill, will leave on Saturday for a two months' vacation in New England. She will be accompanied by her daughter.

BOROUGH COPS' BIG HAUL

Capture Twenty Italians in All in Raid on a Somerset St. Booze Emporium.

COLLECTED $64 IN FINES

Prisoners Make Fearful Racket Because They Are Crowded in Cells—Proprietor of Place Escapes.

A couple of beer-laden Italians who got miffed because, in the parlance of the street, "someone handed them a lemon," tipped off the borough police, Sunday afternoon, about a carousal that was in progress in a house on upper Somerset street almost opposite Hudson's lane. Securing the assistance of Special Marshal Ben Harrison and Lieutenant Campbell, of the fire department, Chief Weiss raided the place and captured in all twenty roisterers who were cutting up high jinks around an improvised bar-room, together with five boxes of beer, sundry decks of cards and handfuls of dice. The whole crowd was packed away in the borough jail and Monday they handed up a total of $64 in fines.

The house where the jamboree was being held is rented by Frank Pipiz but he went on a junket yesterday and left things in charge of Columbus Moletch and Mike Morris. They opened up early in the morning and were selling joy water as fast as they could hand it out, all the Italians from the upper section of the borough calling to get some. Those wo wanted to stay and play cards or gamble in other ways squatted about the floor and the place looked like a California "Red Dog" saloon during the gold rush. In some way, two of the card players received rough treatment in a deal and determined to get revenge, so bade "adio" to the crowd and streaked it for the police station.

As soon as Chief Weiss made out what they were telling, both were clapped into jail for safe keeping and the raiding party started for the Pipiz emporium. They had no difficulty in getting in but when they appeared Moletch seized the crowd. The majority made a rush to get out but Campbell was at one door, Harrison at another and interested citizens saw to it that no one leaped out of the windows. The only way clear was upstairs and the two bartenders, Moletch and Morris led a delegation to the attic as if the Mafia was after them. They had to crawl through a narrow opening and before they could do it, Weiss and his assistants had rounded up fifteen. These were hustled downstairs and placed aboard the first trolley car that came along. Those who were left behind thought that they had been overlooked and made no attempt to get away. They still believed so until the police reappeared and made a thorough search of the house. Moletchs and Morris were found half smothered beneath bundles of rags in the attic and had to be jerked out by the feet. They were also placed on a car and the beer and other stuff was loaded in a wagon.

The quarters in the borough jail are limited and the stowing of twenty in four cells brought a howl of protest from the prisoners. They yelled like madmen during part of the evening and the report spread among their friends and relatives that they were being tortured. At one time there was a crowd of 150 in front of the building and the women were frantic. The police drove them away repeatedly but they only returned and as a last resort the prisoners were threatened with a drenching from a hose. This quieted them somewhat and the racket was afterward stopped entirely by the threat that every man who spoke above a whisper would be fined $25.

When the crowd was lined up Roof opened its doors Monday, it whether they pleaded "Not guilty," "guilty" or "quick," so Mayor Smalley fined eighteen $3 each and Moletch and Morris $5 each. One of the prisoners was seen to mail a letter as soon as he got out and it is thought he sent word to Pipiz, who is in New York City, it would be cheaper for him to stay on the other side of the Hudson.

One of the men caught in the haul gave his name as John Verity and said that he had nothing to do with the crowding, that he was only a boarder at the place. The only sympathy he got from the mayor was the advice that he had ought to hang his hat somewhere else.

CHILDREN'S WORK FOR BABY CAMP

BOYS AND GIRLS HOLD A LAWN PARTY FOR CHARITY.

Under the direction of Miss Daisy Robinson, a number of boys and girls held a very successful lawn festival and entertainment Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Van Emburgh, 331 East Second street. It was the second annual affair for the benefit of the King's Daughters' Baby Camp on the mountains, and as a result $5.50 was realized as profit. This sum was turned over to The Daily Press this morning and will be the starting of a fund for the baby camp. It is hoped that others will feel like contributing to it. All money thus will be acknowledged and given to Miss Helen Herman, treasurer of the organization.

The grounds were attractively decorated with flags and Japanese lanterns and in this work the young people had the assistance of Mr. Otto Mueck. The young people worked very hard to make the affair a success and they deserve great credit.

The entertainment opened with the singing of "My Old Kentucky Home," and "My Country 'Tis of Thee," by the boys and girls. Then followed these recitations: "Grandma's Mince and Pumpkin Pies," Daisy Robinson; "Maud Muller at the 'Phone," Elsie Tier; "Turnabout," Walter Fisher; "In My Merry Oldsmobile," Beatrice and Elsie Tier: "A Boy's Pocket," Elsie Tier; "An Automobile," Beatrice Tier; "Good Night," Elizabeth Hicks and Mary McCormick; "A Question," Nora Meagher; "Hiawatha," Daisy Robinson; "The Name that Grew," Ruth Kline; "A Valentine," May Cook; "The Seven Days of the Week," Harvey Thorn, Minnie Mene, Walter Fisher, Benjamin Adleberg, Isabelle Glosk, Ruth Emander and Bessie Adleberg; dialogue, "Red Riding Hood," May Cook; "Cinderella," Ruth Kline; "Gold Spinner," Beatrice Apgar; "Sleeping Beauty," Ella Case. The following songs were also given: "The Boy's Boat," Isabelle Glosk; "Meet Me at St. Louis," and "Every Little Bit Helps," Daisy Robinson; "Rufus Rastus Johnson Brown," Elsie Tier; "Old Woman," Daisy Robinson and May Cook.

After the entertainment there was a sale of candy, ice cream and cake. May Cook and Hazel Apgar were in charge of the candy table; Daisy Robinson and Ella Case the ice cream and Beatrice Apgar the cake. They were assisted by the other boys and girls. Warner Fisher, "Dr. My Assembly on that platform. He is Liver," was present and played selections by an orchestra under the direction of Al. Hankinson. early 100 person attended the festival and all liberally patronized it.

Slow Progress on New Bridge.

Very slow progress is being made on the new West End avenue bridge for the reason that the workmen are inexperienced in construction of the kind called for by the plans. The bridge is to be of concrete entirely and it is the first of the kind to be erected here. The contract specifies that it must be completed within two months, but this will hardly be done, owing to the fact that bad weather combined with inexperience will delay the work.

TAKING COLBY THUNDER

Somerset Regular Republican Organization Plans to Use Reform Platform.

ASSEMBLY CANDIDATES

Case May Be Named by Organization—I. P. Runyon Also Mentioned for Office.

Republican organization leaders in Somerset county, it is said, have arranged to 'corral all the Colby thunder. It is their plan, according to well-founded reports, to espouse every object of the Colby leagues, and blazon them in their banners.

Col. Prelinghuysen and former Senator Charles A. Reed, who control the party between them in Somerset, are said to have reached an agreement on the subject. Their plan is to endorse everything the Colbyites are battling for, and to put the Colby ideas in the platform of the county convention.

Senator Reed has said several times lately that Colby is behind the times in Somerset with his views; that Somerset county Republicans adopted his views years ago and has put them into effect. These are the objects the Somerset Republicans will have to put in their platform if they want to meet the Colbyite specifications.

"1. To promote the best interests of the Republican party in the county of Somerset."

"2. To eliminate bossism and corporate control of the Republican party."

"3. To further the cause of equal taxation, limited franchises, taxation of franchises, popular selection of United States Senators, popular interest in primary elections, and such other progressive measures as may be necessary in the interests of the people."

"4. To promote honest elections and prevent political corruption in every form."

Clarence Case, of Somerville, is said to be the man Reed and Prelinghuysen would pick to run for the Assembly on that platform. He is law partner of A. A. Clark, Democratic leader of the county, who is the father-in-law of Mr. Reed. I. P. Runyon is mentioned by his friends as the straightout Colby candidate

FOR SEWER COMMISSION

Mayor Smalley Empowered to Name a Body to Recommend Best Plan.

AT PUBLIC HEARING

Lengthy Debate During Which Consolidation Figures Conspicuously—Two Schemes In View.

The meeting of North Plainfield citizens in the Common Council chamber Friday, called for the purpose of discussing whether the municipality should build a sewer system with an independent outlet or connect with Plainfield's disposal works, narrowed down to the proposition that the matter should be placed in the hands of a commission to work out the most feasible plan. The suggestion that such a course be adopted was made by William J. Buttfield and he also named Charles W. McCutchen, John P. Wilson, Charles L. Nichols, E. S. Hooley and H. A. McGee as representative citizens who might be willing to serve. A resolution in regard to having the commission was carried by a large majority and it will be appointed by Mayor Smalley at an early date. The names of W. L. Saunders, Joseph O. Osgood and Andrew E. Kenney were also mentioned as being eligible for the personnel.

The gathering was called to order at 8 o'clock by Mayor Smalley and though the number present was much smaller than was expected the men who took part in the discussion were the borough's most prominent residents. Among those who presented their views were former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Henry A. McGee, W. J. Buttfield, George T. Rogers, Andrew E. Kenney, Edward S. Hooley, J. O. Osgood, Captain W. C. Smith, former Councilman James K. Arnold, J. V. E. Vanderhoef, J. W. A. Bauersachs, former Recorder Thomas Doud, W. J. Conroy, W. F. Williams, President L. B. Woolston, of the Plainfield Board of Trade, and Charles Scheuch. Engineer George Pearson, of New York, who prepared preliminary maps and specifications, was present to answer any questions of a technical nature that might be raised, and also did all possible to make everything clear to those who wanted to know what progress had been made.

Several of the men who spoke, touched on "consolidation" in various ways and reference to this subject was made still up a number of Washington Park residents. At one time while Mayor Smalley was expressing his views as to the advisability of a dependent or independent disposal plant he mentioned consolidation and instantly there was a protest from E. S. Hooley and H. A. McGee that "sewage was the subject under discussion, not consolidation."

"We object to hearing the two mentioned together," one of them exclaimed, "that's the cause of many questions." To this Mayor Smalley replied that it was possible to speak of one without referring to the other and that they would have to hear it.

"No we won't either," said Mr. Hooley; "we will not stay here if it goes on."

At the beginning of the meeting it was explained by Mayor Smalley and Borough Counsel Reed that the sole purpose in having the citizens gather was to learn whether they wanted an independent sewer or not, the kind to be built and the expense being matters to talk about later. Engineer Pearson followed them with a short talk on what plans and specifications had been made. After a few questions had been asked in regard to who was to vote on the subject, how different parts of the borough that were very low could be sewered and the probable cost of different systems, J. V. E. Vanderhoef arose and said:

"If North Plainfield is going to remain alone, we should have our own system; if consolidation is to come, we had ought to use Plainfield's beds."

George T. Rogers wanted to know just what it was that led to the meeting being called to discuss sewers and it was then further explained that the council was anxious to know the public mind.

Captain W. C. Smith declared the original call for sewers was due to trouble with sinks and cesspools, thus resulting in big plumbers' bills.

"I don't care where you run sewers," he exclaimed, "so long as we get them."

At this a voice from the rear broke in and said, "I do; I live in the district where they may go." Continuing Captain Smith said he favored connecting with Plainfield's system if suitable terms could be made, if not, then the installation of an independent plant.

Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman said: "I'm in favor of a sewer system. The borough is being held back by the lack of this improvement and I think it would be a saving to join with Plainfield. It will be only a comparatively short time, I am convinced, when the two places will be united and it's useless to duplicate systems. The determination to erect a $300,000 court house at Somerville shows us what this means."

Here Mr. Hooley jumped up and said: "What is this, a sewage or a consolidation meeting?"

The point was accepted by Mr. Hegeman and he continued: "Whatever action is taken by this council will have my support—for sewers, Mr. Hooley."

He was followed by W. J. Conroy who said: "I am in favor of sewers and always have been. As was said before this evening, the need of them is retarding the borough's growth and a good system would greatly increase property values. The question of an individual or the Plainfield sewer depended upon consolidation, but this is not the place to talk about the latter. The borough has been made a political arena every year about election time and this consolidation proposition looks as though something was going on again."

"It's not a question of consolidation," asserted former Recorder Doud, "the talk about sewers was started last January and at that time no mention had been made about consolidation. We need sewers by the best terms and the quickest route and if you gentlemen were in the Board of Health, as I am, you would know pretty quick how the people feel about having them. If it comes to an independent system, there is plenty of room down in the lower end of the township to build the necessary beds."

After J. W. A. Bauersachs had asserted that there was a great demand for sewers from residents east of Somerset street and that he was in favor of an independent plant, a discussion followed as to the capacity of the Plainfield beds and what effect the discharge of the borough's sewage would have upon their working. All questions in this respect were answered in a clear and concise manner by Joseph O. Osgood, who is probably possessed of as much information on this subject as any man in the two Plainfields. He talked for several minutes and when he concluded no one needed any further explanation.

At this juncture, W. J. Buttfield spoke for the first time and said: "There seems to be a great diversity of opinion here and to me it seems as if this question is either going to make or break the borough. One of our largest property owners, Charles W. McCutchen, now in Europe, and who has given quite a number of talks on the subject and recently in corresponding he stated that North Plainfield should go slow. In my belief, the best way to handle this matter would be to appoint a commission and to get it from this meeting. I move that it be done and that Mr. Hooley, John F. Wilson and H. A. McGee be named."

The motion was seconded by Chas. Debele, but Andrew E. Kenney declared that a commission would only serve to complicate matters.

"It isn't a question as to whether a large property owner wants this or that, it's something the whole borough has a say about. The better thing for us to do is to give a vote of confidence to our mayor and council that they are competent to go ahead and bring about what's best. The Plainfield beds have been built after a great deal of time and study and have been copied all over the country, therefore the fact the borough will be allowed to use them is worthy of consideration."

Here Mr. Hegeman arose to state that he concurred with Mr. Buttfield in his view of the importance of the subject and he was followed by Mr. Reed who went over the cost figures of a system as prepared by the engineer and what it would cost to discharge on the Plainfield beds. When he concluded, H. A. McGee took the floor and gave a long talk on teh advisability of going slow. He brought out a number of points that seemed to appeal to the gathering and he was vociferously applauded when he resumed his seat.

President L. B. Woolston, of the Board of Trade, and George T. Rogers both said they favored the commission plan and then Mr. Osgood was called upon for an explanation of the plans and work from his standpoint. This he did in a thorough way and when he concluded said, "I favor going in with Plainfield."

After the applause had subsided, Mayor Smalley said: "The appointment of a commission would cause a delay that the people wouldn't care for. Personally, I regard all the men mentioned by Mr. Buttfield very highly, but there is a question in my mind as to whether they would accept an appointment as a member." The meeting then went into action tonight and yet we are constantly charged with causing delays. The point I want decided first is which system is better. I do not agree with Mr. Osgood in his belief that it is best to go in with Plainfield. He admits himself that the beds are not where they belong and they are a source of constant expence. If we built our own disposal plant we could profit by Plainfield's experience and make improvements and again our system would be permanent. If we can't decide on anything tonight then we should call another meeting."

The tilt about consolidation took place at this juncture and afterward Mr. McGee asked Mayor Smalley how he knew a North Plainfield system would be permanent when no one knew where it would be located. The mayor answered that the location was practically known but it wouldn't be advisable to tell where the point was as immediately the property value would be doubled or again it might be impossible to buy the land when it became known why it was wanted. Another explanation as to what progress he had made was given by Engineer Pearson and the vote was taken on the commission idea, only a view opposing it.

When the result was made known, Mr. Hooley offered a resolution that "it be the sense of the *meeting that the commission be em*powered to engage such engineering advise as deemed necessary." This was carried and it was explained by Mr. Hooley that he meant some other engineer than Mr. Pearson. This matter will be definitely decided by the council. Mayor Smalley announced that he would appoint the commission as soon as possible after which the meeting adjourned.

P. H. S. GRADUATES LOOK TO THE FUTURE

SOME WILL ENTER COLLEGE AND OTHERS GO INTO BUSINESS.

Now that the Class '06 of the Plainfield High School has been graduated, the young men and women will turn their attention to their future. Some of the pupils will continue their studies in other institutions of learning, while others will take a post graduate course and the remainder will either remain at home or go to business.

Stuart and Howard Freeman will take examinations for Yale, although they will take a post-graduate course. George Rittenhouse will enter Stevens Institute and Joseph W. Gavett, Jr., will go to Cornell. Harold Todd will continue his studies at Columbia and Benjamin Herman will also go to college. Malcomb Davis and Abe Hugo Rubenstein will go into business.

Milton St. John and Clarence Heaume, having won scholarships at the New York University, will continue their studies there. Russell Stryker and Robert Rugen also won scholarships at Rutgers College and they will enter that college in the fall. Joseph H. Jones, the only colored graduate of last year, is taking a course of study.

Philip Leichtentritt will study law for a year with John H. VanWinkle & Son, and the following year will enter New York University. Hudson Burr will enter a scholarship and Leslie Palmer will take a course of study at the New York University to prepare for a career as a public certified accountant.

Of the young women graduates, Miss Gertrude Hunter and Miss *Chrystella MacMurray will enter Bar*nard and Miss Anna Sheppard will enter Dunham will continue her studies at the Westfield Normal School to prepare for a kindergarten teacher. Miss Louise Kline will enter Packer Institute and after a post-graduate course, Miss Bertha Hill will enter the same institution. The Misses Hazel Gardner, Avis Aldrich, Lena Bohan and Antoinette Dyett Hill will also go to a college. The remainder of the graduates will either take a post-graduate course or remain at home.

GETTING READY TO ENFORCE BISHOPS' BILL

ALL THE SIDEROOMS MUST GO BY JULY 4.

The saloon keepers and hotel men are preparing to pull down partitions and things to comply with the Bishops' liquor law, which goes into effect on July 4. The police are preparing to see that they do it on time.

The new law requires the removal of all side and rear rooms, and the noise of falling partitions will be heard in the land of Booze in the next week. All screens must be removed on Sunday and after closing hour. This section of the law makes *no appreciable change here. An or*dinance compelling the saloon keepers to leave an "unobstructed" view from the street is now in force.

"We will see that the provisions of the law are enforced," said Chief Kiely this morning, "and they will be enforced strictly, the minute the law goes into effect."

HILLERY-COLBY DEBATES.

Senators Will Meet in Morris County During September.

The Hillery-Colby debates will be held through Morris county during September. The first will be held in the opening week of that month. Senator Colby and Senator Hillery have elected a team for preliminaries. Their meeting is said to have been most cordial.

The debates are the outcome of a remark made by Senator Colby in, the course of a recent meeting in Morris county concerning that county's representatives in the Legislature. Senator Hillery construed the remark as a reflection upon his course as one of the State's lawmakers. He thereupon challenged Senator Colby to debate upon the questions involved. The proposition met with a ready and cordial response.

The delay since then has been because of the death of Mr. Colby's eldest daughter and his subsequent absence from home with Mrs. Colby whose health was impaired.

DEER IN THE MOUNTAIN WOODS NEAR DUNELLEN

DOE WANDERING ABOUT IN WILD STATE RECALLS OLD DAYS.

Memories of pioneer days in this section have been recalled to the residents of the back country near Dunellen by two weeks by the appearance of a deer in the woods. The animal, a small doe, has been seen several times recently in the mountain neighborhood, and is evidently at home there.

Where the doe came from is a question, but it is supposed to be a lost pet or a stray from some herd on some wealthy man's country estate. It seems quite tame, although too shy to be captured.

It has been on Goldson Smalley's farm, just back of Dunellen, two or three times, and showed no great excitement at the appearance of Mr. Smalley or his men. The latter didn't know just what the game laws have to say about deer so they did not attempt to meddle with it. A big dog started after it one day, but the deer easily left the mountain slope into the woods, and showed its purauer a clean pair of heels. It spotted the dog and jumped away to safety as though it was experienced in guarding itself from chase.

At the wedding in New Rochelle Park on Wednesday of Miss Elsie Albert, daughter of Ernest Albert, to Robsey Gilbert, all of New York, the best man was Thaddeus Dusoon, of this city. A feature of the occasion was the serving of dinner on the lawn following the ceremony. The house and grounds were decorated with mountain laurel brought from Massachusetts.

GOFF'S HOTEL IS SOLD NEW TEACHERS ENGAGED

George Seeber Exchanges It For Mc Vey's Hotel and Annex and Private House.

DEAL SIGNIFICANT

Seeber's West Front Street Property Figured in Recent Political Fights and Conviction of Goff.

A large realty deal which is considered by many to be significant, was effected Friday, whereby George Seeber, of the Rising Sun Brewery Company, of Elizabeth, exchanged his property on West Front street, formerly occupied by John Goff, with John H. McVey for his annex property on North avenue, opCompany, and a residential property at 1020 East Front street, now occupied by Theodore French. Possession of property will be taken about July 1.

Mr. McVey, who conducted a restaurant on North avenue for several years, intends to open a restaurant and boarding-house in his new property on West Front street. It is said that Mr. McVey has no intention of *selling liquor or applying to the Com*mon Council for a license, but that it will be strictly a temperance house.

It is not known what Mr. Seeber intends doing with the North avenue property, but there is a belief that he intends to apply next year for a liquor license and that he or his representative will run the place as a hotel. The building is four stories in heighg and is well-adapted for hotel business. John Saddler now conducts a pool and billiard parlor on the ground floor. There will probably be no changes just now in the tenantcy of the building. The articles of agreement have been signed by the interested parties and title will be passed as soon as the search is completed.

The West Front street property which Mr. Seeber exchanges, has always been a source of trouble to him. He built it with the intention of securing a license and running it as a hotel. This he proposed to do tarough John Goff. The story of Mr. Goff's experience with the property is well known. He was caught selling liquor without a license, tried, convicted and fined. This year Mr. Goff tried again to secure a license, but the application was refused. It was then that Mr. Goff decided to give up the place. It is understood that ever since Mr. Seeber has been living at the head of the property. It is claimed that it originally cost him $18,000. The consideration in the present deal is not known.

WATER CO. BUYS BUILDING

Purchases From John F. McIntyre Three-Story Brick Building on North Ave.

CONSIDERATION HELD

No. 171 to 175 North Avenue Included in the Title Transferred on Thursday.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company has increased its property holdings in this city by the purchase of the valuable business property on North avenue, where its offices and those of Elston M. French are located. It was owned by John F. McIntyre. The building is three stories in height, and in addition to the offices contains several very desirable flats. The brick structure with all modern improvements.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company formerly had its offices in A. D. Thompson's building on North avenue, but desiring more room leased the present office of John F. McIntyre. The company has been located there several years and with the increase in property values here, especially in business property, decided to purchase the building and land occupied by it.

It is not expected that any changes will be made at present. Mr. French has a lease on his offices and all of the flats are rented. The purchase was made as a good investment and to prevent any future changes in the offices of the water company.

The title was passed on Thursday. The consideration is not known.

Electric Facial Massage.

William B. Randolph, the hustling up-to-date barber, of 206 Watchung avenue, always wishing to please his customers, has installed an electric machine in his shop to give facial massages. Those who have had this treatment know of its advantages and as Mr. Randolph is the first one to install such a machine here, liberal patronage will no doubt be accorded him.

FIELD FOR OPENING LETTER.

Uncle of One of Accused Gives Reason for Alleged Act.

United States Commissioner Nelson, after a preliminary hearing at Paterson, held Edward Vreeland and William Leitch, of Bunker Hill, in $1,000 bail each to await the action of the United States Grand Jury sitting at Trenton. The young men are accused of having opened a letter addressed to Frederick Elmer Dawson, of Bloomingdale, uncle of young Vreeland.

At the hearing Dawson charged that the young men went to the postoffice and secured the letter, which they took home and opened, afterward leaving it on a mantel until he returned from work.

He said there had been some trouble over real estate in the family and that the letter had been opened because it was supposed to refer to the property in dispute.

WARREN CHAPEL GREETS NEW SUPERINTENDENT

ALL ORGANIZATIONS UNITE IN RECEPTION—JR. C. E. ENTERTAINS.

The various societies of Warren chapel united Thursday in tendering a reception to E. E. Parvin, the new children's superintendent. Members of the congregation and their friends attended in large numbers. In connection with the event, the Junior Christian Endeavor Society gave its annual entertainment.

The chapel was prettily decorated with flowers, and the delightful spirit of informal sociability that marks Warren affairs was a distinct feature of the evening.

The programme opened with the entrance of the juniors in a body, singing "Onward Soldiers of Christian Endeavor." A recitation by Miss Case followed, and was greeted with warm applause; Miss Nora Schenck sang a solo in excellent voice; a double quartette rendition of "Penny Song" by little girls scored a great success; after another recitation by Miss Case, the Misses Ida and Edith Wheeler played a piano duet with much skill; Miss Edna Green recited cleverly, after which Miss Schenck again sang and Miss Case recited a third selection; a flower drill by twelve girls brought the programme of entertainment to a delightful close.

Rev. J. W. McKelvey, the pastor, welcomed Mr. Parvin to his new charge, Mr. Parvin responded in happy vein.

Refreshments were served, and an hour of social intercourse, during which Mr. Parvin was the guest of honor, followed. The refreshments were served under the direction of the Ladies' Aid Society by the members of the Christian Endeavor Society and the Young Men's Brotherhood. Mrs. John H. Snyder, chairman of the Ladies' Aid entertainment committee, directed the serving.

FOURTH MUSICALE OF MISS WHITNEY'S PUPILS

MISS GRACE CARROL ASSISTS BY RENDERING CONTRALTO SOLOS.

The fourth musicale by the pupils of Miss Vincent Whitney attracted a large and appreciative audience of music-lovers to the Park Club Friday night. The pupils were assisted by Miss Grace J. Carroll, contralto. The programme was a choice one and the rendition of the several numbers won hearty applause and commendation from all. The work gave evidence of the careful and painstaking instruction by Miss Whitney and she, too, came in for a large share of approbation and was complimented for the excellent results.

The vocal solos by Miss Carroll were of the usual high standard of excellence and were much enjoyed. In part first she sang "Restless River," by E. German, and in part second her numbers were "Hark, Hark, the Lark," Schubert, and "Irish Folk Song," Foote.

The programme was as follows: Part first—Waltz and chorus, from "Faust," (2 pianos), the Misses Collins, Rittenhouse, Emmons and Gessner; "Dance Caprice," Greig; "Mazurka in C minor," Borokski. Miss Sadie A. Winckler: "Slumber Song," Adams; "Barcarole," Neidlinger, and "The Gay Rider," Gurlitt, Miss Elizabeth Martin: "Bird as Prophet," Schumann; "Air de Ballet, op. 41," Chaminade," Miss Helen George; "Restless River," E. German, Miss Grace J. Carroll; "Impromptu in B," Schubert, Miss Frances Rittenhouse; "Scherzo-Polka," (2 pianos), Behr, Miss Edith Hamerle; "Variati," Valse de Concert, op. 30, No. 2," Wieniawski, Miss Myra Emmons.

Part second—"Return to the Town," (2 pianos), Gurlitt, Misses Martine Weeks, Mary Clarke, Beth Martin, Clara Sherman; "Andante in F," Beethoven; "Polonez," Paderewski, Miss Muriel Collins; "Serenata," (2 pianos), Moszkonski, Miss Winckler and Miss Emmons; "Etude, in F," Lambert; "Waltz in A op. 42," Moszkowski, Charles Meier, a New York pupil; "Hark, Hark, the Lark," Schubert; "Irish Folk Song," Foote, Miss Grace J. Carroll; "Rondo Brilliant," Weber, Miss Frances Rittenhouse, second piano accompaniment, Miss Whitney; "Priests' March," from "Athalia," Mendelssohn, the Misses Emmons, Bailey, Winckler and Hyatt.

Those who acted as ushers at the entertainment were Harry Munn Slauson, Edwin M. Daniel, H. Maxwell Brackley, George H. Dupee and William F. Hobbie.

BRUTALLY TREATED CHILD

Evidence at Trial Before Justice Mundy Showed Daughter Was Beaten.

WOMEN COMPLAINANTS

Mrs. John Entwistle Fined $75—Her Lawyer Appeals the Case.

Adjudged guilty on three separate charges of shamefully abusing her eleven-year-old daughter, Rosie Fisk, Mrs. Josephine Entwistle, of East Front street, was fined $25 and costs on each count by Justice S. C. Mundy in the borough court Wednesday. The defendant entered a general denial of the charges with one exception but the weight of evidence was against her and in addition her manner was flippant throughout the trial. At one time she made an attempt to strike Mrs. Caroline Ohl, who was one of the complaining witnesses, and would have done so but for interference on the part of bystanders.

The Entwistles came to this city from England and for a time resided on West End avenue in the borough. The mother's attitude toward the child caused comment from the time of their appearance and it was frequently asserted that she was subjected to terrible beatings and almost inhuman treatment. Finally Mr. and Mrs. John Leigh, a Miss Smith, who owns the house where the Entwistles lived, and Mrs. Ohl saw enough to warrant their calling the attention of the Organized Aid Association to the matter and their representative investigated. As a result formal charges were preferred against Mrs. Entwistle by Lawyer Louis O. Barton acting for the society, the family in the meantime having moved to the city side.

When trial was called Wednesday the witnesses declared that the mother at various times had given the child fearful beatings with a horsewhip, that she would strike her about the head and face with a razor strop having a nickel attachment at one end and that it was frequently the custom for her to catch the girl by the hair and bang her head against anything that happened to be handy. The testimony was given in a straightforward manner, all the complainants having witnessed these things, adding that others who had refused to come forward had stated that Rosie was not allowed to play with other children and that her face was seldom without a cut or a bruise of some kind.

Mrs. Entwistle declared on the stand that all the charges were false with the exception of the horsewhipping but explained that the whip was a small affair, less than two feet long. While this particular charge was being threshed out, the defendant exclaimed to the justice:

"I guess you or nobody else can stop me from whipping my child if I want to."

The court didn't go into any lengthy explanation as to whether he could or not but he observed that it was in his power to "sweeten her up a little" and subsequent happenings bore him out.

Charles Gould and his wife were called by Mrs. Entwistle's lawyer, Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., to testify as to her general character. They gave her first class recommendations but when asked about the abuse of the child they admitted that they knew nothing about it. When sentence was pronounced, Lawyer Hetfield at once gave notice of appeal and will carry the case to Somerville.

The Fisk child is still with Mrs. Entwistle but an effort is being made by the Organized Aid Association to have it taken from her.

WILLING WORKERS MADE MONEY FOR MISSIONS.

Lawn Party Sale of Trinity Bible Class Successful.

Complete success attended the lawn party and sale held by the Willing Workers of Trinity church on the lawn of George Kirch's residence, Somerset street, Friday night. The Willing Workers are Horace J. Martin's Bible class, and they held the affair to raise money for missions.

The lawn was attractively decorated with lanterns, flags and bunting. Besides the ice cream, cake and lemonade booths, there were candy and popcorn booths, parlor bowling alley, a fortune-teller's tent. They were all liberally patronized, and a substantial sum was netted.

Those who assisted at the various attractions were:

Ice cream, R. V. Kinney, Miss Jean Lindsay; cake, Miss Sarah Hammer, Mrs. R. V. Kinney, Miss Jean Lindsay, Miss Anna Scheelein and Mrs. William Lindsay, Jr.; lemonade, Mrs. Oscar Woolley, Russell Hoagland; fishing pond, Miss Ella Conover, Mrs. Lafayette Rosenstiehl; candy, Miss Lizzie Scheelein, Mrs. John Abbott, Miss Celia Anderson was the fortune-teller.

The committee in charge was made up of Mrs. Roy DeCamp, chairman; Mrs. Higgins, Miss Swackhamer, Mrs. R. V. Kinney and Miss Anna Scheelein.

ANDERSON LOSES SUIT

Appeals Court Affirms Vice-Chancellor's Award of C. B. L. Money.

LONG LITIGATION ENDS

Both of the Direct Heirs of Mrs. Anderson Have Died Since Case Was Begun In 1904.

After two years of litigation, the case growing out of the death claim of James Anderson's estate against the Catholic Benevolent Legion has been finally settled by the Court of Errors and Appeals in favor of the wife's heirs. The case is the first one of its sort in the history of the courts. No case with quite the same features has ever been decided before, and an unusual feature has developed since it began.

The case arose from the conflicting claims for a benefit of $1,000 on James Anderson's life between his father and the mother and sister of Anderson's wife. In the assignment clause of the certificate Mrs. Anderson was named as the beneficiary. She died before her husband, but he never changed the clause, and the wife's name still stood as that of the beneficiary when he died. Mrs. Bridget Burke and Miss Julia Burke, both of this city, mother and sister of the dead woman, claimed the money as her heirs. John C. Anderson, father of the policyholder and his heir, claimed the money on the ground that the wife having died before the certificate became inoperative the right to the money reverted to the husband's estate.

The Catholic Benevolent Legion has a by-law providing that in the event of a beneficiary's death before that of the policyholder and the name is not changed, the money goes to the former's estate, and it started to pay over the money to the Burkes. Counsellor William Newcorn, for Anderson, secured a restraining order and started litigation to secure the money for the father. The organization paid the money over into chancery, and left the litigants to fight it out among themselves.

The action was started in April, 1904. It was argued before Vice Chancellor Emory, John P. Owens appearing for the Burkes, and in 1905 the Vice Chancellor, in his decision, ordered the money paid to the wife's heirs. Judge Newcorn carried the case to the Court of Errors and Appeals.

It was down on the calendar for November, but the judges did not reach it until the present term. Counsellor Owens received a copy of the opinion affirming the decision of the Vice Chancellor, Thursday.

Now Mr. Owens wants the court to tell him what to do with the money. Since the litigation started both of his clients have died. Miss Burke died over a year ago and Mrs. Burke died last spring. No other heirs have qualified.

MGR. O'GRADY PRESIDES AT ACADEMY EXERCISES

ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT AT SAINT GABRIEL'S YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Before a large gathering of parents and friends, the closing exercises of St. Gabriel's Academy were held in the Park Club Wednesday afternoon. A programme replete with interest had been provided and it was greatly enjoyed. Rev. Mgr. O'Grady, of New Brunswick, presided and during the exercises gave an excellent address.

Second part: Soto and chorus, Miss Anna Pedefious and pupils; musical recitation and patomime, "The Singer's Aims;" "Higher Education," Master J. Noonan, the Misses Sullivan and Noonan; drama, "The Destiny of Empress Josephine," participants, the Misses L. Pauly, M. Kenney, G. Rafferty, T. Schneider, A. Pedefious, I. Duchesne, J. Dineen, M. Berkhan, M. McCullough; attendants, Misses M. McDonough and F. LaPorte; fairies, Misses H. Pedefious, B. Duchesne, V. Coombs, M. Noonan, M. Longman and M. Sullivan; music; chorus, "Speed Our Republic;" address, Rt. Rev. Mgr. O'Grady.

Miss Lillian Pauly and Martin Korff acted as accompanists during the entire programme.

IDEALS FOR GRADUATES

Henry M. Maxson Makes an Address to Graduating Class This Morning.

CONCLUDING EXERCISES

Singing a Feature of the Exercises —School Formally Closed Thursday Morning.

Speaking before the members of the city High School at the regular morning exercises today, Professor Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of local schools, addressed the senior class in a farewell speech of their course in the high school.

Prof. Maxson spoke on "Ideals." In a summary way he alluded to the high school education of boy and girl as of greatest value in preparation for after life.

"The life ideals of people vary," said Mr. Maxson, "some have a life philosophy of pleasure, some seek power, some wealth, and some educational advancement. Some of these are good, others are bad ideals. None is the perfect ideals. To my mind the perfect ideal is development of the soul—development in the inner self in life. This is brought about by all of our relations in life, our social and religious work with our fellow men. Pre-eminence in community and amassed wealth are ideals subordinate to self development and the education you get here in the high school aims to give you a firm foundation for the formation of high ideals in life.

"Last year, when I spoke to the graduating class, I alluded to the powerful moulding element of our lives as the spirit of 'noblesse oblige' —'my honor compels me.' I want to speak of that same element today from the negative side—that sort of 'noblesse oblige' which makes us hold back from doing wrong. Our attitude should be to guard against speaking or thinking evil and thus to guard against degrading the nobility within us. As a rule man wishes his fellow man good, not evil, in this world.

"In our journey through life we win the place we make for ourselves through work. The personal value of work depends solely upon your attitude toward it. To those of you who go through the performance of your duties carefully and conscientiously, work proves an opportunity and a blessing. We can use our work as a means of self development, and this should be our attitude toward it. Wealth and strong position in the community are established by fighting successfully against life and winning our battles with work. Work proves a curse only to him who voluntarily uses it otherwise than as a blessing. The fidelity and efficiency for which your teacher relies on you to undertake carry through with honesty and sincerity.

"Another life ideal includes our co-operation with our fellow men. The best of help is the help we receive from our fellow men. Co-operation is the secret of a life success. Take for example our teams here at the High School. Their successes have been due to co-operation in sports—"team work," as we call it. We cannot all be leaders, but we can all co-operate with those who are the leaders. Give yourself up to team work and be a helping hand. Whatever you undertake, carry through with all honesty and sincerity. Find your place in society and fill it to the best of your ability.

"You have to amass great successes and wealth of the kind that moth nor rust corrupt not, and that thieves cannot break through and steal from you."

The programme of exercises consisted mainly of music—the school sang all the favorite songs of the year. The singing was in charge of Music Instructor Charles L. Lewis. There were many members of previously graduated classes present.

With the conclusion of the exercises school formally for the summer vacation. The senior class adjourned to the First Baptist church, where commencement ceremonies were rehearsed with Principal Ira W. Travell.

No Change in Law.

Game Warden Hawkins, of Elizabeth, is authority for the statement that there has been no change in this year's laws regarding the open season for catching pickerel. This question was raised over an item appearing in a Sunday paper that became the date for the open season happened to fall on Sunday this year, the date had been changed to Monday. In consequence many local fishermen did not go out on the first day, not willing to take the risk. Mr. Hawkins says that the law is the same this year as before.

Local Man's View of 'Frisco.

Evarts Tracy, of the firm of Tracy & Swartout, architects, has returned from a trip to San Francisco, where he went in the interest of large building operations in the plan to restore the stricken city to its former condition. He says that words fail to describe the awful condition to be found there and he believes that it will be a long time before anything like substantial progress is made in rebuilding the city.

HIGH SCHOOL ALUMNI MET

City High School Graduates Gathered Last Night and Adopted Constitution.

MEMBERSHIP NOW 184

Photographs of Classes of 1872 and 1873 Presented By Franklin S. Smith—W. D. Murray in the Chair.

By the adoption of constitution and bylaws at a meeting in the city High School Wednesday, the Plainfield High School Alumni Association has become a firmly founded organization in the city. Alumni, old and young, including a good representation of the class of 1906, turned out to the meeting, which was presided over by William D. Murray, '75.

In his report of what had been accomplished since the last meeting, Franklin S. Smith, '89, secretary of the association, spoke especially of what had been done to increase the membership and announced 184 members at present in the association. There are 601 supposed living graduates of the school, but many have left Plainfield, and their homes are now distributed all over the country.

Mr. Smith also spoke of an alumni fund of $550, which has been amassed by subscription. This money represents financial donation from each and every class in the association, including the class of 1906.

E. J. Patterson, '90, made the report on the drafting of a constitution and bylaws for the association. The committee for this work, appointed by the chair at the last meeting, consisted of Franklin S. Smith, '89, E. J. Patterson, '90, and C. L. Reilly, '94. The constitution presented and finally accepted at last night's meeting was essentially the same as that published in the Plainfield High School "Oracle" in April. The object of the organization is primarily to keep the alumni in touch with one another after graduation and to sustain their interest in the High School. The government of the organization will be in charge of an executive committee consisting of officers, and this will work in conjunction with a general committee, formed, of one member of each of the classes. The regular meetings of the association are to be held on February 22, of each year. Contrary to expectation, the regular officers of the association, who were to take the place of those elected temporarily at the organization of the association in February, were not elected at last night's meeting.

A presentation of two pictures, class groups of the class of 1872 and 1873 was made by Franklin S. Smith. The pictures used to hang in the old High School on the Stillman High School, and were recently found among rubbish at the old building. The pictures will be hung in the hall of the High School.

Andrew M. Parker, '74, was introduced by Mr. Murray for an address and spoke briefly on the disposition of the alumni fund which has been amassed. No action was taken.

At the adjourning of the meeting the floor was cleared for dancing. A programme of fifteen dances was rendered by members of the High School orchestra. The committee in charge of the meeting, which also formed the floor committee for the dancing, consisted of William C. Hubbard, '94, chairman; Robert A. Pruden, '99, Vincent B. Miner, '03, T. O. Gavett, '05, Martin B. Stutsman, '05, and Miss Lulu M. Stryker, '05.

MINSTREL PRIMROSE TO APPEAR AT FISK DINNER.

Famous Black Face Artist And His Men Volunteer to Entertain.

Acting on a suggestion made by Manager Counihan, George Primrose, "The King of Minstrels," has volunteered to make the testimonial dinner to former Judge Charles J. Fisk a still greater success than was anticipated by taking care of part of the entertainment end. The inimitable George and half a dozen or more of his best singers and dancers have volunteered to attend and will present a programme of singing and dancing as the Casino has never witnessed.

"Why certainly I'll like to help out," is the way the world-famed black face artist put it when "Bill" Counihan observed that it would be a nice thing to have some of the company at the dinner. "A Mr. Fisk is mayor up in my home city and I have a kindly feeling toward all men of that name; they're all right."

Every member of the Primrose company now rehearsing at the New Plainfield theatre wanted to be the ones to go along with their chief but Mr. Primrose has selected six of the best and they are now getting "stunts" arranged.

COLBYISM IN SOMERSET

I. P. Runyon's Friends Boom Him For Assembly Nomination.

NON-COMMITTAL NOW

Says Legislators Shall Be Pledged Against Dryden or Dryden-McCarter-Kean Man.

In North Plainfield particularly, the Somerset county movement for Colbyism is making marked headway, and preliminary plans are now being made for a mass meeting in that borough. Those who claim to have the matter at heart say that they will use every effort to keep factional leaders from using the movement for their own benefit and will see to it that no man attempts to use the reform wave to land himself in power.

Rumor has it that friends of I. P. Runyon are booming him for the assembly as a Colbyite candidate. When seen by a reporter for The Daily Press he refused to confirm or deny whether he will come out as a candidate. "I have nothing to say; see me later," is all that he would say.

In referring to the movement in Somerset, however, Mr. Runyon said:

"The Republican League for equal taxation is certain to be successful providing the voters who are in favor of it do their duty and vote at the primaries in September, and the factional fights of the past are merged in a battle not of personal antagonism, but one of the principles such as are enunciated by the Colby movement. There is not a citizen of either party but who believes in the principles composing the New Republican League, because the principles set forth are for the benefit of the masses and absolutely necessary to good government and a government by the people which is oppressive to none.

"The grasping corporations have by years of scheming and millions of money successfully blocked the people from bringing them to justice through the medium of political bosses and appointment to office of men, not because of merit, but because they were subservient to the interest of the bosses and in turn are controlled by this class of corporations.

"The Republican League under the guidance of which Essex and Hudson counties have been rescued from Jim Dryden and McCarter rule, which was fast sapping out their political respectability will succeed in every county in the State. Whether or not the Republican party in the county of Somerset needs reform is not for me to say, but the principles affecting every part of the State of New Jersey, and Somerset county has representatives in the Legislature who if they vote for deserving legislation will assist not only Somerset but every county in the State and which without the vote of Somerset representatives might be lost and the people thereby deprived of beneficial legislation. It is certain that no member of the Senate or Assembly nominated or elected by the present organization is going to vote on any measure against the desires of those in control of the State Republican Committee. The last session of the Legislature demonstrates this fact; therefore, it is necessary to endorse the principles and past efforts of the New Republican League by electing, if possible, an Assemblyman that stands for those principles and one who will not vote for John P. Dryden or any other man controlled by the present Dryden, McCarter, Kean combination, for United States Senator. Will factional disputes have anything to do with the Colby movement? It certainly ought not to have the remotest connection with it. The New Republican League has nothing to do with personal battles of the past. There are four or five of our Republicans who were prominent in the citizens movement last fall. I am glad to say they get together and resolve that we are the Republicans of the borough and they are sincere and believe it and then they further resolve that no man who did not wage war with us last fall ought to be allowed to come into the New Republican League movement; and by sub-terranean channels try and convince all willing listners that no man is straight unless he did exactly as they did last fall; but, I am happy to say that the majority of the Republican voters of both factions of the borough are broad minded and will not allow these few to prevail to the serious detriment of this New Republican League. It should be so arranged that every Republican voter who is in sympathy with this movement should feel welcome to come in and work for the good of the cause without feeling that he must have a jury of four or five men suffering from political blisters to pass upon his eligibility. Lets have all Republicans, and as many Democrats as we can get on Election day work for the success of the New Republican League."

HUDSON MAN FOR U. S. SENATORSHIP

NAME OF FORMER JUSTICE GILBERT COLLINS WHISPERED.

Organization Republicans of Hudson county are to have a favorite son as a candidate for United States Senator. Who he will be has not been announced, but the impression prevails among the followers of Col. Samuel D. Dickinson that former Supreme Court Justice Gilbert Collins is the man whom the organization has in mind.

Prosecutor of the Pleas William H. Speer, in a speech on Republicanism at the celebration Monday night of the anniversary of the birth of the Republican party, under the auspices of the Minkahwa Club of Jersey City, said the Republican party in Hudson county did not accept either George L. Record or John F. Dryden as its candidate for United States Senator.

"If I were obliged to choose between the two I should unhesitatingly select John R. Dryden," Mr. Speer said, "but I am not obliged to make any such selection, and unless I much mistaken the sentiment of the Republicans of my county, Hudson will put her own candidate in the field, and that right soon. He will be a stanch, sterling and true Republican. No true Republican can support George L. Record for United States Senator. He is not and never has been in full sympathy with the principles of the Republican party. He has time and again avowed himself to be a free-trader, while the Republican party stands pledged to the principles of protection."

Mr. Speer declared that Record was trying to disrupt the Republican party.

The rivalry between the organization or Dickinson republicans and the Fagan Republicans is so intense that it is predicted that there will be two sets of Republican Assembly candidates in the field in Hudson county at the next election. Here is an instance of the ill-feeling that exists between the two factions:

When the Minkahwa Club, which is composed largely of Colonel Dickinson, decision to hold its anniversary celebration, the Fremont Club in the Hudson City section arranged for a rival meeting. John Doscher, the Dickinson leader in that part of the county, and one of the prominent members of the Fremont Club, protested strongly against this action. He said it made no difference whether the Fremont Club held a reception or not, he and his friends would attend the Minkahwa Club celebration.

This only made the Fagan members of the Fremont Club work all the harder to make the Fremont celebration a success. When everything was in readiness for open up the club room for the reception of the guests it was found that the gas meter had been removed and the room could not be lighted. The Faganites charged the organization members with having removed the meter so no meeting could be held. This Doscher and his followers indignantly denied, and they declared it was a trick of the Faganites to win the sympathy of the public. Candles and oil lamps were substituted for gas and the meeting was held. All of the speakers referred to the mean trick of the organization Republicans.

COL. STEVENS SAYS HE CANNOT BE CANDIDATE.

Gives Reasons for Declination to the Secretary of the Delaware Club.

The boom started Wednesday night for the Delaware Club in Jersey City for Col. Edwin A. Stevens for United States Senator has been cut short by the Colonel. In a letter yesterday to the club's secretary he said:

"Dear Sir: I want to thank you very warmly for your kindness in thinking of me in connection with the nomination for United States Senator. I thoroughly approve of the plan of informing the people who the Democratic candidate for this office will be.

"Whatever the prospects of Democratic success this fall may be, I am thoroughly convinced that the Democratic candidate to be carefully presented to the people by whoever is to be the nominee of the party for the Senatorship. This, unfortunately, I am unable to do. I expect to sail for Europe in about three weeks, and most of the work would have to be done during the time covered by my absence.

"I sincerely regret that I am unable to take any different position, but I am none the less thankful to you and to my other friends for thinking of me in so honorable a connection.

"The present days are dark and gloomy enough for the Democrats of New Jersey, but we all feel that the principles of the party remain as true and as necessary for the public weal as they were in the days of Jefferson and Jackson, and feeling thus, we cannot but look forward to the ultimate success of the party."

Miss Caroline R. Moore, of Patchogue, L. I., is visiting friends in town.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Baker, of Stelle avenue, are spending the summer in Maine.

HOW TO VOTE IN SEPT. U. S. SENATORSHIP

The Amendments to Primary Act Set Forth in Detail.

PRIMARIES 4th TUESDAY

Voters May Register Then For the Ensuing General Election—Sitting of Election Board.

Several requests have been received for an exact statement of the rights of citizens to vote at the open primaries in September. All of the questions which have been asked cannot be answered at this time. In the main, however, it may be said that the primaries of both parties are to be held this year on the fourth Tuesday in September.

Regular election boards sitting as boards of registry will conduct them. Primary ballots may be cast between 6 o'clock and 9 o'clock p. m. There must be one box for Democrats, one box for Republicans and one for each of the other parties. Ballot and other primary expenses will be paid by the State.

As amended this year the primary act says:

"At such primary election the voters registered or who thereupon register for the ensuing general election shall be qualified to vote at such primary.

"Each voter shall request the party ticket he desires to vote, and thereupon he shall receive from the Board of Registry and Election an official ballot of said political party, prepared as aforesaid, and no other.

"The voter shall then retire to the voting booth and there prepare his ballot so as to indicate his choice for the candidates of his party to be there nominated or his choice for the delegates to the political convention of his political party, as the case may be, by erasing all names thereon other than those voted for, and shall then deposit said ballot in the ballot-box of his party, unless challenged, and if challenged, make oath that he is a member of the said political party; that at the last election for members of assembly at which he voted he voted for a majority of the candidates whose names were printed upon the party ticket of said party, and intends to support the candidates of the said party at the ensuing election.

"In the case of any voter voting for the first time in this State the portion of the said oath or affirmation in reference to previous voting shall be dispensed with.

"Any voter who shall vote in the ballot-box of any political party at any primary election held under this act shall not be allowed to vote in the ballot-box of an other political party at the next thereafter succeeding primary election.

"The said Board of Registry and Election in this State in the registry book the name of the political party whose primary ticket each voter voting at such primary election voted, by writing opposite the name of each such voters, in a column prepared for that purpose, in such register book, the first letter of the name of such political party, as for example, 'D' for Democratic party, the letter 'R' for Republican party, the letter 'P' for Prohibition party and in like manner for other political parties."

DR. ELLIS H. HEDGES TALKS ON APPENDICITIS

DISTINGUISHED PLAINFIELD PHYSICIAN ADDRESSES STATE MEDICAL SOCIETY.

Dr. Ellis W. Hedges, of Watchung avenue, who attended the sessions of the New Jersey State Medical Society at Atlantic City, Wednesday, took part in the afternoon discussion regarding appendicitis.

"There are no known positive symptoms by which a physician can tell of the presence of appendicitis," said Dr. Hedges. "For this reason so many false operations are made that I would suggest a policy of elimination before the knife is used."

Dr. Henry L. Colt, of Newark, was the leader of a discussion on the proper methods of conserving the health of infants. He said that babies of the present day are suffering from the strenuous life led by their mothers, and advocated a return to the simpler life as a better method than recourse to patent foods.

These officers have been elected for the ensuing year: President, Alexander Wedderburn, Jr., of Riverton; first vice-president, Edward J. Ill, of Newark; second vice-president, David St. John, of Hackensack; third vice-president, Dr. Waddington, of Salem; corresponding secretary, Daniel Strock, of Camden; recording secretary, William J. Chandler, of South Orange; treasurer, Achibald Mercer, of Newark.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Ramsey, of East Sixth street, have gone to Patchogue, L. I., for the summer.

William D. Flanders, of Grove street, has taken a summer position in the Farmer's National Bank.

NEGRO BURGLAR CAUGHT

Frightened From House By Servants, Then Nabbed By Detective.

TRIED A DAYLIGHT JOB

Watchful Maids Heard Him Force His Way Into Vacant House—Detective Does Good Work In Chase.

Police headquarters telephone rang at 2:15 o'clock Monday afternoon, and a girl's voice sounded in Chief Kiely's ear.

"This is a maid at A. W. Kleinecke's house, 1406 Watchung avenue. There is a man in the cellar."

Detective McCarthy and Patrolman Higgins were in the office and as the Chief dropped the 'phone Patrolman Kelly came in. The Chief ordered the three men up to the Kleinecke house, and they rattled there in the patrol wagon as fast as the horse could go. There was no man in the cellar, but the marks of a jimmy on a cellar window showed that the girl had not given a false alarm. Two men were working in the garden saw a negro come out of the house a short time before, and hurry toward the woods. They didn't think anything was wrong, but the cops knew he was the man they wanted.

The girl who telephoned and another maid in Mr. Kleinecke's employ heard the jimmy at work from upstairs. The family is away in Maine, and the maids came to the house just to see it everything was all right. When they heard the noise they went downstairs to investigate, and frightened the man with the jimmy into flight. They heard him go downstairs and thought he went to hide in the cellar. They held their nerve and the 'phone message to the police followed. They modestly refused to give their names.

The gardeners had a good look at the negro, and they gave the officers a detailed description of him. The sleuth and the bluecoats scattered to hunt his trail without loss of time, at a pace that opened all their pores.

McCarthy worked back toward the center of town. At Fifth street and Watchung avenue, he spotted a negro with a coat under his arm coming from Washington street. One more look was all the detective needed to convince him that he had run down his man. The arrest that followed was a quiet affair. The negro surrendered as soon as McCarthy's hand fell on his shoulder.

He slipped on his coat, and a bystander saw something drop from his sleeve to a grass plot at his side. The watcher called the sleuth's attention to it, and McCarthy picked up a shiney jimmy. The prisoner smiled sourly when he saw the officer slip the tool in his pocket. He hadn't intended to say anything about it.

At the station house, the prisoner's pockets yielded a bunch of skeleton keys and a dark lantern. He refused to give his name, or to make any kind of a statement.

"All right," said the Chief, "do as you please. You are an old bird, and somebody knows your record. We'll find out all about you and we won't be any nicer to you for the trouble you put us to."

The prisoner must have absorbed the common sense in that statement overnight, because he intimated this morning that he was ready to make a statement.

"We won't hurry you," said Chief Kiely. You think things over and get your statement in completed shape. I'll talk with you when I get back from a trip I've got to take this morning."

QUIET SESSION OF THE DISTRICT COURT.

No Contests Among Eleven Cases on the Docket; Bigger Actions Adjourned.

Eleven cases, were on the District Court docket Monday. Nine of them were contested, and adjournments marked the proceedings.

Bessie Sullivan against Kussel Sachar, $300, on contract, was laid over until July 3; Frank Ashton against T. A. Moore, $200, not; $200, not moved; W. J. R. Thlers against Arthur Masters, $200, on contract, laid over to July 10; J. G. Cheatle et al against J. A. Koch, $100, on contract, adjourned to July 3; J. A. Fraser against M. A. Rose, $200, on contract, to be tried before Judge Swift June 29, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon; James Dunphy against Barks Freedman, $200, in tort, for damages alleged to have been suffered in a partnership tangle, adjourned to July 3; M. M. Crosbie against R. M. Radcliffe, judgment for possession; E. T. Hand against Fireman Glse, $300, on contract; adjourned to July 10; Schecrer & Crown against Mary Opdyke; $50, in replevin, and Elizabeth Primmer, $100, in replevin, judgment for plaintiffs in both cases; William Hand & Son against T. A. Moore, $20, on contract, settled.

Northfield Party.

A party of Y. M. C. A. men will go to Northfield conference, at Northfield, Mass., on July 6. A number of the party will camp there two weeks.

FORGERY CHARGE UPHELD

G. Elston Lowrie Convicted at Paterson on Complaint of D. W. Littell.

JURY OUT AN HOUR

While Twelve Men Are Deliberating Prisoner is Rearrested On a Similar Charge—More Pending.

Before Justice Scott in the Court of Quarter Sessions at Paterson, Monday, a jury convicted G. Elston Lowrie, a former well known Dunellen and Plainfield resident, on a charge of forgery preferred by D. W. Littell, of this city. The twelve men remained out less than an hour and while they were deliberating, the defendant was rearrested on a similar charged preferred by the same complainant. It is said there are many more counts pending and that the prisoner will have to answer them all before prosecution ceases.

Mr. Littell has been compiling a history of the State Exempt Firemen's Association and last year engaged Lowrie, who formerly edited the Dunellen Call, to do some canvassing for him. The complaint alleges that on numerous occasions, Lowrie accepted checks from subscribers to the association all of which were made payable to Littell. These it is said, he endorsed and had merchants wherever he happened to be cash them. It was not until a short time ago that Littell learned of the transactions and the accused man was arrested in Newark on May 5 last. The check on which the specified charge was made was drawn by Baker & Schofield, of Paterson, and he got the money for it from a saloon keeper in that place, so was taken there for trial.

When arraigned in court, Lowrie at first denied the charge but on the stand admitted that he might have signed his name to the Baker & Schofield check but if he did it slipped his memory. He was represented by George Pierce, a Newark lawyer, and the latter got into several mix-ups with the court owing to a running fire of irrelevant comment and questions that he kept up during the examination. When Mr. Littell was placed on the stand he produced indisputable evidence that Lowrie had cashed the check and also badly tangled the prisoner by asking him a number of questions regarding an alleged partnership that Lowrie maintained had been agreed upon between them.

Mr. Littell has already secured checks which show that Lowrie received in all at Paterson about $100 while there is evidence that he did the same thing at Atlantic City. Lowrie has a wife and three children living at Dunellen but he has not been near them to date. At the time his arrest he was employed by a Newark agency house and the concern has furnished bail for him.

RUNAWAY HORSE CRASHES INTO AN AUTOMOBILE.

No One Is Hurt But Occupants of Auto Are Badly Frightened.

A horse belonging to Frank Herbst, of Scotch Plains, took fright on Front street, Monday, and bolted at top speed. It narrowly missed striking several carriages and in front of Warnock's bakery collided with an auto belonging to Mrs. Barclay, of Central avenue, in which she and her daughter were seated. The machine was badly scratched and the occupants thoroughly frightened, otherwise there was no damage.

The runaway continued on and in froet of Rowley's drug store struck another rig and overturned the spring wagon it was hauling. In its efforts to get away, the animal stepped on a bicycle, smashing the front wheel, and the pulled loose with what was left of the harness. The horse was caught at Madison avenue, uninjured save for a few cuts.

NEW STAR COURSE.

Y. M. C. A. Committee Arranging Next Season's Attractions.

Arrangements for the star course next season are being made by the Y. M. C. A. The committee met last week to consider preliminaries and will meet again this week.

The course will be much stronger than last year's. Six entertainments will be given, and all of them will be "top-line" attractions in the lyceum filled. C. A. The committee is being made in this direction, and it is expected that the course will comprise the most attractive entertainments ever presented at the Y. M. C. A.

South End Homes Co.

Articles of incorporation were filed in the office of the county clerk at Elizabeth Saturday morning by the South End Homes Company, with a principal office on Park avenue, Plainfield. The capital stock is placed at $250,000, divided into 50,000 shares at $5 each. The incorporators named are Charles A. Hyde, of New York; Herman A. Hoysract, Yonkers; John H. Doane, G. Stuart Simons and Thaddeus O. Doane, Jr., of Plainfield. The company will develop property in the south end of Plainfield.

DIME SAVINGS TO BUY BUILDING FOR HOME

ENTIRE STRUCTURE TO BE USED BY BANKING INSTITUTION.

Extensive improvements to its property have been decided upon by the directors of the Dime Savings Institution and A. L. C. Marsh, the architect, has been engaged to draft the plans. The improvements will be made with a view to securing the additional room needed and obtaining more light as well as making the building one modern in every respect. When completed it will be similar to the Merchants' National Bank, of Newark. The property is owned by the estate of the late J. Frank Hubbard, but it is the intention of the Dime Savings Institution to acquire it by purchase before making the changes.

The changes will necessitate the removal of G. Thorn, the photographer, who occupies the third floor and the Asbestos Club, occupying the second floor. The stairway leading to the two upper floors will be abolished and a handsome front with the main entrance in the center will be provided for. Just inside will be a spacious lobby and then behind that will be left plenty of room for those having business at the bank. New furnishings will be installed. The idea in doing away with the two upper floors is to obtain more light and it is proposed to put in a large skylight overhead. During the past few years this institution has had a steady, substantial growth in business and to meet the increase, as well as to be up-to-date, the directors wisely decided to make the extensive alterations. These improvements are right in line with those made by the other local banking institutions, The First and City National Bank and The Plainfield Trust Company.

H. H. DRAKE TO RUN WITH WM. N. RUNYON

ELIZABETH LAWYER LIKELY TO TAKE TUCKER'S PLACE ON COLBY TICKET.

Following closely the announcement that Assemblyman Everard K. Tucker, of Elizabeth, will not be a candidate for re-election next fall, comes the announcement today that H. H. Drake, Esq., a promising young lawyer of Elizabeth, will probably be selected to make the fight for the nomination to succeed Assemblyman Tucker.

Mr. Drake stands well not only in Elizabeth, but throughout the county, and his friends believe that he will make a strong fight in the primary. He is a prominent member of the Junior Order United American Mechanics, being a member of the Elizabeth Council, and it is predicted that he will receive the support of that organization. Mr. Drake will be remembered as one of the speakers at the "American Banquet" held at the Casino last winter, when Senator Everett Colby and other leading members of the Jr. O. U. A. M., spoke. He made a very favorable impression at that time

SMASHED SEWER GRATE TO FREE FALLEN HORSE.

Hind Hoof Was Caught In Iron and Only Sledge Could Release It.

To free a fallen horse, a hind hoof of which had become caught in it, the grating over the sewer inlet on the west side of Park avenue near Front street was smashed Monday. The horse, which was attached to David S. Dunavan's delivery wagon, in front of his store, became restless under the attack of a horse fly, started to rear, and fell. One of its hoofs became jammed in the grating, and all efforts to free it were unavailing until Dunavan got a sledge hammer and smashed the iron.

The incident attracted a crowd. The horse was badly lamed and cut, but was able to limp to its stable.

COLORED SINGERS GIVE A CONCERT AT HOPE.

Students of Atlanta University Please Large Audience—Berry and Cream Sale.

Under the auspices of the Men's Club, the Male Quartette of Atlanta University, a colored collage, gave a concert at Hope chapel Friday night. It was well attended and much enjoyed.

Edward P. Wares, acting-president of the college, who accompanied the quartette, was a classmate of Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of the chapel, at the theological seminary.

The programme included plantation melodies and recitations. They were well-rendered and much applauded. Mr. Ware spoke briefly on the work at the university.

After the programme, the Ladies' Aid Society sold ice cream, strawberries and cake. The serving was directed by a committee composed of Mrs. M. W. Clark, chairman; Mrs. C. H. Leland, Mrs. Kratsley, Mrs. Vogel, Mrs. Louis Martin and Mrs. Harry Corliss. The sale was a great success.

YOUNG ZELAYA AND HIS WIFE MAKE UP

WILL SAIL NEXT SATURDAY FOR NICARAGUA TO PACIFY HIS FATHER.

Through the efforts of friends a reconciliation has been effected between the estranged son of Nicaragua's President, Alphonse Zelaya, and his wife, who announced their separation three weeks ago.

Young Zelaya, who attended school in this city and is widely known locally, states that he and his wife will sail for Nicaragua next Saturday and seek to pacify his father, who has always violently opposed the marriage with the young American girl.

"The stories of our separation were all lies," said Zelaya today.

"We still love each other, don't we, sweetheart," said he turning to his wife.

"Sure," she replied, looking the part. "You see, Alphonse was working in New York for an electric company, and not making very much money, and I came home to visit my folks. That's how it started."

"Yes," said young Zelaya, "the work was awful hard, and the pay small, and that's why I am going home to the president. A man in the United States doesn't amount to much if he has no money. No money means no friends, no good things to eat, no nothing. A man of my station should not work anyway. The president's son should live in fine hotels, have lots of money and no work. That's why I'm going home."

Zelaya went on the President at the White House today to get certain letters of recommendation to the Bluefield Steel Engraving Company of Nicaragua, in which, he says, the President is financially interested. Owing to the pressure of business the President could not see Zelaya, but promised to talk with him when Congress adjourns.

WARD ORGANIZATION OF COLBYITES NEXT WEEK

MEETING ARRANGED AT CONFERENCE OF INDEPENDENTS LAST NIGHT.

Independent Republicans from all the wards met with Judge Runyon Monday to arrange the meeting for the organization of ward branches of the Equal Taxation League. The date and place of the meeting were not definitely fixed, but all the other details were decided.

All the wards will meet at one time and Reform Hall will probably be the place, and Thursday night of next week the time, of the meeting. Judge Runyon was unable to see Capt. W. C. Smith, who has the renting of the hall in charge, up to late Monday, so that the place of meeting could not be definitely announced.

No speeches of a set or formal character will be made at the gathering. Business will mark it from first to last. After the adoption of the constitution, officers will be elected.

Enrollment cards have been distributed throughout the city, to draw as large a charter membership together as possible. The list is expected to be large, although only a comparatively small proportion of those who are in sympathy with the league will be looked for among the ranks of the active workers.

RUNNING FOR COALER, HE DIDN'T SEE DEADLY FLYER

M'KINNON ON HIS WAY HOME FROM WORK WHEN KILLED AT TANKS.

The remains of John McKinnon, the young machinist who was killed by a Philadelphia & Reading flyer at Greenbrook tanks Saturday afternoon, were shipped to his home in Bethlehem Monday.

Walter McKinnon, brother of the young man, in his statement to the county authorities, says that his brother, himself and a third man were trying to catch a freight train to ride to Bethlehem, to visit their family. They went to the tanks from this city, because the freights stop at Greenbrook, making it easier to board them. John started the track for a coal train that was taking water, and in his eagerness to board it he did not see the approaching flyer. The last train struck him squarely, and he was badly mangled beneath the wheels.

The young man was employed at the Pond shop, but he had been here only about five weeks and was not well known locally.

Will Provide for 5,000 Subscribers.

When the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company takes possession of its new building on East *Fourth street, now in course of con*struction, it will employ an office force of forty persons, including operators and clerks. Provision will be made for an increase of 5,000 subscribers. The increase during the past year has been phenomenal, necessitating many extensive improvements.

TO RESUME WORK AT WASHINGTON HEIGHTS

LARGE FORCE OF MEN ENGAGED TO FINISH IMPROVEMENT.

Work on the development of Washington Heights, as the big tract of land in the west end of the borough is to be known, is to be resumed as soon as possible, according to Mayor N. B. Smalley. It was stopped during the winter and spring but a larger force of men has been engaged and they will shortly be placed on the contract with instructions to hurry it through.

The non-completion of the new bridge on West End avenue has held back the development of the property and since it was started it has been found that the thoroughfare will have to be raised slightl near Rockview avenue to get the proper grade. It will be finished before the bridge is ready and will then be macadamized and placed in first-class condition.

The original plans of the promoters included provision for a lake on the former Cadmus property and this is to be carried out. The land is to be thoroughly cleared after which Green brook will be dammed up in order to make a body of water 1,500 feet long by 300 feet at the widest point. It will be somewhat like an egg in shape.

Mayor Smalley is the personal owner of the old Cadmus homestead and contemplates erecting a handsome dwelling on the site for his own use. The house now on the property will be removed back and perhaps converted into a barn.

As soon as the Washington Heights property is fully in shape, a large number of handsome homes are to be put up.

EXIT 'PHONE WIRES IN THE NEAR FUTURE

P. S. C. WIRES ALONE WILL DISFIGURE BUSINESS SECTION.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company in making extensive improvements in Plainfield, which include the placing of wires underground, proposes to abolish all telephone poles possible. All of the poles will be taken down in the business part of the city, which will add greatly to the attractiveness of the streets. In the residential section wherever possible poles will be removed and wires put under ground. It is understood the Public Service Corporation has decided not to continue the work begun by Former Superintendent McClurg, of extending the underground work. The company has only a few wires in conduits.

The Public Service Corporation has a number of electric light wires, including the big feed wire for the use of the trolley, running through Second street, east and west, and on these same poles the Postal Telegraph Company has its wires. It is argued that the removal of these wires would greatly enhance the appearance of the street at Park avenue and Second street, where the Plainfield Trust Company has erected a fine building and the avenue is to be widened. When the telephone company complete its work in Park avenue, the only wires above ground will be those of the Public Service Corporation.

Progress at the Postoffice.

The workmen are making much progress with the improvements at the postoffice. The partition wall separating the lobby from the room in the corner store of the Babcock building, which is to be occupied, has been removed and other improvements are also being pushed rapidly. The main entrance to the office will be on the corner of Madison avenue and West Front street, which will be even more convenient for the boroughites who travel Madison avenue and Duer street.

Baptist Supplies.

During the absence of Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, on his vacation, the supplies will be as follows: August 5, Rev. Daniel H. Clare, of Hamilton, N. J.; August 12, Rev. J. A. Cubberley, Plainfield; August 19, Rev. Dr. J. Henry Haslam, of Philadelphia; August 26, Rev. T. Moore Smith, of Scotch Plains; September 2, Rev. B. D. Stelle, of Philadelphia.

Fred Kanen Improving.

Fred Kanen, of Watchung avenue, who was seriously injured in the Westfield wreck several years ago, and who it was believed would never be able to walk again, because of spine trouble, is very much improved. He is now able to walk about with ease with the aid of crutches and appears to be rapidly regaining the use of his legs.

Machinists Granted An Increase.

The demands of the employes of the Aluminum Press and Plate Company, for a readjustment of wages, has been granted and goes in effect July 1. After that date the men will receive thirty cents an hour, time and a half up to 10 o'clock at night; for overtime and double time after that.

FORM BAR ASSOCIATION SHOOT ORDER FOR DOGS

Local Lawyers Organize Electing Former Senator Chas. A. Reed President.

TWENTY-FOUR JOIN

Society to Be Incorporated—Mr. Marsh Head of By-Laws Committee—Some Not Invited.

The Plainfield Bar Association, an organization of Plainfield lawyers, formed in 1894, met Monday night in the Grocers' Association rooms on North Crenue, for the purpose of forming a permanent organization and increasing its membership by securing as many as possible of the younger members of the Bar who have been admitted since 1894 to join.

Craig A. Marsh called the meeting to order and on motion Charles A. Reed was elected temporary chairman and William M. Stillman secretary. The following permanent officers were then elected: President, Charles A. Reed; secretary, William M. Stillman; treasurer, William R. Codington; trustees, Nelson Runyon, John H. VanWinkle, Craig A. Marsh.

A list of the old members, most of whom were present at the meeting, is Charles A. Reed, William A. Codington, John H. VanWinkle, James P. Powers, Harry C. Runyon, Chas. L. Monlett, William M. Stillman, Craig A. Marsh, W. R. Codington, J. B. Coward, S. S. Swackhamer and Nelson Runyon. Those of the younger members of the bar, who were elected members, were Isaac P. Runyon, Clarence L. Murphy, John H. VanWinkle, Jr., Asa F. Randolph, J. Henry Crane, George W. Bird, Reuben C. Knox, Louis Barton, William Newcorn, Rene C. VanMinden, Charles A. Dolliver and N. Douglas Drake.

The officers of the association were directed to take the proper steps to secure the incorporation of the society and it was provided that the members of the association shall consist of those whose names were signed to the original articles of the association. In addition to those members elected at last night's meeting and such other members of the bar of this city, practicing in New Jersey, as may be elected by a majority vote of the Board of Trustees.

A committee, consisting of Craig A. Marsh, Clarence L. Murphy and W. A. Goddington, was appointed by President Reed to prepare a draft of the by-laws and present it at the next meeting for consideration. It is understood on completion of the organization to secure for its membership every member of the local bar and hopes are expressed that the association can and will do much good both for its members and the community at large. The meeting adjourned at the call of the chair.

As a result of last night's action on the part of the lawyers, the movement started by W. S. Angleman, Francis J. Blatz and C. W. Nash, Jr., to form a Plainfield Bar Association, is defeated. It was the intention of certain lawyers to hold a meeting in the district court after todays' session to form a local association, and in a large measure a plan of action was agreed upon. Most of the legal lights who expected to join this organization to be formed today, identified themselves with the old organization which met last night, and it is not likely that a second association will be formed.

These lawyers were not present at the meeting: Winfield S. Angleman, Carlos T. Gallup, Frederick J. Huff, V. W. Nash, Jr., John P. Owens, Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., Judge William R. Kuhn, Francis J. Blatz, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., L. A. Clement and Charles J. McNabb. Most of them said they were not invited.

Independence Day at the P. C. C.

The officers and committees of the Plainfield Country Club are making arrangements for an elaborate cele*bration of the Fourth of July at the* club. Besides the usual attractive events on the golf course and tennis courts, there will be an afternoon reception at the clubhouse with music by an orchestra throughout the afternoon as well as in the evening, when there will be a dance. The clubhouse will be appropriately decorated for the occasion and it is expected that an unusually large number of people will attend.

Hurt in Collision of Rigs.

While returning from a dance near Gillette, Saturday night, George Doodleachs, of that place, drove his runabout into a wagon standing in the road. His rig was overturned and himself thrown out, receiving injuries that necessitated his removal to the office of Dr. Bebout at Stirling. The horse broke away and was afterward found in its stable.

Old Landmark Gone.

The last of the old building on Park avenue, opposite North Avenue, was removed yesterday and workmen are engaged in taking away the brick foundation. The best of the material has been taken to Green Brook, where Charles P. Sebring expects to find use for it. The land will now be cleared and in the course of time work will probably be started erecting a modern building on the site.

BAR ASSOCIATION SHOOT ORDER FOR DOGS

Police Say Stray and Vicious Canines Are Dangerously Numerous.

A RIGOROUS CAMPAIGN

More Complaints Filed and More Snarling and Snapping Curs on the Streets Than in Other Years.

The police campaign against stray dogs this summer will be conducted on more vigorous lines than ever before. For years, Chief Kiely has set out to keep down the strays during the "mad-dog months," with varying success, and he has determined to attack the evil this time in a way that will make itself felt.

His mode of campaign was suggested by the discovery of a law on the statute books that allows properly appointed officers to shoot, forthwith, all stray dogs found on the streets of the city. The dog evil has been so bothersome in past summers, and promises so plainly to be worse this year, that the chief has determined to act under the law if the Council will give him the word to go ahead.

The matter will be brought to the attention of the higher powers, and if the course is approved, the police will go after the stray dogs with guns on hair triggers.

It is not part of the plan to do indiscriminate shooting, but the careless owners who in past summers have relied too much on the indulgence of the officers, will have much less leeway. The police feel that their course in the matter will be generally approved, no matter how touchy dog-owners may feel. There is an almost universal fear of hydrophobia in summer, in spite of statistics that prove it to be as prevalent in January as in July, and the authorities must take note of the fear. If no effort is made to check the run of unmuzzled curs and lead dogs, or if the effort appears to be failing, criticism of the police becomes sharp.

It is a fact, too, according tl the police that Plainfield now has more stray and vicious dogs than it should have. Complaints of frightened women and children have begun to come in in larger numbers than in past seasons, and the officers report a larger number of snapping, barking dogs about the streets.

The city court will be asked in conjunction with the gun campaign. Dogs that are plainly harmless will be shot out of hand, but the dogs of other fortunes will be given one chance. Their owners will be arraigned in court under the ordinance covering the conditions, and fined. Other measures will follow if that step doesn't serve to keep the dogs in check.

PLAINFIELD COUNCIL ELECTS.

W. S. Angleman is Chosen Past Councilor.

Plainfield Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., elected officers and received several propositions Monday night. Remarks were made by the newly-elected officers. There was also a presentation of emblematic pin to Daniel Van-Winkle, an organizer upon the Council. It was arranged to have a large American flag presented to the council, last night, by the wives of the members, but it was decided to defer the ceremony for one week.

These officers were chosen: Past councilor, Winfield S. Angleman; councilor, George B. Cratsley; vice-councilor, Dr. Rolland D. Tomlinson; recording secretary, Albert Crane; assistant recording secretary, F. B. Sebring; financial secretary, H. H. Webb; treasurer, G. W. V. Moy; conductor, Charles H. Leland; warden, Samuel H. Cratsley; inside sentinel, Alfred Peck; outside sentinel, Julius Williams; trustee, Samuel H. Cratsley, representative New Jersey Funeral Benefit Association, Peter H. Bennett. The officers will be installed Monday night, July 2. Before the meeting closed the council initiatory team had a very satisfactory drill and it hopes to be able to take up the initiatory work beginning July 1.

D. C. ANDERSON'S BIRD WON 500 MILE RACE.

Plainfield Homing Pigeons Lead in Flight From Newton, N. C.

Homing pigeons owned by D. C. Anderson and M. B. Mellor, of this city, won the 500 mile extra-urban race on Saturday. Forty-nine pigeons were released at Newton, N. C., Saturday morning at 4:45 o'clock. As many of the birds did not reach home, it is believed that they were killed by the hail storm which visited this section during the afternoon. The first bird of the three returning belongs to M. B. Mellor, and arrived at 4:50 o'clock in the afternoon. It refused to trap until 5:36, while D. C. Anderson's bird which arrived a little later trapped at 5:07, winning the race. Mr. Mellor thereby wins the prize for the general average for five flights this season from 100 to 500 miles, the average being 1,216 yards a minute for the five races in which his birds took part. The birds owned by F. C. Brunner and F. . Taylor arrived a day late.

SEWER PLAN COMMITTEE

Seven Boroughites to Decide Whether an Independent System is Better.

BUTTFIELD CHAIRMAN

Mr. Osgood Sheds Some Light On Situation—Col. J. F. Wilson Resigns.

A representation of twenty-six members of the committee of fifty-five boroughites appointed by Mayor Smalley July 6 to investigate and report upon a system of sewage disposal for North Plainfield held a meeting last evening in the borough council rooms. The formal resignation of one member, former Mayor John F. Wilson, had been received by the Mayor, but, considering the number of members who are out of town at present, the Mayor decided to have the meeting even though there was not an exact quorum.

The principal business of the evening was the passing of a motion by Edwin S. Hooley that the chairman of the commission of fifty-four, William J. Buttfield, should appoint a sub-committee of six men to work with the same chairman to consider the question as to whether the borough should attempt to share Plainfield's sewer disposal beds or to establish independent beds. Before Mr. Hooley's motion was put to vote, Mr. Buttfield made it clearly understood that, feeling himself inadequate to serve as chairman of such a sub-committee, he would resign the chairmanship to Charles W. McCutchen, who was not at the meeting, but is now abroad. The motion was passed, after reconsideration to allow for the sub-committee of six to include boroughites other than those who were members of the commission appointed by the Mayor. The six members were not appointed by Mr. Buttfield at the meeting, but are to be announced by him later. The general idea of the commission is that a smaller committee will be able to work to a better advantage in the consideration of the matter of disposal beds.

As the commission had no report to present, the Mayor desired to get an idea of the consensus of opinion of the members present, among whom were many property owners. The discussion was slow getting started, but long winded and more or less circumnambulent after it was once entered upon. At the very first, the question of consolidation with Plainfield was brought up for an argument for the borough using disposal beds in common with this city. It was at once decided that such a question should not enter at all upon the discussion of the evening.

When urged to speak on the subject, Jos. O. Osgood summed up the work which has been done by Engineer Pierson in computation of cost and methods of sewer disposal. He announced that the approximate cost to have borough sewage disposed in the Plainfield sewer beds near Rock avenue, would be between sixty and seventy-five thousand dollars for construction of the system, while the construction of an independent system in the township, several miles from North Plainfield, would cost above $110,000. Mr. Osgood announced that it would be possible to have sewage taken to independent beds by mere gravity flow without the establishment of a pumping station. When a discussion regarding cost of allied disposal beds with Plainfield arose, Mr. Osgood said that he informally understood that the borough would be taxed proportionally with the amount of sewage discharged into the bed.

Despite the fact that the question of a tide water disposal of sewage has been put down by the recent decision of the State sewage commission against such a system unless the sewage is first passed through sewage disposals beds similar to those used by Plainfield, there was discussion of the tide water method of disposal, even to the computation of $175,000 as the cost of establishing such a system, with septic tanks at the bank of the river. Captain Smith, who served on a committee which waited upon the State sewage commission some time ago, finally ended the discussion by declaring this system to be more expensive and merely a removal of the sewage to a greater distance before its treatment in a manner similar to that now carried on at the Plainfield beds.

Near the conclusion of the meeting, the proposition of joint sewage disposal beds with Dunellen, where there is much talk of a sewer system, was brought up, but there was no definite discussion. It was merely informally agreed that such a thing could be easily effected by a trunk sewer system to disposal beds beyond both towns.

While many theories were aired last night, the consensus of opinion

SAY HE BEAT COWS WITH AN IRON BAR

HOWARD CARVER MUST FACE A JURY BEFORE SQUIRE MUNDY.

Through the application of his attorney, S. S. Swackhamer, Esq., the case of Howard Carver, of Prideville, was not decided last evening by Justice of the Peace Clark Mundy but was adjourned until Monday evening, when the case will be decided by a jury. Carver was brought to court upon the complaint of some of his neighbors in Prideville, who accuse him of cruelly beating his two cows in pasture at Mountain avenue. It is alleged that Carver used an iron stake to beat the cows and he was hailed to court by William N. Pangborn, local officer of the State society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The court room last evening at the hall was well filled with residents of Prideville, and the two lawyers, S. S. Swackhamer for Carver, and V. W. Nash, Jr., for the S. P. C. A., entertained them with a long argument about the proper jurisdiction in the case. Mr. Swackhamer's objection to the ruling of a justice of the peace in the case was overruled, but he was finally allowed a jury, and the case was postponed until Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

SERVANT VICTIM OF P. S. C. TROLLEY CAR

HARRIETT O'NEILL, OF WESTFIELD, MEETS HER DEATH ON TRACKS.

Harriet O'Neill, 36 years old, a servant, employed at 145 South Avenue, Westfield, was killed by a trolley car in that place last night. She was struck by the car at 7:30 o'clock at Summit avenue and Washington street, and died three hours afterwards.

The accident happened so quickly that details were hard to learn after it was over. The woman is said to have stepped directly in front of the car, which was eastbound. She had been visiting, and was on her way home. Several Plainfielders were on the car.

When picked up, she was unconscious and never recovered sensibility. The conductor and motorman were arrested. Coroner Westcott viewed the body at the house, to where it was brought, this morning, and will investigate the accident.

Lightning Followed Line.

The storm was very severe at Martinsville Saturday, lightning striking in several places. Henry Banty, a bookbinder in New York, who lives near Mt. Horeb church, has a wire clothes line attached to one corner of his house and a tree. The tree was struck by lightning, which passed along the wire and communicated with the kitchen, where Mr. Banty was sitting. He received a severe shock which paralyzed his right arm and right side, but he is gradually rallying from the effects and it is believed he will recover. Seven small shoats were struck and killed near Martinsville.

Burial of Lindley M. Hillman.

The body of Lindley M. Hillman, the former Plainfield young man who died last Friday night at Gloucester, was brought to this city yesterday. Interment was made this afternoon at Hillside cemetery, a brief service being held at the grave side. It was conducted by Rev. Dr. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, and was attended by a gathering of relatives and friends.

C. W. Krause Home.

C. W. Krausse, of Vine street, who has been touring Germany for the past month, returned home yesterday on the Kromprinz Wilhelm. Henry Liefke and former Sheriff B. Coriell, who were with him, caught a later boat and will not reach home until Friday or Saturday.

Sold Beer to Better Trade.

Max Arnold, a restaurant keeper of Westfield, was fined $200 and costs in the Court of General Sessions at Elizabeth this morning, for selling beer without a license. He said he didn't sell for profit, but only to his customers to increase business.

Insurance Settled.

Through the local agent, William A. Woodruff, Roth & Co., the East Front street butchers, have received a settlement for $501.50, insurance for loss by fire a week ago Sunday.

—Seventy-five cases of olive oil arrived at Neuman Brothers' store today. The consignment came direct from France and the quality is guaranteed to be the very best.

Mrs. Edgar C. Schenck and daughters, Edythe and Iola, of Jackson avenue, are spending three weeks at Ocean Grove.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD KICKS

Its Citizens Resent Imputation That Mill Pond Water Should Not be Used.

CLUB TAKES INITIATIVE

Good Government Members Will Go To New Market and Protest Against Proceedings Anent the Question.

Following a recent announcement that the Middlesex Water Company desired to connect its mains with the South Plainfield mill pond in order to be sure of a reserve supply of water, notices were sent out by Dr. M. J. Whitford, secretary of the Piscataway township Board of Health, for a public meeting to be held at New Market tomorrow night to discuss the proposition. One of the notices was received by the Good Government Club of South Plainfield and that organization held a special session Monday night to talk over the action of the Health board. William Hamilton was in the chair and Wm. E. Smith acted as secretary.

The following resolution was offered by Mr. Smith and adopted unanimously: "Resolved, that the members of this club present at this meeting hereby protest against any proceedings by the Board of Health in the matter of any petition as against the Middlesex Water Co., in the use of the water from the South Plainfield mill pond, until the said water has been used, analyzed and found to be detrimental the public health."

On a motion made by John I. Holly it was decided to appoint a committee from the club to attend the New Market meeting and formally protest against any opposition to the plan until it is shown that the water is not fit to use. The members named are William E. Smith, John I. Holly, Samuel R. Manning, J. Adams, Peter J. McDonough, B. Horn and William Hamilton. This committee is to be further increased so as to include as many of the club members and residents as can attend the meeting.

It was stated at the gathering that as the Middlesex company had drawn no water from the mill pond, and that it would not until a filtration plant had been installed. It was further said this would make the water just as good for household purposes as that drawn from the artesian wells and that the inhabitants need not be worried lest they get an inferior supply.

STATE BUILDERS IN SESSION TODAY

150 DELEGATES OF NEW JERSEY ASSOCIATION AT CASINO.

A big delegation of members of the State Association of Master Builders, about 150 in number, are in town to attend the quarterly convention of the organization. The delegates, which represent the forty local associations in the State are in session at the Casino, where the convention was called to order by President Hugh D. King, of Bloomfield, at 2 o'clock. The reports of special committees will occpy most of the time at the session, which will last the entire afternoon, and there will also be reports from the several county vice presidents, as follows: L. B. Woolston, Union; Emil Koyen, Middlesex; George A. Miles, Morris; Andrew Diedman, Passaic; Andrew D. Boght, Bergen; R. H. Hughes, Monmouth; John W. Lathrop, Hudson; Henry W. Ege, Monmouth. An effort is to be made by the legislative committee to put through a measure by which contractors for buildings must hold certificates of master builders. This will insure the employment of only skilled labor.

At the conclusion of the business session late this afternoon, the majority of the delegates will stay over in this city for the evening and will be entertained at a big banquet to be served at the Casino at 7 o'clock. Most of the masons and builders of this city are members of the organization, which is three years old and has about 1,500 members.

Refreshments at Mission.

A special service, with social features, will be held at the Rescue Mission tomorrow night. J. B. Oakley, of Elizabeth, will speak. He will be accompanied by some of the boys from his Elizabeth mission, who will sing and recite. There will be special music, and refreshments will be served after the meeting.

Justice Mosher Moves.

Justice J. E. Mosher has removed his office from the third to the second floor of the Marah building. The change was made because of the exertion required to climb the two flights of stairs.

NEWSPAPER MEN BUMPED

Cops Come Back at Them Strong and Win By Score of 10 to 3.

SCRIBES WERE TANGLED

Didn't Know How to Handle the Ball, and Offered No Objections When Bluecoats Walked On Them.

Some of the swell was pounded from the chests of the newspaper leather-handlers yesterday afternoon by the bluecoat bunch. The cops exhibited some real baseball moves, and what they did to the suffering scribes made a noise like 10 to 3 on the score board.

The Newspaper Men did everything to the ball except to pick it up, or, on occasion, plunk it to the grass. They fell on it, jumped on it, kicked it, slapped it on the wrist, and misused it in cruel and unusual ways, but heartlessly scorned to take it in their hands and give it a straight ride. Once in a while they did, in a moment of petulance, seize it by the scruff of the neck and cast it from them, but never with any regard for the honor or dignity of a globule.

Willie Mullen pitched for the Cops, with his brother Tommy at the receiving station. It was a lovely combination for the scorer, because he was only bothered once or twice in following Newspaper Men around the bases. Willie had the Indian sign on all the reportorial sluggers, and only one man from the composing room, where men become aged but tough and handsome forms with iron frames are developed, poked the leather thing where none of the cops could reach it. Willie handed the batters so many lemons that they got spiders in them and looked as yellow as their playing.

And those cops. Cursis-s-s on them, they played well. They stopped grounders and caught flies, and only looked foolish at the bat. Walther held them to punky swats or airy swings, and only a man or two could do anything but fade away or give the infield a chance to fall over itself.

The cops registered twice in the opening stanza, and kept it up through the game. They were blanked in only two innings. The Newspaper Men didn't score until the fifth, and wound up their activities at the joy pan in the seventh.

To do them justice, the bluecoats showed great form in the field. McCarthy at short and McGinley at third scooped fast and threw well. Dobson held down second like a comer, and Cap Payne held most of the things that came his way on first.

None of Manager St. John's colts deserve mention, except in the obituary column. If they had all laid down and died in the first inning, it might have helped a whole lot. Maybe the cops would have stopped scoring out of respect for the dead.

HELPED A WAYFARER.

Mayor Backie, Chief Kiely and Amos Andrews Play Good Samaritan.

A tall, well-dressed young chap came into police headquarters yesterday afternoon and asked Chief Kiely for advice relative to reaching Scranton, Pa., on nothing. He told the old, old story of the young man from the West, who goes to New York, finds the Tenderloin the only thing, and wakes up in the morning with his pockets cleaned out. This particular young man had a little change left, and the remorseful journey homeward that he started with it worked all right, on the trolley, to this city. He said he had a brother in Scranton who would see that he got home all right from there.

While the Chief was talking with the young man, Mayor Backie and Amos Andrews came into headquarters. They liked his looks and started a purse for him. With contributions from the Chief and some of the officers, the pilgrim was provided a ticket to Scranton and some change.

A Birthday Party.

In honor of her fifth birthday, Sereta Skinner, of West Third street, had a birthday party at her home yesterday afternoon. Those who were invited were Louise Butler, Queen Reed, Bessie Connett, Margorie Venable, Iola Reed and Foster Kline. The children played games on the lawn, after which refreshments were served.

LEAVES CITY COMMITTEE

Judge Newcorn Retires From Active Political Work As Expected.

TOWNSEND FOR OFFICE

Resignation Sends Secretary-Treasurership from Fourth to Second Ward—Big Advisory Committee Appointed.

Judge William Newcorn resigned from the Republican city committee at its meeting last night. His resignation left a vacancy in the secretary-treasurership, which he had filled for a number of years. William Townsend was elected to the office.

Judge Newcorn's action has been expected ever since his recent elevation to the bench. In presenting it, he stated that he did not deem it within his sense of propriety to take active part as a member of the committee while on the bench. His successor is a Second ward boy, Mr. Newcorn is a Fourth warder.

Vacancies on the committee were filled and the different standing committees, which have been held open since the 1906 organization, were appointed. The full advisory committee, which has been increased to 125 members, was also shaped up by Mr. Fisk, with Alexander Gilbert as chairman. The 125 will be announced this afternoon or tomorrow morning.

The committee vacancies were appointed as follows: Second ward, Marion Ackerman; Third ward, Joseph M. Shellabarger, George A. Beaton, George J. Tobin; Fourth ward, J. Harry Cook.

The committees are made up as follows: Executive, Charles J. Fisk, chairman; Dr. O. L. Jenkins, vice chairman; William Townsend, secretary and treasurer; S. P. T. Wilbur, Robert A. Meeker, George A. Beaton, Frank H. Smith, Finance, James H. Deehl, J. Frank Doane, B. Frank Coriell, Herbert Buxton. Registration, W. L. Glenk, Francis Montgomery, George J. Tobin, Frank De W. Randolph. Naturalization, H. G. Adams, Cornelius VanHeverden, Charles Foster, W. G. Stockerton. Legislature, Charles Smink, Robert A. Meeker, W. S. Angleman, William T. Kirk.

BETTER FIRE PROTECTION AT NEW PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Automatic Water Curtain One of the Safety Devices Installed.

In order to reduce the danger of fire to a minimum and to still further guard its patrons, Manager Counihan has had installed at the New Plainfield theatre a number of improvements that have made the house one of the safest in the State. The work has all been done under the supervision of Chief Doane and he declared yesterday that there was nothing more that he could suggest in the way of equipment or changes.

The principal improvement has been the installation of an automatic water curtain, a contrivance that makes it practically impossible for flames to reach out from the stage to the auditorium. It consists of a large water main which extends across the stage close to the proscenium arch, so constructed that 106 degrees of heat will melt lead connections and cause a sheet of water to descend. A fire that could be smothered with a hat would be sufficient to start the flow and in several cities of the country they have been the means of preventing conflagrations.

Three new exits have been added to the house, making thirteen in all. One leads off from the rear of the orchestra on the east side to Second street, another from the east wall of the balcony and the remaining one from the gallery. Iron stairways are to be built from them to the ground below, making them counterparts of the ones on the west side.

Beside the usual up-to-date fire extinguishers, Manager Counihan has also had reels of 2½-inch hose placed at convenient points and there are enough lengths to reach any part of the house. A four-inch main leads from the street to the stage and there are three-inch standpipes running up to the fly gallery. Beside all these precautions, the attaches of the house are to continue the regular fire drills introduced last season and the usual number of regular firemen will be in the theatre during every performance.

Last Excursion August 16.

The last of the season's Sunday school excursions will go to Asbury Park from this city Thursday, August 16, when the Warren chapel school will spend the day at the shore. The big Hope chapel excursion is to go Saturday, August 11, and the combined excursion of Grace Episcopal church, Holy Cross, Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and the Seventh Day Baptist church will spend the day at the shore Thursday, August 9.

HORSE THIEF GETS AWAY WITH LIVERY STABLE RIG

REPRESENTS HIMSELF AS TELEPHONE MAN AND WORKED GAME EASILY.

Working a very old game, with no variations and no trouble, a horse-thief got away with a rig belonging to the Central Livery Stable, 115 East Second street, yesterday afternoon. He simply asked for a horse and buggy to hire, got it without deposit or identification by representing himself as a New York and New Jersey Telephone Company employe, and decamped with it.

The thief was a young man, apparently an American, twenty-four years old, five feet five inches in height, smooth-faced, dark complexioned, and wore a blue coat, dark mixed trousers and black derby. He came to the stable at 2:30 o'clock. He told James Kane, who was in charge, that he was a telephone man and wanted a rig for the rest of the afternoon. He looked all right to Kane, and he got a horse and runabout without question.

The police were notified of the theft at 4:30 o'clock, when it became certain that the young man was not coming back. His description and a description of the rig was telephoned to all the surrounding towns, and to Newark and New York. A reward of $50 has been offered for the recovery of the rig.

The stolen horse is a brown colt, with black points and hollow back. The runabout is black, with red running gear.

Bound Brook, July 25.—A horse stolen from the Central Livery Stable, Plainfield, yesterday afternoon, was found in a hotel stable here this morning. It was left here by the thief last night. Ralph Bache, of Plainfield, who had heard a description of the horse, saw it in the stable while here on business this morning and recognized it. He telephoned to the livery stable men, who sent one of their employes and identified it. It is supposed the thief lost his nerve and abandoned the horse to escape capture.

MAY BUY INSECTICIDE SPRAYING MACHINE

CITY WILL PROBABLY ARM ITSELF AGAINST THE TREE PESTS.

To arm itself against the ravages of pests among the shade trees that have become one of the chief beauties of the locality, the city may purchase one of the powerful sprayers with which the insects and scrubs have been destroyed under the direction of George T. Powell. Mr. Powell, who is an expert on the subject of protecting trees from pests, says action is necessary to save them at this time. The machine will do the work for $500, but one of his machines may be purchased at that figure, and city employes can work it at no further expense to the municipality, after which the city will have the machine for use other seasons.

Mr. Powell told a Daily Press man yesterday that an examination of Plainfield trees would disclose the fact that the elms have been badly infected by the elm beetle, and that the foliage has been much injured. Two years of such attack, he said, would destroy many of them. If a steam sprayer, capable of throwing over the highest trees, were put in operation when the beetles first appear, the trees would be saved. The frequent and heavy rains, Mr. Powell, continued, had killed many of the cotton maple scales just as they were hatching, saving the maples much injury this season.

Street Commissioner Gavett said this morning that conditions were not as bad as they had been. He believed, however, that it would be wise to take precautionary measures.

Heavy Pole Fell on Him.

Bernardsville, July 25.—Walter Buist, son of Thomas S. Buist, was painfully injured Monday afternoon, near the residence of Charles Barker, on the Mine Brook road. Buist is employed as an apprentice electrician by his brother, David Buist, and with a number of men was assisting in connecting the residence of Mr. Barker with electric wires. The men were placing a pole in the rear lot when some of the wires broke and the pole fell, striking Buist and knocking him down. He was brought to his home here and examined by Dr. Joseph Medigh, who found that he had sustained a severe gash on the upper lip and that one of his legs was injured to some extent. No bones were broken, however, and Buist is resting comfortably.

Mrs. C. B. Dennis and daughter, Ada, of East Second street, left today for Naugatuck, Conn., for a week's outing.

CITY CHAIRMAN EXPLAINS

Mr. Fisk States Reasons For Appointing Advisory Committee of 125.

FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT

New Committee Empowered to Make the Party Ticket Without any Interference.

That the regular Republican organization is anxious to have the cooperation of the Colbyites was made plain by former Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, chairman of the city executive committee, in a conversation with a reporter for The Daily Press today. So far as the committee is concerned, the chairman declared that it is most anxious to have the very principles of the "new idea" movement carried out in municipal politics and that he for one intends to do all in his power to attain that end.

"There is no earthly reason why there should be any division among the Republicans of Plainfield," said Mr. Fisk. "We all agree that this city stands for the best sort of government and I for one think that it has enjoyed that privilege for a long time. Personally I have had a talk with both Judge Runyon and Henry L. Hall and have state unequivocally to them that we want to have their advice whenever they see that anything can be done for the betterment of the party.

"My reason," continued Mr. Fisk, "for appointing an advisory committee of 125 Republicans is that the party government in Plainfield may be of the most democratic form. That committee will suggest nominations and we will carry out their recommendations. In them is vested the utmost authority so far as party government is concerned, and if any misstep is made it will not be the fault of the city executive committee. I should say in this connection that the executive committee will keep hands off and will not interfere with the advisory committee in any way.

"Mr. Gilbert has consented to act as chairman of the advisory committee and I do not feel called upon in view of his standing in this community to make any comment on his selection. We are indeed fortunate in having the valuable services of the onerous position. The 125 members are picked with much care from the various Wards and no factional differences has been allowed to enter into the matter. Colbyites and regulars alike have been chosen. Inasmuch as we have not sent out the notices of appointment as yet, I think it would be unfair to give out the list.

"If the Colbyites do not join us in this movement," concluded Mr. Fisk, "the responsibility will be on their shoulders. I think we have done all that could be done in the cause of good government."

CONSTRUCTING A DIRECT PATH.

Central Railroad Making a Walk From Depot Platform to Sycamore Street.

For the accommodation of east end commuters, a pathway is being made from Fourth street and Sycamore street almost direct to the depot platform. Commuters who passed through Sycamore street could only reach the platform by walking nearly down to Watchung avenue to take the pathway or by cutting across the lawn and through the shrubbery and flower beds. A path has been through a gateway in the stone wall bordering the driveway.

In Judge Snape's Court.

The case of W. S. Terhune & Co. vs. Jacob E. Hillpot, of Bound Brook, on contract was settled in Justice Snape's court this morning without legal action. The amount was $50. Papers in the contract case of William Kiene vs. the Watchung Spring Water Co. are returnable at the court tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. The amount is $75.

Hurt in Bicycle Spill.

J. W. Graham was thrown from his wheel on West Fourth street early last evening and the fall sprained his wrist severely. Mr. Graham went back along the road to see what caused his tumble, but could find nothing that looked as if it might have caused the accident.

Clerks to Have An Outing.

The clerks and other employes of the Woodhull & Martin Company have chartered a trolley car to "swing around the loop" tonight. The start will be made from the Watchung avenue terminus at 6:45 and refreshments will be served en route.

SHAKE UP IN FIRE DEPARTMENT CAUSES SURPRISE

Captains Being Shifted Unexpectedly By Councilmanic Fire Board Make Talk.

REASONS NOT GIVEN

Chief T. O. Doane Gives His Version of Truck Accident at Special Meeting of the Board.

The fire committee of the Common Council held a special meeting, Thursday, ostensibly for the purpose of sifting the Bush accident to the bottom but it resulted in activity in another direction that has given the department its greatest "shake-up" in years. Following the conference, word came like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky that each of the three captains in the service should be transferred by August 1, as follows: Captain William Townley from headquarters to No. 3 house; Captain James Daley from No. 1 house to headquarters; Captain George Fetring from No. 3 house to No. 1 house. No explanation accompanied the order and the stereotyped answer, "For the good of the service" is all that has been offered interrogators. On the street, some shake their heads and say "politics."

When the members first gathered, the truck accident was brought up and though no testimony was taken beside that of Chief Doane's, the committee discussed information previously secured. The head of the department declared that the injured driver had informed him that the horses had turned from Second street into Central avenue from force of habit and that the move came so suddenly he was unable to stop them. He further stated to the committee that in order to see what was in this explanation, he had taken the No. 1 team and driven down Second street, several times, both as if an alarm was being answered and as though the daily exercise jaunt was on. At no time did the animals show any inclination to swing into Central avenue.

The chief then related an incident which tended to show more than anything else that Bush disobeyed orders and sent the horses out at full speed when the alarm was turned in from box 82 a week ago Thursday night. Early that evening, one of the animals escaped from its stall in No. 1 house and made its way out through Exchange alley to West Front street. It became excited through men waving and shouting and in running about slipped on a car track and fell. It was then caught and taken back to the house. Dr. Pocock, the veterinary, was summoned, and gave the animal a thorough inspection, after which he informed Chief Doane that it would be advisable to use it carefully for a few days as some of the muscles in the legs might be sprained. An order to the effect was given Bush at 9:30 and again at 10:30, the chief making a special trip to the house in order to impress upon the driver the need of going slow in the event of an alarm. To the committee he asserted that he had said to Bush:

"Never mind pushing the horses if you get a call, Harry; if you are behind, nothing will be said."

The alarm came in twenty minutes later and to all appearances, the order was lost sight of.

When Chief Doane had given his testimony, the committee talked the matter over and though no formal decision was reached, it was agreed among themselves that "driving fast" was at the bottom of the accident and not "the horses' turning from force of habit." In order to give the injured man every opportunity, however, the hearing was postponed until he recovers sufficiently to answer before the members and speak for himself.

The transferral of the captains afterward engaged the attention of the committee with the result previously announced. By some of those who have followed the affairs of the department it is alleged it was done for the purpose of getting a "crack" at Townley and Fetring. They assert that the former fell into disfavor because of his activity in seeking Assistant Chief Murray's place, when the powers that be had elected John Cose. Fetring, it is said, was a warm supporter of former Councilman Robert L. Lee when he ran for tax collector and the fact was not appreciated by several gentlemen who had picked some one for the office. In addition the rumor has gained ground that Fetring sympathizes with the Colby movement and has been indiscreet enough to say so.

EXECUTORS SETTLE CLAIM ON ESTATE

MR. AND MRS. OAKLEY GET $1-804, VERDICT OF $3,000 BEING EXCESSIVE.

The suit brought in the Supreme Court by Armitage T. Oakley and his wife against John P. Emmons and Robert T. Bellchambers, as the executors of the estate of Ellen Gill, deceased, has been settled by the payment to Mr. Oakley and his wife by the executors of the sum of $1,804.

The suit grew out of a claim for services rendered Mrs. Gill by the Oakleys for a number of years prior to her death. The executors would not recognize the claim and refused to pay anything. Suit was then brought in the Supreme Court to enforce the claim, and last year a jury at Elizabeth before Circuit Court Judge Helsley, to whom the case had been referred, rendered a verdict for $3,000. The Supreme Court thought this amount excessive and ordered a new trial. The case would have been the first case on the list for trial in October had it not been settled by the payment by the executors of an amount satisfactory to the plaintiffs.

Counsellor W. S. Angleman represented the Oakleys, the successful party to the suit, and Isaac F. Runyon represented the executors.

TO REAR MONUMENT FOR GALLANT SOLDIER

TWENTY-THIRD N. J. VOLUNTEERS' BRAVERY TO BE REWARDED.

Handsome, without the frailness that often accompanies beauty, stalwart, without heaviness, and simple, without the severity of plainness, will be the monument that New Jersey will erect at Salem Church Heights, Fredericksburg, in honor of the services of the gallant Twenty-third Regiment of Volunteers in the Civil War.

Plans for the monument have been decided upon and the contract for the work has been awarded by United States Marshal Thomas J. Alcott, of Mount Holly; General E. Burd Grubb, of Edgewater Park, and Elwood A. Kirkbride, of Mount Holly, the commissioners appointed by Governor Stokes in compliance with an act of the last Legislature, which appropriated $8,000 for the work.

The three members of the commis*sion will go to Fredericksburg* Tuesday and after looking over the old battlefield will pick out the exact location of the monument. The battlefield belongs to the survivors of the regiment and will be held in perpetuity as a memorial to their services in the war. It having been bought and given for the purpose by General Grubb, the commander of the famous Twenty-third during its years of active work.

The contract for the building of the monument has been awarded to a Red Bank firm, their bid being the lowest, their design the best and their articles of agreement the most advantageous offered. The shaft is to be of Barre granite, twenty-eight feet in height and with a base twenty feet square. Granite posts will sup*port a handsome coping and a con*crete walk will be laid all around the monument. The latter is 12 in width. The figure on teh top of the pedestal will be that of a private soldier in the act of loading his musket, ready to charge the enemy. Artistic wreaths will indicate the years of service of the regiment and a list of the battles in which it took part will be carved on the base.

It is the present intention of the commissioners to have the monument ready for dedication this Fall, but if this cannot be accomplished the exercises will not be held until May 3, next, the anniversary of the battle of Fredericksburg. The dedicatory services will be made the occasion of a reunion of as many as possible of the survivors of the regiment, and it is expected that Governor Stokes, together with his staff and other State officials, will attend.

AFTER THE DANCE.

Good-by * * *

I shall regret you;
To love you, dear, is vain;
I never should have met you.
Good-by * * *

And so I must forget you
Till you come back again.

Good-by * * *

I say it sadly,
You do not understand,
Your answer rings so gladly
"Good-by!"—

And yet my heart beats madly
Because you take my hand.

How near the cold Dawn hovers.
Her hooded silver head
Too swiftly she uncovers.
Good-by * * *

Oh, friend, we might be lovers
If one brave word were said.

ELECTION LAW OPINION

Attorney General McCarter Says Election Boards Must Meet September 11.

STATISTICS NOT CLEAR

Applies To Election Districts Outside of Cities Having Population of Over 30,000.

Attorney-General McCarter has given an opinion to Secretary of State Dickinson, which is designed to settle a question relative to election boards resulting from conflict between an election act of last winter and one of the preceding year. The attorney-general holds that in districts outside of cities whose population exceeds 30,000, election boards must still meet to register voters on the second Tuesday in September. Mr. McCarter admits that the situation is not plain, but concludes that this is the best way to settle the question. His opinion follows:

"My attention has been called to the confusion that seems to exist by reason of the provisions of Chapter 235 of the laws of 1906 in reference to holding of primary elections. This act provides 'The first registry day in cities having a population exceeding 30,000 shall be held in the fourth Tuesday of September in each year.' It further provides that the time for holding the primary elections shall be the first registry date. 'And in all election districts outside of cities having a population exceeding 30,000 the said boards of registry and election shall sit for the purpose of this act as primary election boards on the second and fourth Tuesday of September.'

"Section 6 of Chapter 258 of the laws of 1905 requires the boards of registry and election, in all election districts in the State outside of cities having a population exceeding 30,000 to meet annually on the second Tuesday in each year, for registration purposes, and on the second Tuesday of September said board shall meet for holding the primary elections in their respective districts.

"While the situation is not plain, I have, after reflection, reached the conclusion that in an election district outside of cities having a population exceeding 30,000, the boards must still meet, for the purpose of registering voters, on the second Tuesday of September, as provided in section 6 of Chapter 258 of the laws of 1905, notwithstanding Chapter 235 of the laws of 1906."

CENSUS MAN'S FIGURES

City's and Borough's Make-up as the Houses and People.

COMMUNITIES' GROWTH

Compendium of State Censuses from 1726 to 1905 Reveals Some Interesting Statistics.

A compendium of the State censuses from 1726 to 1905, with the tabulated returns of the latter year, has just been distributed by the Department of State. Interesting figures on Plainfield and North Plainfield appear in the tables.

Dwellings in Plainfield number 3,240, and 3,893 families are housed in them. The white males number 7,351, and the females 8,787. There are 778 colored males and 1,072 colored females. Males under five number 867; between five and eighteen, 1,961; eighteen to twenty-one, 424; twenty-one to forty-five, 3,610. Females under five, 846; from five to eighteen, 2,022; eighteen to twenty-one, 568; twenty-one to forty-five, 4,261. There are 4,611 single males and 5,324 single females. The married people number 7,339 and the widowed, 1,168. There are 26 divorcees.

In North Plainfield there are 967 houses and 1,203 families. The white males number 2,568, and the females, 2,878. The black males total only 64 and their womenfolk number 106. The males under five years of age number 270; between five and eighteen, 838; eighteen to twenty-one, 129; twenty-one to forty-five, 982; the females under five number 237; between five and eighteen, 727; between eighteen and twenty-one, 165; twenty-one to forty-five, 1,208.

The single males total 1,410, unmarried females, 1,574. Married people number 2,238 and widowed 382. There are twelve divorcees.

The first census taken in Plainfield after its incorporation as a city was in 1875, when the inhabitants numbered 5,895. The population has increased with each census as follows: 1875, 7,216; 1880, 8,125; 1885, 8,913; 1890, 11,267; 1895, 13,629; 1900, 15,369; 1905, 18,468.

The census of 1905 gives the first figures on North Plainfield borough's population. There were 4,245 inhabitants then, and they increased to 5,009 in five years and to 5,616 in 1905.

17 BREWERIES IN BIG BEER TRUST.

Yearly Product of Combination Is 2,300,000 Barrels of the Beverage.

Formal announcement of the organization of a beer trust, representing a combination of seventeen breweries, was made yesterday by the making known of George W. Young & Co. and the law firm of Holm, Smith, Whitlock & Scarff.

The individual giants of the brewing business, like Ehret's, Ruppert's, Doelger's, Rissler of the Lion and Bernheimer & Schwartz have not gone into the combine, but they propose to stand together to meet any act of aggression made by the trust.

The largest of the seventeen breweries which have entered the combine are the Consolidated Brewing Com*pany, Limited; the Excelsion Brew*ing Company. The names of the other fourteen are withheld for the present by the promoters.

It is said the formal announcement signed by the law firm which attended to the work of the combination, that the seventeen breweries have an aggregate sale of 2,300,000 barrels per annum. Seven of the seventeen are what is known as ice breweries, in which more than 2,000 saloons have an interest and sell their beer exclusively.

The combination is to be known as the Breweries Bond and Securities Company. It has taken offices at No. 52 Broadway. The capital stock is $12,000,000, of which $6,000,000 is 6 per cent. noncumulative preferred stock, and $6,000,000 common stock. There is also a bond issue of $15,500,000, divided into two series.

It is understood that an effort will be made to bring into the consolidation all the large breweries like Ehret's, Ruppert's and the others, which have so far resisted all overtures made by the trust.

COLT KICKED IN WINDOW

Valuable Thoroughbred Stallion Severed Artery In a Truant Gambol.

NEARLY BLED TO DEATH

Owner and Stableman, Chasing Animal About Yard, Didn't Know It Was Hurt Until It Fell Exhausted.

Theodore Willetts, a New Yorker living for the summer near Oak Tree on Park avenue, was awakened late Wednesday night by the noise of breaking glass. It came from the direction of the kitchen, and Mr. Willetts thought of burglars. Pulling a revolver from a drawer, he tiptoed down stairs.

He ran into no burglars, and located the broken glass in one of the kitchen windows. Mr. Willetts examined kitchen and glass carefully for burglar traces, but could find nothing to indicate how the crash had occurred. The glass had been broken inward, and it looked like a kick from left. Mr. Willetts was pussling over the incident, when a shrill neigh sounded in the darkness of the yard. He looked out and saw his young thoroughbred stallion, Digby Bell, gamboling about the grass and flower beds. Digby was kicking his heels with the joyous abandon of young stallions when playing truant, and Mr. Willetts understood how the window was broken. In circling about, kicking up his heels, Digby came within reach of the glass and shot his hoofs through it.

Mr. Willetts dressed and aroused his stableman, and the two went out to round the stallion up. The horse evaded capture for half an hour, when he staggered suddenly and went to his knees. He got up again, but ran weakly. The stableman reached his head and was about to slip a halter over it when the stallion sank to his knees again and dropped over on his side. Then for the first time the men discovered that an artery in one of his hind legs, severed by the glass, was spurting blood. He had run until weakness brought on by loss of blood keeled him over.

The stableman caught the artery between his thumb and finger, and Mr. Willetts twisted a tourniquet about the leg. Digby Bell was pretty far gone, but a dose of whiskey brought back a little of his strength, and Mr. Willetts and the stableman managed to get him to the barn. Dr. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, sewed up the artery yesterday morning and the stallion will probably recover, although his leg is likely to be stiff for the rest of his life. Mr. Willetts got Digby Bell primarily for breeding purposes, and will keep him even if his leg makes him useless for road or track work.

SOMERSET CLUB'S OUTING WAS A BIG SUCCESS.

250 Boroughites Made the Trip Around the Loop In Trolley Cars—A Six-Hour Excursion.

Taking a party of 250 boroughites and their wives and families on a trolley trip around the Boynton Beach loop Thursday, the first outing of the Somerset Club proved a great success. The excursion was in charge of D. J. Carney, as chairman of the general committee, and is an event which will be long remembered by the Somersets.

The trolley company had agreed to supply five cars, but announced yesterday morning that only three could be placed at the disposal of the club. Four big cars were sent accordingly to the Somerset street switch, from which the party started shortly after 7 o'clock last evening. Ticket holders were given a preference in the seating, and several parties were unable to find seats. The party was delayed for a half hour at New Brunswick, waiting at the drawbridge, for a string of boats of the carnival to pass through. There was another delay at Perth Amboy, but on the whole, the trip was breezy and fast. The excursionists stopped for a half hour at Boynton Beach, where many took advantage of the opportunity offered for dancing. The party arrived in this city on the return trip at about 1:30 this morning. There were few mishaps during the trip, but Francis McIntyre, who was on the last of the string of cars, slipped and fell off during the return trip. The car was bowling along at the time, and McIntyre fell heavily. He was bruised and cut up about the face, but was able to return with the party.

The Somerset Club is not yet three months old. During that period it has acquired a membership of 175, many of whom are prominent citizens of the borough Its "open house" held last month and its "trip around the loop" has attracted the attention of the public and placed the club in the limelight.

COL. KUSER ACQUITTED IN SPEEDING CASE

SON-IN-LAW OF SENATOR DRYDEN GOES FREE BY JUSTICE'S DECISION.

Colonel A. R. Kuser, who was arrested by speed constables at Bound Brook about a week ago for speeding his auto, in which his father-in-law, United States Senator John F. Dryden, was riding at the time, was acquitted of the charge by the decision of Justice of the Peace Brampton, who decided the case in his favor at a session of court at Bound Brook Thursday. Colonel Kuser was represented by Charles A. Reed, Esq., of this city.

The arrest was made by constables who were guarding the road on the lookout for speeding motorists near Bound Brook. Col. Kuser and Senator Dryden were driving in the Colonel's machine on the way to catch a train to Washington. The constables had marked off a part of the road, and one, who was stationed with a stop-watch, stopped the ma*chine and arrested Col. Kuser on the* pike road. In the course of the hearing, the constable witness in the case swore that the machine was going at the rate of 33 miles an hour, "beating it" for the train. The speed calculation was derived from a computation by the stop watch holder over the measured stretch of ground. Lawyer Reed sailed for the measuring line with which the distance was laid off, and found that it had been broken several times and in the mending had been shortened about half a foot. The constable who had charge within reach of the glass and shot his hoofs through it. within reach of the glass and shot his hoofs through it.

Mr. Willetts dressed and aroused his stableman, and the two went out to round the stallion up. The horse evaded capture for half an hour, when he staggered suddenly and went to his knees. He got up again, but ran weakly. The stableman reached his head and was about to slip a halter over it when the stallion sank to his knees again and dropped over on his side. Dr. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, sewed up the artery yesterday morning and the stallion will probably recover, although his leg is likely to be stiff for the rest of his life. Mr. Willetts got Digby Bell primarily for breeding purposes, and will keep him even if his leg makes him useless for road or track work.

DR. ANDERSON TO BUILD ON WATCHUNG AVENUE.

Structure Will Be Of the New Method Reinforced Concrete.

Through its local representatives, Doane & Doane, The Consolidated Engineering Co., of America, made application to the Fire and Buildings committee of the Common Council, last night, for a permit to erect a one-story twin store building on Watchung avenue, just off East Front street, for Dr. A. W. Anderson. The site is known as the Anderson property and the proposed structure will be located directly in the rear of the new building which occupies that corner. It will be built of reinforced cement; the process being entirely new.

There is nothing in the local building ordinance which covers construction of this sort and accordingly Inspector Doane was unable to grant the usual permit. The committee will consider the application and give its decision later.

Doane & Doane also made application for a permit for the erection of D. C. Smalley's cold storage warehouse on East Third street, to be constructed of the same material. According to the plans it will be a two-story building with flats above the ground floor.

LINDLEY M. HILLMAN DEAD.

The Announcement Received Today By Telegram from Gloucester.

Word came by telegram to local relatives and friends Friday, announcing the death of Lindley M. Hillman, a former Plainfielder. It occurred last night at Gloucester, this State, where he had been making his home. The messages gave no particulars.

The deceased was about twenty-seven years old and was the son of the late William H. and Sarah K. Hillman, the mother now residing on West Fourth street. He attended the Plainfield High School and when the High School battalion was organized by Captain Edwards, he was one of its first buglers. He leaves a widow, having been married about a year ago.

War on Mosquitoes.

Health Officer Richards, of Elizabeth, yesterday, received a check for $1,000 from the Central Railroad of New Jersey to be used in the war of extermination against mosquitoes. This money will be turned over to the city's treasury, and will be then considered in the light of having been appropriated by the city for mosquito extermination. In that way Elizabeth will get $333.33 from the State, as the law provides that if a city *appropriates any money for mos*quito extermination, one-third of that sum shall be added by the State.

Exchange Properties.

C. M. Rayboet has exchanged the three-story building at 183 North avenue, where he has been conducting his plumbing business with a home over the store, for "Maple Cottage" on East Second street, near Watchung avenue, with August Jacot, who recently purchased the cottage from A. E. Bushnell, of Newark. Mr. Rayboet will erect a shop at the rear of the Second avenue house.

COPS LOSE TO SCRIBES

Newspaper Nine Wallop the Bluecoats by the Score of 7 to 4.

"BOB" HOFFMAN TWIRLS

Reportorial Matthewson Scares the Cop Batsmen Stiff—Chief Kiely Goes From the Field In Sadness.

There was gloom at police headquarters Wednesday, and heavy hearts beat beneath blue coats all over the city. In the newspaper offices joy bloomed in full beauty, and cheries of uncorked delight bubbled from swelling chests. All of which resulted from the unchangeable law which decrees that a baseball game is a sugar-coated peach for one team and an unadulterated mouthful of dust for the other.

After a real, full-sized game on Crescent Oval yesterday afternoon, the cops' nine went away with the dust thick on their biters, and the newspaper men's combination pranced off with a sweet taste in their brush traps, and their eyes proudly flashing, which is a habit of baseball champs. It was a lovely game and not without satisfaction for even the humbled cops. They took comfort out of a double play and the fact that the score wasn't worse. The figures were 7 to 4.

The suspicious person will regard to score doubtfully but it was actually thus. Boldly attacking tradition and the hopes of their friends, the nines frequently handed each other a large round specimen of acidulated fruit. For seven unprecedented innings the cops didn't score, and there were four undoubted stanzas when neither side crossed the joy pan. This is scarcely to be believed, but it can be proved by affidavits by a circulation manager, a chief of police, an odd inhabitant and other people of undoubted truthfulness.

The cops used a reversible pony battery composed of Willie Mullen and Cormack Caulfield, Jr. Mullen pitches, catches and plays the infield for the Laurels and Caulfield is a veteran of seven very swift junior years including the Little-Potatoes-Hard-to-Peel and the West End Terrors. Mullen pitched for four innings and was touched for only one run. Caulfield worked the David-and-Goliath game for a time, but the push-out got through him up. Cormack went up, and the stock of the cops dropped down with a rush that disheartened the brass-buttoned host.

"Bob" Hoffman pitched for the newspaper men. He had speed and once the ball was actually seen to curve. He didn't try any more curves, because Jim McKeon, thinking the ball was coming straight, aimed at it that way and hit it. Hoffman confined himself to straight lobs after that and no more accidents occurred. It wouldn't be right to leave the subject of baseball without a mention of the terrific swathing of W. Waters. Swinging airily, and with no regard for the feelings of Mr. Caulfield and the cops, he sent the ball twice to grass.

The cops made a strong start. They scored twice in the first inning and duplicated in the next stanza. The newspaper men registered only once in the second, and Chief Kiely beamed proudly on his pets from the scorer's bench. Don't ask how the runs happened. There are the feelings of Charley Fleming and Jay Hacquer to consider. They may reform and the record of this game would embarrass them.

Both teams cavorted industriously and to good purpose and for the next four innings. In the seventh, Caulfield was worked for some passes and a hit or two, and with a miscue now and then to season the mess, the newspaper men tied the score. "Bill" Messler tried to scare the scorer into bringing the cops up one, but the Chief, with an air of unconquerable virtue, backed the keeper-of-records up and the score stood at 4 to 4. Blanks marked the next inning, but the newspaper men, encouraged by Waters with his trusty bat, bonped in with three more. The cops went out on the Jump, a double play in which a pop fly three miles high figured, helping their demise. Chief Kiely didn't see the finish. He went away, with a sad and pensive air, in the seventh.

Some of the cops really fielded well. McCarthy, Payne and Dobson worked snappily. Corra Ryno astonished the vets at third. He made a real stop and a great throw from deep infield. Colthar rose to everything that came toward first and "Bob" Scott backed Hoffman's shoots with the steadiness of an oldtimer. None of the outfielders had anything to do, but they all looked like dangerous men, and probably the ball was really afraid of flying within reach of their hooks.

A. S. PECK IS ORDAINED

Deacon in Charge of St. Stephen's Church Elevated to the Priesthood.

BY BP. SCARBOROUGH

Canon Bryan and Other Clergy Take Part in the Ordination Service —Reception Follows Ceremony.

With all the solemnity and impressiveness of the Episcopal ritual, Arthur Searing Peck, in charge of St. Stephen's church at Netherwood, was ordained to the priesthood by Rt. Rev. John Scarborough, bishop of New Jersey, at St. Stephen's church Thursday. A goodly representation of Mr. Peck's parishioners, together with a large party of friends among the clergy from out of town were present at the service. The candidate was presented to the bishop by the Rev. Jere Knode Cooke, of St. George's church, Hempstead, Long Island, and Mr. Peck was ordained to priest's orders in connection with the celebration of the Holy Communion at the conclusion of the service. The Veni Creatus Spiritus was first sung by the choir, and then Rev. Dr. Cooke, as presentor, led the candidate to the bishop. The priests present took part in the ceremony of the laying of hands together with Bishop Scarborough. Mr. Peck received the stole and chasuable symbolic of his assumption of the office.

The sermon in connection with the ordination ceremony was preached by the Venerable Canon Bryan, of the Cathedral of the Incarnation of the Diocese of Long Island at Garden City, L. I. He took for his text, the first verse of the fourth chapter of First Corinthians: "Let a man so account of us as the ministers of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God." He spoke of the threefold orders of ministry, the orders of bishops, priests and deacons, with especial reference to the dignity and glory of the priesthood. Priests, he said, are not only ministers of God, but stewards of the mysteries of God. There are mysteries in religion as well as in the natural world; they were once hidden, but are now revealed through the Incarnation. It is through the instrumentality of the ministry that souls are saved and brought to Christ. At the conclusion of the sermon came the charge to the candidate for orders. In this, Canon Bryan referred to the importance of the order about to be received by Mr. Peck and spoke of his earnest, sincere character, charging with the spiritual care of the parishioners.

The music was a special feature of the service of ordination. William H. Scarborough, organist and choirmaster of Grace Episcopal church, was in charge, assisted by members of the Grace church choir and the entire choir of St. Stephen's.

At the conclusion of the service, the party of clergy, together with relatives and friends and Mr. Peck and certain parishioners, went to the new church rectory, at Woodland avenue and South avenue. Here the clergy were entertained at a collation. The party to sit down to luncheon consisted of twenty-one people, among whom were Mrs. Lockhart, of Brooklyn, N. Y., sister of Mr. Peck, and the following clergymen: Right Rev. Bishop Scarborough, of the Diocese of New Jersey, the Venerable Canon Bryan, of the Cathedral of the Incarnation of the Diocese of Long Island, Rev. Jere Knode Cooke, of St. George's church, Hempstead, L. I., Rev. C. H. Simpson, former rector of St. Stephen's now living in New York city, Rev. John Kellar, of Arlington, N. J., Rev. Dr. Joseph P. Taylor, of this city, Rev. Dr. Eager, of North Plainfield, Rev. Harris C. Rush, of Westfield, and Rev. Arthur S. Phelps, of Dunellen.

At the conclusion of the luncheon, Bishop Scarborough made an informal address at the table. He congratulated Mr. Peck upon his accession to orders and briefly summed up the life of the church at Netherwood. He spoke of the parish as dependent upon the Netherwood Hotel indirectly, for the church was built to be used in connection with the summer hotel at Netherwood. In referring to the struggles of the parish life, he spoke of Mr. Peck's accession to the parish two years ago, and said that at the time the parish was broken, "lying on its back, I might say, but, like that who lie on their backs, looking up." He spoke of the growth since Mr. Peck has been in charge, of the new parish house and improvements planned in future, which showed the zeal, earnestness and generosity of the parishioners.

Mr. Peck came to Netherwood two years ago in July, taking the place of Dr. Simpson, who resigned the parish at that time. He received confirmation from the late Bishop Littlejohn, of the Diocese of Long Island and was ordained to the deaconate by Bishop Brewster, of the Diocese of Connecticut in Holy Trinity church, Middletown, Conn., on June 5, 1904. He received his training in theology at the Berkeley Divinity School, Middletown, Conn., where he was graduated in 1904. He is a graduate of St. Stephen's College, of Annandale, N. Y.

TWO CHILDREN PREVENT A DISASTROUS WRECK

St. Paul Boy and Girl Discover Missing Rail and Former Flags Oncoming Train.

St. Paul.—As the Wisconsin Central flyer, passenger train No. 3, bound from Chicago to St. Paul, neared the Edgerton street crossing the other morning, running at 40 miles an hour, the engineer saw a little figure on the track a few rods ahead of the oncoming train. It at first appeared to be an animated red rag, but as the train drew nearer developed into a small boy with a maroon flag which he waved frantically.

With grinding brakes and the hiss of escaping steam the engine came to a stop, and in another second the engineer was making his way toward the youngster who was standing motionless on the track a few yards away.

"What's the matter, sonny?" he asked. "Got a washout on the line."

"No, sir," piped the boy as soon as he could regain his breath, "but there is a rail gone out of the track at the Edgerton street crossing. Me and my sister saw it, so we thought we would flag the train. She went down the track the other way."

As the youthful hero modestly concluded his story the conductor and several of the passengers hurried forward.

"This kid saved us from a nasty mix-up and perhaps something worse," was the engineer's explanation.

For the next ten minutes the boy was kept busy telling how he first noticed the defective rail and then how he had stopped the train. Nothing was too good for the young man, and the news agent's store of fruits and candies was transferred almost in a body to the hero.

"The men in the yards told me there would be no train coming from St. Paul till one had come the other way, she explained to her brother, "so I came back to help you; but I guess you don't need me now," she added regretfully.

While the section men were repairing the track the girl related the whole story to the trainmen and passengers.

"My name is Lucy Ambrosini," she began, "my brother's name is Johnny, and we live on Edgerton street. We were walking along the crossing this morning when we saw that a rail was out. Johnny said we ought to flag the train, so I ran home and got two flags that my brother got when he went to school. Johnny took one and went one way, while I walked down the track with the other.

"I am 14 years old," she replied to a question put by the conductor, "and my brother is 13."

ATTACKED BY A WILD CAT.

Commercial Traveler Has Lively Encounter with Animal in Pennsylvania.

Dunkirk, N. J.—Harvey J. Jackson, representing a New York wholesale clothing house, reached Dunkirk en route home, and during a short stop here told of a thrilling encounter which he had with a wildcat.

Mr. Jackson had been covering Irvineton, Pa., and that evening, having missed his train to Youngstown, a few miles away, started to drive to that village.

On the way he stopped a moment to cut some plug tobacco for his pipe, and as he was doing so became aware of an animal in the branches of a tree at the roadside. Mr. Jackson reached for his whip and struck at the beast. Like a flash the wildcat hurled itself into the buggy, and began to claw the driver's legs. Luckily, Mr. Jackson still had his long-bladed knife in his hands, and a few slashes killed the cat, but not until the victim had been severely scratched and bitten.

Mr. Jackson had the beast skinned and intends to have the skin mounted. It measures more than three and one-half feet from tip to tip.

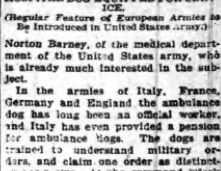
Girl Seizes Rabid Dog.

Cleveland, O.—After grappling with a dog supposed to be suffering with rabies Miss Louise Wetherholt, 17 years old, held down the animal while Patrolman Means shot it. The dog was the property of Mrs. Emma Bonner, with whom Miss Wetherholt lives. The animal had shown symptoms of hydrophobia and was locked in the cellar. Patrolman Means was called in and requested to shoot the dog. Miss Wetherholt opened the cellar door and the enraged animal, frothing at the mouth, leaped out and attacked her. To prevent the dog from biting her she bravely seized it around the neck and held it until the patrolman sent a bullet through its head.

AMBULANCE DOGS.

This Government to Use Canines in the Hospital Service of the Army.

San Francisco.—With a gallant record in the Red Cross service of the kaiser's army, "Fritz," a pretty black-and-white setter, has come to the United States to teach American dogs a new usefulness. "Fritz" was imported by Col. J. W. Hardie recently at the Presidio under waiting orders. Col. Hardie, with "Fritz" as a demonstration, hopes to awaken the medical department of Uncle Sam's army to the fact that it is several years behind the European armies in seeking the value of trained dogs for seeking out and carrying "first aid" to the wounded on the battle field. Col. Hardie will take the matter up with Lieut. Charles



HOSPITAL DOG EQUIPPED FOR SERVICE.

(Regular Feature of European Armies to Be Introduced in United States Army.)

Norton Barney, of the medical department of the United States army, who is already much interested in the subject.

In the armies of Italy, France, Germany and England the ambulance dog has long been an official worker, and Italy has even provided a pension for ambulance dogs. The dogs are trained to understand military orders, and claim one order as distinctly their own. At the command "Seek wounded!" the four-footed helpers are off over the battlefield to seek out those who have fallen. Attached to their collars or in pockets inside their Red Cross blankets they carry a packet of stimulant and bandages, and if the wounded can help himself this gives him strength and courage until the dog, by climbing on some bank or eminence and barking sharply, attracts the attention of a field surgeon or nurse. Every dog is taught to regard a prostrate man as wounded, and the intelligent animals lose no time in calling for help.

The German army has an especially fine lot of kennels, and the medical department takes great pride in its trained dogs.

The scenting powers of the ambulance dog supply a means of seeking out the wounded for which human shrewdness has no substitute. Many times the human searchers will pass within a few feet of an unconscious soldier hidden in a trench or brush, or fail to catch the faint cry of a badly wounded man.

A NEW NATIONAL PARK.

Revival of Movement for Setting Apart 2,000,000 Acres for Play Ground in Appalachians.

Washington.—There is reviving a movement to have the government establish a huge Appalachian forest reserve or national park to take in the most picturesque mountain section where Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina converge. About 2,000,000 acres of the most nearly virgin land east of the Mississippi river is involved.

The idea got into congress in 1902, and a bill passed the senate to appropriate $10,000,000 and was favorably reported by the house committee on agriculture, but the association was formed of which Rutherford P. Hayes, a son of the late president, was the head. It has been revived by persons who have just met at Asheville, N. C.

Whether $10,000,000 now would buy the tract is very doubtful. However, a great deal of that land can be bought for the money if it is appropriated. The idea is to give the perhaps 60,000,000 people who are within 48 hours' ride of the region a permanent playground and nature spot, such as the Yellowstone National park is to the west. The finest mountains and most ravishing scenery east of the Rockies is included in the heart of the great watershed, from which so many rivers flow.

It is largely for the purpose of saving these rivers that the project is urged. Commercialism is making terrible inroads upon the country, leveling its almost primeval timber, and scarring the mountain sides so that the surface soil is being swept away and floods and droughts alternately are the result.

The plan, which no doubt will be fought bitterly by the many great commercial interests that are boring their retreat in the dryad and fauna, does not involve dispossessing the small farmers who now inhabit the region, but is to limit them to cultivation of 200 acres each. The country is not very adaptable to agriculture. It is estimated that only about 50,000 people are settled in this country, mostly in villages.

CHASED BY WOLVES IN DENSE MICHIGAN WOODS

Desperate Flight of a Lone Night Traveler in Desolate Northern Mining Region.

Ontonagon, Mich.—Chased by a large pack of gray timber wolves, George Bigge had a thrilling experience in the wilds of Carp lake township. He was hauling a load of provisions from here to his home, at the old Nonesuch mine. The distance is 20 miles and the way lies through a practically unbroken forest.

Night overtook him before he had covered more than half the distance. He continued on his journey, and between nine and ten o'clock he was startled by the howling of wolves close at hand. He had no weapons with him. He urged his horse to a faster gait, but as the road is up a heavy grade, progress was slow at best. He had only gone a short distance further when he noticed 25 or 30 of the animals emerge from the brush into the roadway just behind him. On the front of his conveyance was a lantern with a reflector. Mr. Bigge seized this and turned the strong light upon the wolves. It frightened them and they slunk back into the shadows of the woods. But they soon became bolder and commenced closing in upon their prey.

Mr. Bigge realized that he was in a desperate plight. In the sleigh was a tin pail and a quantity of hay. Filling the pail with hay and taking it to the rear of the conveyance he applied a match. The flames towed the animals. The fire was kept burning brightly and at the same time the team was lashed and urged onward.

The wolves were kept in check for awhile, but they gradually came closer, advancing in a semi-circle in front of the sleigh. The supply of hay was giving out. Mr. Bigge, in desperation, tore open a box of canned goods and commenced hurling cans at them with some effect, checking their progress for the third time.

Just as he was about to give up the struggle, a small clearing was entered. The wolves dropped behind and the man hurried the jaded horses into one of the old mine buildings and, closing the doors securely, was safe. He passed the night there. The robes which were left in the sleigh were found in shreds in the morning and the snow round the building was packed solid by the animals in their endeavors to gain entrance.

FINDS HUSBAND IN COFFIN

Michigan Woman Identifies Corpse Which Was Being Buried Under Another Name.

Pueblo, Col.—Just after one son of James Dougherty had declared the corpse in the coffin was not that of his father, Mrs. Hattie Caine, a casual attendant at the funeral, stepped to look at the body, and immediately declared that the remains were those of her husband, James Lester Caine, of Battle Creek, Mich., who had been missing for some time.

The body was found in the Platte river, near Denver, several days before. Dougherty's friends were sure the body was his that they shipped it to Pueblo and the funeral was taking place when the denouement came.

Mrs. Dougherty immediately relinquished all claim and the body was sent to Battle Creek. Caine was a locomotive engineer. The police do not know whether he was murdered or committed suicide.

Wedding Trip on Nitro Wagon.

Parkersburg, Va.—Edward Kelley, an oil well shooter, Caine was married a few days ago to Marietta to Miss Nellie Severance, of Lowell, O., has just returned from a wedding journey which they took on a nitroglycerin wagon loaded with 32 quarts of the explosive. Kelley had to leave right after the wedding for Syracuse, O., to shoot a well. His bride insisted on a wedding journey, and compromised by driving with him 50 miles over rough roads with enough of the explosive on the wagon to blow them to atoms, but the groom drove carefully, and they got back alive.

In Bed with a Corpse.

Flint, Mich.—When Ben Burbank, of Clio, arose the other morning he thought his bedfellow, Charles T. Hinkley, was very quiet, and after he had dressed, Burbank tried to arouse him. Hinkley was cold in death, and when Burbank realized that he had been sleeping with a corpse he slid out of the room in a hurry. He had been drinking recently.

WHITRIDGE NAMED.

New Yorker Selected as Special Ambassador at King Alfonso's Wedding.

Washington.—President Roosevelt has just announced the appointment of Frederick W. Whitridge, of New York, as special ambassador to represent the United States at the wedding of the king of Spain.

Frederick Wallingford Whitridge is a lawyer with offices at No. 59 Wall street, and is also a director in several companies. He has a home at No. 16 East Eleventh street, where he has lived for nearly 25 years.

Mr. Whitridge has accepted the appointment as special ambassador. Although he has travelled extensively, he has never been to Spain.

"The one country in Europe, I might say," he remarked, "that I have not visited. I have often thought of seeing Spain, but other countries seemed to have a stronger attraction for the time."

Mr. Whitridge has a country estate in the Highlands of Scotland, where he and Mrs. Whitridge spend their summers. Mrs. Whitridge is a daughter of Matthew Arnold. Both are fond of outdoor exercise. Mr. Whitridge walks from 15 to 25 miles a day during the summer. His selection to be special ambassador from the country to the court of Spain at the wedding of the king is said to have been on the recommendation of Secretary Root, of the state department, although Mr. Whitridge is a personal friend of the president.

Mr. Whitridge was born in New Bedford, Mass., in 1858. He was graduated from Amherst college in 1874 and from Columbia Law school in 1878. In 1884 he married Miss Lucy Arnold. He is president of the Washington county railroad and a director of the Chicago Terminal Elevator company, the Cleveland, Akron & Columbus railway, Lake Erie & Western railroad, Niagara Development company and other corporations. He is also a member of the Knickerbocker, Century, Metropolitan, University and other clubs. He has not taken an active interest in local affairs in some years. He was one of the originators of the municipal civil service commission.

NEW GUNNERY STATION.

Germany Establishes Fine Shooting Grounds for Her Navy at Sonderburg.

Hamburg.—The removal of the German naval gunnery station to Sonderburg marks the second change of address of that institution within recent years. Original it was installed at Wilhelmshaven, but that place proved unsuitable owing to the tides rendering it difficult of access at certain hours. Moreover, the shooting ground was a long way off, and practice had often to be suspended owing to bad weather in the North sea. The next move was to Kiel, with its magnificent harbor, within easy reach of the open sea, whence the journey to the North sea—where shooting competitions are periodically held—could be made by the Kaiser Wilhelm canal. The increase of both naval and mercantile marine in Germany, however, has taxed the accommodation of that port, and Sonderburg is to be the future home of the German naval gunnery station, with its 2,000 men and six ships—the Mars, Carola, Olga, Freya, Uian and Hay. Sonderburg lies in an out-of-the-way corner on the south side of Alsen island, off the coast of Schleswig-Holstein. There as hereabouts is little frequented by shipping, so that there will be nothing to interfere with gunnery practice. Quarters will be provided on shore for the married warrant officers and men, and the ships will be stationed here the whole year round, only going to Kiel for repairs.

A CAGE FOR WOMEN

WHERE FEMININE VISITORS TO HOUSE OF COMMONS SIT.

Latest Effort to Have the Barrier Removed Proves Unavailing—Interesting History of How Gallery Came to Be Established.

London.—Despite the reforming zeal of the new house of commons it has been decided that its "grille"—the symbol of women's political inferiority—is to be retained. The grille is the name given to the brass netting which screens the occupants of the ladies' gallery from the view of the members. Henry Norman, an English M. P. who was educated at Harvard and has quite American notions of how women should be treated, asked the prime minister whether "it might not safely" be removed. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, who has a gift of pawky humor, played awhile with the question. Did it mean "safety for" or "safety from" the ladies.. he asked. But finally he specifically refused Mr. Norman's request to submit the question to the house on the ground that the many new members had not yet had an opportunity of studying the weighty matter practically.

There is no denying that in the matter of granting facilities for hearing its discussions parliament treats women scurvily. At the furthermost side of the chamber, high up, beyond what may be called the pit and the stalls of the members, back of the speaker's throne and the busy reporters, is a curious looking affair which resembles a set of stained glass windows. Then, again, it might be a bird cage, and it looks much like one. Really, it is where the honorable and gallant members keep their wives, sweethearts and feminine friends who come to hear them speak. It is the women's cage—a real cage and not a comfortable one at that. While all around is light; it is dark; despite the electric fan it is close and stuffy. It gives one the sort of headache quite different from the headaches of the opera or the academy, and unless one happens to be in the front row one can see little and hear less. It consists of two sections—two-thirds of it are given over to the members of the house; one-third, separated by a heavy partition from the other, is in the hands of the speaker's wife or, if he has not a wife, is in charge of the woman who acts as the head of his household.

Formerly men and women sat indiscriminately in the strangers' gallery of the house of commons. They were even admitted to the sacred floor of the house itself. How the women came to fall from their high estate is soon told. On February 4, 1778, a big debate had been foreshadowed, and strangers of both sexes attended in large numbers. Many women being unable to obtain admission, motion was made that the gallery be cleared of all male strangers. This excess of gallantry defeated its purpose. The men were cast forth, but Gov. Johnson, irritated that his men friends had been hustled out, insisted that all strangers must withdraw. The mandate was issued. For two hours, however, the women fought against its enforcement. Thereafter they were rigorously excluded.

The only concession made was to permit a limited number of them, not exceeding 14, to enter over the ceiling of the house and look down through the ventilation hole—an awkward position where they were nearly stifled by the foul air and the smoke of the candles by which the chamber was illuminated. A few, greatly daring, were not content with such a location. Thus Wraxall mentions that he saw the beautiful duchess of Gordon, habited as a man, sitting, among men in the strangers' gallery. And Mrs. Sheridan, when desirous of feasting on the distinguished husband's eloquence, also used to adopt the disguise of doublet and hose.

Thus matters stood till the whole place was burned down in 1834. Lord Brougham strenuously opposed making any provision for the accommodation of women in the new building. Their bird cage gallery, where they could see without being seen, was the result of a compromise between the chivalrous and the unchivalrous.

Japanese Honor.

U. Iwatani, a Japanese soldier on his way home from prison in Russia, committed suicide on receiving a letter from his father saying that his conduct in being taken alive would spoil the reputation of the Japanese army and cast odium on the names of the family and the villagers, and concluded by ordering him not to return home alive.

THREE CLAIM REWARD

Tugboatmen Say They Should Get Mrs. Kuenlen's $500 Reward.

PICKED UP GIRL'S BODY

Detective-Sergeant Fogarty Contends That His Work Was What the Mother Offered the Reward For.

Claim to the $500 reward offered for the recovery of Helen Kuenlen's body has been filed by three men, and a court decision will be necessary to settle the contest for the money. The three claimants are Detective Sergt. Daniel Fogarty, of the New York police force, who led to the identification of Capt. O'Loughlin, of the tug that picked up the body, and his first mate, Evans.

O'Loughlin and Evans put in a claim for the money as soon as the identity of the body was established. They picked it up 400 feet from shore at the foot of West Thirtieth street, and turned it over to the police. They acknowledge that there they had no idea the remains were those of Helen Kuenlen, but maintain that such knowledge was not necessary to entitle them to the reward. They contend that the reward was offered for the discovery of Helen Kuenlen, and that they discovered her beyond the shadow of a doubt.

That it was to Fogarty's detective ability alone that the body was identified is just as undoubted. He looked over the bodies at the morgue for the sole purpose of locating missing people, and his quickness of vision and skill as fitting printed descriptions to bodies enabled him to single out the Kuenlen girl's remains. But for his work, the body would have been buried in Potter's Field. Fogarty contends that the reward was offered by Mrs. Kuenlen for the return of the body to her, and that his services were the sort in Mrs. Kuenlen's mind when she made the reward offer.

The claims have been filed before the court in New York. The Legal Aid Society has taken up the tugboatmen's case, and Fogarty has retained counsel to safeguard his interests. The reward has been deposited at the First National Bank by Mrs. Kuenlen, in the name of the Chief of Police, and the latter will pay it to whoever the court awards it the day the decision is announced. O'Loughlin came to Plainfield a day or two after the identification to claim the reward from Mrs. Kuenlen personally, and he nearly got it. Mrs. Kuenlen was on the point of paying it over, when a friend advised her to deposit it in the bank in escrow, and let the claimants fight it out among themselves.

HISTORIC BURYING GROUND BADLY NEGLECTED

WASHINGTON VALLEY RESIDENTS ANXIOUS TO SEE IT TAKEN CARE OF.

Residents of Washington Valley have called the attention of the local G. A. R. to the neglected state of a small burying ground located on the bank of Watchung Lake on a part of the Spencer farm. In it are the remains of several men who fought and died in the Civil War and also those of residents who were prominent in this vicinity years ago. Those living nearby the place are anxious to see it properly protected, on condition because of its historical interest if for nothing else and it is possible that something will be done. At the present time the graves are overrun with grass and weeds and the headstones have fallen to the ground.

Among those buried in the place are two soldier boys, Simon Mirax, of Co. I, 5th N. J. Vols., and William Mirax, Co. I, 30th N. J. Vols., both of whom fell in battle. There are also the remains of Hon. William D. Steward, a former member of the Legislature, who died in 1898 and who is still remembered by Plainfielders, and Jacob and Abigail Smalley. According to the headstones the former was buried there in 1811 and the latter in 1836. There are many other stones bearing much older dates but time has eradicated the names.

In recent years, the spot has been neglected but for the annual visits of the G. A. R. to place flags on the graves of the Mirax brothers and it is thought by a concerted move a plan can be evolved to have it fixed up and kept in good condition.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

Published at

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1906.

MR. DRYDEN'S MISTAKE.

On the whole, John F. Dryden's appeal for support for re-election as the junior United States Senator from New Jersey is rather disappointing. Here and there in his much disjointed statement he well defines his position regarding National questions. But he mars the tone of the instrument by his evasiveness regarding internal affairs in New Jersey. Particularly is this the case when he says "As to my attitude concerning the questions which confront the people of this State, I do not know that an United States Senator, as such, can properly have any attitude towards questions of purely State character that do not come within the sphere of his action as a National legislator."

Within the ranks of the regular Republican organization leaders in New Jersey, it would be unreasonable to presume that there is any fair-minded man who would not say that it is highly important for a candidate for the United States Senate to state whether he believes the charges made by the so-called reformers are true or false. As one of the State's representatives at Washington, Mr. Dryden would stand close to the President, who would naturally look to him for information concerning what is best for the welfare of New Jersey. The President has appointments to make and some of these plums will fall to Jerseymen. It is to be expected, therefore, that he will consult Mr. Dryden about such matters at least.

A greater reason than this why Mr. Dryden should declare himself regarding the present condition of affairs in his own State is that, if elected, he will be presumed to be a type of the best Republicanism in New Jersey; the brand that the people of this State desire to have represent them; just as La Follette is for Wisconsin or Platt is for New York. But there is hardly any necessity for going into Mr. Dryden's views regarding his position in the connection for it is well known where he stands. As a matter of fact he does himself an injustice when he says that he does not believe it is his duty as an United States Senator, to define his position "as such." It is his position as a candidate and not as an United States Senator that is called into question and no one knows that better than he.

Taken altogether the statement issued by the Newarker is a disappointing one.

WORSHIPPING THE DOLLAR.

Interest in the death of Russell Sage lies in the fact that "he was one of the greatest business men the United States has ever produced," and not because of any good he did. If his life, which brought about the accumulation of a fortune variously *estimated at from eight to a hun*dred millions of dollars, was worth the living it will not be known until his will is read. Unlike Carnegie, Rockefeller, Morgan and other captains of finance, he was not given to aiding his fellowmen, at least so far as was ever recorded.

How he lived is best told in the following account for an obituary: "For breakfast he drank part of a cup of weak coffee and ate dried toast. His mid-day meal consisted of a couple of apples and some times a glass of milk. His dinner, at 6 usually, consisted of beef broth with vegetables, weak tea and double baked bread. Through the entire 69 years of his business life, he never spent a dollar in anything but the most careful manner, inherent frugality and a natural born business instinct being the secret of his success. In Wall street his career was marked entirely by his money lending enterprises."

Russell Sage was not the type of a man whose life is worth emulating, he was not the type of a man who is greatly needed in this era.

It is reported that the Bishops' bill has so effected the trade of Elizabeth saloons that one out of every six of the places will have to quit business. Several of the roadhouse proprietors it is added have already signified their intention of shutting up shop. Thus another good result of the new law is to be seen.

A newspaper in Elizabeth which is booming an "old home week" enterprise suggests that the first day of the carnival be known as "Plainfield Day." It is commendable to see the county seat get a stir on once in a while but it is hardly to be imagined that Plainfield would want to help make a noise in a graveyard.

George L. Record beat all records for dodging pointed questions in his reply to Rev. Mr. Nash, the Prohibition party leader. It was one of those acrobatic feats which has marked him as the champion political lightning change artist.

And we repeat—keep your eye on John W. Griggs when studying the Senatorial situation.

AMUSEMENTS.

New York City, July 19.—Despite the tragedy which marred the opening night upon the Madison Square Garden Roof, "Mamzelle Champagne" now is swinging along in a breezy, bubbling manner, and bids fair to keep that amusement resort packed to its utmost capacity during the summer. In fact, were it not for the large number of curiosity seeking visitors to the city, who throng the roof every night and insist upon the attendants pointing out the exact spot where the great Thaw-White tragedy occurred, it almost could be said that the incident has been forgotten by the members of the company. As is usually the case with a new show in New York city, a large number of changes have been made since the opening night. Harry Shope, who playing the principal comedy role, and who was upon the stage singing "I Could Love a Million Girls" at the time when the shooting on June 25th occurred, has been superceded by John Kearney, while a large portion of the dialogue, which is almost entirely lost, owing to a real open-air roof garden, like that on top of the Madison Square Garden, has been cut, and that which remains has been polished until the performance goes with a snap and vim suggestive of the title of the musical comedy. A number of new musical numbers have been added and as it now stands "Mamzelle Champagne" is a most entertaining summer night's diversion.

The history of Luna Park yields no record of such tremendous patronage as this season has produced. By day and by night fun-seeking crowds have filled the great, glittering area and enjoyed the delights of the multitudinous new shows and devices. "A Mountain Torrent," Frederic Thompson's latest conception, has found immediate and lasting favor, and boat loads of delighted patrons glide down the winding waterway in quick succession. Three hundred thousand gallons of sea water are pumped up the heights each minute and descend through scores of picturesque channels. "The Great Train Robbery," a thrilling spectacle of Western life, continues a great popular centre. In vivid realism it eclipses all previous Coney Island productions. New acts appear each week in the free open-air circus over the cool stretch of the lagoon, and the crowds find comfort and diversion in the starlit theatre which overlook the continuous show. "Shoot the Chutes," "The Old Mill," the "Miniature Railway," "A Trip to the Moon," the "Dragon's Gorge" and the free heifer-skelter are always centres of throngs, and the dance hall entertains by the thousand. Ten bands provide brazen melody throughout the Park.

The "Eruption of Vesuvius" in Pain's Fireworks' Amphitheatre, Manhattan, Beach, is now finally launched for its summer season and it promises to be a good voyage favored by popular breezes. While much has been said in former years about other eruptions, nothing has yet been written or spoken that can convey a full idea of the grandeur and realism of the most successful of Pain's masterpieces. Each performance improvements are noticeable. Take for instance the volcano itself; from the moment the scene opens those present are kept in mind of the danger which is always impending, for at intervals flashes of light come from the crater and constant rumblings from the centre of the mountain are heard. Mob scenes have sometimes been successfully introduced in plays, but nothing approaching terror in great calamity has been shown as it is in the scene *before the Cathedral just as Vesu*vius bursts forth to destroy the city. The feast of lanterns and the gaily decorated Neapolitan streets give a lighter side of the picture. There are shown the happy inhabitants full of holiday spirits. They join in the water pantomime, applaud the acrobats and divers and in every way enter fully into the spirit of revelry.

Ouida's "Moths" has never lost its potency as one of the most widely read books of the age. Its story appeals to every sentiment and to all classes. It has the heart-interest so essential to a popular novel's success, and despite the fact that it was written decades ago, its hold upon the public of every country is quite as tenacious now as at any time in the zenith of its first fame. As a play it has always classed as one of the strongest attractions ever offered. For usage by stock companies it can scarcely be excelled for the special reason that there are so many "good" parts in the piece. It isn't a "star" play or a one-part drama at all. The principals all have what they have to designate as fat parts, and this is an absolute assurance of a capital performance. In the uptown Keith & Proctor house next week one of the best productions of the summer season should be given in presenting "Moths," and it is certain that at no time has any stock organization ever equipped it better in the way of a cast. In the selection of the company and in the assignment of the parts, great stress has been laid to complete a perfect ensemble.

Nearly seven years ago, Wednesday evening, Nov. 29, 1899, the premiere of Klaw & Erlanger's great production of "Ben-Hur," the most successful drama ever presented on the English-speaking stage, occurred at the Broadway theatre. Monday evening, October 1, this same firm will present the companion drama to "Ben-Hur," Joseph I. C. Clarke's version of Gen. Lew Wallace's romantic novel, "The Prince of India," at this house for the first time in New York. "The Prince of India" was presented at the Colonial theatre in Chicago last February and made a tremendous sensation in that city and throughout the middle West. It proved to be not only a wonderfully powerful dramatic story, but at the same time the greatest production ever staged in America from the scenic standpoint. For two months *it played to the capacity of the Colo*nial theatre and subsequently was seen for one month in Pittsburg and Baltimore. In the latter cities its average receipts were $16,000 a week. *These figures give some con*ception of the number of people who saw the play in these places. The time of the action of "The Prince of India" is the year 1453, and the locale of the story is Constantinople and the Bosphorus just prior to, and during, the siege and fall of this historic city under the onslaught of the Turks, led by Mahommed, the Conqueror. Over this giant struggle between the Christians led by the last Constantine, and the Turks led by Mahommed, Gen. Wallace's story of the love is evidently the symbol of the universal desire of man for a resting place for the soul in a single and pure belief—hence a protest against the crimes committed in the course of religious conflict. Gen. Wallace's handling of the mystic and the human in this strage legendary being is masterly and Mr. Clarke very cleverly maintains the strength of this character in the play. The Wanderer gives the title both to the book and the play, for it is he who appears in these hours of impending doom as the marvelously rich and gifter Prince of India, possessing a most commanding influence on the events of the story.

The first International Reunion of Infant Incubator graduates are to greet their Alma Mater at the Infant Incubator Institution in Dreamland, Coney Island, on Sunday, July, 29. From the head physicians of the Infant Incubator Company which have become famous through the saving of life in the Infant Incubator Institutions located in all of the large cities of America where they have saved many lives which rarely had any chances in this world due to the scientific care and attention which the Infant received while in the care of those humanitarian institutions, which is recognized by the medical fraternity to have done more good for infantile life and which are the only institutions having the facilities for taking care of such infants in Europe as well as the United States, comes the interesting announcement of the grandest international reunion of Infant Incubator Graduates, to be held at that great amusement mecca on Sunday, July 29.

Charles J. Ross and Joseph Coyne, comedians, who act father and son respectively (if not respectfully) in "The Social Whirl," at the Casino, New York, once upon a time—more years ago than either cares to admit —were in the same company and played parts in which the relation to each other was just the opposite from what it is now. At that time the juvenile looking Coyne acted the father and the silver-haired Ross (his locks were dark at that time) played the son.

"It was in a piece called 'The Proper Caper,'" said Ross the other night *in the dressing room at the Ca*sino that he and Coyne share together.

"Cut the farce of that name," interjected Coyne, "but a musical comedy written by a man named C. N. Edwards. It was a 'lemon,' too."

"Yes," resumed Ross, "in reality it was anything but the 'proper caper' so far as playwrighting went. He stranded in Cincinnati—an awful fate—many miles from home, with no parents to guide us—alone in the snow. We had to do some great menial capering to know how to get back to Broadway."

"I would not have been so bad if we had not been put out of the hotel," broke in Coyne. "If that landlady had not been so mercenary everything would have been just lovely. Bue she actually wanted money, I've disliked that woman ever since."

"And she was the mother of one of our pretty ingenue actresses, too," continued Ross. "No, I won't mention her name. One who now so feelingly portrays the lovelorn daughter of the Capulets would not care to have those hash days recalled."

"Her maternal ancestor had no such thought for our feeling," said Coyne with asperity.

"Cease," commanded Ross, "these are not 'The Proper Caper' days. I am playing the father now. But say, those were the great days, though, weren't they?"

"Well, maybe," half acquiesced Coyne, "but I am very well satisfied at being on Broadway and in 'The Social Whirl.'"

TO HEAR THE 'NEW IDEA'

Somerset County Colbyites to Hold a Mass Meeting at Somerville.

NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

Colby, Record and Pagan to Speak — Situation in North Plainfield.

After a couple of attempts to get out a record, the Colbyites of Somerset county advertise a "new idea" mass meeting to take place at Somerville on Monday night, July 30. The meeting will be held in Somerset hall, in all probability, although no definite arrangements for it have been made. W. W. Howland, of North Plainfield, temporary chairman of the Good Government Republican League of Somerset county, will preside.

It is announced that State Senator Everett Colby, who is now at his summer home in the Thousand Islands, will be the principal speaker. Among the others to expound the "new idea" will be Mayor Mark Fagan, of Jersey City, who is now in the Adirondacks, and Corporation Counsel George L. Record, of Jersey City, Colbyite candidate for United States Senator.

In all probability permanent officers will be chosen by the league. Mr. Howland, it is said, will not be chairman, but just who will be is not reported. There is a likelihood that some one will be mentioned as the reformers candidate for the Assembly. Several names have been mentioned in this connection, but there has been no concerted effort to boom any particular "possibility."

No plans have been made for a mass meeting of the Colbyites in North Plainfield and from what can be learned it is unlikely that any will be held. The leaders in the movement appear to take it that the mass meeting held in this city last month answered the purpose and they have made converts from the ranks of the regulars.

MISS ANNA HIGGINS' FUNERAL IN CHARGE OF SOCIETY.

Children of Immaculate Virgin Turned Out to Service for Departed Member.

A touching tribute to the memory of Miss Anna Higgins, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Higgins, of West Front street, was the incident that the funeral was in charge of the girls' society of St. Mary's church, the Children of the Immaculate Virgin. About 125 of the young girl members of the society were at the church Monday for the celebration of requiem mass for their departed society member. Father Bogan acted as celebrant.

The music was by the children of the society, who took part in the requiem responses. Miss Mary R. Smith was at the organ. Miss Lannon, the contralto of the senior choir, sang the offertory solo, "Tie Jesu." The delegation of members of the society came to the service, which was at 9 o'clock, wore white dresses and white veils. The Misses Mary Caulfield, Florence Bulkley, Adeline Deady, Matilda Conroy, Margaret FitzGerald and Ruth McCarthy acted as pall-bearers and the flower girls were Miss Mary Burns and Miss Margaret Brown. The interment was in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery. Miss Higgins had been a member of the Children of the Immaculate Virgin for three years.

HERSH BROS., ELIZABETH GROCERS, TO BUILD HERE.

Marclay Estate Has Been Purchased and Plans Are Being Drawn for Building to Measure 50 by 140.

The house and lot at Central avenue and West Second street, which originally formed the Michael E. Marclay estate, but which has passed into the hands of Lemuel E. Hart and C. Frank French, has been sold to Hersh Brothers, wholesale produce dealers and grocers, of Elizabeth, and the work of erecting a building will be commenced there early in August.

The sale was concluded through the firm and Mr. Newman, their local manager, and the entire property, fifty-five feet on West Second street, and a hundred and fifty feet through to the railroad track, has been purchased. The old house has been sold separate from the property, and will be moved by a local contractor to a site across the brook next week. In speaking to a Daily Press reporter this morning regarding the plans of the firm, Mr. Newman said that Nathan Meyers, a Newark architect, has agreed on plans for a building 50 by 140 feet, and the plans will be completed by next week. Civil Engineer H. C. VanEmburgh is at work surveying the property for the architects. The new building is to be three stories in height and will be a brick structure. Work of construction will be pushed forward as rapidly as possible as soon as the contracts can be awarded.

The Elizabeth store of the firm will still be continued, and the local branch will serve as a general distributing depot for this district.

TIMBO CLUB OUTING ENJOYED BY 248

THIRD ANNUAL OUTING AT LAKE HOPATCONG A BIG SUCCESS.

If anyone failed to have a good time or get his money's worth on the third annual outing of the Timbo Social Club to Lake Hopatcong, Sunday, it was no fault of the committee. The weather was a trifle too warm but otherwise was perfect and not a thing that could add to the enjoyment of the guests had been left undone. There were just 248 boarded the club's special cars attached to the regular excursion train, more than twice as many as were carried last year, and they were unanimous in their verdict that the junket was the most successful the Timboites have yet conducted.

The run to the lake was made without incident, except that a half hour's delay was caused by excursions from Allentown and Catasauqua, Pa., getting in ahead of the Plainfielders on the High Bridge branch. The Timboites left the cars at Minisink and headed by the Plainfield band, marched to the American House where a full course dinner was in readiness to be served. The diners had hardly become comfortably settled in their seats when they were consternated by the receipt of the following message from Plainfield:

"Tell Tim the store caught fire and burned down. Will meet him at the train and give particulars. (Signed) Neighbor." Though the majority of the excursioners saw the joke, the victim was uneasy until he had called Plainfield Fire Headquarters on the 'phone and learned that everything was intact on North avenue.

After the dinner, the guests assembled on the hotel porch where an hour's musical programme was furnished by the Plainfield Band. This organization numbered sixteen men with James De Mee as leader and "delivered the goods." All the latest song successes were introduced and the concert was also enjoyed by hundreds of cottagers and lake visitors. The start for home was made at 6:45 and Plainfield was reached at 8:30.

The committee which arranged the outing and to which credit is due for its complete success was composed of Henry Wierengs, chairman; Frank Schuck, George Voehl, William Doud and Edward Bown. President Gaffney had been to it that the railroad furnished comfortable cars and with the other club officers assisted in looking out for everybody.

FOR THE TOTS' SAKE.

Lawn Party Held by Epworth League of Monroe Ave. Church.

For the benefit of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home and the King's Daughters' Baby Camp, the Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church held a most successful lawn party Friday night. The lawn of the church was prettily decorated with lanterns.

The committee in charge was made up of W. M. McGee, George Fisher, Jr., John W. Daub, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Smith, Miss Emily Haff, Miss Olla Cline, Miss Enid Manning, George Beekman. The cake and cream tables were under the charge of Mrs. N. M. Smith, Harry Gardner, and the Misses Minnie Gunzelman, Mary Matthews, Ethel and Stella Rink.

New Exit At Plainfield Theatre.

Carpenters are engaged at the New *Plainfield theatre making an emer*gency exit from the theatre to the street through the shop next to the theatre. This exit will form a means of ventilating the building as well. The foyer of the theatre is being painted an ochre yellow, red and blue, and the decorations inside are being touched up in a soft red.

Colbyites' Official Title.

At a meeting at Newark on Saturday the Colbyites leaders decided upon the Republican State League for Equal Taxation as their official title.

MEMORIAL PIPE ORGAN GIVEN BY MRS. H. F. EGE

INSTRUMENT COSTING $2.500 TO BE INSTALLED IN NEW EDIFICE.

Through the generosity of Mrs. H. F. Ege, of Truell Isln, a fine pipe organ at the chancel of the church accompaniment at the services of Warren chapel's congregation when its handsome new edifice is completed. The instrument will cost $2,500 and will be of the best American make. It is intended as a memorial to Mrs. Talmadge, a sister of the donor who died some time ago.

Mrs. Ege has taken much interest in Warren chapel and when it was decided to erect a new edifice at the corner of Watchung and Fairview avenues, she offered the session of the Crescent Avenue church, which founded the chapel, a Tiffany window as a memorial. Friends persuaded her, however, that a pipe organ would be a more suitable gift and she at once authorized a member of the session to offer the gift in her behalf.

Warren will be the first of the three chapels of Crescent Avenue church to have a pipe organ and the members of the congregation are much elated over the fact. Their new edifice, for which they have struggled for so long, will also be the finest of the trio of chapels.

EVANGELIST F. H. JACOBS LED MEETING AT NETHERWOOD.

Made Afternoon's Address and Sang at Sunday Services at Miss Curry's Camp.

Conducted by Evangelist F. H. Jacobs, of Elizabeth, the afternoon meeting at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home proved a great success Sunday afternoon. Mr. Jacobs was in charge of the service, and aside from making the address of the afternoon, led the song service and rendered several vocal selections. The meeting was one of song and testimony, and of evangelistic character, Mr. Jacobs relating to the children the story of a young lad and his influence upon an entire town in Virginia, where he left to the true life many characters, who, through use of strong drink, and by living, had sunk to the lowest moral depth.

In connection with the afternoon's address, George Craft, also of Elizabeth, gave a talk and address upon his absolute reform from the downward life of a drunkard. Craft told in a vivid and realistic way of how through the use of strong drink, he fell to the lowest depths of life, and was almost constantly in prison. He spoke of his conversion as he had received from a church worker, who had led him to Christ, and of the change that had come over him from that day. He is at present active in the religious field and a co-worker with Mr. Jacobs.

Singing was a feature of the service. With Mr. Jacobs in charge, the children sang many of the familiar gospel hymns, and Mr. Jacobs also sang "The Pilot" and "He Lifted Me." The prayer was offered by Dean Erskine M. Rodman, rector-emeritus of Grace church. Miss May Clark, organist at the Park Avenue Baptist church, was at the melodian, and Mr. Jacobs was assisted by a volunteer choir from the local church societies.

Realty Co. Works Out of Town.

Dudley Thompson, who has been especially active in the local real estate field as president of the Plainfield Realty Co., has extended the territory controlled by the company. Land has been acquired at Gloversville, N. Y., and at Oyster Bay, L. I., and dwelling house lots have been laid off. F. A. Dunham, the local surveyor, has been in charge of much of the work. The Gloversville property will be disposed of at auction on Thursday.

FATHER AND CHILD VICTIMS OF TRAGIC DROWNING

Robert L. Thomae Goes to His Death At Atlantic City in Futile Effort to Save Daughter.

MEN CURSE THE GUARDS

Life-Savers Helpless Or Inept, Can Do Nothing To Help Heroic Father As He Struggles Before Frantic Crowd.

Robert L. Thomae and his thirteen-year-old daughter, Helen, of Scotch Plains, were the victims of the most tragic drowning, Saturday afternoon, that Atlantic City has witnessed in years. While men cursed at inept and helpless life guards and women paled and wept with heart-wrenching pity, Thomae, battling heroically for the life of his child, went down with her to death.

More than 200 residents of fashionable Chelsea saw the heroic struggle of the father, saw the velvet-coated sero-comic lifeguard, "Cap" Clark, bait at the first line of breakers, and Guard Morales beaten to semi-consciousness by the pounding of a criss-cross sea, and then witnessed a humble hero, William A. Lux, a cook, do gallant but unavailing battle for the lives of the doomed persons.

Mr. Thomae, his daughter and twelve-year-old Howard Washington entered the surf at half-past 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon about a square above Albany avenue, where Clark was stationed Saturday. Clark's post is directly before the home of Councilman William Riddle, and the appointment was viewed by many as one of Mayor Stoy's jokes.

The father was about fifty feet distant from his daughter and young Washington, when a huge wave, which broke in V shape, swept Helen Thomae from her feet, twisted her over and beneath its crest and carried her out beyond her depth.

"Papa, save me," she screamed, and the appeal died away in a shriek as she sank for the second time. Howard Washington added his scream to that of the girl, and instantly panic seized all the bathers within hearing except the father.

His powerful frame leaped through the pounding surf. He did not take time to dive through the breakers, but rushed through them. When he reached deep water he struck out with mighty strokes to the place where the brown hair of his child showed above the water.

Breathless, he reached down and caught up her almost senseless body. As he did so, she clutched him convulsively about the neck. Then the tremendous force which had carried him through the struggle with the waves died out and he sank. As he came up for the first time, it was seen that the girl was lying in his arms apparently unconscious.

Thomae was trying to swim on his back and trying to sustain the girl's head above the water. His efforts were feeble, and feeling his strength ebbing, he lifted his voice in a terrifying shout that brought to the beach men and women who had been out of sight of the tragedy. The death cry continued at intervals for several minutes, while horrified onlookers ran frantically in search of guards.

They found Charles Clark, better known as "Cap," near the newly-established tented city where about fifty families make their summer homes. Clark is more than sixty years old.

With a wobbling run, dragging a buoy by its rope through the sand, he reached the scene five minutes after the first alarm. Guard Morales, coming from Boston avenue several squares further away, was there before him, and was trying to get through the breakers. Four times he tried and then lay down exhausted.

Clark walked to the first line of breakers and stopped short, looking helplessly first out to sea and then back to the crowd that watched the struggle of Thomae.

As Clark gaped and was cursed for his inaction, a figure in soiled overalls and a cotton undershirt came tearing past the breakers into the surf. It was the cook from the tented city, Lux. He seized the buoy from Clark's nerveless hand as he swept by, and called to the guard to play out the rope.

Lux was well on his way toward the feebly struggling Thomae, when, by some mischance, the buoy was pulled from his hands and he was at the mercy of the cross-currents and the chopping sea. He strove manfully for a time to reach the expiring father, but, realizing that he was making no progress, and that his own strength was failing fast, he turned toward the shore. The rope of the buoy became entangled about his legs, and, for a time, it was feared that he, too, would be drowned. He was taken from the surf exhausted.

In the meantime the alarm had spread up to Chelsea avenue, where the crew of the life boat was notified. Guards Wills and Lefano manned the boat. They were obliged to row against an ebb tide and a heavy wind which retarded them seriously. When they reached Thomae, he was floating face downward. The girl could not be seen.

Thomae was taken ashore. Beach Surgeon Beckwith and a Dr. Gigson, who was staying at a tented city, worked for more than an hour to revive him. Once or twice he breathed faintly, but in the end the breath fluttered away.

The body of the daughter for whom he had died was washed ashore about 7 o'clock at night.

Dr. Beckwith, who has charge of the life guards and the life-saving equipment along the beach, said Saturday night that the sea Saturday was the worst for bathing within his memory. He saw three cross-currents running with a current which had all manner of zigzag twists, and was accompanied by a heavy undertow.

Two more drownings occurred at about the same time, and the afternoon will be remembered as one of the tragic in the history of the seaside city.

An investigation of the conduct of the guards near Albany avenue when the Thomaes were lost will be commenced today. Residents are insisting that all the guards shall be vigorous young men, who shall be subjected to rigid swimming tests before their appointment.

The Thomae family went to Atlantic City Saturday, from Riverside, a suburb of Philadelphia, to spend the day. Mrs. Thomae and another daughter, Rose, were with the ill-fated father and child. Mr. Thomae moved the family to Riverside three weeks ago, a short time after he was transferred by the Victor Talking Machine Company, with which he was connected, from New York to the Philadelphia office.

The Thomaes had a handsome home, "Hawksnest," in Washington Valley. It was leased when they moved to Riverside. Mr. Thomae was well known in Fanwood and Scotch Plains, and the story of his, and his daughter's, drowning was deeply felt in both communities. Mr. Thomae was much interested in the Public Library of Fanwood, and gave it great support.

Rose Thomae is the only surviving child. A brother, George Thomae, is in the Government marine service.

Mr. Thomae was a member of Plainfield Lodge, B. P. O. E. He is the second member to come to a tragic end within six months. Harry Taylor shot himself in Yonkers in the spring.

The bodies of father and child were brought to this city yesterday. They will be buried tomorrow morning in Scotch Plains cemetery, after services at the home of Mrs. James B. Carter, of Fanwood.

LAKE HOPATCONG SOON TO HAVE A 'CAMP COLBY'

PARTY OF PLAINFIELDERS TO PITCH TENTS THERE NEXT WEEK.

The camping colony at Lake Hopatcong will be invaded next week by a party from this city that will undoubtedly become one of the most popular around the water sheet. It will be headed by City Judge William N. Runyon and will include James Dodd, John H. Cose, B. C. Firstbrook, Thomas M. Muir, Philip Jahn, Elmer D. Cutting, John P. Hall, George Cose and Matthew D. Sweeney, the last named of New York.

A site has been secured on Halsey Island, directly across from Nolan's Point, and the paraphernalia will be shipped there Saturday. It will be known as "Camp Colby" and there is a possibility that some of the time may be devoted to inculcating the principles of the "New Idea" into the young voters in that section of Morris county.

Most of the members of the party have had previous experience in camping at the lake and they have arranged a regular daily schedule to be followed out. Edward Washington, who was Grand Exalted Ruler of the Kitchen for the Hope Y. M. A. campers three years ago, has been engaged to make it his business that no one goes hungry and from his past record no one doubts but what he will fill the bill. Musical instruments will be taken along and evening song fests will be nightly events.

of the commissioners seemed to be that something be done about borough disposals beds and that it be done at once. New cess pools are constantly being dug in North Plainfield, and instances were cited where well water had become contaminated. It is expected that this committee of seven will get to work soon after their appointment and the long period of inaction will be concluded. The subcommittee is to report to the council, and the Mayor's committee is privileged to be present at the meeting when this report is made.

Offers His Record as Reason Why He Should be Re-Elected U. S. Senator.

HARPS ON THE TARIFF

Evades Internal Political Troubles —Says He's a Conservative Man.

Having completed his senatorial duties, and with time at his disposal for carefully considering the subject, United States Senator John F. Dryden has yielded to the wishes of his personal friends and political supporters and declared himself in regard to his campaign for re-election by the next legislature. Senator Dryden, in his statement, says:

"The problem seems to me to be a very plain and simple one. It is whether the people and the Legislature of New Jersey think they made a mistake in electing me to fill the unexpired term of the late General Sewell. If not, if I have met their reasonable expectation and have served them acceptably, approved political usage suggests my re-election. This personal phase of the matter is one, of course, into which I cannot enter.

"The people of New Jersey must examine the record and judge for themselves. I can only say that their examination of that record is invited without misgiving. It is open before the people and cannot be misrepresented. But this I may, at least, proudly claim that the record made by Congress during the period that I have served in the Senate will bear comparison with that of any similar period in the history of the country. The achievements of the recent session were more notable than any since the Civil War and Reconstruction periods.

"These triumphs involved tremendous struggles with enormous adverse interests. The railroad rate bill, the inter-ocean canal bill, the pure food legislation, the alcohol bill and several other great enactments were only won after long and doubtful struggles with vast corporate powers.

"The chief fear was that the Senate would block these proposed reforms. It was in many quarters plainly intimated that this 'American House of Lords,' or 'Millionaires' Club,' as it has various been termed, was not truly representative of the great body of the people against powerful financial and business monopoly. But these misgivings have been shown to be groundless. They were largely founded upon the calumious clamor that has lately filled the current newspaper and magazine world with its din, teaching the dismal doctrine that everything in American business and political life is unworthy and unclean."

The Senator goes on to pay a high tribute to the personality of his colleague in the upper branch of Congress and to the latter's record.

"I have stood for and supported by voice and vote every great measure that adorns the matchless record of the recent session. As to the future I have no rash promises to make of being certain to bring an early millennium in either politics or business. My temperment and instincts are towards conservatism and while I fully realize the characteristic evils of our times, I am disposed, while seeking a remedy for them, to grant a trial to the ancient and time-honored business and political foundations. It seems to me that the mental attitude of President Roosevelt toward public questions, of our day is a fine blending of a broad and courageous progressiveness with a wise and steady conservatism that is altogether admirable.

"As to my attitude concerning the questions which confront the people of this state, I do not know that a United States Senator, as such, can properly have any attitude towards questions of purely state character that do not come within the sphere of his action as a national legislator; but this I can say without reservation, that the work of the last Legislature in point of important and progressive legislation is without precedent in the history of the State. These enactments place New Jersey in the van among the State of the Union for wise and courageous solution of great questions of corporate taxation and corporate franchises.

Strong for High Tariff.

After showing the fallacy of the charge made by the Democrats and reformers that the Republican party is in the grasp of corporations, the Senator concludes by stating his position on national issues. He says:

"There is one great question of supreme importance that is likely to be the dominating issue in this year's elections in all parts of the country. I refer to the American policy of protection to home industry. The enemies of the system are everywhere preparing to make an attack upon it. It is marvelous how soon the lessons of recent calamities are forgotten by the people. It is only a little more than a decade ago that this country was writhing in the pangs of distress and universal business prostration, brought upon by the "tariff for revenue" act of the Cleveland administration. The protective tariff law of the McKinley administration cured all these evils as if by magic. What madness it would be to abandon this policy and go back to the policy of disaster! And yet this is what reckless and unscrupulous politicians, willing to ride into power over the ruins of our industries, are proposing. They hope to capture the House of Representatives and to make gains in the Senate and thus pave the way for the destruction of our protective fabric.

"I am inexorably opposed to any revision of the tariff in the direction of free trade. I believe that such revision would again and at once bring measureless disaster upon industry and business. New Jersey, with its six hundred millions of annual industrial products, is deeply interested in this question and whether I am elected or not, I fervently trust this State will not suffer the dangerous mischance of being represented by any one whose absolute and high principled devotion to the protective principle is open to the slightest doubt or question."

PLAINFIELD PLAYERS STILL WIN AT TENNIS

F. W. GODDARD AND HARRY CARTER VICTORIOUS IN SATURDAY'S PLAY.

Despite showery weather and heavy courts at the Westfield Club, the match play in the open club championship tennis tournament began two weeks ago brought a number of the pairs up to matches in the fourth round. A single local pair, Fred W. Goddard and Harry Carter, of the Plainfield Country Club, are still in the match play for the title, and will play their match in the semi-final round on Saturday. In the play in the second round, they trimmed R. D. Miller and partner, of Roselle Carbon, in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3, and also won from E. E. Ferriss and L. H. Ferriss, of the Elizabeth Town and Country Club, 6-2, 6-2. This puts them up against M. W. Ely and N. S. Schroeder, of the Crescent A. Co., in their match in the semi-finals.

The other local team did not have such luck, and the two other players from the Country Club were forced down and out in their match in the third round. These were J. B. Close and C. McKenzie, whom M. S. Charlock and H. McK. Glazebrook, the crack team of the Elizabeth Town and County Club, defeated 6-1, 6-1. The tournament will probably be concluded on Saturday. There were 32 pairs entered, representing all the tennis clubs in the East Jersey Lawn Tennis League. The Westfield Club has offered title cups to the winning team and the pair of runners up will also receive cups.

The matches played Saturday were as follows:

Second round—C. Miller and B. Berry, Ilderan Outing Club, defeated Ted Coolman and partner, Westfield Club, by default; E. S. H. Pendergast and William B. Cragin, Jr., Elizabeth Town and Country Club, defeated A. S. Wrenn and C. Wrenn, Westfield Club, 6-1, 7-5; M. S. Charlock and H. McK. Glazebrook, Elizabeth Town and Country Club, defeated H. M. Bartlett and F. W. McAnneny, Fanwood Club, 6-0, 6-2; J. B. Close and C. McKenzie, Plainfield Country Club, defeated E. Alpers and F. A. Taggart, Westfield Club, 6-2, 6-3; F. W. Goddard and H. Carter, Plainfield Country Club, defeated K. D. Miller and partner, Roselle Casino, 6-3, 6-3; M. W. Ely and N. S. Schroeder, Crescent Athletic Club, defeated W. H. Connell and Dr. William Rosenbaum, New York Lawn Tennis Club, 6-4, 6-4; Thomas Wrenn and C. Thomas, Cranford Casino, defeated W. F. Anderson and H. Merrihew, Westfield Club, 6-0, 6-4.

Third round—C. Miller and B. Berry, Ilderan Outing Club, defeated E. S. H. Pendergast and William B. Cragin, Jr., Elizabeth Town and Country Club, 6-4, 6-3; M. S. Charlock and H. McK. Glazebrook, Elizabeth Town and Country Club, defeated J. B. Close and C. McKenzie, Plainfield Country Club, 6-4, 6-4; F. W. Goddard and H. Carter, Plainfield Country Club, defeated E. E. Ferriss and L. H. Ferriss, Elizabeth Town and Country Club, 6-2, 6-2; M. W. Ely and N. S. Schroeder, Crescent Athletic Club, defeated Thomas Wrenn and C. Thomas, Cranford Casino, 6-4, 6-4.

TWO HOUSES IN BOROUGH DAMAGED BY LIGHTNING.

Saturday's Storm Wrecked Chimneys In Mayor Smalley's and Shepherd's Homes.

Though Saturday's heavy thunder shower blew plenty of rain this side of town, the principal damage of the storm was done in the borough, where two houses were struck by lightning during the shower just before noon. An especially vivid flash of lightning near the conclusion of the storm shattered the chimney on Mayor Newton B. Smalley's home on Craig place. The lightning struck the chimney, scattering the bricks and ripping off a piece of the cornice on its ways to the ground. There was no fire, but Mrs. David King, sisted of the Mayor, was severely shocked.

One of the houses belonging to William Smalley, father of the Mayor, was also damaged by lightning during the storm. The house is occupied by B. H. Shepherd, and is on Somerset place. The chimney was struck and badly damaged. There was no fire, and none in the house was shocked.

ROBT. ABBOTT CHAMPION

Defeats F. C. Talmadge in Final Play on the Plainfield Country Club Links.

RETURNS LOW SCORE 74

Talmadge Wins a Leg on 'Semi-Scratch Cup—Stuart H. Patterson Captures Jane Cup.

While the heavy shower and threatening weather interfered with every other sport on Saturday, the schedule programme of golf was played at the Plainfield Country Club. There was an unusual crowd of enthisiasts out, although many did not post their scores. The chief attraction for the day was the final play for the club championship between Robert Abbott and Frank C. Talmadge. In view of the low scoring record made on the course by Abbott last week, when he returned a 67 for 18 holes, his many friends predicted that he would win the championship. However, Talmadge made a good fight and followed his opponent very close throughout the match. Abbott won out, beating Talmadge 5 up and 3 to play. His hole score was 74, showing that he is at the top of his game. Talmadge won a leg on the semi-scratch cup with a score of 82.

In the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup, Charles A. Stover won first honors with a net score of 80, while F. C. Talmadge and Stuart H. Patterson divided the remaining points, each returning a net score of 81. The scores:

The leading scores returned for the July cup were as follows:

Charles A. Stover, 90, 10-80; Frank C. Talmadge, 93, 1-81; Stuart H. Patterson, 90, 9-81; W. Lester Glenney, 86, plus 2-88; W. B. Tyler, 112, 15-97.

In the finals for the Jane cup, Stuart H. Patterson was the winner, beating L. A. Chase 3 up and 2 to play.

While there were a number of players on the Park Golf Club course, Saturday afternoon, no one posted their score. This was due to the rain-soaked condition of the course, which made it impossible to play the game well. Certain parts of the course were not much better than minature lakes, but the contestants continued to play although they did not post.

MARRIED OVER A YEAR.

Miss Willietta C. K. Naylor Surprises Friends With Wedding Announcement.

To mark the announcement of their daughter's marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Naylor, of West Dunellen, held a reception at their home Saturday night. The bride, who was Willietta C. K. Naylor, married William P. Sussen, of New York, on May 20, 1905, at the Little Church Around the Corner, New York. The couple guarded their marriage as a close secret, and the announcement came as a complete surprise to their friends.

The reception was a brilliant affair. Mrs. Robert Naylor, of this city, and Miss Mary Naylor, sister of the bride, received. Guests were present from Somerville, Plainfield, New Brunswick, Newark and New York.

The house was prettily decorated with ferns and cut flowers. The bride was gowned in light blue silk and silk chiffon.

The bride was a nurse in the Somerville hospital, and is well known in that town as well as in this city. Mr. and Mrs. Sussen will make their home at 814 Webster place.

Farm Hand Departs Suddenly.

A farm hand who had been employed by Mrs. M. M. Van Court, of Oak Tree, left his daytime work suddenly late Saturday night. With him went a double barrelled gun, a revolver, a coat and a small sum of money, which he hastily gathered up. Mrs. VanCourt heard him moving about the house but thought that he was indisposed and was looking for a tonic. In his hurry he overlooked a gold watch and several other valuable articles. The fellow had been employed by Mrs. VanCourt only two weeks.

OLD HOUSE SOLD.

Maple Cottage Was One of First Structures on East Second St.

When the "Maple Cottage" was purchased by C. M. Rayner recently, one of the oldest houses in the city changed handh for the first time in seventy years.

The house, 221 East Second street, was built in 1836 by Jacob Irving. There was but one other house at that time on the street, the street not being cut through. Joseph Webster erected another house adjoining, in 1834, at present occupied by Miss Catherine R. Webster, his granddaughter. Mr. Irving lived in his house fifty-one years; he died in 1886, his wife a year later.

Mrs. A. E. Bushnell, his daughter, the surviving heir, remodeled the house and gave it the name of "Maple Cottage." The property was recently sold to Mrs. Louise Scot, who transferred it to Mr. Raybert, who will reside there and erect a plumbing shop in the rear of the lot.

Fire and Life INSURANCE AGENT OFFICE,

PROBE MUTUAL BENEFIT

Policyholders Have Rights in Assets Says President Frelinghuysen.

CAUSE OF TROUBLE

Deferred Dividends Not Right—Changes Likely to Be Recommended.

President Frederick Frelinghuysen, of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, was the principal witness in Newark Friday before the New Jersey Senate committee investigating the insurance companies. The committee also examined Amzi Dodd, former President of the Mutual Benefit, and President U. H. McCarter, of the Fidelity Trust Company, and completed its hearings. It will rest until a report from David P. Fackler, actuary of the State Department of Banking and Insurance, is received, and will meet again at the call of Chairman Hilleary. Mr. Fackler, it is expected, will recommend changes in the insurance laws.

It is thought that the committee will prepare several amendments of the present laws, one of which will repeal the act of 1904 enabling insurance companies to deal in industrial securities, another denying accurately the rights of policy-holders in the assets of the company, and possibly an act limiting the business of companies.

Mr. Frelinghuysen expressed on the stand the belief that, whether in mutual or stock companies, the policy-holders have positive rights in the assets of the company. This was in direct opposition to the position taken by United States Senator John F. Dryden, who, explaining the making of campaign contributions, declared that the policy-holders had any interest in those transactions.

Q. Has your company ever paid political contributions? A. Not one dollar, to my knowledge, nationay, State or local.

This was conrmed later by former President Dodd.

Q. What amounts have you paid to influence legislation? A. During the last ten years it has cost the company for this purpose $707.93, ranging from $21 in California to $400 in Mississippi. All of this was our proportionate share of expenses of the National Life Association looking after legislation in those States.

Q. Have you had any expenses of that kind in New Jersey? A. Not one dollar.

How to Correct Abuses.

"Have you any suggestions to offer relatives to an improvement in existing insurance conditions, or a change that might prevent a recurrence of the abuses recently disclosed?" asked Mr. Corbin.

"I have formed an opinion which, without being presumptuous, I think would cure most of the evils complained of: First, a strict adherence to the rule of paying all dividends annually; second, a specific statement to each policy-holder of the value of his holdings, as represented by his share of the earnings, annual and all other matters affecting the company; third, a full report of all purchases and sales, as required by one law growing out of the Armstrong investigation; fourth, an absolute prohibition of the participation of officers of the company in the profits of its investments or other financial transactions."

Q. How long has your company been in existence? A. Sixty-one years.

Q. What were your assets, according to your last report? A. In round numbers, $97,773,000.

Q. Have they increased since then? A. About $2,500,000.

Q. Making your total of about $100,000,000; and what amount of insurance have you outstanding? A. About $400,000,000.

Q. What were your receipts last year? A. $19,250,265.

Q. And your expenses? A. Death claims, annuities, dividends, $10,302,022; other expenses, including $450,000 for taxes, $2,942,000.

Q. What salary do your receive as president? A. Twenty-five thousand dollars a year. The first vice president receives $14,000 and the second vice president $12,000 a year.

Compensation of Agents.

"What compensation do your agents receive?"

"Forty per cent. of the first year's premiums and 10 per cent. of renewals for nine years. After that 4 per cent. is allowed for collections when made by the agent.

Q. Should the agent die does this allowance cease? A. Not if he dies in our service. In that event it would be paid to his estate.

Is not the system of agencies rather an expensive one? A. I do not think so.

Q. Do your stockholders have a vote in the affairs of your company? A. They do.

Q. About how many policy-holders are represented at your annual election? A. About 2,000 or 3,000, of which 100 are voted in person by officers and employes, and the rest by proxy.

Q. Do you have any friction at your meetings? A. Never heard of any.

Q. Your expenses are lower than some companies, and your premium rates lower, according to the Armstrong report, as stated by President Catlock, of the Washington Life; is that so? A. We have that reputation.

Q. Is that because you are a mutual company? A. Not necessarily, as all companies are more or less mutual.

Q. Have you any deferred dividends? A. We never had, as we always consider that contrary to the very spirit of life insurance.

Q. Is that not the real cause of all the recent troubles of life insurance affairs? A. I think it is largely due to that cause. We have always maintained that the earnings belong to the policy-holders, and should be paid as earned. The deferred dividend has an element of gambling or chance about it which makes it attractive to some, but it is costly on account of excessive commissions.

Opposed to Federal Control.

The witness said he would, if necessary, bar political contributions. He was of the belief that the State Department already exercised adequate control over insurance companies. He was opposed, he said, to Federal supervision, because, as the States will still have the right of supervision, he believed a conflict of authority would result. He also was opposed to the wholesale abolition of policies as unnecessary and liable to result in serious complications because of a conflict of State authority.

Former President Dodd obtained the tontine policy as illegal and immoral. He pronounced against deferred dividends and endorsed the remedy for existing evils was in the widest publicity in insurance affairs.

President McCarter, of the Fidelity Trust Company, was recalled to give his version of the promoting of the South Jersey Electric Company, previously explained by Col. Anthony R. Kuser. Mr. McCarter said the Prudential did not receive any stock bonus for its purchase through the Fidelity of $2,000,000 of the bonds of the South Jersey. The Fidelity did not receive any bonus either, he said, except that after the formation of the company in a purchase made outside of the underlying companies the Fidelity received $80,000 in stock.

The witness was quizzed by Senator Minturn as to the campaign contributions made by the Fidelity, either for itself or clients. He admitted that in 1900 the Fidelity contributed $5,000 to the Republican National Committee to help defeat Bryan. It gave nothing in 1904. When asked if the company had contributed locally or to the State campaigns, Mr. McCarter recalled that within the last five years two local contributions of a political nature had been made by the company. He was rather hazy as to the particulars, but remembered that on two occasions $2,000 or $2,000 had been given to somebody for political purposes. He could not recall whether it was to the Republican or Democratic organization or to individuals, nor could he tell for what offices the candidates were running.

FIRST CLASS CONCERT DREW CROWDS FRIDAY NIGHT.

LaVere's Band Gave Good Program Before 4,000 People at Concert Park.

Filling the grandstand and standing crowded around the band stand, 4,000 people listened to a first class musical program of instrumental and vocal selections by LaVere's band and three soloists at Concert Park Friday evening. The night was absolutely breezeless, yet the crowd stayed, with occasional excursions of promenading between the numbers, until the final number had been concluded, and showed strong appreciation of the entire day.

The biggest hit was made by the soloists, who rendered popular pieces in connection with the program. Lew Leever made a big hit by his rendition of "When the Whip-poor-will Sings, Marguerite," and the crowd encored three times on the Irish song, "Colleen Bawn." He has a clear tenor voice, which makes the words easily heard by all. John Driscoll was a new singer to Plainfielders, and won rounds of applause by his rendition of "Cheyenne," and a new song, "Alice, Where Art Thou Going?" William Redmond sang two of Synder's compositions, "Down Beside the Meadow Brook," and "I'd Rather Be On the Outside A-Lookin' In Than On the Inside A-Lookin' Out." The composer, Harry Snyder, who was the guest of Bandmaster LaVere, was on the stand, and was much pleased with the rendition of his compositions.

Next week fireworks will be displayed in connection with the music. The display will be in charge of the New Jersey Fireworks Co., of Hoboken, and will be an elaborate one. It is planned to have fireworks in connection with the band concert every other week. On the evenings when fireworks are to be displayed, the admission price to the grandstand will be twenty-five cents.

Committee Framed Resolutions.

A committee composed of Miss Cramer, Miss Delaney and Miss Wildey, for the alumni association of the Muhlenberg Hospital Training School, has drawn up a set of resolutions upon the death of Miss Mary Alice Rand, who died at the Presbyterian Hospital, New York, Thursday, July 19. Miss Rand was a graduate of the nurses' class at Muhlenberg in 1904, and was a nurse at the Presbyterian Hospital at the time of her death.

WOODHULL-MARTIN PLANS

Company Filed Articles of Incorporation at Trenton Yesterday.

THE CAPITAL IS $100,000

Firm to Turn Over the Business Next Friday—New Departments Are to Be Added.

Incorporation papers were placed on file Friday in the office of Secretary of State Dickinson by the Woodhull & Martin Company, of this city. This is the name of the syndicate which succeeds the firm composed of Floyd T. Woodhull and Edson C. Martin, which has carried on a development and construction business here for a number of years. When the new company will actually take possession is not announced, but some statement, it is said, is likely to be made by the retiring partnership next week. It is believed that the real transfer will be made on Friday, July 27.

The capital of the new company as filed of record is $100,000. Just what sum was paid for the business and good will is not given out but it is known that the firm valued its good will at a high figure. The members of the incorporated company are Solomon Schuldenfrei, of Atlantic City; Adolph Hunt, of New York city, and Isaac Gleitsman, also of New York city.

Mr. Schuldenfrei's son is carrying on a general dry goods business in Atlantic City, and it is said that the other two members of the company are engaged in wholesale lines of business in New York and will dispose of their goods to a large extent at the new company's store here.

Many changes are contemplated by the company, particularly regarding the interior arrangements of the big store in East Front street. The partition running crosswise of the store of the first floor and extending nearly half-way to the ceiling will be removed in order to give a patron a view of the entire store as he enters the place. Changes are also contemplated on the second floor. One of the first things the company will do will be to add to the assortments of goods now being handled and to introduce new lines altogether. The carpet department will be removed from the first floor and women's ready made dresses and cloaks will be put where the carpet department is at present.

A report has it that Mr. Martin will remain for a time at least as buyer for the company but this cannot be confirmed. It is known that a resident manager will be selected but no one has been picked for the place as yet. A meeting of the company to elect directors was held yesterday but nothing could be learned today about the matter upon inquiry at the store.

A YOUNG LIFE ENDED.

Miss Alice Rand, Graduate of Muhlenberg, Dies in New York.

Miss Alice Rand, who graduated from the Muhlenberg Hospital Training School for Nurses a few years ago, died yesterday morning at the Presbyterian Hospital, New York. She had been there about three weeks, undergoing treatment for heart trouble but it was not generally known by her friends. News of her death came by telegram and was a great shock, the young woman having had a large number of local acquaintances.

Miss Rand's parents were missionaries for several years in Burmah and she was born at Maulmain. They are buried at Amherst, Mass., and the daughter's body will be taken to the same place. She leaves a brother, at present living in New York, but who resided here at one time.

NEW JERSEY.

"Oh, can't we get a drop of booze?"
"I fear not, I fear not."
His grieving friend replied.
"But why is it that this is so,
For no one likes it dry?"
"They say I lack an ether,
But I cannot tell you why."

So they're closing up New Jersey,
You can hear the sad news flyin',
There is groaning down at Trenton,
There are tears along the bay.
Hearts are broken all in Hoboken,
Newark's skies are dark and gray,
For they're closing up New Jersey in the morning.

"Shall we beat it down to Coney?"
The old commuter cried.
"I'm with you if I'm with you there,"
His smiling friend replied.
"Can we get some booze at Coney,
Or is that also dry?"
"Not in a hundred thousand years,
They never even try."

"If they're closing up New Jersey,
We will beat it for the sea.
If the nectar's not in Jersey,
I wonder where it can be."
When they take away our lager,
Then it's time for us to die.
For they're closing up New Jersey in the morning.

A Bungalow Lunch.

William Jeffery gave to W. L. Heifield, Sr., and Sergeant-at-Arms Hesekiah Hand, of the District Court, a ride in his touring car to Berkeley Heights Friday and entertained them at lunch in his new bungalow there. Mr. Jeffery sang for his guests and a party of neighbors after lunch, accompanied by Mr. Hetfield on the piano.

A.O.U.W. RATE THE SAME

Plainfield Lodges of Order Receive Circular Letter From Grand Master Workman.

SUPREME LODGE ACTION

Move of Highest Body at Montreal Does Not Apply to the Jurisdiction of New Jersey.

Grand Master Workman F. P. Fowle, of the A. O. U. W. for the jurisdiction of New Jersey, announces in a circular letter to the Plainfield lodge that the higher rate of assessments adopted by the Supreme lodge does not apply to this state. He says that the Grand lodge's action at the recent annual session at Montreal has caused a wrong impression and that therefore it is important to set the members of the craft right.

The higher rate is applicable, he says, to the supreme lodge, beneficiary and the higher rate jurisdictions only. New Jersey is not only able under the present rate of assessment to provide for its own requirements but can and does pay its death claims. All claims, he adds, are paid immediately upon receipt of correct proofs. Not only is the grand lodge of the State able to do this, but the present revenue is making a handsome surplus to meet all future calls.

In concluding his address to the subordinate lodges, Grand Master Fowle says:

"The new rates do not apply in New Jersey and there is nothing to cause any change in the rates or the levying of additional assessments upon any member in this jurisdiction."

It will be recalled that the supreme lodge, at Montreal, resolved that all jurisdictions must be absolutely self-supporting. In many instances jurisdictions were falling behind and were not able without help from the supreme lodge to pay all death claims. New Jersey has not been nor is in this class.

GOOD FEELING EXISTS IN FIRE DEPARTMENT

NO TRUTH IN REPORT THAT CAPTAINS AND MEN ARE AT LOGGERHEADS.

In connection with the transferral of the city fire captains, as ordered by the fire committee at its meeting last night, the coast line automobile talk has followed to the effect that the move was partly made because of ill feeling between the captains and their men. When Chief Doane was asked about it today, he declared there was absolutely no truth in the report and added further that though there had been some trouble of this nature a few months ago, it was caused by two men who are now out of the service.

As a further evidence of good feeling between the officers and men in the various houses, the chief stated that several of the latter have spoken to him since yesterday and asked that they be transferred with the captains. A general move of this sort would be impossible and they were so informed. The answer was received in good faith and the applicants to a man declared they would do all possible to keep up the present high standard of the department.

As to the reason for the transfer order, as stated yesterday, only the committee knows why it was done and the members assert that it is a good thing occasionally.

Apropos of the assertion that Captain Feiring had become a Colbyite, this is emphatically denied by that official. He declares that he is in no way affiliated with politics.

With the beginning of the Thames boating season, the inevitable irresponsible amateurs have appeared on the scene. A few days ago it was a matter of considerable amusement to see two ladies sculling up stream, and on attempting to pass through one of the bridges, bring their boat into it broadside on. Not understanding exactly how to get out of it, the lady who was rowing ceased to row, while the one who was steering pulled the ropes violently, both left and right. The result was at first a gentle rocking motion, that quickly changed into one more emphasized roll; but the fair occupants could not understand why their boat did not move. An accident so easily happens that people should always have some little knowledge of matters aquatic before they venture afloat.—London Globe.

Couldn't Stand the Racket.

"There's a country buyer out there," said the senior member of the firm, "that I want you to take care of."

"Not me, please," protested the salesman. "I promised my wife I'd stop drinking."

Colored Woman Wants Divorce.

Testimony in the suit of Mary J. Brown, colored, of this city, against her husband, William J. Brown, for divorce, was taken before John H. VanWinkle, special master in chancery, today. Coddington & Swackhamer are solicitors for the petitioner.

FOUNDATIONS COMPLETED. FOR NEW 'PHONE BUILDING.

Structure Will Be One of the Most Up-to-Date of Its Kind in the Country.

Seaman Brothers, contractors, have completed the work of laying the foundations for the new building being erected by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company on East Fourth street. There is some delay now caused by the shipment of iron, and the progress on the structure is a little slow.

When completed the building will be one of the most modern and up-to-date of the kind in this part of the country. It will be three stories in height and in every detail it will be constructed as nearly fire-proof as it is possible. The first floor will be devoted to offices for the manager and the various departments. The second floor will be used for supplies and an important feature will be the space reserved for the operators and women assistants. There will be a dining-room, where they may eat their lunch if necessary, and commodious toilet rooms, cloak rooms and every other modern convenience. The operating room will be on the third or top floor and provisions have been made to allow for any desired number of additions to the present board. By using the top floor there will be plenty of light and air for those who work there.

Another feature about the building will be the installation of the common battery system, doing away with the individual batteries in telephones. The building is to be of brick, marble and steel chiefly, with a facing on Fourth street of pressed brick. The plans are very elaborate and Building Inspector Doane says that they are the finest he has ever seen. The cost of the building, exclusive of equipment, will be $51,000. It will be equipped to provide for an increase of 5,000 additional subscribers now and if necessary extra switchboards can be added at any time.

TO WASH SILK STOCKINGS.

In washing silk stockings they should first be soaked in borax water, afterward washed quickly in soap suds which is no more than blood warm.

If the water is hot, the result is that the silk becomes harsh and crinkley.

Instead of wringing the stockings out, simply squeeze them well, afterward rinsing in two waters the same temperature, hanging out to dry without wringing.

A little blueing should be added to the water if the silk stockings are white, but not if colored.

There is another little wrinkle which should be kept in mind, and that is that knit silk should never be sprinkled.

Instead wring out a towel from hot water, fold stockings up in it and leave for an hour.

In ironing them smooth out all the wrinkles on the ironing board and press quickly.

Turn inside out and press again.

While fine stockings should be cleansed in benzine,

Turn inside out and lay in a deep dish and pour the benzine over.

When the soil has been removed turn the stockings right side out and with a fresh supply of benzine wash again. Dry thoroughly and they are ready to wear.

Some women find that their black stockings and those in bronze fade.

One of the best things to freshen the color is to make a black pepper tea and soak them for an hour.

Also is there is any chance for the color to fade it will be well to soak thme in salt and water before they the washed.

Occasionally small boys get their stockings very dirty so that it is almost impossible to cleanse thoroughly with soap and water alone without injuring the fabric in rubbing.

For such as these soak the feet or the soiled portions in kerosene, allowing them to lie half an hour.

Then cover with hot water in which some soda or ammonia has been dissolved, use a small stick of wood to stir them thoroughly, then remove and wash in clean suds.

DOG ATTACKS BUTCHER.

Dunellen Young Man Severely Bitten by a Vicious Brute.

John Stilliger, driver for J. Y. Young, a Dunellen butcher, was attacked and severely bitten by a vicious dog in Dunellen Friday while delivering orders. The dog, owned by Stephen Brown, sprang at Stilliger as he came down the path leading to the house. It jumped for his throat, but missed that mark and sank its teeth in Stilliger's face. His upper lip and mouth were badly torn.

The dog is a big and strong, and Stilliger had a hard time beating it off. The wounds were cauterized by a physician. The dog had given no evidences of hydrophobia, and no serious results from the bites are looked for.

Real Estate Sales.

Ira L. LaRue, 152 North avenue, has sold for Rev. J. P. Taylor his New York house to C. B. Clifton, and his second place to E. D. Alpaugh. He has also sold his tract of thirty-six lots at the end of Arlington avenue to Mr. Houghton, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., who will improve the property. He has sold his house, 1021 Arlington avenue, to T. B. Kolb, who will make it his home.

TRAPPER LOST IN MOUNTAIN STORM

WANDERS FIVE DAYS AND NIGHTS IN BLIZZARD.

SUCCOR FINALLY REACHED.

Falls Unconscious in Snow at Door of Mining Cabin—Is Taken In and Nursed Back to Health.

Denver.—Lost for five days and nights in the mountains, wandering blindly and half starved in the terrible blizzard that whirled down the bleak, cold canyons of Arapahoe pass, Robert Stuart, the most prominent and oldest trapper and prospector in Middle Park, or in the state, came near forfeiting his life in a bold attempt to get out of his cabin before he became snowbound. When he finally covered the five miles that lay between his lonely little cabin and the Lonesome mines, the distance of which in ordinary weather could easily be traversed in less than half a day, he was in a raving delirium from the cold and exposure and the half-starved condition in which his wanderings without food had left him.

The other day "Bob" Stuart resolved to leave his cabin and spend the rest of the winter at the Lonesome mines. It is usually Stuart's habit to winter at Eldora, but Arapahoe pass was snowed in and considered very dangerous for travel. His stock of provisions was low—barely enough for one good meal. He scraped together what he could to eat and set out for the mines Saturday night. The fact, he says, he now about his cabin was about seven feet deep and was of the soft, flaky sort that refuses to pack. The snowshoes he wore were small, and every step he took brought him floundering to his knees. To make matters worse, about nightfall a blinding snowstorm came up and the old trapper, for the first time in his life, lost his way. All that night he wandered aimlessly around the mountain tops, striving in vain to come upon the trail.

Speaking of the night Stuart said that "If he had a million dollars he would have given it for one biscuit," so great was his hunger. All day Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and half of Friday the old man wandered. Twice he was within a few feet of the cabin of the mine bosses, but it was so completely covered up by the heavy fall of snow that he passed right on by. On Tuesday he lost all consciousness and can remember no more. Instinct guided him to safety the rest of his perilous journey.

THEY FOUND HIM IN A DEAD FAINT.

Late in the afternoon of Friday three men were eating in the little cabin near the workings of the Lonesome mine. In the middle of the meal a faint knock was heard at the door. Opening it they found Stuart in a dead faint and half frozen, lying on the doorstep.

Hastily summoning Dr. W. E. Rammel, of Denver, the owner of the mines, the man was given stimulants. For days he remained in a stupor, unable to tell where or who he was. Part of the time he was raving mad and in his delirium would imagine that he once more was wandering about the bleak mountain passes half starved. For five days he had gone without food, and, according to Dr. Rammel, had he gone one day more he surely must have perished from the pangs of hunger.

Robert Stuart is 55 years old and is one of the oldest prospectors that the state has. Just how many years "Bob" has lived in his little cabin at the foot of Arapahoe peak is not known, but every fisherman, hunter and prospector in that section for the last 20 years in Middle Park knows "Bob" Stuart. He is guide, mine locator, fisherman and prospector. He has several claims now near his cabin that may prove to be valuable some day. The grizzled prospector was taken to Denver, where he will spend the rest of this winter.

Walks Two Miles in Sleep.

Nashville, Ind.—All known records for sleep-walking have been broken by Ora Taylor, who lives near here, and who, to other habits, dressed only in his nightclothes and in his bare feet, walked two miles to the home of a friend. On the way he waded through an icy stream, but even the cold water failed to awaken him. Believing him to be mentally unbalanced, the friend put Taylor to bed, where he slept soundly until daylight, and was surprised beyond belief to find himself in a strange bed. He said that he was conscious of nothing from the time he went to bed at home until he awoke in the morning.

IN THE COLBYITES' CAMP

Organizations are Incomplete in Three of the Four Wards as Yet.

CHAIRMEN WANTED

Third Ward May Pick One This Week—The Situation Throughout the County.

The Colbyites of the Third ward are without a chairman and it is planned by the executive committee, in whom the power is vested, to fill the vacancy this week. Frank E. Kinsman is vice chairman and he is likely to retain his present position. It was stated today by a member of the committee that four men are now being considered for the chairmanship and that from that number one will be selected. David E. Titsworth resigned the chairmanship two weeks ago. He gave as his reason for withdrawing his health and business affairs would not permit him to head the ward organization. At the same time he reassured the committee that he is heart and soul in favor of the "new idea" movement.

Another matter that will come before the Third ward committee for action will be the filling of vacancies, the resignation of former Councilman E. T. Barrows. Mr. Barrows told the committee that he believes in the "new idea" movement in county and State, but does not see the need of any reform in the city government.

Elmer E. Cutting is temporary chairman of the Fourth ward committee and he is unable to say what the plans in that district are excepting that some strong man will be made permanent chairman. In that ward as in the First the organization is merely temporary.

There has been little doing in the Colbyites' camp during the week. The whirlwind automobile tour of the county planned by Judge William N. Runyon, of this city, and Thomas Dobbs, of Summit, president and vice president of the Union County Republican League for Equal Taxation, did not come off as scheduled on Monday. It was planned to visit Springfield, Rahway, Roselle and Cranford in order to get a line on the situations in those places. For some reason the trip was postponed.

On Thursday night the Colbyites will hold a meeting in Cranford. Among the speakers will be Judge Runyon. Other meetings are in view at various points. Some communities, it is reported, have taken hold of the "new idea" to any considerable extent. Strong pressure was brought to bear on Mayor Furber, of Rahway, to head the movement in that place, but he has firmly declined to do so. The same condition of antipathy against reform as the Colbyites plan it is felt in Roselle. How Springfield stands is not known but reliable organization men say they do not fear any spread of the movement to that place.

Senator W. B. Lawrence, the regular leader in Summit, is said to feel confident that Thomas Debevoise and his friends will not be able to carry that place at the primaries in September. Reports are daily coming into the regulars' county committee that the situation is all right. On the other hand the Colbyites claim that they will have everything their own way in the major portion of the county when the time comes to vote.

Frank H. Smith, chairman of the Union County Republican Committee, when asked how the situation is as viewed by the regulars remarked: "I have nothing to say; I refuse to be quoted."

MUST WEAR LINEN COLLARS.

Celluloid, Rubber and Paper Creations Not for Cops Any More.

The economical and easily-laundered celluloid collar is taboo in the police department, likewise the deceptive rubberoid and paper creations for the adornment of male necks. Chief of Police Kiely has issued an order confirming the men to linen collars.

"Order was issued," said Chief Kiely this morning, "because we want to keep the men up-to-date, and not like township constables. Such orders are common in police departments. The men are required to keep their shoes polished and to present a neat and cleanly appearance at all times while on duty."

DEDERICK GETS $200.

Recovers for Being Ejected From a Train in Bayonne.

A verdict for $200 damages was returned yesterday afternoon for plaintiff in the case of Hezekiah W. Dererick against the Central Railroad Company, which was tried Thursday in District Court before Judge C. Addison Swift in Elizabeth. Dederick sued to recover damages for being ejected from a train in Bayonne on April 6 last, while en route to Elizabeth avenue station, that city. The only reason given by the railroad company for ejecting Mr. Dederick from the train was that the train on arriving at the Elizabethport station did not make close connection with another train to carry him to the Elizabeth avenue station.

FOR THE TOILET.

When the hands are sore and blistered wash them in fresh buttermilk and allow it to dry on the skin, as it aids in whitening it. Slices of raw cucumber, cut thick, peel left on, may be bound on sunburned fingers at night and do wonderful work in restoring the natural color.

Hop poultices have always been used with splendid effect for all sorts of pain. A hop-flavored tea can be made as follows: Put a handful of dried hops into one cup of water and let it boil until the water is reduced to half a cup, then stir in sufficient Indian meal to thicken. Apply very hot.

Small white spots which often appear on the nails are caused from bruising the nail before it has fully developed. This is sometimes done with the instrument used to press back the cuticle at the base of the nail. Always use a soft wood stick or the fingers of the other hand to loosen the cuticle.

An excellent mouth wash, especially in fruit season, because of its good effect upon the teeth, is lime water. To make it pour one quart of boiled or distilled water over one teaspoonful of slaked lime. Pour this to a bottle and shake well every fifteen minutes for the first hour; then allow the lime to settle and pour off the water, which should be bottled for use.

An excellent lotion for making the hands white is made as follows: Scrape sufficient horseradish to measure one tablespoonful and pour on it a pint of hot milk, allow it to cool and bottle. After washing the hands rub them over with this lotion and then dry them with a soft towel.

The arms should be washed twice a day with a fine lather of soap, rinsed well, ried thoroughly and then rubbed vigorously. This treatment will bring the pores into action and induce a healthy condition of the skin.

A good shampoon preparation may be made by cutting a cake of pure olive oil soap into a quart of boiling water. When cold it will be about the consistency of jelly. A couple of spoonfuls of this mixture and a pinch of soda may be rubbed into the scalp previously wet with hot water or the hair may be parted and the mixture rubbed into the scalp with a small nail brush. After the entire scalp has been cleaned it should be vigorously rubbed with the finger tips and well rinsed.

FOR THE SUMMER HOME.

In plaited grass furniture are dark green sofas, arm-chairs, rockers, many styles of tables, swings, couches.

A good night set consisting of pitcher, match-box, candle and round tray, comes with a white ground sprinkled with little green shamrock leaves.

For table furnishings in the summer home nothing is prettier or more suitable than the blue and white Japanese china. It is inexpensive and just the thing for the summer cottage.

At the stationery counter there is a box twice as long as the usual one containing thin correspondence paper and envelopes with dark linings. The sheets of paper are the length of the box, about fourteen inches.

The trousseau box, covered and lined with white satin, hand-painted with flower or figure designs, is one of the bride'a cherished possessions. Among the designs are natural sprays of apple blossoms, June roses, orchids, etc.; Empire wreaths and bow-knots, cupids and garlands. The boxes hold one set of lingerie.

TO WEAVE A RAFFIA SQUARE.

Raffia makes cool and artistic pillow covers, which are not spoiled by moisture or sun.

Make a square frame four inches larger than the cover; size and fasten strips or raffia across from side to side.

Take some raffia and weave across, bringing it up and under the warp threads like a rag carpet is woven.

Two pieces are made, one for each side of the pillow.

The raffia can be bought in colors and plaids and stripes woven. Make a cushion of stuffed hair and place the raffia square over this and sew through with a thread of raffia.

Four inches is left unwoven on all sides, to form a fringe.

Her Time All Taken.

The average woman thinks the sun sets three hours earlier to-day sooner than that she could interfere with the regular routine of household duties. A Sabetha woman was recently informed by her physician that she would have to have an operation performed. She said she didn't see how she could—that Monday was washing day, Tuesday ironing day, Wednesday the missionary society met, Thursday was the day to clean up, Friday to bake, Saturday to give the children their baths and mend. If he could get it in the day after dinner and before evening service perhaps she would try it.—Sabetha Herald.

House for W. T. Sharp.

W. T. Sharp has begun the erection of a handsome residence for his own use on Second street in Highland Park. The house was originally designed for Second street, in the Park, but water connections could not be obtained on that side of the property and the location was changed. The house is being erected from designs drawn by Architect F. L. Lancaster.

FRANKING IS ABOLISHED.

Postage Stamps Must Be Used Upon All Mail Matter in the Philippines.

The postal administration of the Philippines has taken the step advocated so strongly by Edwin C. Madden, third assistant postmaster general for the United States government, to-wit: the franking privilege has been entirely abolished on the islands, and every piece of mail matetr, whether private or official, must bear a postage stamp. The motives actuating the insular government in taking this step were the same that suggested to Gen. Madden the desirability of abolishing the franking privilege in the United States; a deficit in the postal bureau. The Philippine officials were satisfied that the postal department of the islands would take care of itself provided it could be placed on a business basis. Under the old regime vast quantities of official mail was being transported and handled from which no revenue was derived; the matter simply bore the usual "penalty card" and was carried free.

The insular bureau is in a sense a law to itself and has authority to handle its postal affairs according to the desire of the department without invoking legislation by congress. The postal department, with its large annual deficit and the unfavorable comment that naturally followed, took the matter into its own hands and issued an order that hereafter all mail of the insular government must carry the requisite stamps. The order went into effect and the various bureaus of the insular government are paying their good money to the post office department of the island and affixing postage stamps to every piece of mail deposited in the office, whether it be a domestic or foreign mail.

The method employed is this: The bureaus of the insular government buy quantities of stamps of various denominations and with a rubber stamp everything bears with the initials "O. B.," which signifies "official business." Money to purchase the stamps is taken from the insular treasury, paid to the postal department, which in turn deposits the money in the insular treasury. It is literally a case of taking money out of one pocket and putting it into the other, yet it enables the postal department to obtain credit for the business it actually does and requires the other departments to charge themselves with the legitimate expense. The insular government as a whole has not made nor lost a cent, beyond the actual cost of printing the postage stamps, which is about ten cents per 1,000 stamps.

In his annual report to congress Gen. Madden recommended that the franking privilege be abolished and that members of congress and officials in the departments be required to affix postage stamps to all mail sent out. He pointed out that specific appropriations should be made which should cover the amount of the cost of stamps used by members of congress and the departments in official correspondence or for prepayment of postage on documentary matt. It was not thought that this scheme would result in any net saving to the government, but it would enable the post office department to wipe out its annual deficit of about $15,000,000 and this amount would be added to the expenditures of the other departments according to the amount of postage stamps required.

It is not expected that action will be taken along the line by congress at this session, but the matter has had scientific study at the hands of the house post office committee, and it is acknowledged that there is great force in the recommendations of the post office department. The campaign in this direction will be continued and it is only a question of a few years when all departments and officials will be using postage stamps.

CUTTING INTO OUR MARKETS

Italian Manufacturers Putting Forth Efforts to Build Up Trade in the Philippines.

Consul Dunning reports to the bureau of manufactures from Milan on the methods of Italian manufacturers in building up their trade in the Philippine islands. Lombardy shipped $381,000 worth of goods to Manila in 1903, $4,000 in 1904, and for the six months ending December, 1905, the shipments from Milan to the Philippines amounted to over $38,000. Every article sent by the Italians, the report says, is being made in the United States, including hats, paper, buttons, umbrellas, boots, milk, macaroni, paint, hemp, lamps, medicines, preserves, linen, soap, pottery, and wearing apparel. Many of the "Manilla" hats coveted by travelers and collectors, the consul adds, are made in Milan and shipped into the east by the gross.

"American shoes" are also made in Italy. Vice-Consul Schlemmer writes from Mannheim, Germany, that he visited a number of shoe stores in that city, which advertised American shoes, some of the merchants admitted that their stocks were from Milan. One of the shoe store managers was an Italian, who said he saw no reason why American shoes should not be made in Italy just as well as in Massachusetts.

Hawaiian Surf Birds.

That birds of the family termed surf birds in the Hawaiian islands should leave that paradise of the Pacific to go and rear their young in the tundras of Alaska would seem to many as an extraordinary proceeding. Yet the turnstone and the black-bellied plover and the Pacific golden plover make the long journey of about 4,000 miles annually.

Sad Story.

"Good morning, Lord Brokewood," greeted the society reporter on the English pier. "I hear you are just back from America. Deuced clever place. Did you meet any famous heiresses?"

"I met one!" sighed Lord Brokewood.

"Ah, and you won her?"

"Far from it! She invited me to play a game of 'bridge' and before I left the table I had lost my family castle, my steamship ticket and everything but my debts. Had to come home on a cattle ship."—Chicago Daily News.

Lucky for Paul.

Paul Revere was about to start forth on his famous ride.

"Gee," he said, as he lightly vaulted into the saddle, "I'm glad the locomotive hasn't been invented yet. As it is, I'll not have to slow up at any railroad crossings."

Then he chirped to his horse and was away like the wind.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Method.

"No matter what opinion is offered, you express a contrary view," said the impatient friend.

"Well," answered Mr. Bilggins, "that's a way I have of acquiring knowledge. A man is more likely to give up all he knows on a subject if you get him to warm up with a little controversial indignation.—Washington Star.

Safer.

"Yes, he started life as a burglar"

"And reformed?"

"That's as you happen to look at it. At his first trial, when his lawyer took the entire proceeds of the robbery he had committed to defend him, he thought he saw a better and safer graft than burglary; so he started law."—Houston Post.

Through the Ice.

"Well, well, and what did your father whip you for, little boy?" asked the wise old man.

"For swimmin', I guess," blubbered the urchin.

"What! You didn't go swimmin' this weather?"

"No, I went skatin', but I wound up swimmin'."—Philadelphia Press.

More Ambitious.

Phroogle—If you want to get ahead, why don't you cut down your personal expenses?

Wroumder—Because anybody can do that. I'm trying to get ahead without cutting down my personal expenses, and let me tell you, old fellow, that's something that requires genius.—Chicago Tribune.

Natural.

"So you're going fishing with Bob next summer. Well, he's a great story teller."

"Yes, and his stories get bigger every summer."

"How's that?"

"Why, the fish he's caught grow during the year, I suppose."—Detroit Free Press.

Better Measure.

"Here's a piece in de paper," said Wearly Willie, "dat says dark beer is always best. I never liked pale beer anyhow, did you?"

"Sure," replied Ragson Tatters, "ye get more dat way."

"Wat way?"

"In a pail."—Philadelphia Press.

"Naw! It's the best. I don't have to go to school."—Chicago Tribune.

CONDITIONS IN PANAMA.

Only Objection of Returned Visitor Was in the Matter of Rations.

Edward T. Shea, the former sheriff of Prince George county, Maryland, arrived here yesterday from Panama on his way home to Kansas his vacation. He has been employed as a foreman on the Panama railroad at Paraiso, and will return there early in May, says the Washington Star. Mr. Shea went to Panama about nine months ago, and during the time he was there he was sick only two days.

"During the nine months I was there," he said to a Star reporter, "I did not have to go to the hospital. The climate is different from what it is here, but it is a matter of only a short time before one can become acclimated and get to enjoy it. The only fault I have to find with conditions there is the matter of feeding the men. Unless something is done to change the quality of the food there will be a scarcity of labor there in a short time."

He explained that a man who has been there six months is entitled to a leave of absence of six weeks. Many of them who come away on their leave of absence do not return. Unless a change is made in the matter of feeding or an increase is given in the matter of pay, Mr. Shea repeated, the government will experience trouble in getting the necessary help from the United States.

Mr. Shea said that he was one of a number of passengers who came from Havana aboard the steamer Panama, formerly the City of Havana, and the steamer reached New York Sunday. Many of the men, he said, had on thin clothing, one of them wearing a duck suit and canvas shoes. He was from Boston, however, and did not mind it much. Those who had only thin summer clothing had expected to reach New York Saturday or Monday and intended to purchase new clothes as soon as they arrived. As they reached there Sunday and some of them felt the effects of the weather to an uncomfortable extent before they were able to make purchases. The Boston man, wearing his white duck suit and overcoat, attracted attention as he walked about the streets.

Workmen coming away on leave of absence pay only $20 each way for their transportation. The trip on the Panama was a pleasant one and was greatly enjoyed by those who were homeward bound to visit friends.

HOW MOROS ARE CIVILIZED.

Learn, Little at a Time, the Shrewd Business Methods of the Western World.

The Moros, like all other natives of the Philippines, are possessed of a consuming desire to carry a "pass," some sort of an official certificate as to character, name, residence, etc., of the bearer, and they are willing to pay any amount therefor, and never think of it as taxation, writes R. L. Bullard, in Atlantic. On this weak point the Moros showed the first signs of civilization. Then the clan of indirect taxation caught, pleased, and overcame them, as it catches wiser men than they. Imported cotton cloth paying duty at the custom house had long been reaching the Moros through a few hands, but they now come in large use among the Moros. Touching the jacket of the nearest datto: "You are a lot of foolish and ignorant children," I said. "You are haggling about paying taxes when you have already been doing it for years, and have been giving the American money to pay me to pay the interpreter and all my soldiers." This at once struck their attention. The explanation followed. They understood it remarkably quickly. They saw the humor and the truth of the thing, and, wondering at the finesse that had been able to make them contribute to their own subjugation, yielded in a sort of nonplussed way, feeling, no doubt, that it was useless to try to escape a people who could devise such a smart system of getting money from other people without the latter's even knowing it. To my help also at this juncture came my old friend, the priest Noakalin, or Antipolitas, as it were, of Lanao, with, if not a revelation, something better—wisdom—to his people: "If is the will of Allah 'ta-Allah. The Merciful, who has many names."

In these ways government and civilization have gained upon them.

Volcanos of Philippines.

An interesting feature of the Philippines, which has as yet been neglected, is their score or more of volcanoes. This addition makes the list of volcanoes in the United States a very important one. The volcanoes of America, or the United States, are of especial interest, and they are found in the western country, as a rule west of the Rocky mountains. One of the most beautiful of these is Mount Shasta, 14,440 feet high, which rears its massive twin cones in northern California. Mount Helena in Oregon, 12,600 feet high, is a majestic volcanic peak, and Mount Hood, 11,225 feet, has a world-wide fame for its beauties, little thought being given to its activities in the early geological history of the continent. Other famous peaks are Mount Jefferson, Mount Adams, Mount Rainier, Mount Baker and Mount Lassen.

Porto Rico's "Lazy Bug."

Capt. Bailey K. Ashford has had so much success in fighting the "lazy bug" in Porto Rico that Government Agent Harris has been sent to the island to be instructed in his methods, with a view to introducing them among the men digging the Panama canal.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 29.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—Divided lives.—Matt. vi, 24; II Kings xvii, 2-6.

There are three classes of people in the world relative to God. (1) There are those who serve God and God alone. Of such we have an example in Elijah and the 7,000 in Israel who had never bowed the knee to Baal. (2) There are those who absolutely refuse to serve God at all. They have given entirely out of calculation in the formation of their lives, in their aims and hopes and ambitions. (3) Between these two classes there is one composed of those who try to serve both God and Baal, to belong at the same time to the kingdom of Christ and the kingdom of the world. Of this class we have frequent illustrations in the history of the ancient people of God. They claimed to be God's people. They doubtless were the distinctive dress of the Israelites, they were inhabitants of the land of Canaan, they probably adhered to some of the rites and customs of their religion, yet at the same time they worshiped strange gods and sought the debauching pleasures which such worship held out to them. They tried to do two things, but they failed, for the moment they bowed the knee to idols they ceased to be the children of God and were no longer the children of His covenant promises. This attempted divided religious life of ancient Israel is a sad story, a story of shame, dishonor and disaster and one that should be a warning to every one who has the faintest desire to be a child of God.

History is a plain teacher, yet how often its lessons are disregarded. The failure of the Jews to live a satisfactory divided religious life has been no deterrent in the lives of many Christians to undertake the same thing. They attempted it in the days of old, and thousands are vainly attempting the same thing today. They want to be in the kingdom of Christ and at the same time in the kingdom of the world. But it cannot be done. Such professing Christians are the world and not the kingdom of Christ, though they may deceive themselves into thinking that they are. "But God is not mocked." He knows where they belong. The folly of such an attempt should be self evident. If we truly love God we will live for Him and Him only. Then we will give up the world and throw their whole souls into the service of God they would experience a wonderful change. And until they do religion will always be nothing but a lifeless drudgery, a form with no power. Christian Endeavorers, be Christians or give up Christianity. Take your place where you really belong. If you in heart belong to the world, go to it, but remember the consequences. If you belong to Christ, give Him all, and your religion will mean something to you and to those about you.

Christ warns us against the attempt at a divided life. "No man can serve two masters." Some men think they can, but Christ says, "No man." There is not such a thing as an exception to this law. Experience and common sense corroborate Christ's statements. Two ruling passions in the same life are impossible. One must in the end gain absolute supremacy. Two gods are just as impossible. Which will you take—the God of heaven and of earth, the God, your Father, or the gods of greed, of pleasure, of false ambition? You have a choice, but you can only choose one. Make no mistake, for eternal interests depend upon your decision.

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. xix, 15-26; Ex. xvi, 1-15; Deut. vi, 1-5; Matt. v, 16; Matt. vi, 31-37; Acts iv, 10-12; xvii, 22-25; Rom. i, 20-25; II Cor. vi, 14-18; Col. iii, 17; I John ii, 15-17.

Japan's New Secretary.

Christian Endeavor has a firm foothold in Japan and has been making very remarkable gains there during the past year. Mr. T. Sawaya has recently been elected secretary of the Japan union and in the first months of his administration has succeeded in adding more than twenty new societies to the membership. Mr. Sawaya was born in 1877 in Tsuyama, a town two hours' train ride north of Yokohama. He was educated in one of the mission schools. He has given up business to devote himself enthusiastically to this definite Christian work.

T. SAWAYA.

Next Summer in Switzerland.

Geneva, Switzerland, will be the seat of the second world's Christian Endeavor convention, the dates being July 28 to Aug. 1. Geneva promises to be another notable landmark in the history of Christian Endeavor, and it is reasonable to suppose that a large number of American Endeavorers will avail themselves of the opportunity to visit Europe under the favorable auspices afforded by this convention.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

July 29: "How the Church Has Help the World"—Matt. v, 13-16; Luke xi, 34-36; I John i, 5-7; Rom. xii, 21; Rev. xii, 1; Matt. xiii, 23; Jer. xxxi, 34.

By REV. WALTER J. TATUM, D. D.

There must be first a clear conviction that the world needs help, then a definite realization that the church has the help which the world needs and then the earnest impulse to give to the world that help in the best possible manner.

Without question, the church does possess light, the only adequate light of life. She did not make it; she does not own it, but is intrusted with it by the Lightmaker in order that she may light the darkness of the world. As custodian she is called "the light of the world," but all the power is from above with the Father of Lights and not in her own nature. She should just shine out as He shines within her.

Nowhere but in the Christian Scriptures and by the authors of them has God been conceived as a loving Father to men and all mankind as a brotherhood to be united in love in the development of human destiny. This unique conception of the nature of men and their relation to each other and to God is the truth which is revolutionizing society wherever it is proclaimed. Its worth is of the highest to men both for time and eternity. Nothing else can be conceived of so great helpfulness to them as this.

Filled with it the promise of divine power to put this truth into operation in the individual life as well as in the community, and you have given all the power needed to recover a world from sin to righteousness, especially when we have the Christ life as model and incentive and the living Christ as ever present Saviour and Friend.

The church can best help the world by proclaiming the full gospel message. There should be the plain preaching of God's law that men may be convinced of their sin and need of salvation. Then the message of redemption in Christ and the love of the Infinite Father with the power of the Holy Spirit to renew and purify and sanctify and afterward to glorify the soul of man.

The church must go beyond this. She must preserve the sacred records and her members must so live as to present living, incontestable proof to the world of the truth of the message she proclaims.

She must maintain the ordinances of Christian worship. The sacraments are of inestimable value and must be maintained in their purity if she is to minister to all future generations as testimony of the Christ and His message until He come again.

These are the great helps the church has for the world. Beyond these, as incidental to her mission, are care of the poor, the sick, the sinful. Sympathy and assistance for all reform efforts and social uplifting of the people should have her sympathetic assistance.

But the proclamation of salvation, transmission of the inspired record and maintenance of worship with teaching the way of eternal life are the great things from the pursuit of which the church of Christ should never swerve for any other matters.

Hiding the Light.

Peace and joy are essential characteristics of the light that should shine from every Christian's face. But how many people cover their white, pure light with the habit of discontent and complaining! How many of us have allowed the spirit of worry to creep into our life! How many of us permit ourselves to murmur and find fault with almost everything in our lot! How many of us live in a perpetual fever of discontent! Such habits dim the shining of the light that should ray out from our life. Fretfulness spoils spiritual beauty. A look of anxiety hides the light of peace and joy. If only we would strip off these unfit coverings and let the light of Christ in us shine out it would add tenfold to our influence and power as Christians.

Even in life's severest and deepest griefs the light of the lamp burning within should shine out undimmed. Indeed, in sorrow the inner light should be even clearer than in joy.

Grief is a tattered tent
Where Christ can God's light doth shine;
Who glances up at every rent
May catch a ray divine.

Character.

The "processes of character" have been thus analyzed: First thought, then feeling, then purpose, then will, then character in act and being. A good thought is a beginning of right character, but only a beginning. There is a big interval during which the thinker has to work hard and become a doer.

Heaven is not far from him who smiles in cloudy weather.—Henry F. Cope.

There is no anodyne for heart sorrow like ministry to others.—F. B. Meyer.

Let every action tend to some point and be perfect in its kind.—Marcus Aurelius.

FASHION TIPS.

The low shoes of brown suede are particularly pretty.

There are fetching shoes, too, of moss-green canvas.

White shoes always have a tendency to make the foot look larger.

Nearly every woman owns a set of coral, either real or imitation.

After the wave of violently colored hats there is a reaction in favor of all-black millinery.

White serge suits, with short-waisted jackets, are a very good style this year.

Serviceable shirtwaist frocks are of linen in silver gray and natural ecru tones.

Women who find it becoming still continue to wear a black taffeta ribbon tie with white turnover at the neck.

White-haired old ladies are wearing all-white, and looking very lovely in it.

Amber combs are much worn, and the girl with blonde hair can't do better than to do it high and top it with a high-backed comb of this material.

The girls are wearing openwork bands of filagree gold or silver, something like dogcollar, outside the stocks of their lingerie waists.

It's a new idea to lace your Oxford tie from the top down, the bow of the broad ribbon resting on the vamp of the shoe.

A HINT ON BELTS.

Belts are important items in most of the costumes of the day.

Under the bolero, which forms the top of so many tailor-made dresses, a deep and well-fitted belt is indispensable.

It is the leading point in the evening Empire frock.

To meet the necessities of the blouse and skirt, a well-fitting belt is important.

Even the muslin frock is improved by a sash of the husband of some harmonious shade of satin ribbon.

For morning dresses of serge or cloth, and for blouses and skirts, patent-leather belts are fashionable, and so are dull-faced kid.

For afternoon wear the belts obtainable are some of them as carefully fitted and heavily boned as if they were corsets.

One of these, if you are lucky enough to have a figure of stock size so that you can be fitted, will give great smartness to a plain muslin gown.

A pair of well-chosen buckles will often suffice to produce a very smart effect with plain ribbon for the belt that they hold.

SALT.

Put a pinch of salt in whites of eggs when beating them; also use it when whipping cream.

Place salt in oven under baking tins in order to prevent scorching of their contents.

Put salt in cold water when you wish to cool a dish.

Put salt in whitewash to make it stick.

Use salt in cleaning piano keys, knife handles and glass spotted by hard water.

Salt tdissolved in alcohol will remove grease stains from clothing.

Use salt to remove ink stains from carpet when the ink is fresh.

Rub salt on prints before washing to set their color.

To make a candle burn all night put finely powdered salt on it until the salt reaches the black part of the wick. In this way a mild and steady light may be kept all through the night by a small piece of candle.

Water from Jordan—Its Use and Price.

"Bottles of Jordan water," said a Baptist, "can usually be bought at ecclesiastical supply shops. The price is about $5 a quart.

"I was baptized in the River Jordan. Of course can claim that honor, though every royal child born in Europe for several hundreds of years has been christened with water from the holy river.

"Whenever a royal christening is expected word is sent to the Holy Land and a bottle of Jordan water is dispatched to the clergyman who is to officiate.

"The German Emperor ever since his accession has kept a cask of Jordan water in his cellar for christening purposes.

"Every now and then an American baby is christened with Jordan water. In the Vanderbilt family a number of these christenings have occurred. There are perhaps several hundred bottles of Jordan water in this country now."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

To Wash Comfortable.

Examine the comfortable, and if you find soiled spots soap them and scrub with a small brush. Hang the comfortable on a strong line and turn the hose on it. When one side is washed, turn the wash the other. The water forces its way through cotton and covering, making the comfortable as light and fluffy as when new. Squeeze the corners and ends as dry as possible.

Had to Guess Again.

A doctor was waited upon by a patient who confessed to playing in in a local brass band. Shortness of breath was the trouble in his case. "Ah, that accounts for it," said the medical man. "That brass band is the very worst thing for you. You'll have to give it up at once—what instrument do you play?" "The big drum," came the unexpected answer.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

State Committee Says the Party Demands a Constitutional Convention.

HOT SHOT FOR G. O. P.

Declares Republican Party in New Jersey Is Intoxicated—Avarice Its Chief Thought.

The following statement was issued by the Democratic State Committee at noon today:

To the People of the State of New Jersey:

For thirteen years the Republican party has been in unchallenged control of this state. Its record is open to all. In the early years of this period it had been chastened into virtue because of its many years' absence from the chief public offices of the State, and its record was consequently less vulnerable than it has since become. It is now intoxicated with the continued use of its power in every branch of the government. It has become insensible to every passion but greed. Avarice seems to be its chief characteristic. The corrupt influences of corporate control have eaten into its very heart. Its own supporters openly charge its record to be one of bitter hostility to the interests of the people of the State.

This record so made is now to be examined by the people, in order that judgment may be passed upon it. We invite attention to it and we unhesitatingly place ourselves in opposition thereto and invoke the verdict of the people in the contest before us.

Extravagance.

Their extravagance has been extraordinary. When the Democracy relinquished the chief executive office of the State, the annual expenditure was the sum of $1,857,982, exclusive of payments of bonds or loans. To-day it has attained the extraordinary figure of nearly three times this sum, which is grossly disproportionate to the growth of our wealth and population.

Contributions by Corporations.

A gigantic evil at which the Democracy has always warred has been the unlawful contributions by corporations to political purposes for legislative protection in their predatory control of the business of the day.

It is well known that the sums of money contributed to the Republican campaign fund of this State have been gigantic in proportion. No such gifts are made without a common understanding, that such companies shall receive adequate protection in their plunder of the people. Corrupt legislation is the consequence of this partnership in crime.

Bills introduced for relief were defeated. Effective legislation was denied. It was felt by the collection of men who dominate the Republican party in this State that every loss to their power would seriously menace their control of the political machinery of the State. The tide is rapidly rising and if anything is clear at the present hour, it is that the people purpose to write in the statute book that corporate contributions to political parties must cease. The creature cannot be suffered to remain the master. Prompt chastisement should be visited upon all offending corporate bodies and in addition a revocation of the charter by the State.

These corporations maintain their chosen representatives on the floor of both chambers of the Legislature, and they are able to defeat measures intended to release their grip upon the State. They defeated the lobby bill intended to exclude these freebooters from the precincts of the legislative chambers.

Equal Taxation.

For many years in this State the Democratic party has been the outspoken champion of equal taxation. In all State conventions for twenty-five years it has so proclaimed.

In 1884, Leon Abbett, with his strong individuality and powerful influence, pressed it upon the legislature with such marked result that for the first time an advance was made toward this desirable goal. It was a compromise, but it was also advance. The party, in season and out of season, in every State platform, boldly championed the cause. In 1904 every other consideration was set aside and the party constructed its platform to achieve this single purpose. It was made plain for the first time that special privileges New Jersey railroads enjoyed in taxes, since their organization, that was not common to the people of the whole State.

The Republican party denied the truth of this statement, and in mendacious denials sought to answer the charges. A year later, however, they were frightened into action when a division in their own ranks on this very question compelled them to adopt their views advocated by the Democracy. After two years' delay, most reluctantly a bill was framed to accomplish partly equal taxation. True to its instinct for entangling corporate alliances, it was resolved to turn this appeal for bread into a stone. Laws were passed to cut the tax rate in two by doubling the valuations, so that the railroad property that for the first time in the history of the State was called to pay a proper proportion of the public burden should only be obliged to pay the smallest sum possible. County boards of tax government were created, invested with extraordinary powers in pursuance of this common end.

The shameful plot is now bare in all its business. To make it sure and safe these county boards were made, not non-partisan, but partisan, as an appendage and adjunct of the Republican State machine.

Assembly Districts.

When it became clear that it was in the interest of their party to go back to the election of Assemblymen by districts, the Republican leaders caused an act to be passed, which has never been surpassed as a brilliant illustration of a political gerrymander. Territory not contiguous, or but slightly so, was fashioned into groups avowedly proclaimed for the sole purpose of returning Republican members of Assembly. The common sense of fairness in the breast of every man was outraged by this gross and pernicious scheme, which has been overthrown by the Court of Errors and Appeals.

Municipal Ownership.

We advocate the enactment by the legislature of laws giving local municipalities the right to submit to the people the question of owning and operating their public utilities, such as water, gas and electricity.

United States Senators.

We advocate the election of United States Senators directly by the people, as the best means of bringing the Senate of the United States in close touch with the people. Until this amendment is adopted we believe it to be a wise public policy to have candidates for this high public office proclaim their candidacy and appear before the people for support.

Constitutional Convention.

The people of New Jersey have outgrown the present constitution. It was adopted more than sixty years ago. In population and material advancement we have outgrown many of its limitations.

We demand that a constitutional convention be called, in order that the people may have an opportunity to bring the fundamental law into harmony with the requirements of the age.

Our judicial system must be reorganized.

Assemblymen must be elected by the district system.

The nearer the undivided responsibility of each office holder is brought to the people, the purer will the system of government be.

The constitutional requirement of sixty years ago, when the population was sparse, has long since passed away. The assembly districts of the State when created as they must be, by a vote of the people, shall be so created in conformity to such constitutional mandate that the people of the whole State must have equal advantages, equal opportunity.

The chief officers of State, the Attorney-General, Secretary of State, Clerk of the Supreme Court, and the Clerk in Chancery must be elected by the direct vote of the people.

The taxation of all public franchises must be at their true value.

We demand a rigid investigation of all insurance companies of the State; *such investigation should be not par*tisanship but exacting, that the truth may be fully known;

A non-partisan judiciary;

The immediate repeal of the Avis bill;

A strong measure relating to corrupt practices at elections.

All combinations in restraint of trade particularly those affecting the necessaries of life, should be declared criminal, and a rigorous anti-trust measure passed by the legislature of the State.

All contributions for campaign purposes must be made public and in connection therewith we demand a rigorous act prohibiting all corporations from making contributions toward campaign funds.

Conclusion.

We believe that the people have awakened at last to the truth that their interests are corruptly betrayed at Trenton; that the Republican party of this State is ever booted and spurred to race the interests favors. Their defiant disregard of clear public duty permits a pronounced public chastisement.

We ask all citizens who believe in this declaration of principles and are convinced of the truth of the charges herein set forth to join us in an effort to redeem the State from their mercenary control.

Eagles' Boat Club.

The nautical members of the Eagles have organized a boat club, with William Jeager's twenty-foot gasoline launch as their craft. Jaeger has been made captain and will take a party of lodge members for a cruise next month. The club quarters are at Ackor's, Boynton Beach.

FOR RECORD AND REFORM

Essex County Assemblymen Appeal to Party For Renomination.

ON COLBY PLATFORM

They Favor Local Taxation of Main Stems of Railroads and of Street Franchises.

On a platform radical in its demands for reformation of the laws of New Jersey, and with an open avowal of their intention if elected to support the candidacy of George L. Record for United States Senator Dryden's seat, the eleven members of the present Assembly delegation from Essex county yesterday came out in a public appeal for support at the *coming Republican primaries on Sep*tember 25.

The stand taken by the Essex men was agreed upon at a meeting at which William P. Martin, leader of *the Colby forces in the last Legisla*ture and State Chairman of the new Colby organization, was appointed to prepare the declaration of principles. The platform indicates that it is the intention of the Colbyites to carry the fight they began against trusts and corporations and in favor of equal taxation to still greater lengths. Their most important pronouncement of the taxation question is that in favor of local taxation of the main stems of railroads and the taxation at local rates of the value of the franchises of street railway companies.

Their Platform.

The declaration of principles follows:

"The overthrow of the control of the party organizations by corporations through the medium of the bosses.

"The nomination of candidates for public offices by direct primaries without the intervention of delegates or conventions.

"The taxation of local rates of the value of the franchises of public utili*ty companies using the streets.*

"The enactment of a law permitting the voters to indicate upon their official ballots their choice for United States Senator.

"The assessment and taxation of all railroad property locally, except the personality without a situs and franchises which are to be taxed by the State. The repeal of the Hillery Maximum Tax-Rate act of 1906, and the County Board of Equalization of Taxation act.

"Any anti-monopoly law providing that any contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or for the purpose of maintaining a monopoly, or fixing prices, or limiting quantities of articles or commodities in general use shall be unlawful.

"Vesting in the court the power of summary review of the results of primary and general elections, including the power to order a recount of the ballots cast.

"A thorough legislative investigation of life-insurance companies and the relations existing between such companies and allied and subsidiary financial institutions.

To Prevent Over-Capitalization.

"An investigation of the capitalization of corporations to enable the intelligent enactment of laws to prevent over-capitalization and the evils which result therefrom.

"The repeal of the statute passed in 1903, chapter 182, in protection of fraudulent promoters.

"In order to prevent the suppression of popular legislation by killing bills in committee, the adoption of a rule whereby each house of the Legislature will be required to vote upon the request of twenty per centum of the members.

"The registration of legislative agents and lobbyists under a law similar to that for some time in force in Massachusetts, Wisconsin and Maryland, and lately passed by the Legislature of New York.

"A comprehensive civil-service law which will take the employment of sub-ordinate public officials out of politics.

"Legislation empowering municipalities to own and operate electric light or gas plants.

"A law compelling grand and petty juries to be publicly drawn by lot from the entire qualified citizenship of the county, with discretionary power of rejection in the court.

Constitutional Amendments.

"We also pledge ourselves to the following Constitutional amendments:

"An amendment separating, so far as possible, municipal from general State elections in the even numbered years, and the municipal elections in the odd numbered years. Pending such amendment, we pledge ourselves to the enactment of legislation to effectuate the principles as nearly as may be.

"An amendment providing that no act, unless it affects the health or safety of the people, shall take effect until ninety days after the adjournment of a session of the Legislature and approval by the Governor, and if within such ninety days 5 per centum of the voters file a petition with the Secretary of State requiring that any act shall be referred to the people, that direction to the election shall be held, and if the act is sustained by the people it shall become effective, but if not sustained shall be void.

"An amendment providing that 5 per centum of the voters may file a copy of any proposed statute in the office of the Secretary of State requesting that the same may be submitted to the people, and that thereupon the same may be submitted, and if sustained by the people shall become a law.

"An amendment providing for the election of Assemblymen by districts, apportioned according to population, but at least one for each county, and providing appropriate safeguards against gerrymandering.

"The Assemblymen from Essex also announce that they favor the candidacy of George L. Record for United States Senator."

LOST THEIR WITNESSES

Two Lawyers Received Sudden Checks in District Court This Morning.

SESSION ENLIVENED

Agitated Search of Barristers for Missing Witnesses—One Is Non-Suited But the Other Gets a Adjournment.

The session of the District Court was enlivened Tuesday by the unexpected absence of two of its principal witnesses.

The first lawyer to suffer through the incidents was S. S. Swackhamer, who appeared to press a contract case for the Dunham Grocery Company against Paul Machtwey, for $100. When the case was called Mr. Swackhamer was looking hurriedly for the bookkeeper of the Grocery Company, whose testimony was necessary to carry the cause on. He secured a delay from the court, and went out to look up the witness. He found, after a breathless search, that the latter had gone out of town, and finally got an adjournment to July 21.

When the cause of Anna Schwartz against Andrew LeVine, for $150 in tort, was called, Lawyer Fred J. Huff, attorney for the plaintiff, looked about and his face took on the same expression as that which clouded Mr. Swackhamer's a few minutes before. The complaining witness and the other witnesses for the case had disappeared. They came into court with Mr. Huff, and he couldn't understand what had become of them. His motion for an adjournment was refused, and after an unsuccessful search for the witnesses the case was nonsuited. LeVine claims that the dress was not damaged, and that it was held at the store because the plaintiff herself asked him to keep it for her. Francis J. Blatz is LeVine's lawyer, and a vigorous defense will be interposed if another suit is brought.

Other cases in the court were disposed of as follows: W. W. Wilson against Patrick Kneeland, on contract, judgment for $72, F. J. Blatz appearing for plaintiff; Kussel Meter against Annie Meter, in tort, for $200, was referred to Judge Swift; W. J. R. Thiers against Arthur Masters, on contract, for $200, judgment for $145, Coddington & Swackhamer representing the plaintiff; A. J. Dumeus against Henry Bogal, on contract, judgment for $139, W. S. Angleman appearing for the plaintiff; H. K. Lister against John Manley, in replevin, discontinued, Charles McNabb appearing for, the plaintiff; L. W. Lambert against D. R. Dunn, on contract, for $200, off to September 25; W. H. Twine against Walter Hamilton, on contract, for $100, judgment for $47, Codington & Swackhamer appearing for the plaintiff; Biche Gas Company against W. J. Osgood, on contract, for $300, discontinued, Reed & Coddington for the plaintiff; Hugh McDonnall against George B. Doty, on contract, adjourned to July 31, F. J. Blatz for the plaintiff; F. C. Schaffer against Edward Grau, landlord and tenant, judgment for possession; Adam Young, agent for O. H. Lock, against Mary Cushman, landlord and tenant, settled.

Kissimmee Fruit Co. Incorporated.

Certificate of incorporation has been filed in the office of the county clerk by the Kissimmee Fruit Company, the principal office of which will be at 525 Madison avenue, Plainfield. The objects for which the company is incorporated are to cultivate, plant, sell and deal in fruit, vegetables, etc., of every description. The total authorized capital stock is $100,000, divided into 100,000 shares at a par value of $1 each. The incorporators are Orra S. Rogers, Plainfield; Charles C. Chipman and Herbert G. Whipple, of New York city.

New Excise Board.

Judge Atwater in a special session of Court of Common Pleas Saturday appointed the new Excise Commission for Elizabeth to take the place of the board which went out of office on Thursday. The appointees are all well known citizens. They are Douglass G. Moore, Robert B. Cissel, James A. Hand, F. Otto Walter and Frederick F. Glasby. Messrs. Cissel, Hand and Glasby are Republicans, and Messrs. Moore and Walter are Democrats. According to the order issued by the court, the appointments date from July 24, 1906.

HUNTING FOR CANDIDATES

So Far the Colbyites in Union Co. Have Made Futile Search Excepting Here.

WANT STRONG MEN

No Programme Mapped Out in Union, But General One Is Issued From Colby Headquarters.

*Not until August 20 will the Col*byites in Union county have their movement in full swing for the New Jersey Republican League for Equal Taxation has decided not to begin its whirlwind campaign until that date. It has not even announced its programme as yet, although it is probable that every section of the county will be invaded during the latter part of next month and the fore part of September.

The trouble being encountered by the Union County League is in finding candidates for Assembly nominations. When Judge William N. Runyon, president of the league, announced his candidacy it was thought that others would follow in various parts of the county, but the expectations were not realized. Half a dozen men have been urged to come out. Each in turn emphatically refused for one reason or another.

In order to make the movement a strong one it is said to be necessary to have some popular man in Elizabeth on the ticket. No one can be found there, and now the leaders of the "new idea" are searching high and low in other parts of the county for one.

The following programme was issued by the State Equal Taxation League at its office in Newark yesterday:

Beginning on Monday night, July 30, in Somerville, Somerset county, with three champions of the Republican State League, Senator Everett Colby, Mayor Mark M. Pagan and George L. Record will repeat their whirlwind week of campaign work that was so successful two weeks ago. The coming week promises to be even more strenuous than the former.

W. W. Howland, temporary chairman of the organization in Somerset county, predicts a big turning out of the voters on Monday night. Tuesday night, July 31, will find the Colby men down in Burlington county. What promises to be a busy day for the "new idea" workers is scheduled for Wednesday in Camden county.

On August 2 Monmouth county will be the scene of another lively day. August 3 will find Senator Colby and his friends back to their own ballIwick, in Essex county.

After that week's campaign the leaders will take things a bit quieter for two weeks, preparing themselves for the final fight that will start on August 20, when Senator Colby comes down from the Thousand Islands for good, and will not end until the last polling booth is closed for the primaries on the night of September 25.

SITE WANTED FOR ELIZABETH POSTOFFICE.

Government to Advertise for Bids Here Monday—Corner Lot Demanded.

The Treasury Department of the Federal Government is looking for a site for the new post office to be built in Elizabeth, and yesterday began to advertise in this section for proposals for the sale of a suitable site to the government for that purpose.

The government demands a corner lot approximating 150 by 165 feet. Each proposal must be accompanied by a diagram of the land, showing the widths of adjacent streets and alleys, the grades, and the character of foundation obtainable. Any buildings on the land purchased by the government must be removed by the seller, who is also required to pay all expenses connected with furnishing evidence of titles and deeds of conveyance.

The proposals for the sale of the site will be received up till August 15 next, on which day they will be opened at the office of Secretary Shaw, in Washington.

The sum of $250,000 has been appropriated for a new post office in this city. The original amount was $200, to which $50,000 was added at the last session of Congress through the efforts of United States Senator John Kean.

BACK FROM CAMP.

Second Regiment Ends Its Week of Soldiering at Sea Girt.

The Second Regiment broke camp at Sea Girt Saturday afternoon, Co. K getting back into town at about 5 o'clock. The men looked brown and hardy, the week of real soldiering evidently agreeing with them well.

The men were paid off before leaving the encampment, in accordance with the provisions of the new Dick law. Before leaving camp Governor Stokes sent a letter to General Gillmore congratulating him on the success of the encampment. General Gillmore warmly praised Colonel Dennis Collins, commander of the Second regiment for the excellent discipline and spirit that pervaded the entire Railway Club.

Candidate For Mayor, Four For Councilmen and Two For Freeholders.

FIGHT AT PRIMARIES

Terms of Mayor Buchly, Councilmen Tolles, Hibbard, Tyler and F. Randolph and Two Freeholders Expire.

Candidates for mayor, ward councilmen and freeholders will be selected by the Republicans at the primaries on September 25. Several names have been mentioned in connection with the mayoralty but the politicians are all at sea regarding the councilmanic nominations, though four have to be picked. Two candidates for freeholder will also be chosen.

Those whose terms expire as ward councilmen are Ralph I. Tolles, in the First; Henry D. Hibbard, in the Second; William S. Tyler, in the Third, and Col. Frank K. Randolph in the Fourth. Mr. Tolles will be renominated in the First, for the regulars are solid for him and the Colby movement there is not formidable. In the Second there will be a fight against Mr. Hibbard, should he decide to stand again for a nomination. The Colbyites favor him, it is said, but the regulars are not for him.

As the Second ward is the stronghold of the "new idea" men it is said that Mr. Hibbard's chances of success would be excellent. Mr. Tyler will likely be the Colbyites candidate in the Third ward. There will be opposition to him, however, on the part of the organization men, though they do not say who they will favor. In the Fourth ward, Col. Randolph can have a renomination, the leaders say, if he wants it, but it is reported on good authority that he doesn't want it. Who the Colbyites will pick in that ward is not known.

Freeholder Samuel P. T. Wilbur will be favored by the organization for a full term. The Colbyites are out against him. That who they will back being kept dark but it is said that many of the anti-organization men favor J. E. MacDonald. It is quite certain that another man will be put in Freeholder William A. Westphal's job.

It appears to be reasonably certain now that R. Henry Depew will be the choice of the anti-organization Republicans for mayor. Mr. Depew, himself, is non-committal as to his attitude but close friends say that he will accept the nomination if tendered by the Colbyites. Henry L. Hall and Elliott T. Barrows are out of the running. Mr. Hall has emphatically declined and Mr. Barrows is not a Colbyite so far as the municipality is concerned.

A report is in circulation that Mr. Barrows will be the organization possibility for the nomination provided former Mayor Charles J. Fisk declines to become the administration candidate. Mr. Fisk has not announced as yet whether he will stand, but knowing ones say that there will be something doing at the meeting of the city committee tonight. Should he be named, the situation will not be cleared up for the Colbyites declare they will oppose his nomination on September 25.

FIREWORKS WITH MUSIC AT CONCERT FRIDAY NIGHT.

Elaborate Display to Be Given by Bandmaster LaVere in Connection with Programme.

The first of a series of fireworks exhibits in connection with the weekly band concerts is to be given at Concert Park Friday evening under the direction of Bandmaster Ben LaVere. Arrangements have been made for an elaborate exhibition of pyrotechnics, which will include eighteen set pieces. Among these will be a large American flag, reproduced in colored fire of the national colors. Rockets and mines will also be shown, including some eight shot rockets. The display will be in charge of four men from the New Jersey Fireworks Co., of Newark, who are to come to this city Friday to arrange for the building of the set pieces.

The musical programme has not yet been announced, but will include several selections from recent musical comedies by the band, and solo selections by three soloists. "Nick" Parker, who was in Plainfield for the last concert of the season last fall, will be found here to sing. Jack Elliott, a new tenor, will have two numbers, as will Eddie Weston. The fireworks will be displayed between the selections by the band. Arrangements have been made so that the fireworks will be displayed where they can be best seen from the grand stand, and admission of twenty-five cents will be charged to the stand Friday evening. The stand can only accommodate 500 persons, but arrangements have been completed for a supply of camp chairs to be brought to the grounds for the accommodation of a large crowd.

Rahway Mayor Resigns Club.

Rahway, June 24.—Angered, it is said, by the intimations that he winked at liquor selling in clubs on Sundays, Mayor James B. Parker, of this city, has sent in his resignation as the exclusive Railway Club.

WHO IS E. SAGE'S SON?

Dispatch Says Inmate of Ill. Asylum Comes Here to Visit Offspring.

HE IS NOT KNOWN

Father Unjustly Incarcerated in Institution for the Insane For Four Years—He Escaped.

According to a dispatch received today from Chicago, Franklin H. Sage, a mechanical engineer, of Hartford, Conn., who escaped from the Elgin (Ill.) Asylum for the Insane, after five years' unjust imprisonment, is supposed to have started for this city, where he has a son living. He left Hammond, Ind., Monday, it is said, and he so stated to friends before boarding the train. The Plainfield directory does not contain the name of any Sage and a thorough inquiry has failed to locate the relative.

The dispatch states that Sage received an injury to his head early in his career and a tumor resulted which subjected him, in hot weather especially, to sudden spells of unconsciousness. He was in Chicago in August, 1901, en route for Phoenix, Arizona, to his home in Connecticut, when one of those spells came upon him.

When he returned to consciousness Sage found himself in the detention hospital. Before he could take steps to prevent it he was committed to the Elgin asylum. Then he began efforts to communicate with his relatives, but without success. He made one memorable escape four years ago, when he eluded the guards and got to Hammond, Ind. He stayed a few days with Masonic friends and went to Chicago to seek a draft. He was arrested and taken back to the Elgin asylum.

Sage had *no further chance to es*cape until Wednesday, when he was taken to a ball game. He eluded the guards and made his way to Chicago.

Sage went to the residence of W. R. Donaldson, a director of the Chicago Motor Vehicle Company, an old friend. After a narrow escape from being turned away as a tramp by the servants, he was recognized by Mr. Donaldson and in fifteen minutes was started on a whirlwind automobile trip to Hammond, to get him out of the jurisdiction of the Illinois authorities.

Beside the son supposed to be living in Plainfield, Sage is said to have two sons in New York, a son and two daughters in Hartford and a daughter and two sisters in New London, Conn.

GOLF IS TRYING ON THE NERVES.

It is doubtful if the average golfer appreciates to what extent the mind is affected by the little incidents which come up in the course of a trip round the links. Golf is certainly a game of nerves. The subtle influence of surrounding conditions has its effect upon every stroke, and its a fact that mental condition is of greater importance than physical fitness.

To play golf successfully one cannot be worried, consequently temperament becomes an important factor. To a certain extent golfers are born, not made. The thousand and one other trifles which distract the nervous mass of highly strung organism altogether escape the notice of the phlegmatic individual. Most golfers know how depressing it is to be continually outdriven by an opponent. On the other hand, how our confidence increases when playing against a man that we know is likely to "crack" under the slightest provocation.

Doggedness is also a factor often overlooked, yet few will deny the disconcerting effect of playing against one who never knows when he is beaten. The talkative golfer is one that has to be sure, but it occasionally happens that one's only alternative is to give him a dose of his own medicine.

Tell the noisy fellow as he tees up for a drive at a hole where the width of the fair green is limited, that nine out of ten drives generally go out of bounds, and he is quite likely to hand out a wild one in his extra effort to beat it straight.

It is this control over the nerves more than anything else which is the secret of the professional's success. Their advantage is considerable over the more imaginative and nervous amateur, who more frequently golfers start out by reciting off hole after hole in par figures and then go to pieces. They have suddenly awakened to a realization of the fact that they have a chance to break the record. It is then that the nerves get busy. This inability to keep the nerves under control over the whole course is the cause of nearly all the trouble.

To use the phrase, "not to crack" is the one thing most desired. It seldom happens that two players fight out a match with equal nerve mastery; sooner or later one or the other loses control, and in consequences the match. The golfers, therefore, whose nerve mastery is complete, though playing but an average game, would beat the world.

GOLDEN EAGLES GATHER

District Meeting of Order Attended by Knights From Many Places.

STATE OFFICERS ATTEND

Degree Team Work Exemplified—Some Speeches and a Collation.

Members of the Knights of the Golden Eagle from Somerville, New Brunswick, the Oranges, Farmingdale, Asbury Park, Phillipsburg and Bridgeton attended a district meeting of the order held in the rooms of Freedom Castle, No. 43, last night. While the meeting was intended for the castles included in the district comprising Plainfield, Somerville, New Brunswick and the Oranges, there were delegations present from other places mentioned, including some grand castle officers.

It was the last meeting over which District Deputy R. V. Keaney, of this city, will preside, he having held the office for the usual length of time. His successor will be appointed at the meeting of the grand castle in Trenton in September, and it is reported that he will be a New Brunswick man.

Among the grand castle officers present were Grand Vice Chief Kirby, of Bridgeton; Grand Sir Herald Condit, of Asbury Park, and Past Grand Chief Dr. J. Herrey Buchanan, of Freedom Castle.

During the evening the initiatory team from Freedom Castle, in full costume, exemplified the third degree on one candidate, with the musical accompaniment, Martin Korff, violin; Whitfield Frazee, cornet, and Louis M. Hummer, piano. The work of the team was highly praised by the assemblage. After the initiatory work there were speeches by the grand castle officers and members of the other delegations and later Freedom Castle, through its good and welfare committee served a collation in the banquet hall.

During the collation popular selections were given by the instrumental trio. Several visiting delegations made the trip to Plainfield in special trolleys. Those who came that way included the members from Blue Ridge Castle, of Orange; New Brunswick Castle and the Somerville Castle. It was long after midnight when the visitors departed for their homes.

KANE'S NOMINAL VERDICT.

District Court Allows Him $1 and Costs In Suit Against Dennick.

Aleck Kane got a nominal verdict against George H. Dennick in the District Court yesterday afternoon, in his suit to collect the money alleged to be due on a broken contract. Clarence Murphy was his lawyer.

Kane claimed that Dennick contracted to buy 100,000 to 125,000 second-hand bricks for use in constructing the New Market schoolhouse, and then refused to take them, protesting a check for $75 he had paid on account. Dennick's defense was that he had an understanding with Kane that the brick would not be taken if the architect said second-hand material could not be used, and that the architect so ruled. Evidence of this understanding was not rebutted and the court gave Kane a verdict of $1 and costs.

Fred Martin Back.

Fred Martin, of Borough Collector George F. Brown's office, returned today after spending the month of July at Camp Wanamaxa, Deal Lake, Asbury Park. There are now seven members at the club camp. The club has not been particularly active in sports during July, but most of the members have their canoes and numerous sporting events are being planned for this month, as in previous years. The camp will remain open until Labor Day.

Warning to Liverymen.

As a result of the attempt, last week, to get away with one of the horses of the Central Livery Stable, Chief Kiely has warned all the liverymen in the city to refuse hoyses to people not known to them. The chief is not anxious to have the city known as a clinch among horsethieves, and he asks the liverymen to make somebody vouch for every stranger who wants a rig.

Got Money For Dress.

Anna Schwartz won her suit, yesterday, against Aaron LeVine, a cleaner, for the value of a dress alleged to have been damaged by being hung up in his show window. Judge Newcorn gave her a verdict of $22.50.

Jean M. Peterson Buried.

The funeral of Jean M. Peterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Peterson, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at Bethel chapel. Rev. Frederick D. Tilden officiated. The interment was at Hillside.

NEW BRUNSWICK EXCITED OVER BOB FITZSIMMONS

CROWDS TURN OUT TO SEE HIM ON HIS WAY TO COPS' GAME.

Stopping over on his way to Trenton, where he inspired the game between the Plainfield police nine and the Trenton bluecoat combination, "Bob" Fitzsimmons stirred up New Brunswick. "Bob" didn't do anything to make excitement except to appear. The sporting spirit of New Brunswick responded to his mere presence, and the populace buzzed with excitement when it learned that the ex-heavy-weight champion was in its midst.

Fitz arrived in New Brunswick early in the afternoon and proceeded to the Pennsylvania station to take a train to Trenton. He arrived too late to get one of the one o'clock trains and found he would have to wait until the 3:13 o'clock train.

He had hardly arrived on the station platform before the small boy heard of his arrival in town and made haste to the station to get a glimpse of the famous pugilist. With every tick of the clock the crowd increased rapidly until "Bob" found himself surrounded by a band of men and boys that seemed to annoy him more than a swarm of mosquitoes.

Fitzsimmons took it good naturedly for a time but he finally decided to seek shelter elsewhere. He did not like to create such a circus and feared he might be arrested for drawing a crowd or violating some rule of the railroad company or one of the city ordinances.

He made haste across French street to the saloon of John J. Harkins, but the crowd was as active as he and followed him not many feet behind. Entering the saloon the boys of short stature tried to get a glimpse of the fighter by climbing on the swinging doors. Some even ventured inside their curiosity overcoming their fear of Fitz's ire.

William J. McDede arrived on the scene shortly afterward with his auto and in this he took Fitzsimmons out for a ride. The crowd watched the auto till it was out of sight while some of the barefooted lads gave chase and followed it until the speed limit made them give up the race.

"NEW IDEA" A MISNOMER

SAYS FARMER ORATOR.

James E. Martine Says He Has Shouted Same Colby Principles for 45 Years.

"The Constitution of New Jersey, as it stands today, does not represent the ideas of the best people of the State, and has not for many years," says James E. Martine. "In the first place," he says, "a provision should be inserted for popular election of United States Senators. Another thing is that some arrangements should be made for the election of Assemblymen by districts. I most heartily agree with the statement issued by the State committee of our party."

The "farmer orator" declared to a reporter that there was nothing new in the so-called "new idea" movement, excepting the men proclaiming it. "They have seen the merits of the Democratic theories," he said, "and have held hold of them for selfish motives. I do say that the Colbyites are insincere, but their stand is certainly inconsistent. They tell us that if their principles are defeated at the primaries they will throw them aside for the time being, at least, and really around the banners of those they now condemn as dishonest men, bosses, pirates of finance and the like. Now, if what they say is true on September 25, it will be equally true on the election day, and if they abandon those principles and fight for the success of the pirates they now condemn, are they, I ask, consistent?

"George Record told me not long ago that I had better go over and fight with them, and I reminded him that I had been shouting those very principles from one end of the State to the other for the last forty-five years. If that's a 'new idea' movement then I am a very young man, for I was but eighteen years old when I first proclaimed it. I have the utmost admiration for Everett Colby, but he's not a man with a 'new idea.'"

Rioton By An Insect.

Miss Nellie Ballentine, of Debele & Stahl's confectionery store, is confined to her home on Somerset street by a painful injury to her right arm. Miss Ballentine was bitten or stung on the wrist Monday by some sort of a flying insect. She thought nothing of the matter until yesterday, when the wrist and arm became very much inflamed and swollen. A physician is in attendance.

Campers Off.

Judge Runyon's camping party left for Lake Hopatcong this morning in good order. They went on the 8:21 train, with a ton of baggage and something to sustain them on the arduous journey.

BAD BILLS DIDN'T PASS

Two Youths Work Fruitlessly Here With Clumsily Executed Counterfeits.

COPS WERE AWAY

Came To Town Yesterday Afternoon and Tried To Get Rid Of Four Imitations of One Dollar Notes.

While the chief, his one cy-cop and most of the rank and file of the police force were playing ball at Trenton yesterday afternoon, two young men tried to scatter counterfeit bank notes through the business district. The bills were badly executed, and nobody accepted them. No effort was made to place the pair in the hands of the police, because of the ease with which the bad bills were detected.

It is supposed that the youths were sent here by some distributor of bad money who had heard that the town would be practically officerless yesterday afternoon, affording lots of room for a trip that way. At any rate, they didn't appear until after the chief and his men had left for Trenton to play the police nine of that city in the opening game of a series that is to decide the police championship of the State.

The youths first tried to pass the counterfeit in Thomas Timbo's restaurant on North avenue. They asked for change, and tendered a bank note that was a very poor imitation of the real thing. The clerk, Miss Florence Neighbor, detected the poser quality of the bill and returned to accept it. Unflustrayed, the pair tried to pass the bills in half a dozen different places along the avenue and Front street. They separated and worked both business streets, but they failed to find a sucker anywhere. They were seen to board a train for New York shortly after 5 o'clock, two hours after reaching town. Chief Kiely is looking for clues to them today.

MRS. DOW BURIED.

Widow of Seminary Founder Laid to Rest in Evergreen.

The remains of Susannah L. Dow, widow of E. Dean Dow, who died on Saturday at her late home, Knoxville, Tenn., arrived in this city yesterday afternoon and were interred in the family burying plot, Evergreen cemetery. The service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Frazee, pastor of the Congregational church, of Knoxville, who had taken the journey in fulfilment of a promise made to Mr. Dow before his death that he would see Mrs. Dow laid in her last earthly resting place. Mr. Frazee spoke tenderly of his old-time friend, Mr. Dow, and the beautiful character of Mrs. Dow, the sunshine of whose nature was not clouded, even when blindness became her fate.

Mr. Dow was prominent as an educator nearly a half century ago when the boarding school of which he was principal, Ophelotechnic Seminary, was removed from Easton, Pa., to this city. The Plainfield Seminary on West Seventh street was built by Mr. Dow and conducted by him as a boarding and day school for a number of years. It is said, because the editor of the Central New Jersey Times, a weekly.

Fire Department Changes In Effect.

The fire department changes whereby Captain Tierney goes to No. 4 house, Captains Fehring and Daly to headquarters, went into effect this morning and Chief Dons reports that everything is running along satisfactorily. The captains entered upon their duties in their new locations in earnest showing that there is every disposition on their part to comply with the department rules.

City National Bank's Dividend.

The fifty-ninth semi-annual dividend of four per cent. to the stockholders has been declared by the Board of Directors of the City National Bank. This, with the record of more than $21,000 already paid, places the bank in the front rank of financial institutions in the State, and establishes a record of growth and strength that commands it to its patrons.

Hatfield Appointed.

Walter L. Hatfield, 2d has received his certificate of appointment from Gov. Stokes as a member of the Union County Board of Registry and Election. He succeeds John W. Murray, Jr., who is now collector of taxes.

Jailed For 40 Days.

George Totten, forty years old, was sent to jail yesterday for forty days, on a charge of gross misconduct. Judge Runyon scored him severely in passing sentence.

Fireworks Friday.

REFORM MEETING STIRS SOUTH PLAINFIELD

A. R. FORDYCE, G. W. CORY AND C. A. BLOOMFIELD SPEAK.

Before an enthusiastic audience, last night, former Assemblyman Alexander Fordyce, leader of the reform fight in Middlesex county, and his chief lieutenant, George W. Corey, of Stelton, fired the first antiring gun in South Plainfield. The attendance was large and the speakers won hearty applause.

The gathering was representative of the electorate of the village and the surrounding country. That they were heartily in sympathy with the battle against bossism was easily shown. Mr. Fordyce was the chief speaker, and his ringing indictment against the machine men and their methods was met with sustained applause.

Mr. Corey spoke after Mr. Fordyce, and C. A. Bloomfield closed his eloquent talk on the arraignment of the corporation-bound members.

South Plainfield was ripe for a rallying call by the reformers. The voters of the village have been anti-"regular" ever since the borough bill on which the voters were not, was smothered in the dark of the night. Machine methods are said to have been responsible for the death of the measure.

SOUTH PLAINFIELDERS KICK AGAINST USE OF SOFT COAL.

Petition Circulated by Commuters and Tradesmen to Try and Make Lehigh Valley Quit Practice.

A petition protesting against the use of soft coal on Lehigh Valley railroad has been drawn up by South Plainfield commuters, and about fifty New Market and South Plainfield business men have put their signatures. The majority of the signers are commuters, who have become impatient at the smoke nuisance in the trains. Aside from a matter of cleanliness, the commuters complain that sore throats and inflamed eyes have resulted from the burning of soft coal, for the dense smoke sweeps in the car windows in Dismal Cañon.

Business men living near the tracks say it is impossible to keep stock or stores clean, with the dense smoke driving through the street every time a train passes. Several freshly painted houses have been ruined by the smoke and the townspeople are determined to do everything in their power to get the company to go back to anthracite coal. At one time last year, the railroad attempted to introduce soft coal in place of the anthracite, but the feeling in South Plainfield and nearby towns was so strong that the company ceased the practise after a few weeks. The signers of the petition will forward it to the general superintendent of the railroad this week.

Campers Return Home.

Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Holy Cross church, and the choir boys arrived home this morning from Shushane, Berkshire Hills, where they have been camping for two weeks. The party broke camp at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and boarded the Steamer C. W. Morse. They arrived in New York at 7 o'clock this morning, reaching Plainfield about 9:30. With the exception of Albert Miller, of East Third street, all returned in good spirits and well pleased with the outing. Young Miller contracted a cold two days ago and owing to his illness it was decided to have him remain at Shushane a few days longer. He is in charge of George Westervelt, an older member of the choir, who is experienced in the care of the sick.

Sent To Asylum.

Mrs. Anna Robinson, colored, was taken to Morris Plains asylum this morning, for commitment. The woman was once well-to-do, and influential among the colored race here. The police say a certain colored minister, now dead, defrauded her of her money, and that the troubles which followed her loss unsettled her mind. Three or four years ago she was rescued from Tier's lake in mid-winter while trying to drown herself.

Rector At Grace Church.

During the absence of Rev. R. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, who is spending his summer vacation in Canada, Rev. John H. Kean, of Rockville Centre, will have charge of the church services. Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector-emeritus, will spend the month of August at Saunderstown, Rhode Island. He will leave this week.

Charlie Hans Settles.

The suit of Max Leitner against Charlie Hans, the Chinese laundryman, for damaging three pairs of trousers, has been settled.

SLAUGHTERED IN TRENTON

Cops' Nine Got It Good and Hard at the State Capital.

WERE TOYED WITH

Trenton Twirler Passed Thirteen, and They Only Scored by Permission—Fitz Umpires the Bases.

With their features wreathed in a mixture of sadness and good cheer, the cops' nine sneaked back into town last night from Trenton. They sneaked, because they didn't have any good excuse for what happened to them when the Trenton bluecoats got through with them on the diamond. The good cheer came from something that happened after the game; the winners fed them.

Some of them perked up this morning and said the game wasn't so bad, and pointed to the score, 7 to 4, to support the allegation. But reports from Trenton, where they are impartial, but just, say that the score bears no recognizable relation to the game. Some of the cops, especially Plainfield's part of it. The score does give out the impression that the contest was something of a ball game, but the spectators are willing to take affidavit it was a lemon—and a very yellow one.

Cap Fergie had Scott and O'Loughlin, the Clinton Avenue battery, and George Allen in the game, but the ballast failed to trim the craft enough to prevent it getting swamped. The Trenton coppers can play ball, and what they did to the local nine, which can't, is a painful thing for Plainfielders to read about.

The Trenton men displayed some lively baseball skill at times, but the aggregation from this city were not fast enough to trim a junior nine. Shadell on the stab for the Trentons, fanned 13 and the error of the Tregton nine good naturedly permitted the visitors to score a few runs for appearance sake. Had the home nine played in their usual style they would have scored runs by the dozen.

After the game the Trenton coppers simply toyed with the Plainfield bunch, the batters making no effort to run out hits. Bob Fitzsimmons, the ex-champion pugilist, umpired the base decisions. The redtopped one was hooked to umpire the game, but he was late in reaching a the grounds and the game was started with Owen Sheehan as the holder of the indicator.

Fitz arrived at the grounds at the end of the fourth inning and it was decided to allow him to handle the base decisions. Some of his decisions were base enough, but nobody made any holler. Toward the close of the game Ruby Robert was presented with a bunch of flowers. He looked at the bouquet, smelled of the flowers and tossed them to a man on the players' bench.

A crowd of nearly 600 was on hand and applauded Fitz when he made his appearance. He gave his decisions on the soft pedal plan and the rooters in the grandstand requested him to pull out.

The score:

SHARP REPLY TO ICE DEALERS' SILLY LETTER

Protective Association Refusing Offer Says Its Up to Natural Ice Co. to Solve Problem.

DEMANDS FAIR PRICES

Reminds Ice Men That They Sacrificed Profits to Get Rid of Competition—Doesn't Want Trade Restrained.

Some days ago the Natural Ice Company, which is alleged to control the ice business here, sent an open letter to the Plainfield Protective Association, taking occasion to deny that there is any "trust" in the business here and making some odd offers. This letter has brought the following reply from President R. Henry Depew, of the Protective Association:

Natural Ice Company,
Plainfield, N. J.

Gentlemen:

Your letter of the 26th inst. has been forwarded to me and in reply I beg to say that the Protective Association has made no statement to the papers that ice can be manufactured or obtained, at the present time, for $1.25 a ton. Individual members may have mentioned having been informed that it could be manufactured at that price in an up-to-date plant, but I do not believe that any one has said that it could be bought now at that figure. Someone, not a member of our association, wrote to the paper two or three months ago that you could have bought ice last winter at that price but refused to do it. It may be that to which you refer, but it is not our statement and we know nothing about the facts.

In regard to your two offers, that you will pay us $4 a ton (weighed in Plainfield) provided we will guarantee to deliver to your wagons from day to day, for the remainder of the season, all the ice you require for your present trade; or that you will give us the use of your horses, wagons, implements, etc., free of charge, provided we will guarantee to carry out your contracts, we will say that we must decline both propositions for the reason that, having had the benefit of our patronage for years past, it is up to you and not to us to work out the solution of this problem. We are not in the ice business and never have been, and consequently we do not understand the details and working of it, as you do; and furthermore, in view of the present conditions and general agitation, it is not at all probable that the wholesale dealers would do as well for us as they will for you.

And further, having sold to us at a very high price the ice which you did secure last winter at a cost probably not greatly in excess of the cost in former years, we do not expect to have you lay down and put the burden of handling the situation upon us.

We look to you to do everything in your power to relieve the situation, even to the extent of sacrificing some of your profits for the balance of the season, as you say you sacrificed them a few years ago when the elimination of competition was in progress.

I note that you deny that there is an "ice Trust" in Plainfield, and that anyone is at liberty to engage in the business. Of course anyone is, but that, of itself, does not prove the non-existence of a trust. That fact is proved or disproved by what is, and not by what may be in the future. I hope, however, that the whole situation will be put upon a basis which will be satisfactory to everyone, at least before another season comes around, and I can assure you that our association will continue to work with that end in view.

Referring to the statement in your former letter that a reduction of ten cents in the price to householders and a corresponding increase to dealers would make matters right as to the latter, we are obliged to say that if we should be obliged to raise the price of meat, I beg to say that I do not find this statement borne out by the facts. In the first place at least two of the butchers have their own refrigerating plants and consequently are not obliged to pay the price of ice, and as an increase of ten cents per hundred would only increase the cost of handling meat 1-10 cents per pound, those butchers who buy it would not be justified in increasing their prices. Of course it would increase their expenses somewhat, but that is a thing which happens in every business at times. We would only expect it to continue but a very

CHARGES HUSBAND WITH NON-SUPPORT

MRS. FAGIO, OF THE BOROUGH, SWEARS OUT WARRANT FOR HIS ARREST.

Arrested on complaint of his wife on charges of non-support of her and her four children, Vincent Fagio, of Somerset street, is a most unwilling prisoner at the borough court today. Mrs. Fagio made the complaint against her husband through Borough Overseer of the Poor Fred Becker, and the warrant was served by Constable Pangborn late yesterday afternoon.

There are four little Fagios, from two to seven years of age, and Mrs. Fagio claims that her husband did not allow her means to support them. About a week ago, Fagio took the children and disappeared with them, refusing to tell where they were. He said he had taken them to some place to be taken care of. Mrs. Fagio's complaint includes charges of brutal treatment to herself. She alleges that her husband is very hot tempered and has repeatedly beaten and abused her. She claims that his latest form of brutality is to rub her face upon the carpet, while holding her by the hair.

At the borough court this morning, Fagio appeared to be the worst treated husband in the world. He is a small, wiry man, with great contortional powers, which he exercised whenever anybody came near him. He has no especial love or respect for his wife, but tells a tale of her cruelty to the children, which necessitated him taking them away temporarily. He has retained as his counsel Francis J. Blatz, and Mrs. Fagio will have S. S. Swackhamer argue her side of the question before Justice of the Peace Mundy at the borough court this evening, when the case will come up for hearing.

BAND MUSIC AND PRAYER.

Don't Mix, So Harrey Chapel's Meeting Night Is Changed.

The band concerts have compelled Warren chapel to change the night of its weekly prayer meeting.

Because of the disturbance occasioned by the fireworks and the band, on Friday night, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, the pastor of the chapel, has decided to hold the regular prayer meeting on Wednesday nights instead of Friday, while the concerts continue.

The chapel is located near Concert Park and the music and fireworks have been very annoying to the worshippers. Bandmaster La Vere says that the concerts are held Friday nights because the musicians are not available any other night in the week.

Funeral At Dunellen.

Rev. Henry A. Jordan, pastor of the First Baptist church, of New Market, was in charge of the funeral of Mrs. Katherine M. Carey, who died Sunday. The service was at the home of Mrs. Carey's daughter, Mrs. Rowland Smith, of Dunellen, yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Henry Nischwitz, Joseph Flack, Albert Stein and Thomas Welsh acted as pall bearers. Mrs. Joseph V. Farlee, of Grandview avenue, is the other daughter. The interment was at Hillside cemetery.

Funeral of Mrs. Bennett.

The funeral service of Mrs. Mary L. Bennett, who died Sunday, was held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at her late home, 27 Fairview avenue. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, officiated, and there was a mass of floral tributes. Four sons, Charles, Walter B., J. L., and Harry Bennett, and two sons-in-law, John Dixon and C. E. Milligan, acted as pall bearers. The interment was in the Rahway cemetery.

Bells Wireless Telegraph Idea.

Charles Warner, of Morgantown, W. V., is visiting James R. Martine. Mr. Warner is a student at the college at Morgantown. He is much interested in wireless telegraphy, and with a young friend he has constructed a wireless line that works perfectly. The builders did and made everything in connection with the station.

Addresses Sunday-school Outing.

S. S. Swackhamer is at Woodbury, today, where he addressed a gathering of 2,000 evangelicalists from a combined excursion of Hunterdon county Sunday-schools. The topic of Swackhamer's address was "The Moral Element of Government."

Ball Spoils His Head.

William Mullen, well known among junior ball players, is out of the game on account of a painful injury received in a contest last Saturday. While catching for the Potter A. C. his head was split open by a ball.

'CAP' CLARK IS CLEARED

Beach Guard Vindicated of Charge Growing From Thomas Drowning.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED

Witness Says Thomas Were In the Most Dangerous Place In the Surf and Couldn't Be Saved.

"Cap" Clark, the Atlantic City beach guard who was charged with cowardice in connection with the drowning of Robert L. Thomas and his daughter last Saturday, has been vindicated by Mayor Stoy, of that place. He was allowed to resign last night, without blame for the accident.

Mayor Stoy issued an official statement after the investigation in which he declared that Captain Clark is not a coward. The statement was as follows:

"After a thorough investigation and hearing eye witnesses, I have discovered that the tragedy in which Robert Thomas and his daughter lost their lives in the surf on Saturday was due to unusual combination of dangerous winds and currents at the point at which they were bathing; that the attempt at rescue of Life Guard Clark was worthy of high commendation, that no blame can be attached to Life Guard Clark, according to witnesses, who from the statement of Mr. Hines, made an attempt to reach the imperilled ones.

"However there is no doubt that a more active man than Clark could have done better work. Under the trying circumstances and for the good of the service, I shall accept Clark's resignation from the life guard force, which has been voluntarily offered.

"It has been testified that the girl was bathing in a dangerous spot when she was first thrown off her feet and would not have been allowed to remain there had not Life Guard Clark been away from his regular post engaged in taking others out of danger. In view of this I would advise that life guards take every precaution to warn bathers against entering the ocean at places unprotected by life guards and to use every reasonable effort to persuade bathers to congregate in the protected district and also earnestly request the bathers to pay special heed to the warnings of the guards whose only object is to protect life."

At the hearing yesterday Captain Clark told fully of what had occurred on the beach. After the hearing was over, Mayor Stoy said: "Captain Clark told fully of what had occurred on the beach. After the hearing was over, Mayor Stoy said: "Captain John Hines, a man employed by Councilman Riddle, had seen the whole occurrence on the beach. The Mayor secured Hines' testimony which in brief is as follows, and which corroborates Captain Clark's statement that rescue was well nigh impossible.

Said Mr. Hines:

"I was at Albany avenue and the beach. I was standing at the back end of the house when I heard cries and went up in the top of the stable inside of which is a window to look. Very few people were there, not more than three.

"I saw Capt. Clark. He was at the avenue below Albany avenue with a bunch of bathers. He ran to his station. He went out in the surf with the bathers.

"If it had not been for Capt. Clark the man (the hero-cook Lux) who went out, would have lost his life. Not a guard on the beach could have saved the people who were drowned.

"There was an awful undertow. Capt. Clark tried it and only one could swim in such a furious current.

"The child was in a dangerous place and should not have been left there. It was further out in the surf than I dared go myself."

Captain Clark, before the Mayor, said in brief, that he was near Albany avenue watching half a dozen bathers, who were going out too far when a lad told him Thomas and his daughter were in danger a square away; that he ran to the spot and attempted to get into the surf when Lux came along, took the life buoy and started in.

"I shoved the buoy to Lux," said Clark, "after he had got into the surf, or he, too, would have been lost.

"When the word came to me that Thomas was in danger and I reached the spot I could see no one and did not go out because I could not see in which direction I was needed.

"Neither myself or Life Guard Wills had any opportunity to do anything because the people had gone down out of sight. I went into the water over my head, swimming sideways to near them in case they came up and to save the drowning."

Captain Clark took a good deal of pride in exhibiting, yesterday, a letter from the United States Volunteer Life-saving Corps, of which he is a member, which he had received on July 10, only a day or two before his appointment to the beach guards this season.

The letter is as follows:

"United States Volunteer Life Saving Corps. July 13th.

"Dear Sir:

"We are about to act upon the request of George R. Stearn made by you on August 28th, 1905: Kindly send us your name correctly spelled and also your present address.

"Yours truly,

"EDWARD C. BRENNAN."

Stern is a Philadelphia visitor, whom Captain Clark pulled out of the surf with buoy and line after a hard struggle, in which both bather and guard were greatly exhausted. The facts of the rescue were reported to the Volunteer Association's attention and it is likely that Captain Clark will receive a medal or other reward.

MUSIC AND FIREWORKS ENJOYED BY BIG CROWD

RAIN OBLIGINGLY HOLDS OFF UNTIL ALL BUT TWO NUMBERS ARE GIVEN.

The largest crowd of the season witnessed Ben LaVere's double programme of music and pyrotechnics at Concert Park Friday. In numbers it was over 2,000 and with nearly a third of that number on the grandstand at a quarter a head the affair can safely be called a success from every standpoint. The rain condescendingly held off until all but two musical numbers had been given and when a healthy shower made everybody think they didn't care to hear them.

The concert end of the evening was up to the usual mark of excellence, the programme having a pleasing variety of selections. Nick Parker and Jack Elliott were the vocalists and Eddie Weston was also to have warbled but the rain and he made their appearance at the same time. Of the instrumental numbers, "Noisy Bill" was easily the best and made the biggest hit. It is a characteristic piece and the engine of a merry-go-round anchored just back of the band stand, obligingly helped out the musicians by blowing off steam at the psychological moment.

The fireworks display seemed to please the crowd but it was not exceptionally good. It comprised a half dozen set pieces mostly pinwheels and a series of aerial bombs that dynamited the atmosphere. They were given between the musical numbers in a sort of "to be continued in our next" fashion.

Leader LaVere was well pleased with the patronage accorded his undertaking and says that he will have other open before the katydids begin chirping.

UP GO LICENSES OF NEWARK SALOONS.

New Excise Board Under the Bishops' Bill Fixes Fee at $500 a Year.

Immediately after its organization yesterday the new Board of Excise of Newark, appointed by Judge Ten Eyck, of the Essex County Court of Common Pleas, under the Bishops' law, fixed the fee for all classes of licenses at $500 a year. The law prescribes a minimum fee of $300 for cities of Newark's class. This action places beer-bottlers on the same plane as wholesale and retail liquor dealers.

Heretofore the fee for both wholesale and retail licenses has been $250. The beer-bottlers have paid only $75.

Saloon men assert the $500 fee will drive fully 50 per cent. of the small liquor dealers out of business, including a large number of owners of small homes in part of which they conduct their business. There are more than 1,500 wholesale and retail dealers and bottlers now operating under local licenses, and it was estimated yesterday by Thomas C. Hayes, State President of the Liquor Dealers' Protective League, that nearly 50 per cent. of the retail men and a majority of the bottlers will be forced out of business.

The board now is composed of Richard C. Jenkinson, president; Eugene Ward, Edward Zusi and Gen. Edward A. Campbell. On its organization it reappointed Inspector William B. Tompkins and the other employes of the retiring board. It also decided in addition to increasing the license fee to also raise the fee for transfer of licenses. For a single transfer the charge will hereafter be $10 instead of $5, while for a double transfer the charge will be from $10 to $20.

It was decided that all licenses granted between now and July 1, 1907, shall be on a pro rata basis, to expire on that date. This is for the purpose of having all licenses expire at the same time. All licenses will be required in future to display their certificates in their front windows. This is to make it difficult for holders to surreptitiously dispose of their licenses and to make it easy for the police to ascertain the exact character of the holder.

The board agreed to adopt a drastic course in the cases of licensees who violate the Sunday-closing provisions of the new law. Conviction for that violation, it is understood, will be inevitably followed by revocation of the license, with an added penalty that the offender cannot apply for another license for at least one year.

LITERARY.

The August Lippincott's has made a "diversion" its standard, article excluding capitals in "Any or likely to contain a sleeping-potion. The result is a well rounded number of infinite variety. There is the complete novelette, "An Adventure in Arcady," by Ralph Henry Barbour, which is the finest sustained story. That Mr. Barbour is past-master in the art of love-making has been proven in his charming novels, "Kitty of the Roses" and "An Orchard Princess." Whether this perfection has been attained through practice or by the confession of an imaginative mind aided by an acute observation is the author's secret. In bright dialogue and clever situation he also excels; while the ending never disappoints—beyond the fact that the story is finished. Carolyn Wells contributes "The Mystery of the Jade Buddha," which is the story of a house-party at which one of the guests does some pretty detective work; "Born to be Hanged" is a farcical Western sketch by Caroline Lockhart; pathos, which is unusually strong, as well as a strongly humorous side, are evident in Mary Moss' admirable tale called "Shore Leave;" the "Miss Lucy" humorous sketches which appear at intervals in Lippincott's have won many friends. The latest in this series is "Miss Lacy and the Simple Life."

Ten short stories, all of the first quality, are included in the remarkable August number, in number, in the August Everybody's. Some readers want a love story; others prefer one with adventure, excitement, danger. Lloyd Osbourne has combined both elements in his "automobile love story," "Three Spells Ready," in which there is a strongly humorous side, are evident in Mary Moss' admirable tale called "Shore Leave;" the "Miss Lucy" humorous sketches which appear at intervals in Lippincott's have won many friends. The latest in this series is "Miss Lacy and the Simple Life."

The latest in this series is "Miss Lacy and the Simple Life."

The August Metropolitan Magazine is unusually strong in seasonable fiction. Open it at almost any page and you are sure to find a story that will charm you from the first page to the last. As befits the month, it is a number to carry to a hammock under the trees or to a shawl spread on the seashore. Yet, entertaining as it is, it contains many valuable articles which will prove of interest to the American. Julian Hawthorne's "Men of the Dark," an unusual story of mystery and adventure in the Andean Mountains, leads the fiction. Wallace Irwin's "Pelican Smith and Smuggler King" is just about the best humorous fiction at the Pacific Coast that has ever appeared. "A Little Wooden Tiger," by Mayne Lindsay, recounts the strange adventures of a hunter in India, following his encounter with an ancient native. In style and action this story suggests Richard Harding Davis at a strong individuality of its own. "Dead Violets," by Leonard Merrick, is a love story teaching a bitterly true lesson. "The Ball and the Bracelet," by Homer Saint-Gaudens, is a charming, seasonable comedy of love. "The Story of the Rondout State Lotteries," by William G. Fitzgerald, describes in detail this fascinating game which has ruined many and made a few rich.

A really notable series of articles begins in the August McClure's under the title "Frank Norris—Reporter." The history of that remarkable cosmopolitan, with its picturesque early mining days, when the road-agents held away and robbed and murdered wholesale the miners and settlers, and the conflict of more recent days between the sand-lot agitators and a sleepy nation compared with this infant rival.

The August Burr McIntosh Monthly, which is now on all news-stands, will delight lovers of the beautiful in pictorial art. It is considered a foregone conclusion that summer numbers of magazines are not equal to those issued at other seasons of the year, but those who have seen the August McIntosh monthly claim it to be better than any number which has preceded it. In the gallery of celebrities are superb portraits of such people as Miss Ellen Terry, Lillian Russell, Roselle Knott, Carlotta Nillsen, Julia Marlowe, J. P. Morgan, J. J. Hill, Rider Haggard and others. A special feature of this issue is a number of drawings including portraits of President Roosevelt, Mary Anderson, Jos. H. Choate and Sir Frederick Leighton made in the new almost unused Silver Point. A striking picture of R. H. Sothern as Malvolio in Twelfth Night is presented in colors. The panoramic form covers many attractive summer scenes throughout the country, and altogether the issue is unusually pleasing. Burr Publishing Company, New York.

Readers of Success Magazine, for August, are introduced to the unexplored regions of Northwestern Canada, where the Grand Trunk Pacific Railroad is surveying for a route to Port Simpson, and eventually, perhaps, to Dawson City. Much of the engineer's work is now being done in a region that has never heard the sound of a white man's footstep. Scott Merwin describes the trip to the Western country early in the spring, and he presents his account of conditions there in an article which he very aptly terms "Conquering the Last Frontier." This is an absorbing story of an undertaking of prodigious importance to the development of the great Northwest. Remsen Crawford's stories of clever reporters, "Facing Danger to Get News," detail the thrilling adventures that have befallen some American newspaper reporters who, as a class, are the most daring and fearless of the "Army of France," by Vance Thompson, treats of the efforts of this idealistic republic to reconcile its growing militarism with the spirit of its somewhat theatrical democracy. David Graham Phillips' great story, "The Second Generation," is continued, and Paul Latzke brings his striking history of the telephone trust to a close in this number.

One of the most interesting articles of the month is "Aeronautics in America," by Capt. Homer W. Hedge, founder and president of the Aero Club of America, in this magazine. It reveals a surprising state of affairs. The ballooning has now a co-operative organization among the rich in this country and a forecast, and the confidence of the author concerning the future of aeronautics carry certainly more significance than recent articles on the same subject by popular magazine contributors. There are illustrations of dirigible balloons and aeroplanes, from photographs. "Battles of the Wilderness," by Ernest Russell, is another excellent illustrated article in the same magazine. It tells where and how the settler's battle with the wilderness is still going on on cold continent, and graphically delineates the primitive life of a real pioneer family in the bush beyond the frontier. In his article "Gen. Zebulon Pike, Explorer," Eugene Parsons makes an admirable plea for more general recognition of the many valuable services rendered his country by the young explorer of Pike's Peak. He shows that Pike was more than a mere soldier of fortune, and the finding of the mountain which bears his name but one of the least of his achievements. The article is illustrated with a portrait of the explorer and a view of the famous peak.

MURPHY CALLS DRYDEN LOGICAL CANDIDATE

FORMER GOVERNOR SAYS HE HAS DEMONSTRATED HIS ABILITY.

"Unless I misjudge the political situations, Senator Dryden will be his own successor."

Thus confidently and emphatically prophesied former Governor Murphy in Newark Thursday during an interview on the general political situation, with special reference to the United States Senatorship.

By reason of the well known political sagacity, horse of wide experience in national and State politics, Mr. Murphy's views are particularly interesting and valuable at this time.

Governor Murphy will sail in a few days for a brief European trip.

Taking a bird's-eye view of the situation at the eve of his departure, he summed up his conclusions in the above words, and gave in concise form these reasons therefor:

First—He is the only logical candidate of the regular Republicans of the State, the party now in full control.

Second—A man who faithfully and ably represents the State during a first term is entitled to a second.

Third—The importance to the State of representation in the Senate by one whose effective championship in the past has been shown and devotion to all the other Republican principles, to which the great majority of New Jersey citizens have declared allegiance, is unquestioned.

Fourth—Mr. Dryden not only assumes the great office, but by virtue of a supervising control over the affairs he has demonstrated his ability to successfully deal with the great questions of the nation.

Fifth—The fact that Senator Dryden is the president of a great insurance company, one of the largest financial institutions of the great State of New Jersey under investigation is no reason he should be asked to step aside, unless his management of his company is criminal or incompetent. Two public and thorough investigations of the company have failed to disclose any such feature of adverse criticism, and his personal career is eminently successful and creditable.

Mr. Murphy said:

"There are other reasons that could easily be cited, and those already given amplified, to establish the importance of the election of a successor as a logical conclusion of the existing situation. Personally, I have great confidence in that great subtle power, the sober second thought of our people, and I cannot, therefore, conceive that these so-called individual campaigns, under high sounding titles, can make any serious inroads into the ranks of the regulars. The crux of the situation, all State leaders, I believe agree, is in Essex county. If the regulars win at the primaries here, all agree that Mr. Dryden's re-election is a foregone conclusion."

W. C. T. U. TO HOLD MEETING.

Members of State Organization Will Hold Three Sessions.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union of New Jersey will hold a meeting at Mt. Tabor, Tuesday, August 6. It is expected that the State officers, president, Mrs. Emma Bourne, of Newark; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. H. Demarest, of Closter; recording secretary, Eva M. Lake, M. D., of Pleasantville, and treasurer, Mrs. H. L. Caminade, of Camden, will be present. The programme follows:

Morning session, 10, devotions, Mrs. H. R. Taylor, Madison; greeting, Rev. A. B. Richardson, president Campbelling Association; symposium, Five Reasons for Not Using Tobacco," Mrs. Clara Sturtevant, Rockaway; "Five Reasons for Not Using Cider," Mrs. Jos. C. Nixon, Morristown; "Five Reasons for Not Using Beer," Mrs. M. Bangham, Rockaway; "Five Reasons for Total Abstinence," Mrs. A. G. Probley, Morristown; "Five Reasons for Loyal Temperance Legions," Mrs. J. E. Welsh, Morristown.

Afternoon session, 2:30, Bible reading, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, New York; "The Ideal Society," Mrs. Emma Bourne; "Ideal Officers, Ideal Members, Ideal Work;" address, "Local Option, High License, Prohibition, Which?" Mrs. I. H. Demarest.

Evening session, 7:45, song service, prayer, Mrs. W. P. Cox; solo, collection, address, "Twentieth Century Problems," Mrs. Ella A. Boole, A. M., National W. C. T. U. lecturer.

NEWARK NEWS MEN WON

Local Newspaper Ball Tossers Lose Again, By Score of 11 to 8.

SUPPER FOLLOWS GAME

James E. Martine Makes a Speech to the Athletic Scribes, And Hands Out Taffy.

Purely in a spirit of kindness, the Newark News ball tossers came up from the city Thursday and spanked the humble Newspaper Men. They just wanted to show the Plainfield brethren that it was presumptuous to dally with a great game in a gay and irresponsible spirit. The showing measured only eight runs, but it was a sufficiency. The score was 11 to 8.

Both teams had something the matter with them, and each threw a heart-rending spasm in one inning. Newark won because the something wasn't so acute in their case as in Plainfield's.

"Bob" Hoffman pitched for the locals, and pitched well. Some thumps came his way, but unstreaked support would have won the game for him. Hughes, the News twirler, was some to the good, but his support kept a lot of things from falling on his neck.

The spectators are still wandering who told "Col." Haequer, the third bag Adonis, that he could play ball.

The invaders got a strangle hold on the game in the second, when they scored six runs, on top of one tally left from the first. Their feelings would suffer if a full and true report of that inning came out. Plainfield scored two in the second, and kept at the foe until the score was tied 9 to 9, in the seventh. The fourth was their Mardi Gras and they grabbed five tasty runs while picking was good. It was not until the ninth that Newark served up the game with two tallies.

Fielding honors go to Vail and Dunn at second and short for the locals, to Reeves at short and Norton at first for the visitors. Norton made a bundle of hot grabs, and went up fifteen feet after one that looked good for a sail to the apple orchard.

After the game, the teams had supper in the summer garden of the Hotel Waldorf. It helped to smooth the feelings of the vanquished, and didn't make the victors feel worse. James E. Martine came to the supper, and threw big chunks of taffy at the newspapers. When he wasn't busy at other things he framed up Democratic dope with Joe Gunn, who was once elected to the Assembly by Republicans.

The teams lined up as follows: Newark—Flarity, lf; Hughes, p; Norton, 1b; Gunn, 2b; Higgins, c; Allen, cf; Firstbrook, 3b; Fenner, rf; Reeves, ss; Mansfield—Scott, c; Wilson, 1b; Dunn, ss; Hoffman, p; Hacquer, 2b; Vail, 2b; Banghart, Stout, lf; Sullivan, cf; Waters, rf.

PRETTY ATTRACTIONS FOR FAIR SHOPPERS.

Those fascinating little handkerchiefs to tuck into one's glove are all the rage just now, and they are by no means cheap as things go, but the material and workmanship are so fine that one is willing to pay for them.

Dainty gingham petticoats with scalloped and embroidered flounces cost very little, and are more desirable than silks, as they may be sent to the laundry when soiled, and are like new.

A new white serge coat and skirt frock has a white taffeta waistcoat trimmed with fine gold braid and hemmed with pale blue silk. The coat is edged with cream silk braid. It is a plaited little garment, the plaits being stitched flat to within an inch or two of the bottom, which ruffles out slightly when released.

White muslin pieces stamped in choice patterns for lingerie hats are marked away down.

An unusual bargain in those exquisitely dainty Dresden silks may be had at one of the popular shops.

A lingerie yoke of lawn and valenciennes lace is finished with a wide front tab that reaches to the bottom of the waist. The yoke is of generous depth.

Shell and mother of pearl buckles are much used on the present high crowned hats. Some especially pretty ones are shown just now.

Stylish washable reefers for the children have been marked down, owing to the lateness of the season.

Pique Afghans for the baby's carriage are very desirable in every way, for they look well, wear well, and launder beautifully.

Just now an almost essential possession is one of the rubber-lined bags intended for the bathing suit.

A number of shops are having sales of that handsome wide embroidery so much used for corset covers.

A case of leather containing brush, comb and toothbrush, costs but a trifle and is always ready to slip into the traveling bag at a moment's notice.

Miss Irene Irving and Mrs. Mehsia Cook and daughter, Mabel, of Fifth street, are at "Holley Terrace," Asbury Park, for an indefinite stay.

PLAINFIELD LIBRARY NOTES

Annotated list of books in the Public Library with special applications of mechanical drawing, and more advanced works on the subject.

Business Bulletin, No. 2.

Cyclopaedia of technical drawing, ed., by E. Worther. Illustrated.

The author's intention to make it a complete course of instruction to the mechanic, architect and engineer. Deals with drawing instruments, shades and shadows, plotting, topographical drawing, machine drawing, freehand drawing, etc.

Drawing for carpenters and joiners, by E. A. Davidson. Illustrated.

The purpose is distinctly to teach the styles of drawing required by the carpenter and joiner. The course is so arranged as to combine linear, freehand and object drawing.

Drawing for bricklayers, by E. A. Davidson. Illustrated.

Not confined to linear, but includes also a certain amount of freehand and model drawing.

Drawing for cabinet makers, by E. A. Davidson.

Takes up linear drawing, perspective, freehand, drawing from objects, etc.

Drawing for stonemasons, by E. A. Davidson. Illustrated.

Devoted to such branches of drawing as are of immediate importance to stonemasons.

Elementary drawing for house painters, decorators and sign writers, by E. A. Davidson.

Forms part 7 of his work on "house painting." Treats of freehand and geometrical drawing, elementary perspective, etc.

Mathematical drawing instruments and how to use them, by F. E. Hulme. Illustrated.

Advanced, dealing with the instruments only. Well illustrated.

Industrial drawing, by T. D. Mahan. Illustrated.

Chapters on instruments, their use and care, construction of problems of points and straight lines, regular figures, projections, shadows, linear perspective, etc.

Machine drawing and design for technical schools and engineer students, by W. Ripper. Illustrated.

A series of graduated exercises, commencing with simple projection, and advancing to the more difficult examples occurring in actual practice.

Manual of industrial drawing for carpenters and other woodworkers, by W. F. Decker. Illustrated.

The earlier portion useful to classes, but the latter part dealing with house plans, etc., is too advanced, for young students.

Manual of machine drawing and design, by D. A. Low, and A. W. Boyd.

Illustrated from working drawings and claims to represent the best modern practice in machine design. These range in difficulty from the simplest machine detail to a set of triple-expansion marine engines.

Practical hints for draughtsmen, by W. McCord. Illustrated.

Advanced. Takes up working drawings, freehand sketching, drawing instruments, and materials, etc.

Theoretical and practical graphics, descriptive geometry and mechanical drawing, by F. N. Willson. Fully illustrated.

Contains chapters on freehand sketching and letters, choice and use of instruments, working drawings by the 3d angle method, etc.

Workman's manual of engineering drawing by J. Maxton. Illustrated.

The author's object is to enable the working engineer to instruct himself in an important branch of his business.

FOR SUMMER USE.

Old rush-bottomed chairs stained green, with burlap cushions, are nice for porch or summer cottages.

Some very pretty hammocks are woven of closely twisted twine in red and brown in imitation of Indian rugs.

A good protection for your better pillows when used during the summer months is the large bandanna handkerchiefs. Sew up the square, leaving the ends open part way and tie these in knots on the corners.

For clover brushes which give a pleasant odor to the closet gather the red clover with long stems and while still pliant tie the stems close to the flowers with a cord. Plait the stems and tie at the end with narrow ribbon.

Cotton felt, which is cotton batting in sheets, is preferable to down as a filling for summer pillows that are used on porch or in a hammock.

Khaki is a great deal to recommend it to the economical housewife for furniture covers. It has all the qualities of washable linen and the beautiful sheen of silk. It makes excellent summer curtains and drapery and launders well. It makes excellent ottoman covers and pillow tops and its exquisite brown or ecru shade harmonizes with most surroundings.

LINEN HINTS.

Little Points That Will Insure Good Results.

When hanging your linen to dry use the two lines comparatively close and parallel for your tablecloths and sheets.

Throw one selvedge side of your tablecloth over one line toward the other, allowing it to hang down about a quarter of a yard and being careful to pin it a short distance from the ends. Take the opposite of your cloth and throw it over the other line, facing the first line, and pin it in the same manner.

This will form a sort of bag and will prevent to a considerable extent the wild blowing of the tablecloth in windy weather.

After the table linen is thoroughly dried, remove it from the line and prepare to starch and iron it. A whisk broom is excellent for the purpose.

Table linen, in order to bring out the bright gloss that makes it attractive, should be dampened quite considerably.

Sprinkle the tablecloths freely, being sure that the selvedge ends of hemstitched borders are thoroughly damp, says Woman's Life. Roll up tightly, patting the roll frequently to spread the dampness.

FROM MME. LEANDER'S JOURNAL

When we mourn the death of a friend, we mourn the death of part of ourselves. That aspect of us which he had conceived is no more.

Do not worry. Worry is long to last. And let go away everybody and everything that wishes to leave you. As soon as you struggle to retain, you become small and foolish and commonplace.

Everything that is most beautiful in life and art owes its existence to impulse—not to intention.

The more I like people the less I wish to meet their kith and kin.

Debts are bad every way. If you take them lightly, they coarsen you. If you take them seriously, they worry you.

I do not love you. I love in you a certain quality or combination of qualities that has power to attract me. Every woman is at the mercy of a certain type of man.

To care for people on account of their attractive appearance only is like frequenting a house where you like the facade rather than the hostess.—Helen Wolfeska in Smart Set.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

A few drops of lemon juice makes cake frosting white.

A little flour put over the top of a cake will prevent the icing from running.

Sprinkle clothes with hot water and a whisk broom.

Grate raw potato and apply to a burn. Instant relief will follow.

Throw flour on kerosene flames.

After blankets have been washed and hung on the line and are thoroughly dry, beat with a carpet beater. They will become soft and light and the wool like new.

When washing china silk, add a slight suggestion of starch and it will look like new.

In blending flour and water, if a fork is used it will not lump.

Beating a cocoa with an egg beater before removing from the fire is an improvement, and a few drops of vanilla in the cocoa pot will make it still better.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Ignorance maye not be bliss, but it is often contentment.

Everybody has a trouble of some kind. What is the nature of yours?

Keats-Shelley Memorial.

The British committee which has been acting in conjunction with an American committee for the establishment of a memorial to Keats and Shelley announces that it has secured an option on the house in Rome in which John Keats died, and in which it is proposed to gather a library of their works in various editions, with portraits and manuscripts.

While bathing one day, Henry Vawter
Went farther from land than he

Shellish Silk.

Stidly supplies a curious silk which is spun by the pulna, a Mediterranean shellish which has a little tube at the end of its tongue. Out of this tube, spider fashion or silkworm fashion, it spins a silk thread, with which, says the London Tidbits, it fastens itself on any rock it fancies. When the pulna moves on its silken cable remains behind. This cable, which is called byssus, the Sicilian fishermen gather. Byssus weaves into the softest and shiniest of fabrics, but it is very rare and expensive.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

Rev. Edward Everett Hale of Boston, attributes his excellent health at the age of 84 to the serenity with which he takes life. He sleeps nine hours every night.

John D. Rockefeller is to live for two months of the year at Pasadena, Cal. He purchased Carmelita, the magnificent home where Helen Hunt Jackson wrote "Ramona."

Mrs. Virginia Bland, widow of "Silver Dick" Bland, has become one of the most successful agriculturists and horticulturists in the country at her place in Lebanon, Mo.

Theodore A. Cook, brother of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, of Brooklyn, is building three motor cars at his home in Callicoon, N. Y., for the use of the south pole expedition, which is to start in 1901.

Miss Esther Whitman, the strongest woman in New York, has married Herman Hyams, a Harlem real estate man, whom she rescued from drowning last June, when she is an expert swimmer, and can lift a dead weight of 400 pounds.

Dr. Fridjof Nansen, the arctic explorer who has been appointed Norwegian ambassador to Great Britain, is a firm believer in woman's rights. He said his distinction in having seven cashiers of banks who are among the youngest not only in Pennsylvania, but in the United States. Harry A. Bell was elected cashier of a Middletown bank last May when 23 years and four months old, and Jesse C. Bell was elected cashier of a Sharon bank when 21 years and six months old last December.

Miss Nora Stanton Blatch has been elected to membership in the American Society of Civil Engineers, the first woman so distinguished. She is a granddaughter of the famous Elizabeth Cady Stanton and the first woman to win the decree of civil engineer in Cornell university. Miss Blatch has under consideration an offer from the Chinese government to undertake some important work in the interior of the eastern empire.

TREES OF HISTORIC NOTE.

The elm tree planted by Gen. Grant on the capitol grounds at Washington.

The Burygoyne elm at Albany, N. Y., planted by Burgoyne was brought there a prisoner.

The tall pine tree at Fort Edward, N. Y., under which the beautiful Jane McCrea was slain.

The elm tree at Philadelphia under which William Penn made his famous treaty with 19 tribes of barbarians.

The charter oak at Hartford which preserved the written guarantee of the liberties of the colony of Connecticut.

TELEPHONE TIDINGS.

Liverpool has tried and abandoned a penny-in-the-slot telephone service.

The longest telephone sea cable stretches from the coast of Norfolk to Ostend—175 miles.

In New York 45,000 telephones are worked on a system of payment according to the number of calls made.

An automatic system of answering telephone calls has been invented. It will possibly dispense with girl operators.

Sir William Preece sees no reason why telephonic communication between Europe and America should not be possible.

London with three times as big a population as New York, has only two-thirds the number of telephones—namely, 20,000.

The first long-distance telephone cable in this country was that between Liverpool and Manchester. It was opened in 1890.

Wireless telephony has been invented by Mr. Thomas Gladwell, of Newport (Mont.), who claims to have had successful results up to a distance of ten miles.

The longest telephone circuit in the world is that between New York and Chicago. It is 950 miles long. The longest in Europe connects London with Marseilles, these places being 650 miles apart.

It is now possible to "ring up" the nearest railway station from a moving train, and to telephone, via the station, to any subscriber. An experiment was conducted successfully on the Highland railway.

STATE IS TO TEACH SCIENTIFIC FARMING.

Farmers to Be Given Chance to See Methods of Instruction for Their Boys.

Judging from the interest which is being shown throughout the State, there will be a large attendance of young farmers at the opening of the winter courses in agriculture, which will be commenced at the State Agricultural college January 7. Work on the new building at the college farm is being rushed throughout and the building will be in readness for the opening.

In order that the farmers of the State may learn by personal experience of some of the things that will be taught to their sons, Dr. Edward B. Voorhees, the director of the college farm and State experimental station, has issued a general invitation to the farmers of the State to visit the farm early in June, inspect the place and listen to lectures. At this time the short courses in agriculture will be fully explained.

The courses are to be for twelve weeks. At the start there will be three separate courses offered, one for those who desire knowledge of general agriculture, one for those who desire to become particularly acquainted with dairy farming and one dealing with fruit growing and gardening. In each course instruction will be given by lectures, recitations and laboratory work. The students will be given practice in testing soils, spraying, pruning, sodding and grafting, stock judging, milk testing, butter making. The class room instruction will be followed by actual practice, the idea being to teach the students the principles and applications of science which will enable them to carry on farm work more efficiently and profitably. The students will not only have the use of the new building, which will be well equipped with laboratories, but all of the collections, libraries and so at their disposal, as well as the orchards, live stock and its equipment located there.

In the course arranged for those who want to engage in general farming the subjects to be studied will be soils, manures and fertilizers, farm crops, composition of seeds, the making of rations, breeds of animals, stock judging, farm buildings, insects and diseases of farm animals, and of crops, etc. A special feature will be the study of methods of soil improvement by natural means.

In the course to be devoted to dairy farming instruction will be given in the composition of soils, manures and fertilizers, construction of dairy buildings, the growth of forage crops, composition of foods and the making of rations, breeding and care of animals, insects and disease of farm animals and crops, stock judging, butter making, testing, separating and handling milk. Special attention will be given to the production and handling of sanitary milk and cream for the city markets.

For fruit growers and market gardeners the studies will be the composition of soils, manures and fertilizers, propagation and breeding of plants, insects and diseases of fruit and vegetables, planting and pruning trees, packing and marketing fruit and vegetables, spraying machinery (many forms of which will be on hand), the preparation and application of sprays, farm buildings and farm machinery. Throughout the course students will be given practical work in the different operations.

HINTS ON STARCHING.

A good starch is made by mixing two tablespoonfuls of laundry starch with one-fourth of a cupful of cold water and pouring on it, while stirring constantly, one pint of boiling water.

Then add half a teaspoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of sugar and a lump of spermaceti about the size of the top of the thumb.

If spermaceti is not on hand use the same quantity of lard and a few drops of kerosene.

Boil ten minutes and keep the starch covered while boiling.

Strain through a piece of cheesecloth and keep covered until cool enough to put the hands into.

The articles to be starched should be nearly dry.

Dip each article into the starch separately and draw it through the half closed hand, thereby working the starch into all the threads and pressing out the superfluous starch.

Hang up and when dry dampen with cold water, roll in a clean dry cloth and set them aside for a few hours.

When ironing starched clothes keep an unstarched part damp by covering it with a wet cloth.

A good starch will will give collars and cuffs a fine gloss, if the same are properly ironed, is made by adding two tablespoonfuls of raw starch, which has been dissolved in a little cold water, to the cooked starch, when it has become quite cool.

Stir thoroughly. The starch should be the consistency of thick cream.

Unread Service.

All bachelors and spinsters in our parish seem to have come to the conclusion that the Latin poet was right in saying that no life is equal to that of the unmarried, for there has been no wedding in our church since last July, and it is 20 years since the marriage service was so long unread.—Border Churchman.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Lesson Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 5.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—Duty, privilege and excuses.—Luke xiv, 15-24.

The topical reference is the parable of "The Great Supper." The blessings of the kingdom of God, to which He invites men, are represented by a supper which a certain man made and bade many. But when the servant of the man announced to the invited guests, "Come, all things are now ready," "they all with one consent began to make excuse." How like men's treatment of God's invitation to the spiritual and eternal blessings prepared for them in Jesus Christ! And yet how contrary to man's best interests and to what he ought to do is this attitude toward the blessings of the kingdom of God.

Duty should impel men to the acceptance of God's invitation. The element of duty is clearly seen in the parable of the supper. The host at great expense had provided the feast, upon the assumption that his invited guests would be present. This fact placed an obligation upon them to go. God, at great cost, to His own Son, has laid upon the cross of Calvary, has prepared the present and eternal blessings typified by the supper in the parable of Christ. He invites all men to come to Christ and an obligation rests upon them to do so. It is their duty to give obedience to the will of God. This fact needs to be particularly emphasized today. It is too frequently the case in our age that men consult their personal inclinations in relation to religious obligations rather than to look upon them as a duty owed to God. This is a false attitude. Duty should be a supreme factor in all our relations to God. The supreme question should not be what we want to do, but what God wants us to do.

To accept the blessings offered to us in Christ should also be esteemed a privilege, and the highest of privileges. Most men look upon it as a great privilege to be invited to a feast given by one occupying a prominent place in life and few decline such invitations. How much greater a privilege it is to be invited by God, by the King of kings, to the feast of good things which He has prepared for those who accept Christ! Not can we find any reasonable excuse for refusing His invitation. The excuses offered in the parable are typical of those which men offer to God, but they were unreasonable, and other guests took their places. So it will be with us if we attempt to excuse ourselves from accepting Christ.

God's Resources.

It is a wonderful comfort sometimes, when our way seems hedged in, our hands empty and we ourselves helpless, to remember that God has all resources. Impossible is only a human word; there is nothing really hopeless in all His universe. And what tools the Master Workman uses! A bit of mud can open blind eyes; a pebble by a stripling's sling can slay a giant in the path; a woodland stick cut to guide sheep will suffice to bring water from a desert rock; a man's worn garment will open a way through the waves; a sunrise—just the breaking of a common day to all the world besides—is enough to scatter an invading army when He wills that they should go.

As it was in the past, so it is still. His soft, white snowflakes, multiplied, will block the mightiest engine man has invented; His glittering icicles will break the lines of human communication. Amid our dearth and poverty lies hidden God's wealth of resources, and because we see no way in which it can be done it is not to be inferred that He or courage concerning any good cause. We may ask what we will, from the loaf or bread to the coming of the kingdom, and be sure that if it is a real and honest need the Father hears the cry, and that the time for the opening of the storehouse and the supplying of the want lies near at hand—in some unrecognised leader or unthought of commonplace.—Forward.

Aug. 5: "Faith by Hearing."—Rom. x, 14, 15; Phil. i, 15, 16; Matt. xiii, 1-9; Acts iv, 8; x, 44-48; xvi, 13-15; xvii, 10-12; I Thess. ii, 13.

By REV. WALTER J. TATES, D. D.

The fundamental fact in salvation of the soul from sin is that "the gospel of Jesus Christ is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

Wherever the plain truth of the New Testament is proclaimed men assent to the accuracy of its statement that they are sinners. This is known in personal experience in the witness of conscience condemning self for having done the things known to be wrong, having preferred them to the course known to be right. The consciousness of wrongdoing of ill deserving, of unrest of soul, of dread of consequences, of lack of power to do the right, of strong inclination and desire for the wrong, of the inner nature of evil and perversity continually controlling the person—all this is known as personal condition.

When the gospel offers freedom from all this, forgiveness for the past, peace and harmony within and with God and power in the future to overcome the evil and to abide in and do the right and good it seems almost if not quite impossible that such a transformation could be accomplished in ordinary human nature.

To one who has had much to do with common folks, old or young, the task looks well nigh hopeless.

It involves a changed view of self, God and the world as the first place. It necessitates a full entirely new direction of the affections and desires and a complete control of the will in accordance with these new ideas and emotions.

One of the clearest proofs of the divine character of the gospel is the effect it has to produce just these profound changes in the currents of human thought and life.

It is not logical arguments and prolonged discussion usually which effect the change in the inner view of God, the world, sin and salvation. More frequently it comes another way. The sense of need, of trouble, misery, the longing for betterment of inner life, for uplift and comfort, attract one to the gospel call and rest of soul. The terms of the gospel are seen to be reasonable. The results of promises are desirable. Acceptance of its requirements is made and as a consequence the soul does rest in Christ.

The philosophy of this is so deep that no human ingenuity can hope to penetrate its lowest depths. It is as profound as the divine nature and as broad as the eternal purposes of God. But in its application it is so simple that the child can read all its benefits and enjoy all its results.

This faith which comes by hearing has an intellectual element which cannot be ignored without greatest danger. But the relation which faith bears to the will and desires must also be clearly recognized.

The great difficulty is not so much lack of clear understanding of the gospel as it is dislike of its requirements and a positive preference for evil over good and a deliberation choice to forsake the bad and accept the right.

"This is their condemnation, that men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil."

The remedy is in the preaching the plain gospel and reliance on the power of the Holy Spirit to set the truth home to the hearts of the hearers, and not in any eloquence of man or any aesthetic accessories of music and ritual. True faith will and expect the Lord to reach the hearts of men by it.

Contentless Powers in God's Plan.

A man never attains to the jubilant working of a believing spirit until a certain element of heroism is wrought into the springs of his being. This must be the fruit of heroic disciplinary training. By any and every means an immortal spirit must be set to thinking. It must think responsibility with profound and prayerful conscious ness. At great faith must feed on great mysteries. The sinews of its strength must grow tense and wiry by the strain of great conflicts. Many need the discipline of great searchings after God in which they do not find Him. Some must agonize in prayers, which in the seeming are dead failures. Not otherwise can some natures grow into that massive and consolidated virtue and that masterful solution of religious problems which shall fit them for their predestined place as powers of control in God's plan.—Austin Phelps.

Love's Opportunity.

So long as we live, we serve; so long as we serve, we need not wish to die; so long as we are indispensable, and no man is useless while he has a friend.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Alive to God.

'Tis time to wake!
Thyself from slumber shake
And from this hour the motto take:
Alive to God.

Then hasten hard for earthly things,
Chase the vain good that pleasure brings,
Followed by endless pangs and stings,
How lives for God.

Don't fear the path with trouble rife—
Thyself too weak to meet the strife,
When God can make His own great life
Thy power.

Think what a glorious work to do;
Think what a home thou'st gone to;
And knowing God will lead thee through—
Live thou for Him.

Thy work grow strong with rapture see
The dawning of eternity!
From this hour thy watchword be:
Live to God!

—E. W. Cook in Christian Work and Evangelist.

FADS AND FANCIES IN SUMMER GOWNS.

The woman who is slender accentuates the fact. The woman who is not slender makes herself as slender as possible. Herein is the whole story of today's fashions, for everything tends to length or line. Length of skirt it is now, although within a few years it has been the waist line that could not be too long.

The white lingerie frock with little taffeta jacket, hat and sunshade all of the same color is one of the latest afternoon costumes at fashionable summer resorts.

Linen suits, of which every girl has a plentiful supply this year, are the triggest get-ups that one sees mornings on fashionable beaches or other out-of-town places. Early in the season, a famous French dressmaker launched black and white striped linen costumes with her usual success. Since then, striped linens have been gradually creeping into favor.

White gowns with touches of black, and gray gowns brightened by touches of gray color, are among the fads of the season.

A big black picture hat with two long, sweeping white plumes accompanied a stunning all white costume worn by a tall beauty the other day at the beach.

The majority of fashionable belts and girdles fasten at the back.

A tiny band of colored velvet encircling the middle or the bottom of the stock is a pretty finish for a small neck.

The little jacket which has developed so many phases since early spring was reduced to the minimum in a tiny affair worn recently. The skirt was box-pleated into a hip yoke, which rounded low at the front. With it was worn a handsome Irish lace blouse and over it a sleeveless, armholeless, in fact, little jacket shape of white linen, which was scarcely more than an abbreviated pair of breteiles widened into waistcoat shape at the bust and finished there with a single row of buttons. The jacket was outlined with green velvet.

A correspondent on the other side predicts a strenuous run for Second Empire styles before their vogue ceases, and recalls that the coalscuttle bonnet is one of the possibilities, along with shawls, tiny sunshades, and reticules of the like, which are already with us.

ENGLISH PROVERBS CONCERNING WOMEN.

Woman's jars are men's wars.

A change of wives makes men bald.

A woman's tears are a fountain of craft.

He that hath a scold hath sorrow to his sons.

The cunning wife makes her husband her apron.

Every dog has his day; every woman her way.

Every one can tame a shrew but him that hath her.

Women are wise on a sudden and foolish on reflection.

Women laugh when they can and weep when they please.

He is a pity to see a woman weep or a goose go barefoot.

Take a wife's first advice, but not her second thought.

A widow is as dangerous as a horse that has cast his rider.

Where women and geese are there is no lack of noise.

Maids want nothing but husbands, then want everything.

There is only one shrew in the world, and every husband thinks he has her.

Women must have their wills while alive, for they make none when they die.

He who marries a widow will often have a dead man's head thrown in his dish.

FOR THE WOMAN TRAVELER.

It seems almost incredible that any woman with spirit enough to make a journey should not know of the many little toilet conveniences which help to make dressing away from home easy.

One does not need to buy an expensive fitted traveling kit.

For twenty-five cents anybody can get a pretty little wash-cloth case, with rubber, so that the wet cloth which has been used once can be put into the satchel without damaging other contents.

A celluloid soap dish with cover costs only thirty-five cents.

For a quarter, too, one can get a covered bottle that will convey the wet tooth brush and nail brush, and for the same price there are little cream jars and powder boxes innumerable.

Yet, in spite of this, you may still see women grappling a wet washcloth in a night-dress case, or one's entire use altogether in order to keep it dry; tying up a tooth brush in a towel, and wrapping soap in newspaper!

It is just the feminine neglect in detail that is responsible, or is it because they don't know?

A BRIGHT COMMITTEE.

Just what real good the fire committee imagines can be accomplished by suppressing matters pertaining to the city's business is hard to see. Offended no doubt because the taxpayers learned through the newspapers that it had ordered a transfer of captains, for reasons not given, without first obtaining the advice of the chief, the committee solemnly agreed at its next meeting to keep the newspapers in ignorance of what had been done.

Notwithstanding the statement of the chairman that at the meeting Thursday night was only called to clear up some matters before he took a vacation, it develops that the committee ordered the suspension of a member of the department. Of course the taxpayers are not supposed to know about this. It may be best in on it when the Common Council meets in August. Until then the public must abide by the decision of the committee to "keep it out of the newspapers." But what folly!

The Rev. Henry Elliott Mott, of Elizabeth' wants the city's new excise board to fix the retail liquor license fees at $1,000, instead of $500. He thinks high licenses will help the local method of regulating the liquor traffic, but that the Bishops' law rates are not high enough. It isn't likely that the Elizabeth board will agree with the reverend gentleman. —Trenton True American.

If high license with the other provisions of the Bishops' bill which have been in force here before that measure was even thought of, works well in Plainfield, why should it not equally be good for Elizabeth?

We believe that if Roosevelt were invited to make some speeches in New Jersey, as the Jersey City Evening Journal suggests, he would quickly take one side or the other in the warfare within the Republican party. He certainly would not be as silly as Col. W. J. Bryan who makes the question by declaring that he does not know that his office should permit him to declare himself.

The Newark Advertiser in commenting on former Governor Murphy's endorsement of United States Senator Dryden intimates that his opinion is valuable because he is a manufacturer. It can be easily seen that he truly is a manufacturer when he declares that Mr. Dryden is the "logical candidate."

One blow upon another has been dealt the captains of finance who elected the Republican Presidential candidates during the last eight years, but to them the "most unkindest cut of all" is the way William Jennings Bryan has been allowed to capture the British.

An exchange takes the Newark News to task for exposing the police conditions in its own city. Its country critic must read the opinion of Judge Sulzberger on the function of a newspaper before over-heating his brainery again.

One Perkins, of Westfield, fires a shot at one George L. Record, of Jersey City. If the said Perkins has any more ammunition he had better save it, for one Runyon is said to be gunning for him.

Mr. Martine "points with pride" to the letter issued by the Democratic State Committee and admits the public to his confidence in the prediction that his party will win at the next election.

His mayoralty boom is being studiously avoided by C. J. Fisk. The Health Board's President is another man who does not intend "to sit on a stool and look pretty" for any length of time.

Figuratively speaking Russell Sage may "turn over in his grave" if some of his kin get a slice of those railroads, but there is no fear of his feeling that burglar alarm on the safe.

For North Plainfield to try to settle its sewer system question, before deciding the subject of annexation is like the old story of putting the cart before the horse.

It will be conceded that the *Democ*ratic party is about as badly in need of some good stimulus as the State is of a new constitution.

Don't forget the little ones at the Elks's Daughters' baby camp. Contributions for the support of the institution are always welcome.

The Philadelphia North American says New York is suffering from a shortage of chorus girls. Just wait until the Thaw trial is on.

It is quite likely that in a very short time the politicians of Union will be asking: "Who was Cavi Lents?"

It was a Colbyite who was cruel enough to remark that he never heard of a funeral with 125 pall bearers.

Haven't heard of any sea serpents lately. Wish they'd repeal that Bishops' bill.

Although it is a case of Thaw, Mr. Olcott considers it a clean freeze-out.

It was not inappropriate to place Russell Sage in an "air-tight" coffin.

Yes, Congressman Fowler's banking bill is still pending.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Prince of India" at Broadway.

Klaw & Erlanger's wonderful production of "The Prince of India" will be presented for the first time in New York at the Broadway theatre Monday evening, September 24, instead of October 1st,as previously announced. This is the companion drama to "Ben-Hur," and is a stage version of Gen. Lew Wallace's romantic novel involving the war between the Greeks and the Turks, the Fall of Constantinople and the world-famous love romance of Sultan Mahammed, the conquerer, and Princess Irene of the Greeks. "The Prince of India" is the greatest dramatic production ever made in this country and represents an outlay of over $100,000 in scenery and costumes alone. This great play is staged in a prologue and six acts, with thirteen scenes. These massive stage pictures represent the rock-tomb of Hiram, King of Tyre; Constantinople and the Golden Horn from Galatea; the home of the Prince of India in Constantinople; the gate of Blacherne on the Golden Horn and panarama of the Bosphorus to the white castle during the storm which leads the prince and the princess Irene to take refuge in the stronghold of the Turks; the Palace of Theraipa on the Bosphorus; the tent of Mahommed before Constantinople; the palace of the Princess Irene in Constantinople; the breach in the walls of Constantinople during the siege; without the walls during the assault by the Turks; night on the broken wall, where the Prince of India, really the Great Wanderer, hears again the cry "Tarry Thou Till I Come," and finally, under the dome of Sancta Sophia, where Mahommed and Irene meet, acknowledge their love and the conqueror promises religious freedom to all her race under the Moslem flag. The scenes of the great storm on the Bosphorus, the assault on the walls of Constantinople and the interior of the church of Sancta Sophia will prove revelations in stagecraft, even to the most blase New York theatre-goers. In the battle and church scenes over 600 people will appear.

Thompson & Dundy have succumbed to the roller-skating craze, and opened to the public in Luna Park what they declare is the coolest, most commodious and inviting rink in Greater New York. The floor space embraces nearly fifty thousand square feet, and experts worked for days to make its surface a perfect area for the sport. The ring became instantly a popular feature among the myraid attractions of Luna Park. "The Great Train Robbery" continues a great public favorite. New action provides added realism each week. The Canals of Venice, with an aquatic ride of picturesque novelty and beauty, supplies diversion to thousands by day and by night, and crowds throng in ceaseless procession to the "Chutes," "The Dragon's Gorge," "the Scenic Railway," "The Old Mill," "The Laughing Show," *and the other big and little entertain*ments. A complete new programme of twenty acts each week composes the free open-air circus and vaudeville show over the lagoon. A most remarkable performing leopard is Pasha, of Mme. Morelli's group of leopards and jaguars that is astonishing visitors to Mundy's animal show at Luna Park. He walks a tight rope twice across the arena, starts a third time, suspends by his fore paws from the middle of the rope, dangles there for a few seconds and then drops to the floor, alighting on his feet like any well balanced cat. He has earned the title of "the Blondin of the animal kingdom."

It seems as though New York has become roof garden crazy, if one can judge from the numerous places extended the real roof gardens of the town. Those so-called roof gardens, which in reality merely are theatres far removed from the street, have not been oppressed by capacity business, no matter what is the attraction. On the other hand, the "really truly" roof gardens, with the moon and the stars above them, are crowded nightly. It does not matter what sort of a roof garden it is, the people go there. On top of all the big hotels there are roof garden dining rooms, where the demand for seats far exceeds the supply. And on the roof gardens presenting amusements the same conditions prevail. When one sums up the entertainments offered, especially if one has the roof garden habit, the choice naturally falls to the roof garden of the Madison Square Garden where "Mamselle Champagne" is entering upon her sixth week as the entertaining young person personal. It is a case of capacity nightly, and the bubbling, sparkling wit of "Mamselle Champagne" seems to have caught the town.

The history of Luna Park yields no record of such tremendous patronage as this season has produced. By day and by night fun-seeking crowds have filled the great, glittering area and enjoyed the delights of the multitudinous new shows and devices. "A Mountain Torrent," Frederic Thompson's latest conception, has found immediate and lasting favor, and boat loads of delighted patrons glide down the winding waterway in endless procession. Three hundred thousand gallons of sea water are pumped up the slight ascent each minute and descend through scores of picturesque channels. "The Great Train Robbery," a thrilling spectacle of *Western life, continues a great pop*ular centre. In vivid realism it eclipses all previous Dreyfus films productions. New acts appear each week in the free open-air circus over the cool stretch of the lagoon, and the crowds find comfort and diversion in the shaded nooks which overlook the sinuituous shore. "Shoot the Chutes," "The Old Mill," the "Miniature Railway," "A Trip to the Moon," the "Dragon's Gorge" and the free helter-skelter are always centres of throngs, and the dance hall entertains by the thousand. Ten bands provide brazen melody throughout the Park.

It required a stage crew of eight men to handle the scenery of "Chinatown Charlie," at the Plainfield Theatre Saturday night. There were nineteen changes and all were made without a hitch through the watchfulness of Stage Manager Fred Bennett.

Wagenhals and Kemper announce that they have secured from the author, Marietta Holley, the exclusive right to all her books in which the characters of Josiah Allen and Josiah Allen's wife, Samantha, appear. The contract covers not only the books already published but also those which may be published in the future. Their intention will be to have a series of plays constructed somewhat in conformity with the publications as they have appeared. The first play, which will probably be called "Samantha," is now being written by a well-known dramatist and will be seen at the Astor theatre during the coming season.

Richard Carle has offered Carrie De May the title role in his new musical farce, "The Hurdy-Gurdy Girl," which he is to produce about the beginning of the new year, with himself at the head of the cast. Joseph Hart, her husband and manager, asks that long time to pass by long enough for him to give due consideration to several libretti which have been submitted to him. He is desirous of sending Miss De Mar out as a star on her own account.

Klaw & Erlanger's production of "The Prince of India" will be presented for the first time in New York at the Broadway theatre Monday evening, September 24, instead of October 1st, as previously announced. This is the companion drama to "Ben Hur," and is a stage version of General Lew Wallace's romantic novel involving the war between the Greeks and the Turks, the fall of Constantinople, and the romance of Sultan Mahommed, the conquerer, and Princess Irene of the Greeks.

New York is still crowding nightly to see "Seeing New York," and the big, tuneful programme is the talk of the New York theatre, in the Wistaria Grove, which is surely as pretty a spot as ever has been selected since the world began for the giving of a summertime entertainment. The ninth week of the amusing skit began on Monday night, with the original cast, headed by Carrie De Mar, Al Leech, Clifton Crawford, Cheridah Simpson and seventy others, including fifty-four pretty girls. The weekly changes made in the bill by Wm. A. Brady and Joseph Hart, the managers of this "Conserve of Coolth," put two new numbers in the bill on July 23. They were the very funny acts of Inza and Lorella, clever grotesque acrobats, just from Paris, and Kline, Ott Brothers and Nicholson, four capital musicians. Both made hits, and the four are to be kept in for the week. The chief novelty for the new week, however, will be an exhibition exposing the methods of the Fays, whose alleged thought-reading has been one of the recent sensations of this neighborhood. Professor Samri S. Baldwin, well remembered as the "White Mahatma" of this line of work a score of years ago, is to show up the Fays' tricks after demonstrating that he can do them better than the Fays, themselves. The promise of this expose has set all New York agog, and the demonstration has created even in advance the greater interest because of the fact that the Fays are to return to New York on August 13. There is all sorts of talk about their entering suit against the Messrs. Brady & Hart, but the expose is to be made, they say, just the same on Monday night, and thereafter till the end of the season. Sam Elton, who made the Fish of Perils laugh; Ned Waybura's "bully ball," "The Rain-Dears," and "that" quartette are other good things that will be in the bill the week of July 30. Performances are given on the New York roof on Sunday nights, too.

STRENUOUS GRATITUDE

Fresh Air Home Matron's Rib Broken By an Over-joyous Mother.

HUGGED MISS CURRY

Too Sincere Expression of Thanks for Care of Sick Children Caused the Matron's Injury.

Miss Sara Curry, matron of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, who has been suffering with a broken rib for the past two weeks, is practically recovered from the injury now. Five of the mothers or children at the home knew just what was the matter with "Mother" Curry, for the accident happened in a peculiar way which was made public for the first today. The injury was caused by an embrace, given in a full feeling of gratitude by one of the mothers at the home. Miss Curry has been under the care of a local physician since the accident, but the bone is mending nicely and she should be quite herself again within a few days.

Miss Curry had brought out to Netherwood from New York city the children of one of the mothers from the settlement house in charge of Miss Curry with words of gratitude and embraced her affectionately. The matron felt a sharp pain in her side as the woman was embracing her, but thought nothing of it. Later her side pained so that a physician was called in and an examination revealed that a rib had been broken.

The broken bone was especially painful yesterday, so that today Miss Curry was unable to go to New York as she had planned to bring out another delegation of children for the camp. The children, about thirty in number, will come to Netherwood this afternoon in charge of one of Miss Curry's woman helpers from the city. This will swell the number at the camp to nearly 300 again.

Despite the injury, Miss Curry has been active in her work in connection with the Home since the accident happened. Yesterday morning she went to the Scotch Plains Baptist church with a party of twenty-five of the children and made an address at the special service conducted there for the benefit of the work. The services in charge of Rev. T. Moore-Smith, pastor of the church, who spoke enthusiastically of the work Miss Curry was carrying on among the poor in the metropolitan tenement districts and of the good being done by the children's visits from city heat and humidity at the Netherwood Home. Through the instrumentality of Rev. Moore-Smith, great enthusiasm has been aroused at Scotch Plains for the Home. Thirty dollars, the amount of last Sunday evening's collection, was donated to the work at the home and the Sunday-school gave an additional twenty dollars to the work. Last night's collection will also be forwarded to Miss Curry.

C. A. STOVER LEADS.

In the Weekly Competition for the Golf Committee Cup.

Charles A. Stover now leads in the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup at the Plainfield Country Club, with 2 points, while E. A. Stevenson and H. W. Beebe are a close second with eight points each. Stuart H. Patterson follows with 7¼ points, while his brother, Edward J. Patterson, comes next with 6 points. The standing for the cup up to and including Saturday's play follows:

C. A. Stover, 9½; E. A. Stevenson, 8; H. W. Beebe, 8; S. H. Patterson, 7½; E. J. Patterson, 6; L. A. Chase, 4½; R. Abbott, 4½; D. H. Barrows, 4½; F. O. Reinhart, 4; W. D. Riggs, 4; W. B. Tyler, 3½; T. H. Steckton, 3½; H. D. Hibbard, 3; E. E. Ironmonger, 3; C. F. Abbott, 3; G. F. Schoonmaker, 3; E. B. Shoemaker, 2½; Arthur Peck, 2; W. L. Gleaney, 1½; Alex. Gilbert, 1½; C. B. Morgan, 1½; J. P. Murray, 1½; P. C. Stradley, 1½; M. J. Dumont, 1½; J. A. Lane, 1; E. T. Willson, ½; L. L. Tweedy, ½; D. W. Taylor, ½.

Naturalization Investigated.

Judge Edward C. Salwater and Prosecutor N. C. J. English are now investigating a rumor that certain Italians in Elizabeth have been engaged in the illegal practice of securing naturalization papers for foreigners. The report has it that these Italians collect from $10 to $25 for securing the first papers for Italians who have not been in this country the required length of time, three years. The new law, which goes into effect September 25, makes the cost of naturalization $5. Originally the cost was fifty cents for the first papers and $1 for the final papers. No political party has been accused of having anything to do with the alleged fraudulent work.

To Settle In China.

Preston G. Elliott, grandson of P. B. Goodfellow, left on Sunday for Cochin, China, via San Francisco. Mr. Elliott goes in the interest of the Standard Oil Company and expects to remain three years in China.

LIGHTNING AND RAIN STORM SWEEPS OVER CITY

HEAVY AT DUNELLEN, LIGHTNING STRIKES HOUSE.

The wide spreading area of low pressure was to some extent relieved Saturday afternoon and Sunday by heavy thunder showers, accompanied by sharp lightning and downpours of rain. The principal damage done was to the roads in the city and borough. Rain fell with violence like a cloud burst in a heavy shower Saturday evening, and also yesterday afternoon. The top surfacing of the streets was in many cases guttered and storm sewers were charged to their utmost.

The heavy wind and the lightning did considerable damage to the trees in city and borough, many heavy limbs being torn off and wires broken. The street lights were crippled in the east end by lightning or broken trees and a section on Putnam avenue above Richmond street was in darkness Saturday and Sunday. There was similar trouble in the borough. At Dunellen several large shade trees were destroyed and big branches were torn off by the wind and scattered in the street. One of the main line trolley cars narrowly escaped being crushed during the storm yesterday afternoon. A heavy tree at Jefferson avenue and West Front street was broken off near the ground and fell directly upon the car, which was passing at the time. The feed wire and guy wires were broken and the passengers thrown into a panic, thinking that the big tree had crashed through the roof. No one was injured, though the motorman was slightly shocked. Traffic was delayed for three-quarters of an hour.

An unusually sharp flash of lightning struck the house of Jacob *Fisher, on Washington avenue, Dun*ellen, splintering the corner post and tearing off clapboards and shingles on its way to the ground. None of the family, who were all at home, were injured, though stupified by the shock. There was no fire.

Lightning splintered the twenty-five foot flag pole on the top of the pumping station of the Plainfield Water Company at the Netherwood wells. The bolt smashed the pole to bits, and tore the guy wire on the walls of the building in its descent to the ground. The men at work inside felt the shock, but no one was injured.

In the borough several large branches were blown off trees through the park and trees were shattered by the lightning. The trolley cars ran on fair schedule time during the bad weather.

PATRIOTIC SERVICE AT NETHERWOOD HOME

NATIONAL ANTHEMS SUNG AND ADDRESS BY REV. A. E. FINN.

Despite the stormy weather yesterday afternoon, enthusiastic patriotic services were conducted at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home Sunday afternoon by Rev. Arthur E. Finn, of the Park Avenue Baptist church. It had been planned to hold the service on the lawns but the storm made it necessary to have the meeting indoors. The children at the Home, more than 250 in number, gathered in the dining room while the choir and few visitors who braved the storm had seats on the piazza.

George H. Hall, of the home committee, was in charge of the service and Rev. E. M. Rodman, president of the committee, read a selection from the scriptures and offered prayer. The address of the afternoon was made by Rev. Arthur E. Finn, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church and was patriotic in nature. *He spoke to the children of the na*tional responsibility resting upon them, exhorting them to be good Christian citizens of the United States.

Music was a feature of the service and patriotic anthems were rendered, during the service by a chorus choir, from the Park Avenue Baptist church and by the children. The national music rendered included "America," "The Red, White and Blue," "Beautiful Flag," "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "The Star Spangled Banner." Mary Miller, one of the children at the Home, sang the gospel hymn, "Christ Arose," as a solo, and Nellie and Elsie Tudor sang a duet, "Beyond the Sea." The hymn, "My Father Knows," was sung by Miss Florence Hawkins and Miss Cora Brokaw. George V. Taylor, superintendent of the Green Avenue Baptist church, of Brooklyn, was in charge of the singing. Miss Mary Clark was at the organ and George W. Moy accompanied the singing with violin obligato.

During the service, each member of the camp and the others present were given small fans, of red, white and blue paper. On the fans was printed "Netherwood Fresh Air Camp, Sunday, July 29, 1906. Special Flag Day Service. Address by Rev. A. E. Finn." The words of "The Star Spangled Banner" were also printed on the fans, and the National anthem was sung by the congregation immediately after the fans were distributed.

MRS. MARY L. BENNETT.

Widow of Joseph R. Bennett Passes Away After Several Weeks' Illness.

Mary L. Bennett, widow of Joseph R. Bennett, died at her home on Fairview avenue, Sunday morning, following an illness of several weeks. She was born in Rahway sixty-five years ago but has resided in the borough for a long time. She was of a most pleasing disposition and was greatly liked for her many estimable traits. There are surviving eight children: Mrs. Edgar Milligan, Mrs. John Dixon, Miss Mary Bennett, Walter, Fred, Harry B., Louis and Charles Bennett, all of whom are local residents. Fred Bennett is a marine attached to the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, now stationed at Brooklyn, but was not home at the time his mother passed away.

Former Editor's Wife Dead.

Mrs. Suzannah L. Dow, widow of E. Dean Dow, formerly editor of the old Plainfield Times, died at Knowville, Tenn., on Saturday. The remains will be brought to this city and funeral services will be held here tomorrow.

Another Storm Sewer.

After the new West End avenue bridge is completed another storm sewer will be installed on the city side of West End avenue from the bridge to Front street to help carry off the surface water in heavy rains. There is a storm sewer on the north side of the avenue, but this is not sufficient to do the work.

CHAS. M. BURT RESIGNS

General Passenger Agent of Jersey Central Quits For $10,000 Position.

TAKES A SIMILAR JOB

North Plainfielder to Return to Boston and Maine—Has Lived Here For Five Years.

Charles M. Burt, of Washington avenue, who for the past five years has been the general passenger agent for the New Jersey Central, has tendered his resignation to take effect September 1, at which time he will become general passenger agent of the Boston and Maine Railroad. Announcement of the change was made on Saturday. Mr. Burt's successor with the New Jersey Central has not been decided upon as yet, but there is a rumor that a man from the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy will be chosen.

The announcement of Mr. Burt's resignation comes as a surprise to railroad officials on the New Jersey Central, as well as his many friends in Plainfield. He came to Plainfield from the Boston and Maine Railroad at the time W. G. Besler succeeded Vice President Warren. At the time he was assistant general passenger agent of the Boston and Maine, having held the position for one year.

During his stay with the New Jersey Central, it is said, he has greatly improved the passenger service. When he took the position the road had a bad reputation so far as the passenger department was concerned. It is known that the Boston and Maine has been after Mr. Burt for some time, but he was rather reluctant to leave Plainfield and the New Jersey Central. His new position is one of importance and is about four times larger than the one he now holds. The Boston and Maine has about 2,500 miles of trackage and the position of general passenger agent, it is said, is worth about $10,000 a year.

When Mr. Burt was asked to confirm the rumor concerning his resignation, he said: "Yes, it is true. For a great many reasons I do not like to leave Plainfield or the New Jersey Central. My relations both with the New Jersey Central and the people along its lines have been very pleasant and for these and other reasons I shall regret to leave here."

SOUTH PLAINFIELD MAY HAVE FIRE BRIGADE

GOOD GOVERNMENT CLUB TO TALK ORGANIZATION THIS WEEK.

Having been successful in its attempt to benefit the village in other ways, the Good Government Club, of South Plainfield, has determined to try its hand at organizing a fire brigade. The plan is pretty and aspirations to be a borough, considering itself large enough, but the citizens have never had fire protection of any sort and the fact has frequently been commented upon. The Good Government Club has talked the matter over in an informal way and the members have reached the decision that if South Plainfield is to have any standing with its neighbors it must have a volunteer department, no matter how limited its membership or apparatus may be.

William Hamilton, the president of the club, has issued a call and a meeting will be held this week to devise ways and means of formally organizing and securing equipment. The mains of the Middlesex Water Company are in the village and there are numerous taps. The Lehigh Valley Railroad has considerable property near the residential district and it is thought the officials will readily lend their efforts in the club's attempt.

WOMAN'S PLUCKY ACTION.

Mrs. Alfred Seidel, of the borough, who is spending the summer at Camp Berkeley Heights, proved herself a heroine Saturday, by preventing a fire in one of the large tents. A lighted lamp was accidentally overturned and a good-sized blaze was in progress in the space of a few seconds. Mrs. Seidel realized the danger and without the least hesitancy, caught hold of the lamp and threw it outside. She then smothered the flames on the floor, putting out the last vestige of fire.

Mrs. Seidel's own clothing was blazing before she finished and she might have sustained severe burns but for the arrival of other camp guests. As it was she was scorched about the hands and arms.

ROB'T ABBOTT WINS JULY COMPETITION

GEORGE F. SCHOONMAKER CAPTURES HONORS FOR GOLF COMITTEE CUP.

Notwithstanding that many of the members are away from town on their vacation, there was a good sized field of golfers at the Plainfield Country Club, Saturday afternoon, to take part in the scheduled events. The weather was threatening, but this did not keep the contestants away.

In the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup, George F. Schoonmaker won the first three points with a net score of 74, Morris J. Dumont and Earl Stockton divided the remaining point, each returning a score of 75. The scores for the Golf Committee cup are as follows:

George F. Schoonmaker, 83, 14—74; Morris J. Dumont, 82, 7—75; Earl Stockton, 84, 9—75; Dudley H. Barrows, 77, plus 1—78; W. B. Tyler, 93, 15—78; W. D. Riggs, 89, 11—78; Charles A. Stover, 89, 10—79; W. Lester Glenney, 96, plus 1—97; Hugh F. Fox, 102, 18—84; Stuart H. Patterson, 96, 9—87; W. D. Boggs, 107, 17—90.

The competition for the July cup was concluded on Saturday. Robert Abbott won the cup with his low score of 66 for the two weeks' play. This was the best score for the month and it is also the record for the course thus far this season. The scores returned on Saturday for the cup are as follows:

J. W. Lane, 89, 11—78; W. B. Tyler, 93, 15—78; W. D. Riggs, 89, 11—78; Charles A. Stover, 89, 10—79; Hugh F. Fox, 102, 18—84; Stuart H. Patterson, 96, 9—87; W. P. Boggs, 107, 17—90.

Morris J. Dumont also won a leg on the semi-scratch cup, returning the best score in this competition, an 82. At the end of the season those who have won a leg on the cup will compete at match play.

There were very few contestants at the Park Golf Club on Saturday and those who played did not post their scores. The shower early in the afternoon dampened the ardor of the players and had a tendency to reduce the number of contestants.

The qualifying round for the August handicap cup was played at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday. Match play will begin on Saturday. Those who qualified for future play are as follows: R. L. VanDyke, 92, 12—81; W. Howe, 95, 5—90; Dr. Atkinson, 95, 10—85; C. W. Young, 101, 13—88; C. Kirchner, 92, 6—86.

DAAB'S TEAM AGAIN DEFEATS ELIZABETH NINE

INVADERS MADE BUT ONE HIT OFF SMITH'S DELIVERY.

Daab's Plainfield team again showed the Elizabeth Invaders how to play the National game at Elizabeth on Saturday, when it defeated the visiting aggregation by a score of 9 to 0 before a big crowd of fans. "Ljomie" Beisel occupied the box for the home team and Plainfield touched him up for eight hits, while "Phil." Smith, who twirled for Plainfield, allowed but one hit. That was made by Curley. Henriques, Goodman and Foster each made a run for Plainfield.

The Plainfield lineup was somewhat changed, Stapleton playing center field, Reardon going on second, Heffron played left field, Foster in right and Bell covered third base in the absence of Leonard. The score:

The residence at the south-east corner of West Second street and Central avenue has been purchased by Herman Weber and will be moved by him to his property at Liberty and Second streets. The work is to be started at once and the building will be in its new location by August 15. The house is one of the oldest in that section of the city and was recently occupied by Jules Boutes.

MYSTERY OF COP AND A SUNDAY PISTOL SHOT

GUNPLAY AT FLEEING BOYS THAT HEADQUARTERS DIDN'T KNOW OF.

An officer in pursuit of two small boys stirred up East Front street between Washington street and Westervelt avenue, Sunday afternoon. Porch-sitters who were watching the rain pelt down saw the officer running after the boys from the direction of Watching avenue, at about 3:30 o'clock. The boys did not appear to be running very hard, but the policeman seemed unable to cut down their lead.

Opposite S. D. Scheuer & Company's store the boys shot across the street and ran down the alley sheer toward the brook. As the cop turned with them a pistol shot sounded. Nobody could be found afterwards who had seen the policeman fire and the shot was something of a mystery. It drew a score of people out of the houses, and led to more excitement than East Front street has experienced in a long time. A few minutes afterwards the cop was seen coming down Water street, without his fugitives. None of those who saw the officer recognized him.

It was said in the neighborhood that the boys were being chased for stealing candy. Chief Kiely knew nothing of the occurrence when a reporter asked him about it this morning. There was no report on the book, he said, and doubted that there was "anything in it." The reporter was pretty sure there was, and the chief said he would investigate.

Three minutes' investigation disclosed the fact that there was a good deal in the story. Officer Sliter, one of the new cops, was in headquarters, and Chief Kiely called him over. Stillwell was the man.

He said a telephone message had apprised headquarters yesterday afternoon that some boys were playing craps and shooting up in a vacant house on East Front street, near Church street, and he went up after them. They ran, with him after them, and he had shot in the air to frighten them. They didn't frighten and escaped after a foot-like run through the narrow street along the brook. He hadn't thought to report the occurrence.

"You had no right to shoot in that manner," said the chief sharply. "A man who fires his revolver in that way is unfit to be an officer. It's a fool trick. I don't want to hear of a thing like that again."

Stillwell was jacked up for not reporting, also.

COUNTRY CLUB PLAYERS AFTER TENNIS TITLES

MEMBERS OF OTHER CLUB'S DEFEATED IN OPENING ROUNDS OF TOUANAMENT.

Matches in the first two rounds of tournament play in the Plainfield championship singles tournament were played Saturday afternoon at the Country Club courts. The tournament was open to all local aspirants to the title in city and borough, but only Country Club players made a line for the matches in the semi-final round, none of the outsiders winning their matches Saturday. Despite the shower which threatened to interrupt the play early in the afternoon.

In a bye match in the preliminary round, Fred W. Goddard defeated George S. Gough in straight sets, 6-4.

In the first round play, Harry J. Cochran won from W. L. Glenney, 6-3, 6-2. Wylie Brown had to fight through three sets to take his match from Edwin M. Daniel, who made the best showing of any of those entered outside the Country Club. Brown took the first set, 6-2, but Daniel won the next, 6-4. The third set ran up to 7 all, Brown then taking two games from the set, 9-7. Harry Carter also had a three set match with Monroe H. Long, finally winning a uphill match, 7-5, 6-3, 6-2. Fred Goddard won from T. M. Day, 6-4, 7-5 and R. S. Gough defeated H. B. Lovell, 8-4, 6-3. W. T. Glenney put out T. H. Schauffler in straight sets, 6-3, 6-4 and A. Beers took straight sets from Vincent B. Miner, of the Cedar Brook Tennis Club, 6-0, 6-3. William Barlow, of the Park Club, was the only player not of the Country Club who won his match in the first round. He defeated C. B. Tyler, 6-2, 6-3.

Three matches were played in the next round, Harry J. Cochran winning from Wylie Brown, 6-3, 2-6 and default, and W. T. Glenney taking straight sets from R. S. Gough, 6-2, 6-1. Albert D. Beers put William Barlow, of the Park Club, out of the run for the title, 6-4, 6-2, leaving only Country Club players to contest for the championship. The match between Harry Carter and Fred Goddard is still to be played in this round, while Glenney and Beers will play off the other match in this round. The match play for the title will be completed next Saturday afternoon, though it is possible that some of the matches will be played off during the week. The winner will receive the title cup of tennis champion of this city, which is offered by T. M. Day. The runner-up will also receive a cup.

HOBOKEN DEFEATED BY THE CUBAN STARS

THIRTEEN INNING GAME WITH FINAL SCORE OF 3 TO 1.

Dasky's Hobokens played another remarkable game at the Cricket Grounds, Sunday, when they met the Cuban Stars. The contest went thirteen innings and the home team was defeated by a score of 3 to 1. "Willie" Deegan was touched for ten hits, while but seven hits were made off Medina. Both teams put up an errorless game and there were many brilliant plays throughout. After getting one run in the first inning the Hobokens were blanked the rest of the way. A week ago Hoboken played a fifteen inning tie game with the Cuban X Giants.

CLINTON AVENUE LOST TO FLEMINGTON, 3 TO 0.

Rattling Good Game In Which Every Inning But One Was a Blank.

In a hotly contested game, the Clinton Avenue team was defeated at Flemington on Saturday, the score being 3 to 0. The Plainfield boys were unable to secure but five hits off Wesner, while Scott allowed but three hits. However, five errors helped Plainfield to lose the contest. The score:

help to relieve present conditions, without putting a serious burden upon the butchers who have had a very much smaller ratio of increase than household consumers have had in the past three years.

In conclusion I beg to say that it is not the purpose of the Protective Association to endeavor to reduce prices of anything in Plainfield below figures at which a fair and reasonable profit will be secured by those engaged in the business.

We do, however, in return for our patronage, expect that every proper effort shall be used to give us as low prices as possible, consistent with good service and proper returns, and unhampered by improper trade agreements.

In carrying out these aims we purpose always hearing both sides of a question, and after obtaining all information possible, endeavor to arrive at an agreement which will be fair and satisfactory to both sides.

Yours very truly,
R. HENRY DEPEW,
President.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE BEGINS 2D SEASON

"CHINATOWN CHARLIE" THE INITIAL OFFERING AT LOCAL PLAYHOUSE.

Resplendent in new decorations and spick and span in every part, the New Plainfield theatre opened the season of 1906-7, Saturday, with A. H. Woods' big scenic production of "Chinatown Charlie" as the offering. Large and enthusiastic audiences were present at afternoon and night performances and between the acts many in the orchestra and balcony took the opportunity to view the improvements at close range. All met with hearty approval and Manager Counihan was frequently complimented on his good taste in color effects and the progressiveness displayed in providing for the comfort and safety of patrons.

Of the improvements made to the house, one of the most noticeable is a large curtain directly in the center back of the orchestra chairs. It is used to prevent the noise of late-comers disturbing those already seated and also to shut off light from the lobby during dark scenes. The tile floor between the entrance and orchestra proper has been carpeted and this reduces noise from feet to a minimum. The ventilator installed above the auditorium kept a steady circulation of air and the fact was doubly appreciated by the gallery patrons. The lowering of the orchestra floor, the added exits and the draperies and hangings all attracted attention and were the subject of favorable remarks.

In the house staff there are but few changes from last season. A new office, that of business manager and advertising agent, has been created by Manager Counihan and filled by Michael L. Shanahan, who has hitherto been a factor in St. Louis amusement circles. John Fritz has been made chief usher in the place of Joe. Robinson and the orchestra is now conducted by Charles M. Suhr. It has been a few musicians and their work at Saturday's performances was in every way satisfactory.

The other members of the executive staff are as follows: Treasurer, Samuel Cunningham; assistant treasurer, Leonce L. Texier; stage manager, Fred Fleming; assistant, Charles Mumford; property master, Fred Fleming; superintendent of auditorium, David Bush; bill poster, James Corcoran.

During the coming season, the best musical and dramatic productions of the road will visit the theatre and the same courteous policy that marked its first year will be maintained.

COULDN'T HIT RANDOLPH.

The Dunellen outfield was idle Saturday afternoon, so completely did Randolph's great pitching puzzle the crack Bayonne A. C. They could not hit a fair ball outside of the diamond; the best they could get was one scratch hit. The score was 4 to 1. If Bayonne had not given a base on balls in the sixth, and hit a man in the eighth and the locals had had their regular infield, Bayonne would have been shut out easily.

Demont pitched good ball for Bayonne up to the fifth, but after that he went up in the air. The feature of the game, outside of the pitching of Randolph, was the base running of Lake and Piddington, the timely hitting of Giles and Garretson, and the great work of the Bayonne outfield.

Competition for August Cup.

Competition will be started at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday for the August cup, presented by Councilman Henry D. Hibbard. Under the rules the best selected score for the month will win the trophy. The score for the whole round of the links is to be made up of the best score for each hole made in competition during the month. Half the regular handicap is to be given. In determining the handicap the half point is to count as one point. The competition is open to all classes of membership.

Theatre Men Got Sack at Captain Payne's Athletes Yesterday.

PILED UP 13 RUNS TO 8

Bluecoat Combination Went All To Pieces Under Manager Bill Counihan's Second Assault, With Revamped Team.

Manager Bill Counihan's light comedy troupe made a hit Friday afternoon in a cute little performance of "Coming Back; or Toying With Some Cops." They trounced all over Cap Payne's combination, and the bluecoats helped them win as hard as if they had been paid for it. The score was 13 to 8.

Bill was mad over the way his team succumbed Tuesday afternoon, and valiantly demanded another go. He plugged up a hole or two in the nine and announced that the cops were licked. He said all a team needed to climb all over Cap Payne and his mates was a little get-up-and-go-at-'emishness. "If you slap them on the shin once they get cold chills," said Bill. His followers were skeptical, but Bill's dope worked out all right yesterday afternoon. One little sting threw the cops into such a panic that the ball gave them the shakes every time it came near them.

The Theatre Men were not baffled. Connolly, at short, was the best thing they had in the fielding exhibit, but he wasn't any better than Bill Mullen. Bert Moore, once the sunny-haired favorite of the grandstands in the City League days, went back to the gloves that he got sold with his mask, but he hadn't looked at shoots for so long that he let a hurried ball go by every once in a while without recognizing it in time to give it the grip and ask it to stay awhile.

George Elliott, leading juvenile of the troupe, twirled against the Cops. George held them to thirteen hits, and wasn't yanked from the box. Ed Schoeller started to pitch for the Cops, but Cap Payne got nervous when the score was 10 to 5 against him in the sixth and put in Taylor Mehaffey, the High School twirler. Bill thought the sobriety of his troupe would end then, but he discovered after a bit that the Cops couldn't tighten up even with a real twirler in the box. The troupe didn't get any hits off Mehaffey and there was some energetic whiffing, but the Cops went dotty every time that a man took the infield. Their nerves became sore after a bit, and an insurrection bu*sted* about the intrepid Cap through three innings. Some real rude remarks were exchanged between the bumped and battle-scarred players.

The troupe played a good game. The infield was a good imitation of a stone wall and Sam Cunningham actually froze to one of his two flies. Taylor in right made a grandstand catch. Bill played in left field and did finally make any wonderful catches because the cops meanly refused to hit the ball in his direction.

The line-up: Cops—Payne, 1b; McCarthy, ss; McGinley, 2b; Messler, lf; Mullen, c; Schoeller, Mehaffey, p; McKeon, cf; Dobson, 2b; McDonald, rf. Theatrical Men—Woolston, 1b; Counihan, lf; Hoyt, 2b; Taylo, rf; DeMesa, 3b; Connolly, ss; Cunningham, cf; Moore, c-3b; Elliott, p.

GUARD OFFICERS HARD HIT.

Enlisted Man Has Best End of Financial Question.

It has long been a source of wonder why the State should seemingly set a higher valuation upon the services of the enlisted man than upon those of a commissioned officer. This idea has been accentuated in the past week to the officers of the Second regiment, of Trenton, and the Third, of Camden, and especially the mounted officers, by the receipt from their quartermasters of bills for horse hire.

Before the Dick bill was adopted the State was in the habit of allowing the mounted officers $2 a day for horses for six days, although the officers usually had to pay for eight days, the time actually in camp. Now, however, the allowance is only $3 for the entire week. With the enlisted man, however, the State pays him the difference between the regular pay and $3.50 a day. There is a seeming discrimination in favor of the enlisted man throughout. The State furnishes him with a uniform, equipment and arms, and feeds him. The commissioned officer is obliged to buy his uniform and his sabre, and pay for his own food. He mounts the officer he is obliged to pay for his horse. Under the present system it often happens that a mounted officer not only has nothing for his week's work, but he is out of pocket from $6 to $10.

Three-Legged Terrier.

H. B. Zimmerman, of New Brunswick, has a little fox terrier which has taken the liberty of adding six little terriers to his establishment. The striking feature of the family is that one of the pups has only three legs. The three appendages are in their proper places, with nothing at all where one forepaw ought to be. Mr. Zimmerman expects to have the dog in some circus or museum when it arrives at weeks of discretion.

ANOTHER DEEP SECRET

Fire Committee Busy For Three Hours But No One Knows About What.

MEMBERS' LIPS SEALED

Testimony Taken From Outsiders, But They Are Also Silent—Truck Accident Probably Discussed.

The fire committee of the City Council held a conference in the Council chambers, Thursday. It lasted until after 10 o'clock and to the observer on the outside seemed to be an interesting session, but why it was called and what was done are matters that those not present have been left to decide for themselves. Chairman Mellick declared to a Daily Press reporter over the 'phone from New York city that he had gotten the members together and that his purpose was to "discuss several matters concerning the department before he went away." The other members of the Council in attendance, Messrs. Tolles, Gloak, Buxton and Montgomery, stated that their lips were sealed. If it was all the same to the newspapermen that they look elsewhere for information.

In view of the fact that there are several matters concerning the department that the public is very much interested in at present the conference has excited a deal of talk and as a result rumors are as plentiful as seekers for free tickets on the Union County Republican outing. Whatever the matters were that engaged the attention of the committee, the fact remains that they needed witnesses to enlighten them as there were several called to give testimony. One of them was seen leaving the Council Chamber and when questioned admitted that he had been asked to tell what he knew about a "certain matter" but after that his memory left him and he failed to recall anything more.

An impression prevails that the recent accident to No. 1 truck took up the greater part of the time and this probably is correct. At the conference held last week, this was touched upon but after giving a statement from Chief Doane, it was decided to let the investigations go over until Driver Harry Bush was in a condition to appear before the committee. Several stories about the affair have since cropped up, however.

BOND IS REQUIRED FOR FAITHFUL SERVICE.

State Military Board Issues New Order for Naval and National Guard Officers.

Officers of the national guard throughout the State have received orders from the adjutant general's office announcing that the State Military Board, at a recent session, fixed the amount of bond to be given by collecting and disbursing officers of the various departments of the State militia, as required by paragraph 63 of the "act concerning the militia of the State," approved May 16, 1906. The order reads:

"It is hereby ordered that all officers acting as collecting and disbursing officers of the national guard or naval forces or organizations shall be required to give a bond, with sufficient security, conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of their respective offices, etc. Upon receipt of the order they shall, without delay, execute a bond to State of New Jersey in the full amount of all State moneys appropriated for the support of the commands to which they are attached. The bond shall be a corporation bond, and when properly executed shall be forwarded, through military channel, to the paymaster general, who will file the same with the comptroller of the State treasury.

"The bond of collecting and disbursing officers of a regiment shall be for $6,500, troop of cavalry $2,000, battery of field artillery $2,000, signal and telegraph corps $2,000, battalion of naval reserve $1,500."

Officers and enlisted men of the national guard who report at the State range at Sea Girt at their own expense will be permitted to shoot in the classes in which they belong on the following dates: July 28, August 4, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18. Men who have not been able to report for practice on the dates assigned to their respective organizations, and who have not practiced before, will be furnished ammunition without cost. This, however, will not apply until after the dates fixed for the practice of the organizations. Upon arriving at the range the men will report to the inspector general of rifle practice or to the officer in command, and will be subject to his orders until excused or dismissed. Transportation at State rate, good on the above dates, may be procured by addressing the inspector general of rifle practice at Sea Girt, and by sending cash money order for the amount of transportation desired.

REUNION OF ZEPHYR BOYS ON AUGUST 5

CLAM BAKE TO BRING TOGETHER THE OLD VOLUNTEER FIREMEN.

At a meeting held in Bitum's hotel on Somerset street, Thursday, the members of the old Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company decided to hold a reunion. It will take place on Sunday, August 5, and will be in the nature of a clam bake only for the members and a few invited friends. When the matter was first projected it was thought the affair could be conducted on a large scale, with a parade and dinner, but the smallness of the company at present made this impossible.

The bake will take place in the grove at the foot of Jefferson avenue, where the Hooligan Association has held its gatherings. It is a pleasant spot, almost an ideal one for a gathering of this kind, and the Zephyr boys are sure to find the surroundings congenial. If the affair proves successful, more extensive *plans will be made for a second re*union when other companies may be induced to join in the movement.

The following committee was appointed last night to complete all arrangements: Jacob Blimm, Sr., president; George Mehl, John Ammon, George Studer and Thomas Hughes.

PRAISE FROM STOKES.

Compliments for Gen. Gilmore and Col. Collins.

Governor Stokes has complimented both General Gillmore and Colonel Collins on the work of the Second Regiment while in camp at Sea Girt.

The following letter has been forwarded by Governor Stokes to Col. Dennis F. Collins, commander of the regiment:

"My Dear Colonel Collins—I deeply regret the departure of the Second Regiment from camp. During the week just closing the regiment has maintained its reputation for discipline and efficiency, and the good spirit shown by the officers and men under your command is the highest testimony of their soldierly qualities and to your capacity as commanding officer.

"I trust you have enjoyed your encampment, and that next year we shall meet again in camp.

"With best wishes for yourself and your command, I am

"Very sincerely yours,

"R. C. STOKES."

The letter to General Gillmore was as follows:

"Brigadier-General Quincy O'M. Gillmore:

"My Dear General Gillmore—The closing day of the Second Brigade encampment causes us all to regret that it marks your departure from camp.

"The discipline maintained under your command and the issuance of field orders to all the military departments represented at camp raises a standard that equals the best guard and that will be difficult to surpass.

"You have brought not only to the camp but to the guard of the State a soldiery spirit that has been of untold benefit and that will cause you long to be remembered among your friends as well-wishers.

"I trust that we shall long continue to have the benefit of your knowledge of military affairs.

"With best wishes, I am

"Very sincerely yours,

"R. C. STOKES."

YES, THEY'RE MARRIED DESPITE THEIR DENIALS.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Were Hopping Mad Over the Announcement However.

Despite her denial, Miss May Hurst is now Mrs. Harry Stewart and her cheerful voice is missed by subscribers of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company. Miss Hurst, or rather Mrs. Stewart, was "hopping mad" when she read the announcement of her wedding in the Daily Press on Thursday. So was Harry Stewart and neither one lost any time in ringing up the newspaper *office to tell all what they were go*ing to do to the paper for publishing the announcement.

"No, that story isn't true; I'm not married," gurgled Mrs. Stewart over the 'phone to a reporter. "I'd like to know what business you had to put that in your paper. No, Harry Stewart didn't tell his intimate friends about it at all. I don't believe you. Take so, and you can just put it in that it ain't so." That's what the bride said Thursday afternoon. The following day she resigned her position in the telephone office, telling the other girls that she had been married.

Harry Stewart was also real angry when he read the marriage announcement. No, he had not told anybody, he said, and really he couldn't imagine how such a story could have originated. That it was not so, he was *sure—at least on Thursday after*noon.

The left-over tarvia has been spread on West Ninth street, between Arlington avenue and College place. Commissioner Gavett will now watch results.

FARM BUILDINGS BURNED

Barn, Granery and Wind Mill of Chas. Brickoff Near New Market Destroyed.

THE TOTAL LOSS $3,000

Insurance Was $1,200—Fire Discovered By Passerby—Valuable Horse Burned.

A fire, the cause of which has not yet been learned, destroyed the barn and outbuildings, including a cow building and windmill, at the farm of Charles Brickoff, a farmer living near New Market, Wednesday. No organized fire assistance could be secured in time, so the efforts made to save the buildings were to no avail, and the destruction was total. The buildings were valued at close to $3,000, and were insured for $1,200.

The fire was discovered by William Smalley, a neighbor. Brickoff had left home early in the evening to carry a crate of eggs to a nearby farm where they were to be taken to market today. The farm was left alone in charge of Brickoff's aged mother, who is quite deaf. Smalley and a neighbor were driving past when a burr on their wagon axle dropped off and they were forced to stop for repairs. Smalley went up to the Brickoff farm for help, but was unable to discover that anyone was at home. He returned to the wagon and was working there when his comrade suddenly called his attention to the barn, which was blazing freely in the upper part, flames bursting from the roof.

Smalley ran to the burning building and bursting open the door led out one of Brickoff's horse and succeeded in saving quite a little of the farm machinery stored in the barn. It was said that Brickoff himself arrived, and the three men, with the aid of some neighbors, who had by that time seen the flames, worked hard to rescue the other horse and the remainder of the machinery. The animal could not be saved, and was burned together with much farm machinery and tools. Brickoff's crops, which he had just finished storing in the barn and an adjoining outbuilding, were entirely destroyed. The windmill attached to the barn also caught fire and was totally destroyed, as were the cow shed and granery near by.

Brickoff communicated his losses to W. A. Woodruff, local agent for the Phoenix Insurance Company this morning. The barn, which was new and cost $1,000 was insured for $9.50, the farm machinery was insured for $200, and the horse that was burned for $50.

Blue Ribbon for Plainfield Horses.

W. J. Buttfield's team of bay mares, "Miss Banahan" and "Miss Westcott," were awarded a blue ribbon in the roadsters' class at the Long Branch horse show Thursday. There was strong competition between these two and H. S. Ladew's "Sadie McGregor" and "Emily," but the Plainfield team was finally selected.

RIALTO PETS WALLOPED

Cops Trimmed Counihan's Cast-Offs Without Giving Them Chloroform.

BILL'S CURVES BANGED

Managerial Twister Chased from the Box By Bluecoat Blagiesmiths—Theatrical Favorites Who Didn't Do Things.

Cheered by their victory over the cocky Newspaper Men the day before, Cap. Payne's bluecoat combination flung to their winning gait Wednesday and trampled all over Manager Bill Counihan's theatrical troupe. What the cops did to those suffering habitues of the Rialto was plenty and a lot more. The scorer says the record was 19 to 8, but there is persistent rumor that he lopped a naught from the rear of the cops' figures.

Bill's stock as an organizer of ball teams slumped fearfully as a result of the game. He came back from Atlantic City Monday with a bundle of hot tales touching on and appertaining to the tremendous things he and Treasurer Sam Cunningham did in the ball yard by the sea. He hurled challenges right and left, and a few in the air, and issued a signed statement in which he declared his undoubted ability to put nine theatre attaches, de jure or de facto, together who could trim anything that sprang from police headquarters, the news*paper offices or Harry De Mesa's Dry* Goods League. In the limelight that beats on the ball works Bill was *shown up as a combination of ex*ploded rumor and unconfirmed report.

Bill didn't know he was a busted bubble until the cops got at him. He insisted on going into the box, and despite warnings from Chief-Johnny Hoyt, who wanted to loose some kinks himself, he went blindly to his fate. His pipe blew out in the first laning. The cops cruelly banged his shoots all around, and the men behind him kicked and threw the leather thing where it never was kicked or thrown before. Jim Cochran danced between short and centerfield. *Harry De Mesa waved his arms wild*ly in the vics versa run. Props Rafferty did an eccentric buck-and-wing at third. Johnny Hoyt posed a few at second and Adonis Woolston made huge and fearsome tracks at first. Jack Dunn made a pretty moveless picture in right field. In the sixth, Bill ducked from before the deadly ball of hits, and George Elliott, a junior hit-killer used for ballast, took up the burden. George suffered only three runs worth. Sam Cunningham abandoned the chief porthole in favor of "Iky" Elliott, who catches "Bill" Jaeger back of fire headquarters.

Nobody knows how the runs were scored. Jack McIntyre, the scorer, tried to follow the men around, but his eyes became crossed from shooting all over the diamond at once, and he lost track. He won't be able to see straight in one direction for a week.

The batting order:

Cops—Dobson, 2b; McGinley, 3b; McKeon, rf; Messler, cf; W. Mullen, b; T. Mullen, c; Corieli, 1b; Flynn, lf. *Theatrical Men—Hoyt, 2b; Wool*ston, 1b; Counihan, p-lf; Cunningham, c; Cochran, ss-cf; Rafferty, 3b; Dunn, rf; De Mesa, cf, ss; Elliott, p-lf.

GLAZER'S FACTORY ANNOYS ALTON FOLKS

FANWOOD TOWNSHIP COMMITTEE TO PREFER A FORMAL COMPLAINT.

Because of complaints made by nearby residents that odors emanating from the place are a menace to health, the Fanwood township committee held a meeting Friday night to take some action in regard to Theodore Glazer's fat rendling factory near Alton.

*Affidavits were made by Fred Mas*ker, Thomas Mair and Miles Rouch, adjoining property owners, before Acting Township Attorney Swackhamer that the plant is a nuisance, and the committee was notified in turn. Glazer learned of the intended investigation and with his counsel, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., appeared at the meeting, Friday night. Attorney Hetfield insisted that if the committee was to take any action in the mater, a formal complaint should be *preferred before some justice or mag*istrate, so that Glazer could present his side.

The officials consulted with Counsellor Swackenhamer and it was agreed that this course should be taken. Accordingly a resolution to this effect was passed and the necessary complaint will be made as soon as possible.

Registered at Somerset Inn, Bernardsville, on Thursday was a merry driving party from our neighboring borough, Fanwood, including Mr. and Mrs. Kingsland, Mr. and Mrs. Arkman, Miss Kingsland and Mrs. Marshall.

Howard Seiter, of Rockview avenue, has gone to the Adirondacks for the rest of the summer.

MASTER BUILDERS MEET

Thirteenth Quarterly Convention of the State Association Held in This City Yesterday.

100 DELEGATES PRESENT

Strike Troubles in Two Counties Among the Questions Discussed—Dinner in Conclusion.

With 100 delegates in attendance, representing eight counties in the State, the Master Builders' Association of New Jersey held its thirteenth quarterly convention at the Casino, this city, Wednesday afternoon. From a business standpoint, it was an important session while the entertainment features provided by the local committee was in every way satisfactory. The meeting ended at 6 o'clock and after an hour's intermission, the delegates reassembled for dinner, the excellent menu and addresses occupying their attention for three hours.

President Hugh D. King, of Bloomfield, was in the chair when the convention was called to order at 2 o'clock for roll call by Secretary Alex. E. Pearson, of Orange. On the platform were the eight vice presidents, as follows: Henry W. Egner, Newark; L. B. Woolston, Plainfield; Emil Koyen, Perth Amboy; John M. Lathrop, Jersey City; George A. Mills, Morristown; R. H. Hughes, Long Branch; A. Dickinson, Paterson, and Andrew D. Bogert, Englewood.

Each of these officials rendered a report, showing the building and trades conditions in the various counties which they represented. In nearly every instance, they were declared to be satisfactory, excepting Hudson and Middlesex. In the former there is trouble of a serious nature in Elizabeth in the hiring their strikers, thus making it harder for the masters to win in the struggle. The same charge was preferred by Jersey City against Newark and the matter was aired in breezy terms, several of the speakers getting into a trifle personal. No formal action followed the discussion but a much better understanding of the condition of affairs existed.

It was reported by one of the delegates that masters in Jersey City had been greatly bothered by the union workmen, who were out on strike, harassing the non-union men who had taken their places. He asked if something could not be done in the matter and it was decided to apply to the courts for an injunction to restrain labor unions from such interference.

A proposition to have an assembly bill passed requiring master builders to have a license, entitling them to perform certain classes of finer work, was discussed, and on motion of a delegate from Elizabeth, it was stated to recommend a member of the association for appointment to the State Tenement House Commission, a vacancy existing. Before adjourning, Elizabeth was designated as the next place of meeting.

The dinner was served in the Casino auditorium and was personally supervised by Manager Maze Edwards. While the delegates were at the tables, Suhr's Imperial orchestra furnished a musical programme and the Minion Brothers, of Newark, rendered vocal numbers with mandolin and guitar accompaniment. A number of speeches were given, the speakers being designated by President King.

Among the Plainfielders who were invited guests and who spoke briefly were Mayor James M. Buckle, Fire Chief T. C. Doane, Health Inspector William Addis, Architect C. Powell Karr and Architect A. L. C. Marsh.

The committee of Plainfield members that arranged for the convention consisted of L. B. Woolston, chairman; J. H. Coe, William H. Pope and Philip Jahn.

LOOPED IN FAST TIME.

Woodhull & Martin Company Employes Enjoy Fast Trolley Outing.

In record-breaking time, the employes of the Woodhull & Martin Company took their outing around the trolley loop Wednesday. They made the trip thirty-five strong, in a special car.

The start was made from Watching avenue at 6:45 and the circuit was completed in four and one-half hours. This is said to be the fastest time ever made on the trip.

Roy Woodhull arranged the trip. He led the singing on the way.

At Round Valley.

Among the Plainfielders registered at "Felmly Farm," Round Valley, are Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Randlong and daughter, Miss Lucie Budlong, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Randolph and son, Alan, Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Runyon and son, Kenneth Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William Stevens and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gavett and the Misses Bessie Flanders, Daisy Randolph and Eleanor Sherwin.

GREAT PARADE OF VETERAN FIREMEN

CELEBRATION AT ELIZABETH OCT. 11 WILL BE ON A LARGE SCALE.

The Veteran Volunteer Firemen's parade, which is to be held in Elizabeth on October 11, promises to be the greatest thing of its kind that has ever been seen in the State. Over sixty companies have already accepted invitations, and if no more should come in there would be, with the bands, 4,500 men in the line of march, which would stretch from Broad street to First street, Elizabeth.

There are to be all the modern fire-fighting appliances, besides the old-fashioned hand pumps and other paraphernalia used years ago to fight fire. It is expected that there will be at least 60,000 visitors in town and perhaps more. Every company will have its following of admirers who will come with them from the neighboring States of Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Delaware, New York and Connecticut.

When it is considered that the Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association has arranged to entertain all the visiting companies, it may be seen that there is going to be a lot of expense attached to the movement. Members of the association have been soliciting subscriptions, and funds are coming in but slowly. The affair comes at a very unfavorable time, for the people of Elizabeth have not yet recovered from the effects of their contributions to the monument fund and the San Francisco disaster called for more giving.

But it must be considered that the association in charge of the matter contributed its services to the people of this city in times past and it would be the proper thing now, its friends point out, for the citizens to put their shoulders to the wheel and make the celebration a success.

The following is a list of the companies who have signified their intention of taking part in the parade:

Kittatinny Hose Company, No. 1, Newton; Centennial Fire Company, No. 1, Phillipsburg; Independent Engine Company, No. 2, Red Bank; Newark Exempt Firemen's Association, Plainfield; Union Hose Company, Red Bank; Relief Hose Company, No. 2, Raritan; Protection Hose and Ladder Company, No. 1, Perth Amboy; Engine and Hose Association Company, No. 1; Lincoln Engine Company, No. 1, Perth Amboy; Union Truck and Bucket Company No. 1, Rutherford; Hackettstown Fire Department; Dover Fire Department; Elizabeth Fire Department.

Eagle Hose and Chemical Company, No. 4, Perth Amboy; Maxfield Engine Company, No. 1, Boonton; Oceanic Fire Engine Company, No. 1, Long Branch; Somerville Engine Company, No. 1, Somerville; Hanley Hose Company, No. 1, Chester, Pa.; Washington Fire Company, No. 7, Wilmington, Del.; Washington Steamer Company, No. 1, Washington; Goodwill Fire Company, Belvidere; Washington Steam Fire Engine Company, No. 1, New Brunswick; Union Fire Company, No. 12, Reading, Pa.; General Warren Hose Company, No. 2, Haverstraw, N. Y.; Association of Exempt Firemen, Paterson; Valley Hose Company, No. 1, Belleville; Woodbridge Fire Company, No. 1, Woodbridge; Steam Engine Company, No. 1, Freehold.

Association of Exempt Firemen, New York; Exempt Hose Company, No. 3, Belleville; Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association, Jamica, L. I.; Mt. Vernon Fire Patrol Company, No. 1, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; Firemen's Active Association, of Philadelphia; Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association, of Jersey City; Rescue Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1, Haverstraw, N. Y.; Pacific Engine Company, No. 1, Bridgeport, Conn.; Unexcelled Fire Company, West Grove; Volunteer Firemen's Association, of Philadelphia; Union Fire Engine Company, No. 2, Mt. Holly; Woodhill Hose Company, No. 1, Jamaica, L. I.; Veteran Volunteer Firemen, of Pittsfield, Mass.; Association of Exempt Firemen, Bayonne; Hope Engine Company, No. 1, Burlington.

Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1, Montclair; Exempt Firemen's Association, Trenton; Engine Company, No. 1, Flemington; Washington Engine Company, No. 1, Metuchen; Exempt Firemen's Association, Chelsea, Mass.; Protection Engine Company, No. 1, Hackensack; Exempt Firemen's Association, Westfield; Columbia Engine Company, No. 1, Peekskill, N. Y.; Phoenix Engine Company, No. 2, Newburgh; Volunteer Firemen's Association, Camden; Centennial Hose Company, Peekskill, N. Y.; Veteran Firemen's Association, Charlestown, Mass.; Liberty Hose Company, No. 2, Easton, Pa.

TO SIZE UP NEW IDEA

Senator Frelinghuysen Calls Meeting of Somerset Co. Republican Committee.

PREPARE FOR CAMPAIGN

Session to Be Held at Cawley's Hotel, Somerville, on Saturday, Aug. 11—Topic for the Session.

Although it anticipates that the "new idea" movement will cut little figure in the coming campaign, the Somerset County Republican Committee is astir at this early stage of the game. Senator Joseph H. Frelinghuysen, of Raritan, the county chairman, has issued a call for a meeting to be held on Saturday afternoon, August 11. Every member has been urged to be present at the session, which will be held at Cawley's hotel, Somerville.

One of the principal matters, it is said, to come before the committee, will be the usual election and board appointments. Another topic will be an informal discussion of probable candidates for the Assembly. As assemblymanship is the only nomination to be made this fall in Somerset and the regular organization is anxious to secure as strong a candidate as possible in order to defeat any slate of the Colbyites.

Reports will be received from every member of the committee concerning the situation in his district particularly as respects the strength of the Colbyites. It is said that the only opposition to the "new idea" to make any headway is in North Plainfield, although it has some followers in Somerville.

The county chairman's lieutenants will keep their eye on the Colby meeting, to be held in the Somerset hall, Somerville, on Monday night. They believe that the attendance and apparent enthusiasm will furnish some indication of how strong the movement has become within the confines of Somerset county. Each member of the regular committee will be informed at the meeting on August 11 who from his district were at the Colbyites gathering. In this way it is expected that some of the converts, at least, may be reclaimed.

The North Plainfield committeemen are Edwin S. Hooley, of the second district, and William G. Debele, of the first.

REGISTRATION DAYS.

There seems to have been a misunderstanding in some quarters regarding the force of the opinion recently rendered by the Attorney-General regarding the time of holding the registration days, as well as the primary election, in those municipalities of the State having a population of less than 30,000. The amendments of last winter to the primary law provided that the primary election shall be held on the fourth Tuesday of September of each year, except those on which a Governor is to be elected.

The question arose whether this law repealed provisions of the previous acts, which provide for a registration day on the second Tuesday in September in municipalities of less than 30,000 inhabitants, and it was upon this point that the Attorney-General wrote his opinion deciding that it did not, but that in municipalities of this size registration days must be held on the second Tuesday in September, as provided in previous legislation, but that the primary election must be held in all municipalities as stated on the fourth Tuesday in September.

The Attorney-General believes that this construction of the act must be made, among other reasons because of the peculiar wording of the statute of this year, which provides that the boards shall meet on the fourth Tuesday in September, for the purpose of conducting primary elections only, and that any construction that is had on that day in the municipalities below 30,000 inhabitants.

It is probably that the Attorney-General will give a further opinion to clear the matter up.

FIGHT FOR CLOSED DRAWS SAID TO BE SUCCESSFUL.

Unofficial Advices Declare War Department Has Granted Railroad's Petition.

While official advices are not immediately obtainable, it is said that despite the strenuous opposition of the Newark Board of Trade and other New Jersey commercial bodies, backed by the owners of vessels and the interests lying along Newark Bay, the Passaic and Hackensack Rivers, the railroads have won their fight to keep the draws of their bridges spanning those streams closed during the "rush" hours morning and evening when the tide commuters' travel respectively to and from New York is at its height.

Commuters from Elizabeth and Plainfield petitioned the War Department when the Central Railroad to keep the bridge from Elizabethport to Bayonne closed in rush hours, but the Newark Board of Trade was against the scheme from the start, and at hearings before the board of engineers of the United States army, having the matter in charge, presented statistics showing the vast amount of commerce.

OPPOSING THE WATER CO.

South Plainfielders Against Middlesex Water Co.'s Plan to Lead Mains to Pond.

SAY WATER IS IMPURE

Sentiment at New Market Meeting Last Night Opposed to Company.

In accordance with notices sent out by Dr. M. J. Whitford, secretary of the Piscataway Township Board of Health, a public meeting was held at New Market Thursday to discuss the recent action of the Middlesex Water Company, which desires to connect its mains with the South Plainfield mill pond in order to be sure of a reserve supply of water. About fifteen members of the South Plainfield Good Government Club were present at the meeting, which was held at Thornton's Hotel, and the general sentiment was against any such action of the company. The reason for this is that the South Plainfielders believe that the water is impure and that it would not be safe to use it for drinking purposes. No definite action was taken against the company, but it was decided to refer the matter to the State Board of Health and to insist upon an analysis of the water before anything is done by the company.

The reason for the company's action is merely a safe guard for the water supply. The main supply is taken from wells, and is known to be pure, but there is a possibility that this supply will not always be constant, for it has failed during dry spells. Addresses were made on the matter by John I. Holly, chairman of the committee composed of William E. Smith, Samuel R. Manning, J. Adams, Peter J. McDonough, B. Horn and William Hamilton, of the South Plainfield Good Government Club, and by other members of the committee. Charles Kellogg, the representative of the State Board of Health, also spoke, and there was a long general discussion.

The Middlesex Water Company is at present engaged in filling a filtration plant on the shore of the pond, and the work is well under way. A gang of men are employed in the construction, which is being put through as rapidly as possible. No mains have as yet been laid.

BRYAN PARTICULAR.

Does Not Want Questionable Coin Used for Reception.

William Jennings Bryan is getting particular these days about money. There was a time when the sage of free silver didn't care what kind of money he received in his campaign contributions, and if this be read what he says in a letter to Alexander Troup, of Connecticut, treasurer of the committee in charge of the reception to be tendered him on his return to America:

"There will be some expense, and the committee desires it is that no money is accepted from the questionable sources; in fact, I think it will be well to announce that the expense would be borne by popular subscription—dollar subscriptions being preferred, but that large subscriptions would be received up to $50, none being received over that.

"Also, announce that subscriptions of $5, or more than $5, would be entered in a book, and the names given to any one desiring them. Subscriptions of less than $5 would not be made known without the expressed consent of the subscriber.

"Say that the reception will be made as inexpensive as possible, and that any surplus over and above the expenses of the reception will be used to print and circulate the speeches delivered at the reception.

"I think the publication of the subscriptions is an important thing. The Republicans have failed to pass any effective law in regard to campaign contributions, and this will be a good rebuke to them and will forestadow the adoption of such a policy by our next campaign committee.

"You can say, if you like, that I asked to have this plan adopted."

Treasurer Troup gave out Mr. Bryan's letter yesterday at a meeting held at the Hotel Victoria, at which Charles F. Murphy, the Tammany leader, and ex-Gov. David R. Francis, of Missouri, were elected members of the reception committee.

NEW COLBY CLUB.

Pat Kane Organizes One at His Peanut Parlor On North Avenue.

Pat Kane, who runs a peanut bank on North avenue, has organized a Colby Club. Pat is the whole club so far, but he has seven other members in sight.

"I am for reform," said Pat this morning. "Here I get a letter from what's-his-name himself. A fine letter. He says its a good move, and to keep it agoin'. He's a fine man, this here—what-d'yer-call him? Colby? Oh, yes, Colby—Colby. Well this here Colby is right. I'm telling you, and what he believes is my sentiments."

The meetings of the club will be held in the peanut bank.

Pat's Sunday Business.

Pat Kane denies the report that he has changed his religion. He says his Seventh-day ideas are confined solely to his business.

RUNYON ON THE STUMP

Colbyite Assembly Candidate Carries Campaign Into Perkins' District.

ALSO INTO CRANFORD

Proclaims His Regularity as a Republican—Will Support Perkins If He Wins Battle at the Primaries.

Judge Runyon carried the war into Assemblyman Perkins' country last night. With Record and other leaders in the reform fight, he spoke at meetings in Westfield and Cranford.

Small crowds came to hear him. There were only about fifty people at Westfield, and while the attendance at Cranford was better, the effect of summer somnolence was very much in evidence. To the warmth of the weather at Westfield was added the absence of advertisement. The meeting was decided upon only three days ago, and not many more people than the number that turned out had heard of it.

Judge Runyon spoke first at Cranford. In both places his speech was much the same. He spoke with the earnestness that is characteristic of him, and an added forcibility marked his speeches through a steady adherence to simplicity and a total lack of oratorical fights.

He told the Westfield audience, which gathered in the Westfield Club hall, that he did not feel like one coming to the enemy's country. He was a Republican, and intended to remain one. If he should be worsted in the primaries, he would support him loyally.

But there were things that moved him to battle for the defeat of the Westfielder, continued the Judge. He recounted the history, in outline, of the growth of the machine system and of the alleged domination of the bosses. Things had come to a pass, he said, where men were no longer chosen for offices of dignity and importance on the score of worth and ability, but were sent to the Senate simply because his money bags had been emptied into the party treasury, and for some reason, in the course of time, Dryden had been given the prize for the same reason, instead of ex-Governor Griggs.

The new idea was designed to make such misuse of the people's possessions impossible. The new idea itself was really not new at all. It was the same thing that had been enunciated in the Declaration of Independence.

The Judge told of his awakening after years of service with the machine here, in the Second ward. He had suspected that things were not properly conducted at all times, but he had learned that the practices of the machine men were so bad that men who desired to be honest in their politics could not countenance them. He had seen the colored vote purchased and delivered like cattle. Just about the time he had made up his mind to clear himself of his besmirching associations Colby had come to him and made it plain that his duty in supporting the reform movement.

He was not advocating factionalism or party splits, the speaker said in conclusion. He simply spoke and worked to bring about independent thinking in the party. Party loyalty did not demand unswerving obedience to the dictates of a few self-constituted "leaders." Voters could think for themselves, and work to bring about within the party those conditions that they desired, no matter what the so-called leaders might say, without losing one lota of regularity or loyalty to party.

Corporation Counsel George L. Record and Assemblyman Theodore L. Bierck, of Madison, spoke in both places. Record told of his bearers the story with which the people of Newark, Jersey City and Plainfield have become familiar. Mr. Bierck recounted experiences in the Legislature similar to those that made Colby a reformer. James W. McCarthy, president of the Jersey City Board of Aldermen, spoke at Cranford.

DEMOCRATS MEET TO FILL VACANCIES.

Minority Party City Committee Gets Ready for the Coming Campaign.

To arrange for filling vacancies in the election board, the fifth-ward Democratic city committee held a meeting Friday night. The session was attended by only seven committeemen, and the conference was brief.

The committee didn't know just where the vacancies were, and a committee of three was appointed to learn what jobs were to be filled and to pick the filling. The committee is made up of W. L. Hetfield, Sr., Stephen Schlief and J. V. P. Dilts. They will meet next Friday.

"Did you do anything at the meeting besides talk over the election board appointments?" a member was asked after the session.

"Do? What can we do?" he asked disgustedly. "What do you think the Down and Out Club does at its meetings except wonder if it will ever get away?"

Besides the committee named, the members present were P. J. Reville, who is chairman; Joseph Harrigan, Charles Sturtevant and V. L. Fraser.

BEGIN WORK ON FACTORY

Vacuum Cleaner Company's Plant to be Completed By September.

CONTRACTS AWARDED

Main Building to Be 200 Feet Long —Located Opposite Netherwood Avenue Station.

Ground was broken Friday for the erection of a large factory for the Vacuum Cleaner Company, of New York, of which David T. Kenney, of North Plainfield, is president. The plant will be located on North avenue, almost opposite the Netherwood avenue station and just west of the William H. Rogers Silverware Company's plant. It will be two stories in height and will be thoroughly modern in construction and appointments.

The contract for the main factory and the brass foundry and power house has been awarded: John Abbott & Sons will be the carpenters and Tallamy Brothers the masons. The building will be of brick and mill construction and will be substantial throughout. No information could be gained as to the contract price.

The main building will be two hundred feet long and sixty feet wide and the brass foundry and power house forty feet long and eighty feet wide. It is announced that the buildings will be finished on or before September 1.

Two hundred men will be employed in the factory, where the vacuum cleaner machinery will be manufactured. The company will retain its offices on Fifth avenue and in Trinity place, New York. While President Kenney, the inventor of the cleaner device, will have supervision of the plant here, he will be personally represented by a superintendent on the ground.

INCENDIARY FIRES "COUNT" VON NESS' HAY

HE MAY HAVE TROUBLE IN PREFERRING COMPLAINT TO THE POLICE.

Someone who evidently bears "Count" J. K. VanNess a large deal of grudge, set fire to a big hay stack on his premises at 1,231 East Front street, shortly after 11 o'clock Friday night. There were about ten tons of the dried grass piled up and it made a blaze that threatened the "count's" barn and other adjacent buildings. An alarm was turned in from box 18 at 11:25 and it was nearly two hours later before the firemen were able to pack up and start for home.

The "count" places the loss at $125 and as the hay stacks are not in the insurance clauses there is no one to help him stand it. He declared to Chief Doane, last night, that he knew who had applied the incendiary match and that he would have him or them arrested today.

According to the last bulletin issued from police headquarters, the "count" does not dare enter its precincts. He was arrested some time ago on a trifling charge but when interviewed at the station he applied a lot of cuss words to Chief Kiely and that official preferred a further charge against him but when the trial was called, the "count's" attorney pleaded an adjournment because of illness on the part of the defendant. Evidently he was never cured as the charge still holds against him and it became understood not long since that it would be allowed to remain dormant if the "count" remained away.

It is now a matter of concern to Mr. VanNess's friends to know how he can go down to headquarters and ask the police to nab the people who fired the stack.

WHY HE DROWNED.

Call Man Asked to Resign, But Was Not Guilty.

At its star chamber session, Thursday night, the Fire Committee of the Common Council requested Call Man David Dunavan to resign because, it is alleged, he fed his horse with hay taken from No. 1 engine house. The complaint was preferred by Captain James Daley and it is said that Driver Dunavan, now in the hospital, was implicated in the act.

Very Likely.

"You seemed to size that man up pretty well," remarked the talkative patron.

"Sure," replied the waiter, "it's easy for us waiters to take a man's measure."

"Yes? I suppose you measure him from tip to tip."

Miss Mary Jahn, of Scotch Plains, who has been spending a week of her vacation at Asbury Park, returned home Saturday. The coming week will be enjoyed at various points of interest.

John Lisbarger, Jr., of Brooklyn, is visiting his aunt, Mrs. F. A. McVoy, of East Front street.

Bernard Forsman, of Camden, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Fritts, of West Fifth street.

W. J. KEYS HEARD FROM

Somerset County Democratic Chairman Lets His Plans Be Known.

HARMONY HIS TUNE

Would Add to County Committee Ten Advisers From Each District—Stevens for Congress.

William J. Keys, chairman of the Somerset County Democratic Committee is determined to abolish all factional fights in the party this fall and will in the near future assemble the county committee and endeavor to have that body adopt a resolution empowering him to appoint ten men from each polling district in the county to act as an advisory committee in connection with the regular county body in making up the party's ticket.

The only county office to be filled in Somerset next fall is that of Assemblyman, but as a Congressman will also be elected from this district, Mr. Keys wants the party to present a solid front and nominate candidates who can win.

The recent declaration of principles which the State committee published, Mr. Keys thinks, indicates just where the party stands on all questions of interest to the people and he can see no reason why the Democrats cannot elect their Assembly candidates in Somerset and give the Congressional candidate a good majority at the next election.

When seen by a reporter, Mr. Keys said:

"The Democratic party may have done wrong in the past, and even though it has, that is no reason why its motives should be questioned now. The advocates of what is called a 'new idea' frankly admit that they have been identified with the Republican bosses, that they have participated in everything that their party has done against the people, but say they have seen the error of their way and have reformed. The best thing for citizens of every county to place them in office in order that they might end what they in co-operation with the bosses of their party are responsible for.

"No one questions their motives, at least so they think. Personally I do not question the motive that impels any man to reform, no matter what his sins may be, but these very people criticize the Democratic party and say we have failed to deceive the people by publishing alluring platforms and a declaration of principles better than their own.

"I am for good government, first, last and all the time. No man is more heartily in favor of that way record in the Senate, 1890-95, will bear out this statement.

"The Democratic party has not been in power for over twelve years. So far as the party in this county is concerned, it cannot be criticised, and if they have done wrong to State politics we, too, should be given a chance to show that a reformation has taken place.

"As chairman of the county committee I am anxious that all factional differences be wiped out. There is absolutely nothing to be gained by wrangling, and in looking over the situation in the county I find there is a lot of petty strife. The only way to overcome this is to take every section of the county right into the confidence of your committee and by appointing ten men from every polling place in the county I am sure a better ticket will be made up and better results obtained. The choosing of candidates for public office cannot be regarded in the light of a star-chamber proceeding. There should be no secrets about the selection. It is the business of every voter to have a hand in the nominating of all candidates.

"Whom do you regard as a possible Congressional candidate?" Mr. Keys was asked.

"Robert Stevens," he said, "will no doubt be the choice of Somerset county, provided he will accept the nomination. Mr. Stevens made an excellent run in 1904. Hunterdon and Mercer counties may have some other candidate with strength enough to secure the nomination. I can only speak for Somerset county."

FIFTY YEARS A PASTOR.

The Rev. Dr. Doolittle Tells What He Has Done in Half a Century.

The Rev. Dr. Philip M. Doolittle, who has finished his fiftieth year as pastor of the Reformed church at North Branch, told his parishioners Wednesday at an interesting celebration of the anniversary what he has accomplished during his long pastorate.

He told them he had preached 5,399 times at home and abroad for his pastorate, solemnized 234 marriages, baptized 423 infants and adults, and officiated at 513 funerals. He said he had baptized the grandchildren of some persons he had married and had seen one of these grandchildren grown up and marry, and had finally preached his funeral sermon.

He also said he had ministered to five generations of several families and personally knew six generations of one family.

ALL FIRMS MUST FILE NAMES OF MEMBERS

PARTNERSHIPS OF "A BRO., AS WELL AS "& CO.," INCLUDED.

Replying to a letter from County Clerk Charles H. Baker of Mercer county, Assistant Attorney-General Edward D. Duffield gives the opinion that any establishment doing business under a firm name, which does not clearly indicate the persons of the body must file with the county clerks the membership of each corporation. His letter is as follows:

"The assistant attorney general writes:

Trenton, N. J., July 30, 1906.

Charles H. Baker, Esq., Clerk of Mercer County, Trenton, N. J.:

Dear Sir—Your favor of even date, addressed to the attorney general, has been handed to me for reply. As I understand it, you desire the opinion of this office upon the construction to be given to chapter 240 of the laws of 1906, entitled "An act to regulate the use of business names."

That act provides, in its first section, that any person who transacts business using the designation "and company," or "& Co.," as a part of the firm or partnership name, shall file a statement with the clerk of the county setting forth the full name and residence of all persons who are members of such partnership.

Section two provides that no person or persons shall carry on or conduct or transact business under any assumed name, or under any designation, name or style, corporate or otherwise, other than the real name or names of the individual or individuals conducting such business, unless they shall file in the office of the county clerk a specified statement showing who are the persons constituting such partnership and what are their real names.

The only question which I make is whether these two sections are practically identical and whether the language of section two applies solely to the persons described in section one, viz., those who use the words "and company" or "& Co." Suppose those who have adopted some other partnership name which fails to disclose the real persons engaged in the partnership.

I think it clear that these two sections refer to two separate classes of persons who fail to indicate in the statements with the county clerk. The first person or persons who, using one name, add thereto, no matter what his sins may be, but these very people criticize the Democratic party and say we have failed to deceive the people by publishing alluring platforms and a declaration of principles better than their own.

SPREAD THE NEW 'IDEA'

Colby, Fagan and Record Tell Their Story in Somerset County.

DEMOCRATS ATTENTIVE

Among the 300 at Somerville Was a Goodly Number of Minority Party Men—What the Speakers Said.

The Somerset County Republican League for Popular Government, or the "new idea," to the Democratic party, held a meeting in Germania Hall, Somerville, Monday for the purpose of effecting permanent organization, but was not carried out to the letter, as no person has yet been decided upon for president. The chairman, W. W. Howland, of North Plainfield, said that an attempt had been made to prevent holding the meeting, but nevertheless they intended to have it.

The speakers came in an automobile from Newark, and were immediately taken to the platform. There was about 300 people in the hall, and very many well-known Democrats were noticed among the audience.

Hon. Everett Colby, Senator from Essex county, was the first speaker, and his remarks made a deep impression upon the gathering, as he related his personal experience in political life. He told the story of Carl Lentz coming to him and how he consented to run for the Assembly, and of his lack of knowledge at that time of political methods. Also of Mayor Fagan and George L. Record coming to him to interest him in legislation for the interest of Jersey City, and how, afterwards, his political doom was prophesied by the same Carl Lentz.

Mark Fagan, mayor of Jersey City, followed Mr. Colby, and his address was in a similar vein. He spoke particularly of the conditions that prevailed at the time he was elected mayor of Jersey City; that he supposed he was elected to serve the people; but that in less than six months he had his eyes opened to the condition of affairs. He was told he would ruin his party, and that he owed it a certain duty. He said he would rather be out of politics than in it, but that he did not propose to be driven out. The conditions in Hudson were such that he said he was compelled to do a drastic thing—write an open letter to the Governor, and that circumstances have since warranted him in such action.

George L. Record was the last speaker and covered the same points made by the previous speakers. He claimed that the opportunity for the people to get from under boss rule was in the new primary law, and explained in detail the way the law would work. He confined the reports that he was seeking office in his campaign for candidacy for the United States Senate.

At the conclusion of the addresses membership cards were passed around for signatures.

P. A. Pope, of Somerville, was elected permanent secretary and Calvin D. Smith, of Bernardsville, treasurer.

W. H. Whiting, for committee of permanent organization and by-laws, and they were unanimously adopted.

An appeal was made by the chairman for funds in the way of voluntary contributions.

The North Plainfielders present were Thomas A. Armstrong, W. W. Webb, F. deL. Hyde, John Hutchinson and W. W. Howland.

J. C. ACKERMAN MUST SUPPORT HIS WIFE.

City Court Judge Hocks His Scheme to Drop Off the Earth.

John Clayton Ackerman, a loose-jointed, nervous young man, was arraigned before Judge Runyon this morning, on a charge of deserting his wife and three children, preferred by Overseer of the Poor Aleck Ayres.

Letters written by Ackerman in which he told his wife that he hated her, that he was about to "drop from the earth," and that she could marry again without fear of interference from him were produced against the prisoner. He said his wife was a nagger. "But I'm willing to provide for her," he declared. "Don't I say in those letters that I worry about the boys?"

"Worry!" snapped the Judge, "You're the only one that doesn't know how to worry about anybody but yourself," and Ackerman gasped nervously.

He was ordered to provide $6 a week for his wife, and he will have to get a boodsman for $200.

Foot Bridge Washed Away.

BOY NUISANCES FIND HOODLUMISM EXPENSIVE

NOISY TRIO FINED $8 APIECE IN THE CITY COURT.

Hoodlumism was assessed at $8 a case in the city court Tuesday. Willie Berkowitz, Clarence Clarkson and Nelis Luthman, all about fifteen years old, were fined that amount for annoying the residents in the neighborhood of Washington, Church, and East Front streets, Tuesday morning.

The trio were arrested as the ringleders of a gang of eight or nine noisy youths, after numerous complaints had been made against them. John H. Reed, John Underwood and W. D. Williams, representing the angry residents, appeared before the court to prosecute the boys. The gang has made life miserable for the people of the neighborhood for months, in spite of frequent protests. It was a vacation rule, the crowd that played cards in the vacant house Sunday afternoon, and drew the chase by Patrolman Stillwell in which the latter aroused the neighborhood by a pistol shot designed to scare the fleeing boys.

"This matter is serious enough to merit especial punishment," said Judge Runyon in disposing of the trio. "In no case of its kind on record have so many and such bitter complaints been made. That there is a good deal in the charge, I'm satisfied. Men like Mr. Williams, Mr. Sayers and Mr. Underwood do not come down to court to appear against boys without very good reason. I will fine you enough to make this thing stick in your minds. I fine you $8 or 30 days in jail, apiece."

The three boys were locked in cells until their fathers sent the fines.

MODEL LAW OFFICES IN McCUTCHEN BUILDING.

Reed and Coddington Have Handsome Suite in the New Business Block.

Reed & Coddington will move their law offices from the Woolston & Buckle building on North avenue to Charles W. McCutchen's new building on Park avenue, about October 1. In the construction of Mr. McCutchen's building the offices to be occupied by the firm were designed especially for it, and they are said to be as fine as any in the State.

The new suite comprises four large rooms, about half the space of the second floor, and they adjoin the new building of The Plainfield Trust Company. They are exceptionally light and well ventilated, there being four windows on the Park avenue side, for two extra large rooms. One of these will be used by the law firm of Mr. Coddington and the other the private office of Mr. Reed. Directly back of Mr. Reed's office is another room which will be used as a library, while the one back of Mr. Coddington's office will be used by the stenographers and stenographers. The main entrance to the offices will be through this room. The offices are all finished in dark oak, and the private rooms of the firm are provided with handsome ornamental fire-places.

The remainder of the third floor will be occupied by Reuben Knox, the lawyer, and Dr. Ralph Waldo Emerson, the dentist. The top or third floor contain six bachelor apartments, each suite comprising a parlor, sitting room and bath, all containing modern improvements.

Reed & Coddington have occupied offices in the North avenue building ever since its construction by Smalley Brothers.

Death of Mrs. Scott Foster.

Many friends in this city have learned with deep regret of the sudden death of Emeline Hegeman, wife of Scott Foster, of New York, at her summer home, Englewood, on July 27, 1906. Mrs. Foster was a woman of rare worth, possessing superior mental abilities and attaining a very high spiritual plane. Full of generous impulses, appreciative of the best in others, and heroic in endurance, the natural graces of a truly womanly character were crowned with the faith and trust that mark the highest Christian womanhood. Mrs. Foster was a graduate of Opheleton Seminary, now the Plainfield Seminary, on West Seventh street, and since her marriage has spent many summers with her family in this city. She is survived by her husband, Scott Foster, one daughter, three sons, a sister, Mrs. D. N. Groendyke, of Mercer avenue, and a brother, Mr. Hegeman, of New Germantown. Her funeral services were held this morning at her late home, Englewood, N. J., and interment was made at Newburg, N. Y.

Origin of "Grass" Widow.

"She is a grass widow," said the professor, nodding in the direction of a woman with yellow hair. "A 'grass' widow? O, professor, I didn't think you would use slang." "'Grass widow is not slang," said the professor, stoutly. "It is, on the contrary, a very ancient and correct expression. It comes from the French 'grace.' It was originally written 'grace' widow. Its meaning is 'widow by courtesy.' There is nothing slangy or disrespectful in the term 'grace widow.' A widow may call herself that with propriety."—N. Y. Press.

RECORD MAKES ANSWER

"New Idea" Candidate Replies to Attack Made by Randolph Perkins.

DENIES ASSERTIONS

Charge That Colby Taxation Bill Was In Interest of Railroads Is Unfounded According to Record.

George L. Record, the "new idea" candidate for United States Senator, Monday answered the attack made on him by Randolph Perkins, of Westfield, the Republican leader in the Assembly. Mr. Perkins said that the railroads were being asked to support Mr. Record's candidacy, and declared that every proposition the railroads supported before the Legislature was conceded in the Record-Colby platform.

Mr. Perkins was the author of the Equal Taxation bill passed at the last session, and he took issue with the Record-Colby declaration demanding that the main stem of the railroads be cut into sections and taxed locally in each taxing district, instead of being taxed as a whole as at present.

Mr. Record said in part:

"Mr. Perkins seems to make two points. First, that the tax law passed last winter is a better bill than that proposed by the Colby people, and second, that the bill proposed by the Colby people was put forward by the Colby people in the interest of the railroads.

"The Arrowsmith bill, upon which the Colby people made their fight, left the franchises to be assessed and taxed by the State at an average State rate instead of $5. It allowed the real estate composing the main stem and second-class property to be assessed by the local authorities in which the same was situated and taxed at the local rate.

"The Perkins bill made the franchises and real estate assessable together by a State board and taxable at an average State rate. The argument for the Arrowsmith bill was that real estate, whether it is main stem of railroads or second-class railroad property or individual property, and as such it has a value which is more likely to be fairly ascertained by local assessors than by a State board which it is difficult to hold responsible.

"Mr. Perkins says this system is illogical, but it is in vogue in many other States, and we are satisfied it is the only solution of the railroad problem in this State. As to the charge that our bill was in the interest of the railroads, or favored by them, it is entirely unfounded."

Playing in Historic Church.

Mrs. Louise D. Odell, formerly organist and choirmaster at the Holy Cross church, will resume her position in the historic Christ Episcopal church, Tarrytown, N. Y., where she is meeting with much success in her work. It was in this church that Washington Irving was a warden for many years, and where Mrs. Odell's hundred's people worshipped for nearly 100 years. It is a church filled with quaint and beautiful memorials and constantly visited during the summer months by tourists and people visiting the places of historic interest in the village. Mrs. Odell will leave this week for Pocono Summit, Pa., for a month's vacation, and during her absence a brother of the rector, Mr. Spencer, will have charge of the music at the church.

GOLD MEDAL TROUPE HAS A REORGANIZATION

OFFICERS ELECTED AND PLANS FOR NEXT SEASON DISCUSSED.

The members of Muir's Gold Medal minstrel troupe held a business session and dinner at Maul's hotel in the Notch, Monday, during which reorganization for the coming season was effected. Thomas M. Muir was again elected business manager and director and Philip Jahn was made assistant manager. After a close contest between B. D. Westbrook and Harry De Moss the former was elected stage carpenter and Harry Blimm treasurer.

The company next season will consist of thirty members, five new ones being added Monday night. New uniforms will be purchased and a local artist is to paint several drops and side wings to be used in the first part and sketch numbers. Bookings for the entire winter are to be made and the troupe will visit all the nearby places including Rahway, Westfield, Round Brook and Somerville.

The dinner Monday was styled a "Chickenfest," tender fowls from Proprieor Maul's barn yard being served in various forms known to the culinary art. Covers were laid for seventy-five, the guests including several local officials as guests. At its conclusion vocal and instrumental music and speeches were enjoyed.

FIREWORKS BOMB EXPLODED; MISS ROSE'S FOOT BURNED.

Accident at Band Concert Friday Evening Resulted in Serious Injury to Spectator.

Struck on the foot by an exploding bomb at the fireworks exhibition at Consert Park Friday evening, Miss Rena Hone, of Belmont avenue, is confined to her home under the care of a physician. The foot is badly burned and exceedingly painful. Miss Hone, who is a saleswoman at The White Store, will doubtless sue for damages.

During the fireworks, Miss Hone stood with a group of friends outside of the enclosed portion of the park. Suddenly from the display a missile came gyrating toward her and exploded close by, tearing her left shoe almost off her foot, which was badly lacerated. A woman who stood near by had a large hole burned in her dress, which was ignited by a spark from the fiery missile. Miss Hone was assisted to her home by the friends with her, and has been in charge of a physician since the accident. Her two weeks' vacation from work at the store began yesterday morning, and she is likely to spend it at home, for the foot is badly burned and lacerated.

TRUST CO.'S REMOVAL.

To Take Possession of Its New Building Saturday.

The board of directors of The Plainfield Trust Company met Monday and decided to move from the present quarters on East Front street to the handsome new building on Park avenue, on Saturday and open for business on Monday morning. The furnishings have arrived and workmen are now busily engaged putting on the finishing touches preparatory to taking possession.

As soon as the company vacates the building it now occupies the Dime Savings Institution will take possession of it, making the extensive improvements to its own building.

Vacuum Company Busy.

The local branch of the Vaccum Cleaning Company, represented by B. A. Mumford, secured the contract to renovate the New Plainfield theatre building and a large force of men has been at work for the past week. In order to expedite matters, two of the company's power wagons have been kept in constant use under the supervision of Mr. Mumford and every part of the house interior has been cleaned. The Vacuum company has also received a large number of yearly contracts from well known Plainfield residents and the efficiency of the service has been demonstrated repeatedly. Mr. Mumford now has orders enough to keep both wagons busy for a month and there is a possibility that a third one will be secured for Plainfield.

A THREE HOUR HEARING

Action Brought by S. P. C. A. Against Carver Results in His Favor.

DECISION OF THE JURY

Borough Courtroom Filled to Hear Outcome of Case—Swackhamer's Address to the Jury.

The borough court is winning a reputation for long winded hearings this summer, but all previous records were smashed when principals, judge, jury and lawyers in the Howard Carver cruelty to animals case were in session last Monday for three hours.

In comparison to the time used in coming to a decision, the case was really of no importance. Complaint had been made by Carver's neighbors in Prideville because of his alleged cruelty to a yellow and white cow, which he pastures in a sunny lot, without water. S. P. C. A. Officer Pangborn brought the action, retaining W. W. Smalley, Jr., as counsel for the State in the case. S. S. Swackhammer was the attorney for Carver and had the case postponed from last week so as to procure a jury. Justice of the Peace Clark Mundy was on the bench. The jury was composed of A. I. Smalley, foreman; David Kane, Thomas McGann, Edward Terry, Peter Smith, Frank Hull, Edward Mundy, William Waldron, William Pickert, Theodore Stiles, E. R. Hartpence and William McCullough. The jury retired for twenty minutes at the conclusion of the testimony, the jury brought in the verdict of no cause for action and Justice Mundy dismissed the case.

The feature of the case was S. S. Swackhammer's appeal to the jury in summing up the case. After five witnesses had been called by the State who swore that Carver's cow had been maltreated, four of Carver's neighbors went to the stand and vouched for Carver's good character in the Prideville community. The State witnesses were Mrs. Wm. Waters, Mrs. Herman Klinaman, John Rymon, Edward Korman and James Plank, all of whom told of incidents of cruelty they had seen, of beating, kicking and pushing the animal while taking it back from pasture in the evening. Carver said that the animal was unruly, and pleaded guilty to punching the cow on one occasion, when it was especially balky. Swackhammer's witnesses were Col. A. Perry, Derrick Reagan, David Allen and Thomas Smith. In his summing up appeal to the jury, Counsel Swackhammer spoke for nearly an hour. He called attention to the fact that the imposition of a fine to the man would only be a cause of hardship to his wife and five children and told the jury that the action itself had been a lesson to the man, who was naturally quick tempered.

The hearing attracted a large crowd of boroughites, which packed the court room, but though the night was. A number of young lawyers were present, and sat through the entire case, which concluded at 11 o'clock.

DUNELLEN MINISTERS CLOSE UP STORES OPEN SUNDAY.

Feeling Against "Seven Day Tradesmen" Strong Among Citizens of Dunellen.

The crusade being waged by Dunellen ministers against the tradesmen of the town who keep their stores open every day in the week is growing more successful every Sunday. But one store was open on North avenue Sunday—that of Molinari, the Italian confectioner and cigar man, and this is an improvement over the condition of previous weeks.

Rev. W. W. Casselberry, of the First Presbyterian church, may be said to be at the head of this movement, in which other Dunellen ministers are included. Sunday trading was quite a common practise with Dunellenites when the dominies got to work about three weeks ago; but tradesmen say that there is now but little trading done on Sunday. The practice of Sunday trading was merely a habit, and the "seven day tradesmen" will now be effectually shut up.

A. O. U. W. Affairs.

According to the August statement of Grand Recorder J. J. Lippincott, of the Ancient Order United Workmen of New Jersey, the membership on July 1 last, was 5,921. The report of the general fund on July 1 shows that the balance was $1,948.-46; receipts, benefactory certificates, $29.50; supplies, $7.50; California sufferers, $50; interest through grand receiver, $195.90, making a total of $2,231.36.

Mrs. Sandford Seeks a Divorce.

Mrs. Samuel Sandford, of New Market, has instituted proceedings for a divorce from her husband, on statutory grounds. The wife is represented by Clarence L. Murphy, Esq., while R. V. P. von Minden, Esq., is counsel for Mr. Sandford. The husband proposes to contest the case and will shortly file his answer to the declaration as set forth by Mrs. Sandford. It is said that if the case is permitted to go to trial it will be very sensational.

BELCHER'S PATHETIC TALE

Way of the Transgressor Was Always Hard For Fugitive Embezzling Mayor.

HE MAY GET 15 YEARS

He Suffered Mentally and Physically Night and Day All the Time He Was Away.

Very glad yesterday was ex-Mayor Belcher, of Paterson, embezzler, absconder and twelve-months' fugitive from justice, to creep back into a little stone cell in the jail of the city whose people he had despoiled.

Haunted by his crimes, weak from sickness and privations, practically penniless, and longing, like Eugene Aram, to behold once more the scenes of his exploits, he went back to Paterson and gave himself over to justice.

"I am sick of it all and want justice done," he said wearily, as he was led to cell No. 9, on the first floor. "I have traveled and toiled all over the country," he continued, addressing himself to Sheriff Bergen. "I am sorry, for what I have done and have come back to take the consequences."

The "consequences" have not baited a jot since Belcher ran away, the people of Paterson say. The ex-Mayor's case will come up on Friday, when it is expected he will be named in the charges against him. Three are for forgery and four are for embezzlement. Belcher acknowledges the embezzlement, but vehemently denies that he ever committed forgery. Nevertheless he will not fight the case, but will accept whatever punishment the courts may mete out to him.

Altogether he took over $100,000 from personal friends and from poor depositors in the Manchester Building and Loan Association, which on that account was forced to close its doors last month.

May Get Fifteen Years.

The penalty for forgery in New Jersey is seven years. It is thought by many persons in Paterson that Belcher's sentence will be about fifteen years.

The year that has passed since Belcher fled from Paterson has changed him greatly. He has become gaunt and haggard. His once fashionable clothes have been exchanged for a shabby appeal which would not have worn on the streets before his downfall. He has grown gray and careworn. His mustache is thin and scraggly, and he looks older by ten years than when he officiated as the popular "Reform Mayor" of Paterson.

Story of His Wandering.

In his cell yesterday Belcher said: "I don't know how the impression ever got out that I had $100,000 when I left Paterson. I had nothing like that amount. I had only about $200, and you can imagine that that sum did not last me a long time, going as I was from pillar to post.

"I first went to Midvale, just because it was handy and I had friends there. I stayed there a few days and then went to London, Ontario. Then I went to Montreal and Toronto. I was wandering around with the idea of ultimately disappearing from the face of the earth as far as those who knew me were concerned.

"I went no further. West and went to Detroit and Milwaukee and Chicago, then to Stockton, Cal., and to South Bend, Ind. I was restless and sorry and could not settle down. But I had to work. My money was dwindling rapidly. I would rather be dead than be in New York, but I could not get there.

"In justice to my wife, I want to say that at no time since my disappearance has she known of my whereabouts. I had about a hundred dollars when I arrived in Chicago the second time, and in a short time I made up my mind to go to Minnesota. I went to Minneapolis and St. Paul, and this took a great deal of the money I had left.

"It had spent it all, for travelling and living expenses, as I never drink or smoke. I began to look around for something to do. I can appreciate now the difficulty sometimes experienced by a laboring man without money and without work.

"At last my money was all gone, and then suddenly I seemed to become utterly friendless. I could have borne up under that, however, but the knowledge that I was a fugitive crushed me down.

Worked as Ditch Digger.

"I applied for work on the railroad, but they had nothing for me in the line of clerical duties.

"Give me anything on earth that will put bread in my mouth," I asked.

"They gave me a job digging ditches on the railroad. I was mighty glad to get it. I worked with a pick and shovel for weeks for $1.25 a day. I was eventually raised to the position of assistant foreman, at $2.50 a day.

"I bought some new clothes and my health began to improve under the severe restrictions. But when the winter came I seemed to go to pieces. The snow and sleet seemed to get into my bones and I had to quit.

"With a little money I had saved I went back into Canada again, dropping off at London. Occasionally I secured work, only to lose it when the weather became disagreeable. I was not particular what I did, but my lame knee was against me. I could not hold any position very long.

"I sold newspapers and on one occasion tried to establish a bootblack stand, and my knee would not let me. Sometimes I had medicine; oftener I did not.

"Gradually I lost all hope of ever getting away from everybody and everything I formerly knew, and the thought came to me that it would be far better to come back to Paterson and face it out.

"By this time I had worked my way to Boston, where I stayed for a week or so, trying to make up my mind as to my future course. I secured a position where I saved about $50, and then, with a sort of fatalism drawing me nearer and nearer to my old home, I went to Bartlett, N. H.

"There, as you know, I understand, that my wife visited me there, but they are false. I stayed in Bartlett for about a week and then came on to New York, where I arrived three days ago."

Belcher's son called at the jail yesterday morning and greeted his father affectionately. They conversed for about five minutes, when Belcher went back to his cell.

DISAPPEARANCE OF PAINT BOTHERS CONSTABLE.

Manley Had It Attached but Some One Took It Just the Same.

A quantity of paint which was taken from the home of Mrs. Samuel Sandford, of New Market, as she alleges, without her consent, has brought the matter into Justice Hand's court and is giving Constable John Manley a chance to distinguish himself as a sleuth. The decorating material is at present among the missing and all manner of legal machinery has been set in motion to locate it.

According to the complainant, Samuel Sandford, of New Market, owned a residence in West Fifth street. He sold it a few weeks ago and part of the contract of the sale was that Sandford was to furnish paint with which to paint the house. In the meantime the new owner sold the property to a Paterson man. Sandford, who, it is said, had separated from his wife, went to her home at New Market and got a quantity of paint and had it restored to a hotel at New Market. The next day enough of the mixture to cover the house was brought to Plainfield and put in the cellar of the West Fifth street house, which is occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Baker.

Mrs. Sandford, discovering that the paint had been taken away, appeared before former Justice Hezekiah Hand and had a search warrant issued for its return. The warrant was placed in the hands of Manley and he went to the house to put an attachment on the paint, with the intention of returning the next morning at 9:30 o'clock and removing it. That was on Friday, Saturday morning, Constable Manley went to the house with a horse and wagon. Mrs. Baker was not there and the house was locked up. He effected an entrance to the cellar through a basement door, but to his surprise he learned that the paint has been taken away and despite a vigilant search he has not been able to locate it as yet.

Mrs. Sandford, it is said, threatens to have the Bakers arrested, holding them responsible for the disappearance of her property, which Manley declares it is up to him to locate it.

STAR COURSE ANNOUNCED.

The Y. M. C. A. Series for 1906-7 Embraces Well Known Artists.

The dates and attractions of the Y. M. C. A. Star course of entertainments for the season of 1906-7 was announced today as follows:

October 29, Polk Miller, the Southern story telling and famous Southern quartette; November 29, Frank Reynolds, entertainer, and the Heinline Banjo Quartette; December 10, Professor Ansbach, magician, and the VanEps Brothers, instrumentalists; January 1, Captain Jack Crawford, the poet-scout; January 24, The Longfellow Club and Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith; February 22, the Mendelssohn Concert Company.

All the artists are well known to Plainfielders and have frequently delighted local audiences. The entertainments arranged for the holiday season, Thanksgiving, New Year's and Washington's Birthday, are especially good and will no doubt result in large houses.

Obeyed Instructions.

A shoemaker in the city of Dublin, getting on well in the way of business, became proud. On day there were a lot of customers in the shop, when a shoe boy came in to my that the mistress bid him say dinner was ready.

"What's for dinner?" asked the shoemaker.

"Fish, sir," answered the boy.

"What sort of fish?" asked the shoemaker.

"A whale, sir," answered the boy.—Stray Stories.

Mumford Must Move.

B. A. Mumford, the carpet cleaner, who has been located on East Third street, next to the railroad, for twenty-four years, has been notified by the railroad company that he must vacate the premises by September 1, as the land is needed for a siding. It is the opinion that the company intends to use the ground for express business and the loading and unloading of theatrical scenery.

HAND BOY COMES HOME

Mother's Illness Brings Temporary Freedom for Young Culprit.

THROUGH JUDGE W. N. RUNYON.

Probation Officer Irwin's Appeal Not Only Ends Jail Imprisonment But Brings Release.

Because of the extreme nervous condition of Mrs. Thomas Hand, mother of fifteen-year-old William Hand, who was committed to the County jail about a week ago in default of $100 bail for stealing a candy vending machine, City Judge Runyon has granted the boy's release that he may come home and be with his mother until he is arraigned before the Juvenile Court at Elizabeth in the fall. The boy's freedom was secured today, through Acting County Probation Officer Charles W. Irwin, of Elizabeth.

The probation officer applied to City Judge Runyon for the youthful prisoner's release today, urging that Hand, with Elmer White, colored, of Rahway, who is imprisoned on a larceny charge, might be removed from the County jail and committed to a home for boys, pending their appearance before the Juvenile Court. City Judge Runyon consulted with Thomas Hand, the local boy's father, about the matter, and learned that Mrs. Hand's condition is serious. She is on the verge of nervous prostration, brought on by brooding over her son's act, and a physician is in attendance.

Having learned of her precarious condition, the Judge, who had already sent word to the probation officer, granting permission for young Hand's release, telephoned to Elizabeth and ordered the boy to this city. He arrived this afternoon with Mr. Irwin, and is now free to stay at his home until his hearing before the Juvenile court.

Hand, in company with Milton Shoemaker, ten years old, were caught by William Lane on Park avenue Monday night, June 28, as the pair were about to make off with a chocolate vending machine wrenched from the front of C. L. Thorn's store. The Shoemaker boy was released on his parents' recognizance to await the action of the Juvenile court, but Hand, who has a police court record, was remanded to the County jail in default of $100 bail, imposed by City Judge Runyon.

It is said that young Hand is the leader of a gang of boys who have their headquarters in a secret cave on the shores of the brick yard pond in the East End. A search of the cave by the police revealed no other other booty.

SERVICES AT NETHERWOOD CAMP LAST NIGHT.

A good sized delegation from the Scotch Plains Baptist church Young Peoples' Society reached Netherwood Camp last night and conducted an interesting and helpful service. Scripture verses, Bible stories, and Bible characters were given by the children showing the remarkable memory of some of these children. Yesterday Miss Cleary brought another large company of children from New York with her, having taken a number back in the morning. The work is speeding on, and is proving the best season the Camp has known in years.

Friday evening of this week, the Young Peoples' Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will conduct the service with the assistance of George E. Hall at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp. This society has long been one of the best friends of the Camp, co-operating with Miss Curry in all the interests of the Camp. All are welcome.

Successful Drug Clerk.

Roy Adams, assistant clerk for C. H. Hall, druggist, who recently was graduated from the New York College of Pharmacy, received word yesterday that he had successfully passed the New Jersey State Board of Pharmacy, and is now a full-fledged clerk. About a month ago he passed the New York Board. He is the only Plainfielder among several who took the examination who succeeded in passing. He will remain with C. H. Hall for the present.

Liquor Loosened His Tongue.

Henry Cordes, whose home is in Rahway, developed a vile line of conversation after taking lots of drink yesterday, and was arrested at North and Watchung avenues by Patrolman Myers, for using language unsuitable for a public place. He was fined $5 at his hearing before City Judge Runyon this morning.

MAY BUY SAFE WORKS

Taylor Iron & Steel Co., of High Bridge, in a Deal for Local Shop's Control.

SETTLE WITH STOCKHOLDERS.

Old Firm's Books Show the Liabilities to Be $388,907.50 and the Assets to Be $449,298.28.

In the matter of the settlement of the affairs of the Manganese Steel Safe Company, which has been in litigation for a long time, it is now reported that the Taylor Iron & Steel Company, of High Bridge, the directors of which have also been financially interested in the local concern, have arranged to take over the plant in this city and pay $40,000 over and above the liabilities to the stockholders. This action is on the suit of Henry D. Hibbard against the company on dissolution proceedings in which the directors were appointed trustees to wind up the affairs of the company.

The company was dissolved and trustees are now closing out the assets. The liabilities are stated to be $388,907.50, besides which there are three suits which the Taylor Iron assume. One of these it is said, will assume. One of these is that of the Norris Safe & Lock Company, in the United States Circuit Court for the Western Division of Washington, to recover $159,916.26.

The assets according to the inventory filed amount to $449,298.28. The Manganese Steel & Safe Company owe the Taylor Iron & Steel Company $300,648.98, and it can be seen that the report that the High Bridge concern is quite likely to be true.

In the suit of the Rodmans against the Manganese Steel & Safe Company, the complainants sought to prevent the company from selling the business to the Mosler Safe Company, of Hamilton, Ohio, and in this they succeeded. The Taylor Iron & Steel Company have the exclusive right to the use of manganese steel and no doubt the local plant will continue to be operated after the settlement of affairs.

STANDING COMMITTEES FOR 1909 APPOINTED

The Republican City Executive Committee met last night in their rooms over the City National Bank, and Chairman Winfield S. Angleman appointed the standing committees for 1909. There were about twenty-five present including several "New Idea" members. No other business aside from the appointment of the committees was transacted.

Following are the committees: Finance—Ralph D. Todd, first ward, chairman; Arthur Lovell, second ward; Edward V. Cox, third ward; Legislative—George W. V. Moy, third ward, chairman; Charles S. Sminck, first ward; J. Henry Crane, second ward; Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., fourth ward. Naturalization—Samuel P. T. Wilbur, first ward, chairman; Howard C. Tracy, second ward; Edward V. Cox, third ward; Francis J. Blatz, fourth ward. Registration—J. Stephan Higham, third ward, chairman; Amos Andrews, first ward; Robert H. McCready, second ward; Harry C. Runyon, fourth ward.

The officers to be filled this fall are three Assemblymen, eight councilmen, tax collector, county clerk and county register.

The Schwartzmans Separate.

The case of Joseph Schwartzman, of West Third street, whose wife brought charges of assault and battery against him before City Judge Runyon a week ago, was settled in court this morning, when Mrs. Schwartzman refused to press the charge, and petitioned the court that her husband take his belongings out of the house and leave her and her child alone, to support themselves. The court ruled according to Mrs. Schwartzman's request, and the man and wife have separated.

Visits Freedom Castle.

Peter L. Alberse, of Cataract Castle, 55, of Paterson, who is a candidate for Grand Sir Herald, visited the members of Freedom Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle, last night. He was entertained with characteristic Freedom Castle hospitality and left for home early today.

William Hudson Improving.

William Hudson, who was injured while trying out a new horse at Rock road and Front street, is gradually mending. His shoulder was broken when the horse he was driving reared and fell on him. The accident happened about two weeks ago.

PLAINFIELD IS HEALTHY

Only Twelve Cases of Communicable Disease in City During July.

DEATHS SAME AS JULY, 1908.

New Regulations for Milk Production Read—Licenses Granted —Application Tabled.

This city has reason to congratulate itself on its healthy condition as according to the report of the Board of Health there has been a minimum of deaths and very few from communicable diseases. This is due in a large measure to the activity of the members of the board who have carefully safeguarded the city's health and isolated whatever of possible contagion has existed.

During the month of July there were but twelve cases of communicable diseases, as follows: Scarlet fever, 4; diphtheria, 2; tuberculosis, 1; measles, 2; and chicken pox, 3. Two of the scarlet fever cases are at the isolation ward of Muhlenberg hospital. The report of the board shows the following vital statistics for the month: Marriages, 17; births, 36; still births, 2; deaths, 23. Singularly enough the number of deaths are the same as reported for the same month a year ago, while the marriages were only eight as compared with seventeen this year. Last year's births exceeded this year's by five.

In July, 1908, the communicable diseases were less than for the month just passed. There were but five cases reported then, three being tuberculosis, one scarlet fever and one chicken pox. In other respects the reports for the two years are very similar.

During July seventy-five samples of milk, thirty samples of cream, twenty samples of ice cream and fifteen samples of cream used in the manufacture of ice cream were collected and analyzed in the board's laboratory. Samples of milk were also taken from all the stores in which the fluid is dispensed in addition to the samples taken from the regular dealers.

The work of analyzing the ice cream made in the city was begun during the month and will be continued until the product of all manufacturers has been tested. Forty-three dairies and bottling places were inspected during the month and the general condition was found to be good.

A map showing the ponds in and about Plainfield was submitted and it is the intention of the board to take steps to have many of them drained and filled in as they are breeding places for mosquitoes. Permits were granted to P. T. Ostrom to sell ice, John G. Staats and Frank M. Smalley to sell milk, and the bond submitted by J. J. Heideloff was ordered filed. The application of Joseph Zgrabacy, for a permit to collect garbage, was laid on the table.

Plumbing inspections were made to the number of ninety-eight and the number of general inspections were three hundred and sixty-nine.

New rules and regulations regulating the production and transportation of milk passed the first reading last night. Those present at the meeting were Drs. Hedges and Davis and Messrs. Dunham and Dunn.

CAPT. AND MRS. HUMPHREY WILL GO TO MANILA.

Prior to leaving for Denver, Col., today, where she will join her husband, Captain Chauncey Humphrey, there was a family gathering last night at the home of Mrs. Humphrey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Waring, on Park avenue. Mrs. Humphrey has been visiting her parents for several months, her husband also being here for a time. Recently he left for Ft. Logan, Denver, where he is stationed as quartermaster of the 21st U. S. Infantry.

On September 6, Captain and Mrs. Humphrey will sail for the Philippines, where the captain will be stationed about 700 miles from Manila. They will be in the islands for two years at least, unless something should intervene.

Enjoy Dinner-Dances.

While a majority of the members of the Plainfield Country Club are away on their vacations, there are still a number at home who enjoy the privilege of playing on the course, and especially the Saturday night dinner-dances. The plan to continue the Saturday night affairs has served to boom the club and new members are constantly being elected.

—There is a great display of fresh vegetables of all kinds at Neuman Brothers. The firm makes a specialty of only the very best and the variety is so large that a selection is made very easy.

FUNERAL OF E. E. WHITE; FAMILY TO STAY HERE

The funeral of Edward E. White took place this morning at the undertaking parlors of A. M. Runyon & Son, at 10 o'clock, Rev. Ora J. Shoop officiating. The pall bearers were W. A. Coddington, John J. Kenney, A. E. Force, M. C. Van Arsdale, E. H. Bird, J. A. Staats, Judge William N. Runyon and ex-Mayor Newton B. Smalley. The interment was in Hillside cemetery.

Among the friends of the family who were present and accompanied the body to its last resting place were Colby Barcalow, of Trenton; Mrs. L. H. Demarest, of Somerville; Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Bebley, of Maplewood; Mrs. C. Barcalow, of Somerville, and J. H. Semel, of New York city.

Young Mr. White when seen this morning said that the reports regarding financial reverses due to unwise speculation indulged in by his father were unqualifiedly false. The only cause known to the family for taking his own life was illness. His relations were of a happy character and no trouble other than insomnia was known to be related. Mrs. White and her son will remain in Plainfield for the present, or at least until the will of the late Mr. White is probated.

ELKS' PARTY GIVEN A BIG RECEPTION

A party of twenty-five Elks of this city journeyed to South Plainfield last evening to meet the eighteen delegates from this city who have been at the annual convention of Elks in Los Angeles. When the party got to South Plainfield they learned that the train on which the delegates were riding would not arrive until very late, so they decided to wait at the depot, the Plainfielders went to New Brunswick, where they paid a fraternal visit to the lodge there.

At New Brunswick they spent the time in an informal social manner, partaking of the hospitality of the Middlesex county Elks. At about 1 o'clock this morning the party went back to South Plainfield by automobile where shortly afterward the train with the delegates pulled in. The cordial Elk greeting was then extended all around and fireworks helped to make the event more fraternal. These were displayed for several minutes. Red fire helped out the display. The party returned to their homes in this city.

IRON WORKER MEETS WITH SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Charles Noble, aged 42 years, of Dunellen, employed by Levering & Garrigues at their Iron works at West Dunellen, fell from the top of a derrick in the yards this afternoon, a distance of twenty feet, landing on a pile of scrap iron, a piece of which pierced his side. He also broke three fingers on his hand. He was found by fellow-employes and removed to his home in a critical condition. He is now under the care of Dr. Platt, of Dunellen, who was summoned.

Noble, who has been employed at the iron works for many years, was engaged in taking care of a pile of scrap iron in the yards. His work necessitated that he climb a derrick. In making a turn his feet slipped and he fell sideways with great force on the heavy iron. Noble is married and has always been a steady faithful workman.

JACKSON OUT ON BAIL

Former Mayor Newton B. Smalley was the bondsman for William Jackson, the negro who was remanded to the county jail at Elizabeth last Friday for an atrocious assault upon Patrolman Tobias W. Nolan, on Richmond street, on Tuesday last. The bail furnished was $3,000, for efforts to have it reduced were thwarted by Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., who would not consent to reduction because the charge is a serious one. The prisoner, whose home is on East Third street, was freed last night at 6 o'clock. William G. De Mesa represents Jackson.

1,200 Miles by Auto.

Dr. Frank C. Ard, of Park avenue, left this morning for his home in Westfield, N. Y. He will remain until September 1. He is making the trip by automobile and will return the same way, making a total run of 1,200 miles.

Gideon Fountain, of West Seventh street, is at Worcester, Mass.

In the realm of education, he has loads of information,
And a spotless reputation; never blunders,
He displays untold resources in his most perplexing courses
And the schemes which he endorses sure are wonders.

GREEK NAVY ASSISTED

Plainfield Grecks Contribute Funds for the Upbuilding of Athenia.

SPYROS MATSOUKAS GETS $300.

Peculiar Ceremony at East Bound Station—Twenty Grecks Kissed by Emissary.

Spyros Masioukas, an emissary from the Grecian government, who is in this country collecting funds for the upbuilding of the Greek navy, arrived in Plainfield yesterday afternoon, and before he left had depleted the bank accounts of the twenty wealthy Greeks in this city by about three hundred good United States dollars. This amount was subscribed by the local Helenic patriots in an incredibly short time.

Mr. Matsoukas is of a pleasing personality and had no difficulty in enlisting the sympathy of his fellow patriots in the scheme to help the mother country. He has been in the United States but twelve days and in that time has aggregated a fund of over $20,000, which is being forwarded to Greece today.

The east bound station was the scene of a peculiarly Athenian ceremony at 6:45 last evening, when Mr. Matsoukas took his departure for New York. He made a speech to his compatriots who had accompanied him to the train and at the finish kissed each one of compatriots goodby. It is said that Mr. Matsoukas has performed this customary and characteristic obligation no less than a thousand times during his visit to this country.

This seeker after funds for the Greek navy has visited all the Jersey towns east of Philadelphia and after today will go through Pennsylvania, where a large amount of money is awaiting him.

SALVATION ARMY CHILDREN'S OUTING.

A large number of children and mothers enjoyed an outing in the country yesterday in the care of the local Corps of the Salvation Army. The farm of Thomas Mair, on Leland avenue, was the spot chosen for the expedition. The beautiful weather and the pleasant country combined to make an ideal day.

All kinds of amusements were afforded the children; games of foot-ball, baseball, races, for which suitable prizes were awarded; swings for the children and swimming for the boys. Ice cream and cake were served twice in great plenty, and also lemonade. No accidents occurred and all returned safely at 5:30 o'clock on the trolley after a very happy and pleasant day.

REVOLVER WAS NO GOOD

Edward Conger Arrested in Newark—Taken to Hospital Injured.

BOLD ATTACK FRUSTRATED.

Henry Schulties, of Rahway, Refuses Demands of Hold-up Man and Beats Him With Own Gun.

Edward Conger, who gave his address to the Newark authorities as 415 West Second street, this city, is held a prisoner in St. Michael's Hospital for an attempted hold up on a confectioner near Rahway. He was arrested in company of another youth while driving through Newark and it was on account of wounds on his head that he was removed to the hospital.

According to reports received here this afternoon Conger attempted to hold up Henry Schulties, proprietor of a road-house just outside of Rahway, at the point of a revolver. Schulties resisted and succeeded in snatching the gun from the would-be hold-up man and in giving him the beating which necessitated his removal to the hospital.

Schulties says that the young man entered his store and demanded the cash from the register, but that he declined to fork over the money and defied the robber to shoot. His point of view appears to have been the right one as the gun when examined proved to be useless as well as unloaded. The beating Conger received will detain him in the hospital for some days.

GUION H. FOUNTAIN WILL TRAMP ACROSS THE COUNTRY.

Guion H. Fountain, of West Seventh street, who took some long walks to the Jersey Coast last summer, is planning to repeat the feats again this summer. Next week he plans to go down to Asbury Park on a local Sunday school excursion, stay over night there, and in the morning return to this city on foot. The trip is fifty eight miles long, and according to Fountain who has been over it several times, is delightful.

Last year Fountain made his trips to different parts of the State in company with friends. This year interest in pedestrianism is somewhat slack, and it is likely that he will have to go alone.

E. W. Westcott's Father Ill.

E. W. Westcott, of East Front street, who returned this morning with the Elks from Los Angeles, went immediately to Philadelphia to see his father who is reported to be critically ill.

TO MAKE TYGARD ENGINES

South Avenue Inventor Organizes a Company for Manufacturing.

CAPITAL STOCK IS $250,000.

J. W. Tygard Has Patent on Seven Engines and Gears and Shops May Be Built Here.

Articles for the incorporation of The Tygard Engine, to manufacture engines and gear transmissions fatented by James Tygard, of 920 South avenue, were filed at the County Clerk's office, Elizabeth, yesterday. The incorporators are Fred C. Tygard, Guy M. Neasley and William E. Buhl, of Pittsburg; Elizabeth A. Tygard and Asa F. Randolph, who is named as statutory agent of the company.

"The Tygard Engine" is a chartered, profit-sharing corporation organized to manufacture and sell a new type of engine for all power purposes, for which patents have been granted in this country and in Europe. The new engine is applicable to the use of gasoline, gas, alcohol, compressed air and steam, and is claimed to be the lightest, simplest most compact and noiseless engine on the market, capable of operation at a low cost.

Because of its lightness and compactness, the motor, which is made in sizes of from 5 to 5,000 horsepower, is forecasted by prominent mechanical engineers to be of great value for airships and aeroplanes, and points of superiority are claimed for its use in driving automobiles, motor boats and steamships, and for use in all power plants and for agricultural purposes.

The company owns and controls the entire rights on seven patents secured for invention of the installation. These are on the Tygard double action, four cycle gas and gasoline engine; the continuous action four cycle rotary gas and gasoline engine; the positive expansion reversible rotary gas and gasoline engine; an automobile transmission, known as the "Variable Diameter Wheel;" speed changing gear for bicycles and horseless vehicles; a new system of carburetor for gasoline engines, granted on vibrative atomization, and a rotary internal combustion engine. These various types of engines are being made at a small shop built at Mr. Tygard's home on South avenue.

Seen at his office at the Babcock building by a Daily Press reporter today, Asa F. Randolph, one of the incorporators, said that the company has as yet no plans for the location of a factory for the manufacture of the various types of engines, but added that steps for securing property and constructing a factory are under consideration, and hinted that the plant might be started in this city.

Mr. Tygard, who has been perfecting his patents in this city for years past, gave a demonstration of one of his engines at the Carnegie Technical School, Pittsburgh in June and the interest of several prominent engineers, among them the Pittsburgh Incorporators, was aroused by the new invention. Experts claim that the engine will revolutionize the world of power, and say that the type is especially adaptable for use in airships and aeroplanes.

INVESTIGATING WARREN TOWNSHIP AFFAIRS.

An examination of the affairs of Warren township is being conducted today at the office of Hugh Gaston, of Somerville, who has been appointed by Justice Parker, of the Supreme Court, to investigate charges of a misappropriation of funds in the township. County funds to the amount of about $2,600, it is said, have been misappropriated.

Mr. Gaston, the examiner, said today that it is probable that the proceedings will last for nearly two weeks, at the end of which time he will make his report to Justice Parker. A number of persons in Warren township have been subpoenaed to appear before Mr. Gaston for examination.

Miss Snodgrass Engaged.

The engagement is announced of Miss Gertrude Snodgrass, daughter of Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, of Paterson, to William Adelbert Jones, treasurer of the Whitehead & Hoag Company, of Newark. Miss Snodgrass was a resident of this city while her father was pastor of the First Methodist church. The marriage will take place in the fall.

To Be Married Today.

Miss Abbie Loretta O'Keefe, of this city, and Dennis McCarthy, of Elizabeth, will be married this afternoon at 5 o'clock by the Rev. Father Hogan, of St. Mary's church.

PLAYGROUND AGITATION

Mayor Considering Appointment of Commission as Result of Inspection.

MODEL AFTER EAST ORANGE.

Plainfield Officials and Others Make a Tour and Return Home Enthusiastic.

Playgrounds for this city's children may be established this fall if the present plans of a body of prominent local citizens and city officials who made the trip by automobile Wednesday to visit the East Orange playgrounds materialize. The Plainfield automobile club will be asked to transport fifty or a hundred more prominent citizens of this city to East Orange within two weeks in order to awaken their interest and enlist their support for the project, which may later include the establishing of small playgrounds in each of the five primary school yards of this city, as well as one general playground.

A State law authorizes the mayor of a city to appoint a playground commission of three to care for matters relative to the founding of, and care of, playgrounds. If the interest manifested when the next party of Plainfielders visit East Orange is as great as it was yesterday, Mayor Fisk will take steps in the matter.

Mayor Fisk said this morning that he was seriously considering the proposition of appointing such a commission and would probably announce his decision shortly.

A Daily Press reporter investigated conditions with reference to the establishment of playgrounds in this city. It was found that an experiment could be made for $50, which would include all of the essentials of a model playground. Several sites in the vicinity of West Third street and South Second street and in the east end convenient to Richmond street and Cottage place were found. Professional advice was sought as to the best means of raising funds, and the pertinent question "Does Plainfield need playgrounds—if so, why?" was asked of professional playground directors who were made familiar with conditions in Plainfield by the reporter.

The Plainfield Mothers' Association, composed of mothers of city school pupils, endorsed the project of having playgrounds, and Ira W. Travell, former principal of the City High School, came out strongly in favor of the movement, stating the educational significance of the movement of other cities in establishing playgrounds. Harry Marshall, president of the Plainfield Board of Trade, decided to investigate conditions, and he studied the matter and about a week ago made a trip to East Orange. He was so favorably impressed that a larger party was gathered yesterday who again visited East Orange.

East Orange Playgrounds.

The party that made the trip yesterday was composed of Mayor Chas. J. Fisk, Harry Marshall, president of the Board of Trade; ex-Mayor James F. Buckle, Councilman R. I. Tolles, Judge William Newcorn, Mrs. Steven Voorhees, Harry Fenn Emburg, William Townsend, Mrs. F. W. Butler, the Rev. Charles M. Anderson, the Rev. Elery Bowers and the Rev. Father Hogan, John A. Gaffney and a Daily Press reporter. At East Orange the party was met by City Clerk Lincoln E. Rowley, who is secretary of the Playground Commission; Fred A. Reimer, city engineer, and Police Commissioner Edgar Sharp. The party was first taken to the main Orange Oval playground, and later to the playgrounds attached to the five public schools: Ashland, Columbian, Eastern, Elmwood and Nassau. The details of the workings of each were explained in full.

The Orange Oval playground cost $50,000 originally, which was raised by a bond sale. The cost of maintenance is several thousand dollars a year. It includes six acres, and is visited by 800 people daily. It contains seven tennis courts, two basketball courts, a baseball field, running tracks, sand boxes, children's bamboo slides, swings, hammocks, teeter boards, and the regular gymnasium apparatus suspended from large iron frames. Four instructors are in charge of the main playground. They are a principal director, a tennis instructor, an athletic instructor and a young woman who entertains smaller girls. Ten shelters with parlor games are located in different parts of the playground park. At the school yard playgrounds one young woman is in charge. The apparatus here is confined to the gymnasium frames, swings, sand boxes and bamboo slides.

Does Plainfield Need Playgrounds?

"Does Plainfield need playgrounds?" was asked of William Phillips, director of the main East Orange playground, after he had been made thoroughly familiar with the size, wealth and character of Plainfield's population and provisions for its entertainment.

"If Plainfield would hold its own as an attractive suburban city, and would share in the incoming of new residents as a result of the opening of the tunnels, I should say that it did. Playgrounds are an integral part of a city now. Further, a city does not necessarily have to be menaced socially by having its children run in the streets before they are started; playgrounds are a cardinal corrollary to public school education; for they prove an underlying truth that men and women were created to enjoy life. They stimulate interest in mental work, it has been found, if their only excuse for existence was the physical training that they give, that alone would be sufficient."

"Don't you find that the playgrounds are stopping places for the lazy? Or, if not this, that you find that street habits of ruffinanism are transferred to the playground. Doesn't the bully element of crowding out the weaker youngsters manifest itself. Doesn't this counteract the good influence of the playground?"

"In all my seven years' playground experience, the rule has been that where we enforce discipline in a gentlemanly way, where we appeal to the better nature of children, we are not troubled by this at all. Further, this good influence of ours is a reflex influence."

"How could Plainfield make a trial and how cheaply?"

"Fifty dollars would start a playground, in which there could be a ten foot swing, traveling rings, can you hammocks for children, sand and jumping ropes, bean bags and one or two little minor things. Teeter boards might also be put in within the limits of that amount."

"How large should it be?"

"The English rule is 50 square feet for every child, the Prussian, 20 square feet. You could reckon size on this basis."

"What are some of the ways of starting them?"

"Bond sales, public appropriation, private subscription, tax day ideas, church appropriations. There should be no difficulty in this respect."

"Isn't the novelty of the playground apt to wear off and it cease to attract?"

"It is, unless guarded against. We do it by appealing to some fundamental instinct. Thus, a child under ten years likes the sensation of falling. This is provided by having inclined poles, ropes, bamboo slides and similar apparatus, calling into play these instincts. Again, a boy over the age likes to show off his physical prowess. We provide for this in competitive games. We appeal to the fair spirit in the boy. Competitive unlimited play and competition is good for a boy—it fits him to be a good citizen. The spirit of authority and executive ability is also sought and developed. We have our captains for playground "proddeuts." This fosters a spirit of healthy rivalry for popularity and adds interest to the work."

"But isn't the organized play of games that you give so much attention to a bad thing? Doesn't it take the originality from the child, displayed in healthy spontaneous sports?"

"One would think so; but my experience has been to the contrary."

"Would you suggest that war in Plainfield have one playground open all year as is done here at the main playground?"

"Ordinarily no; but that of course depends upon conditions. It should be open in summer and in the fall and spring by all means."

"As to apparatus, could it be made by local talent, such as local blacksmiths, carpenters, etc.?"

"So many things enter into the apparatus question it would be best to have it done by local talent. Apparatus must be durable not affected by weather, must be self-working, and must appeal to some native physical instinct. Much skill is required too in handling such apparatus. Teeters and such things could be built by local workmen.

Local Sites for Playgrounds.

There is space enough in each of the school yards of the Bryant, Franklin, Irving and Madison and new West End schools to make a grass plot for a sufficiently large playground. A good equipment could be put in each one of these yards for $100 or less. For a main site, there are several lots near Grant avenue that might be utilized. There is also available space for such a project in the vicinity of West Third street convenient to Liberty street and Plainfield avenues. This is probably the location where such an institution is most needed.

One of the best site pointed out is at the corner of Rock avenue and West Front street, where the city owns a large tract of land which could be fitted out, graded and thoroughly equipped with ball fields, tennis courts and an artificial wading brook, as well as the usual playground apparatus, by fall. At East Orange a swamp was reclaimed and the swamp land turned into a wading brook of one inch depth in one of the playgrounds. The brook feature of the site at Rock avenue strongly commends itself as a swimming pool could also be built in connection with the playground.

Outdoor Education.

Former Principal I. W. Travell, of the City High School, has been working for playgrounds in this city for some time past. Speaking to a Daily Press reporter on the subject he said: "The time is coming when the education of children under ten years of age will be all out of doors. The tendency is pointing that way now. I have given much study to the matter and am heartily in sympathy with it. Until that time playgrounds must do their share in taking up this essential art of education, affording recreation and pleasure as well as education to youngsters at a time when they most need it. I hope that Plainfield will soon see its way clear to establish playgrounds."

Harry Marshall, Mayor Fisk and others expressed similar opinions yesterday.

MRS. ALLEN B. LAING HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Mrs. Allen B. Laing in a Buick car narrowly averted crashing into the display window of the shoe store of Morris Abrams on West Front street Thursday morning. She was driving the car along the street, and to avoid running into a wagon which turned in front of her, steered her machine directly to the right. The machine skidded and plunged up on the sidewalk, and it was within two inches of the plate glass window before the brakes brought the machine to a stop. A child was in the machine with Mrs. Laing. No one was injured and the car was in no ways damaged. Pedestrians assisted in backing the machine to the street again.

THREE FIRST PRIZES IN THE BOAT RACES

John Dutcher, a graduate of the City High School, son of the Rev. Edward C. Dutcher, formerly of the Dunellen Methodist church, won three first prizes in the boat races at Asbury Park Thursday.

Dutcher pulled a single oared craft in which he won first prize over some fast contestants, among whom were some University oarsmen. With a companion he also won first prize in the double oared event, and still another first prize in a canoe race. His sister, Ella, also won a first prize in a rowing race.

Dutcher has won prizes at Asbury Park in lake events for several years past and holds probably more medals than any other young man of his age.

The Rev. and Mrs. Dutcher moved to Newark early this spring, where he has charge of a Methodist church. John and Ray Dutcher are students at the New York University and both are members of the university Glee Club. John made the varsity crew in his freshman year and is one of the strongest oarsmen on it. He is now a sophomore. The important aquatic events of the year at Asbury Park will take place August 26. He is entered in all of the big events of this carnival.

WATCHUNG AVE. BRIDGE CONTRACT AWARDED

The Plainfield Cement and Stone Company was awarded the contract for making alterations to the Watchung avenue bridge over Cedar brook, and for repairing, building a new side in concrete and painting the railings of the Richmond street bridge at the meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders Wednesday.

The bidders were: Plainfield Cement and Stone Company, $231; Warren Travell, $486; R. J. Bush, $348.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders will meet with the Union County Board this afternoon to consider repairs and alterations for the Washington street bridge.

WATER CO. BEAUTIFIES ITS ATTRACTIVE PARK

The attractive park like property of the Plainfield-Union Water Company between the Central Railroad tracks and North avenue, and extending from Terrill road to Leland avenue, has been fenced in. 1,800 feet of angle iron fence was required to circumscribe the property. This was done at a cost of $4,000.

The property was purchased over a year ago and surrounds the Water Company's standpipe and pumping station. It was graded and now a well kept grass lawn sets off numerous beautiful trees that are grouped about in the park, making it an attractive site.

The Water Company bought the property so as to prevent the bare possibility of pollution from Italian laborers who owned property there, and from whom they purchased most of it. After acquiring the land for this purpose, they decided to improve it and make it as attractive as possible. To do this the company went to great expense.

AUTOISTS ON JOLLY RIDE

Local Club Enjoys a Spin to Princeton Inn Where Dinner is Served.

DR. ARD AS TOASTMASTER.

W. C. Crosby, H. A. Bonnell and Mayor Charles F. Fisk Make Informal Speeches.

The initial run of the Plainfield Automobile Club which took place Thursday was a huge success from every view point and the entertainment committee, under whose direction the details of the affair were carried out are entitled to the congratulations of the club and the invited guests.

At the banquet, which was held at Princeton Inn, speeches were made by Mayor Fisk, Harry Marshall, W. C. Crosby, president of the State Automobile Association, and H. A. Bonnell, secretary of the same association.

The run was started from the Park Club at a little after 5 o'clock with Alexander Milne in his Cadillac in the lead. Following Mr. Milne in the order named were F. O. Ball, Buick; J. F. McDonald, E. M. F.; Dr. F. Du Bois, Buick; Harry Marshall, Stevens-Duryea; Carl Brown, Herreschoff; L. L. Giles, Cadillac; Dr. F. P. Wilcox, Ford; Allen B. Laing, Pullman; R. D. Martin, Hupmobile; Dr. F. C. Ard, Stevens-Duryea; Captain W. C. Smith, Aerocar; Dr. P. J. Zeglio, Locomobile; H. A. Todd, Mercer.

The procession passed through Prospect place, to Grove, to Park place, to Somerset, to Fairview, to Watchung, to Front, thence through Dunellen, Lincoln, Bound Brook, Somerville, South Somerville, Rocky Hill, Belle Meade and Kingston.

The first car to arrive at Princeton was Mr. Milne's Cadillac, and thereby hangs a tale. Frank L. C. Martin, with Mayor Fisk, Chief Kiely, Frank Smith and The Daily Press reporter, in Mr. Martin's Ford, had not been announced a puncture. Thus what had been a comfortable lead was soon cut down to a negligable quantity and the leaders became nearly tailenders and the merry Ha, Ha's of the erstwhile tailenders just to sort of rub it in, so to speak. But Mr. Martin was not the only unfortunate one. Dr. F. F. Wilcox, with extreme dexterity avoided a collision with a runaway horse near Rocky Hill and in doing so punctured a tire, but one fire out of business which delayed him some twenty minutes.

Aside from these two incidents the run was made in average time and the beautiful weather contributed in no small degree to the general good feeling which prevailed among the members. The cars finished in the following order: Alexander Milne, F. O. Ball, Dr. C. F. Ard, Harry Marshall, Dr. F. Du Bois, Carl Brown, L. L. Giles, Dr. F. P. Wilcox, David J. Scott (Mr. Scott did not start with the others).

The company sat down to the dinner at 8 o'clock and arose from the tables at 10. Following was the menu:

Consomme Riche, olives, celery, lobster American en croustade, broiled spring chicken, Parisienne potatoes, green peas, lettuce tomatoes salad, almond ice cream, cakes, coffee.

Dr. Ard, the president of the club, as toastmaster, introduced the speakers, prefacing his introduction with some humorous remarks in each instance. The first speaker was W. C. Crosby, president of the State Automobile Association, who said in part: "It is probably inappropriate for me to speak at the State's seat of learning but I have come to say that I feel that I can say something about the organization which I represent which will be of interest to you and will give you an idea o fthe scope of its work. The association is made up of clubs in Trenton, New Brunswick, Phillipsburg, Newark, Hudson county, Rutherford, Atlantic City, Hackensack and Flemington, and they are all working together for common sense legislation. What has been done along this line has all been done through the efforts of this association.

"Much of the antagonism of the farmer has been removed and the grangers are looking with less disfavor on automobiles in general. The national association's touring bureau is working hard for a Federal license bill at Washington. Through this bill it is expected that a Federal license involving a cost of $5 will be adopted, so that an automobilist may travel from Maine to California without being subjected to paying any other license fee.

"I believe this we want universal laws to govern automobile traveling so as to lessen the disagreeable features which are a part of the pleasures of today. Let us, as members of the association co-operate with the Mayors of cities and use only what a gentleman automobilist should of the highway.

"Pedestrians have the prior right to the crosswalks, and it is not only ungentlemanly but unlawful for an automobilist to presume that he has the right of way.

"Let us take the laws as they are and be gentlemen in their observance. The co-operation of every club in the State is necessary to get what is wanted and we ought to remember that we are citizens of the State which is the Garden spot of God. So then let us work for her best interests."

Mr. Bonnell, the secretary-treasurer of the association, told of some of the advantages of membership in the American Automobile Association, and the possibilities in the way of money saving in literature interesting to the automobilists. He said that through the A. A. A. arrangements can be made for membership in the associations of Great Britain and France and trips are outlined for members at a cost of one dollar per year.

There is to be a test made next week of the roads in a certain section of the State to try for results as to top covering, but Mr. Bonnell was under obligations not to divulge the location of the place. Special reports of the results of these tests will be made. They are to be made under the direction of State officials.

In introducing Mayor Fisk Dr. Ard told a story of how the Mayor got even with the police on a fifteen dollar fine which he said was a matter of record and needs no repitition here. Mayor Fisk was quick to get back at Dr. Ard and so evened up matters. The Mayor said that it was an honor which he appreciated very much to be present at the banquet and said that he believed the police of Plainfield were doing their duty conscientously. In the beginning of his administration there was formed an automobile commission made up of policemen who were owners of automobiles, and traps that had been used in this city were restricted by police officials. He can use common sense. Since that innovation very little trouble had been experienced in regulating the traffic through the city. "I don't want anybody arrested in Plainfield," he said, "unless they disregard safety and regulations." He welcomed the committee from the automobile club the other night and we talked over the matter of right of way and other things pertaining to the traffic through the city. All people have rights which must be respected. Those who disregard the law are the very ones for whom the laws were made. There are traffic regulations which must be observed it is up to us to educate the people in the right of the matter.

"We are experimenting in Plainfield with various materials for roads and I think we shall soon make a selection which will be durable. Good roads help to enforce the law. The people who live on the roads are the places on which we have the least trouble. I am glad that you think enough of me to ask me to co-operate with you and I want you to co-operate with me, as I want to do the best I can for the upbuilding of Plainfield, and I am willing at all times to listen to suggestions for its betterment."

Harry Marshall, chairman of the entertainment committee, then made a few remarks stating that a run to Plainfield would be held early in August 5, and he wants every member who can make it possible to be in line. The State Association expects to have at least 100 cars in line. Mr. Marshall said that the members of the club were mostly forty-eight, and urged those present to make it fifty. In less than a minute Mayor Fisk became the forty-ninth and Dr. J. H. Buchanan the fiftieth, amid cheers.

The last car to leave the Inn was Mr. Martin's which carried the original five passengers, and returned by way of Monmouth Junction, Dayton and New Brunswick. Fifty-one guests sat down at the dinner as follows: Dr. J. H. Buchanan, Dr. P. J. Zeglio, Dr. W. H. Murray, F. O. Ball, F. H. Ball, E. P. Willson, C. E. Lockwood, William Nicols, Alexander Milne, C. E. Varnoir, H. W. Marshall, A. L. C. Marsh, G. L. Lutz, A. L. Smith, Jr., Dr. F. DuBois, J. Herbert Case, C. C. Brown, C. C. Rocap, Dr. S. A. Aldrich, M. F. Edgerson, D. J. Scott, M. E. Drange, Dr. F. C. Ard, J. F. McDonald, Dr. F. W. Cornwell, A. S. Giles, H. Cumming, M. Mayo, G. H. Raddin, Captain W. H. Smith, A. Smith, E. Smith, W. C. Crosby, H. A. Bennell, R. H. Ernst, W. J. Baldwin, Jr., Theodore Helwig, Allen B. Laing, Alonzo Brokaw, C. H. Dutcher, Dr. Martin, Mayor C. J. Fisk, Chief P. S. Kiely, Frank Mc. Smith, F. H. McCarthy, Dr. F. F. Wilcox, M. VanArsdale and H. J. Todd.

CLERGY FORT'S GUESTS

"I am Your Man; Pray God to Help Me," Says Governor.

BISHOP SCARBOROUGH SPEAKS.

Protest Episcopal Prelate's Speech Takes the Ministers Present by Storm.

Two hundred prominent clergymen, representing every denomination, were the guests of Governor Fort at luncheon at Sea Girt Thursday, among them being the Rev. John Scarborough, Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Trenton; Bishop Henry Spellmeyer, of the Methodist Episcopal church; the Rev. Father Reynolds, of Red Bank; the Rev. Dr. Parkinson, of the Dutch Reformed church, and the Rev. E. B. H. Macpherson, rector of St. George's church, London.

Governor Fort, in an address which has become one of the features of the Governor's Day luncheons this year, appealed to the preachers to aid in the great reforms of the day, and denounced bribery and corruption at the polls and in the legislative halls. He decried the lack of interest taken by the average citizen in politics. The Governor said:

"It is an unusual pleasure to welcome you to Sea Girt. It is delightful to realize that in talking to you political considerations do not enter into the problem. Your ambitions and interests are not along political lines. You are not alone in this respect, because the vast mass of our citizenship is not politically ambitious; in fact, it is to be regretted that they take, at times, so little interest in public affairs. The thoughtful observer, however, will observe that there has been a quickening in civic spirit and in general interest in public affairs in the last few years. All must concede, I think, that this condition is largely due to the persistent and earnest zeal for civic righteousness of former President Roosevelt.

"There is still room for earnest work among the thoughtless and indifferent, and, perhaps, fear, among the intelligent. It is a terrible thing for a young man in our day to feel that ability and integrity are not the only things that he must meet in his contest for supremacy and honor in public place. To realize that men with less ability, less fitness may supersede or supplant him because of the power of their pocketbooks is not a delightful contemplation. If the public can be educated, and it can, so that it will be deemed not only a crime but a lasting disgrace to be found handling money corruptly for election purposes or to use it to secure personal advancement of men unfitted for the positions they seek we shall see better times."

As soon as Governor Fort finished his speech Bishop Scarborough made an impromptu speech which took the preachers by storm. He praised the Governor for his stand with reference to the bishops' bill, and said he was one executive who had kept his ante-election pledges. In his reply the Governor said that the conviction that the churches were behind him in his attitude upon public questions had been his support. He said that he had now passed the time in his experience when office had any glitter for him, and that power, position or place was nothing compared with the fact that he had friends.

"You elected me," he said with feeling. "I am your man. Pray God to help me administer this office."

TRENTON INCORPORATIONS.

Certificates of incorporation have been granted to the following companies:

PLAN FOR STATE CAMP

Council's Work Will Probably Be Included in Regiment's Orders.

SOLVE SOME KNOTTY PROBLEMS

Will Leave New Brunswick on Hike to Sea Girt on Saturday, August the Seventh.

At a council of the officers of the provisional battalion of the Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., which will leave New Brunswick, Saturday, August 7, en route for the State Camp at Sea Girt, at the office of Major William B. Martin, of Elizabeth, formerly Captain of Company K, of this city, it was decided that Major Martin will be in command of the battalion, which will be composed of Companies M, I, C, K, G and H.

All but two officers of the battalion attended the conference. While many matters of interest pertaining to the hike were discussed, and most of the arrangements for the march were made, the details talked of have not been made public. The suppression is the result of military red tape which requires that the minutes of the meeting be submitted to the regimental headquarters before being made public. Another reason why the plans are not announced is that up today no official orders have been made ordering the regiment to Sea Girt by the marching route. The plans of last night's meeting will probably be included in the regimental orders.

The hike, it is expected, will be one of the biggest events in the history of the regiment. The idea of the march in the working out of a military problem between two provisional battalions, both of the Second Regiment. The second provisional battalion, under the command of the senior major, will leave Trenton on the same day Major Martin's command leaves New Brunswick.

The commanders of both battalions will probably be under sealed orders and just what will be expected of them will not be known until a march of some distance is accomplished. For this reason it will not be known whether the two commands are to engage each other in mimic battle until both are well underway.

The feeding of the men along the line is one of the problems. Although it is not definitely settled, it is talked of having the commissary department utilize automobiles in carrying out their work. The idea is to have supplies hustled to each command during the needed rests from State Camp at Sea Girt. This will keep the provisions fresh and lighten considerably the work of the commissary department of each marching battalion.

One of the points in the working out of the military problem is the mobilizing of the two battalions into a regiment at Freehold. Major Martin will be accompanied on the march by his superior officer and commander of the regiment, Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan.

The officers present at the council Wednesday night were: Captain De Roche and Lieutenants Thompson and Barkalow, of Company G, Freehold; Captain Kitchel and Lieutenants Hopping and Litten, Company K, Plainfield; Captain Case and Lieutenants Woodruff and Koehler, Company M, Somerville; Lieutenants Landahl and Clark, Company H, of New Brunswick; Lieutenant Grant, Company I, Captain Hall and Lieutenants Weir and Tull, of Company I, Elizabeth.

The field officers were Captain Condon, Surgeon Captain Atkinson, commissary department, both of New Brunswick, and Lieutenant Persell, assistant quartermaster, Plainfield.

RATABLES SHOW $1,438,000 BOOST.

An increase of $1,418,000 in ratables, somewhat less than what was expected, is shown on the books of the Board of Tax Assessors, of Elizabeth, who have nearly completed their work for the year. There are ratable not yet listed which will swell the increase up to $1,438,000. The lists will be complete early next week, as they have to be presented to the country board on Tuesday.

The year's increase is somewhat less than the assessors expected to find when they began their work several weeks ago. It was then estimated that $1,500,000 was the least increase to be expected. The ratables last year were about $52,000,000.

The figures of the city assessors are subject to alterations by the county board, which may raise or lower the valuations put upon property by the local men.

The finance committee of City Council, in making up the tax ordinance, calculated upon an increase of $1,435,000. This figure is so nearly right that there will probably be no change in the tax rate fixed by the ordinance, unless sweeping alterations in the ratables should be made by the county board.

"DUSTLESS" TOWN SOON

One-third of Forty-two Miles of Improved Streets are Treated.

USE MANY PREPARATIONS.

To Abandon at So Distant Date the Expensive and Unsatisfactory Water Wagon.

Plainfield is fast being transformed into "Dustless Town," and water wagons are no longer common sights in the thickly populated sections of the city. There's a healthy smell of oil and tar around in sections where dust-killing preparations are newly applied, and motorcyclists, cyclists, drivers, pedestrians and property owners—with their house-wives—are happy. The crusade against dust is well underway.

Nearly fourteen miles of the city's macadamized streets, about a third of the improved streets, are now dustless—treated with patent dust-killers, of which five brands are being tried out or used regularly by Street Commissioner Andrew J. Garvett.

Some of the thoroughfares have already had their second application of the oil. These are the streets treated: East and West Front street, to the city limits, (except a short section in the west end undergoing repair); Seventh street, from Richmond street to Park avenue; Eighth street, from Park avenue to Grant avenue; South avenue, from Richmond street to the city line; North avenue, from Park avenue to Watchung avenue; North avenue, from Berkman street to Terrill road; two blocks of Franklin place; two blocks of Woodland avenue; Watchung avenue, from Sixth to Woodland avenues; Sycamore street, between Fourth and Fifth streets; Watchung avenue, from Second street to the borough line; Madison avenue, from Second street to the borough line; East Fifth street, from Watchung avenue to Richmond street; Central avenue, from Seventh street to Sixth avenue; Washington avenue, from Front street to the borough line; Hillside avenue, from Watchung to Martine avenues; Park avenue, from Fourth street to Belleview avenue; Plainfield avenue, from Front to Second streets, Clinton avenue, from Front to Second streets; Elmwood place, West End avenue, Norwood avenue, Sandford avenue, Westervelt avenue and Elm place.

The street oil preparations in use in this city are Dustolene, Texas Oil, Standard Asphalt Road Oil, Tarvia B., a preventive; Tarvia X., a "binder," and Headley emulsion. The last named is an application of six parts oil and one part water and is being applied by the company on West Sixth street, between Madison and Arlington avenues, as a demonstration, without cost to the city.

So that Plainfielders may draw their own conclusions as to the merits and efficiency of each of these preparations, a Daily Press reporter today secured and took from Mr. Gavett: Watchung avenue, from Sixth street to Woodland avenue, is treated with Dustolene, a dust killer, which absorbs the dust. Texas oil, also an absorber, is used for the most part of West Front street, Seventh street, between Park and Clinton avenues, is treated with the Standard oil preparation, a dust absorber, "Tarvia B.," a coal oil dust preventive, is the application used on Park street, between Fourth street and Belleview avenue, and "Tarvia X.," a "binder," is being used in the construction repair of West Front street, between Grant avenue and Mariner's place. Dustolene must be applied every one or two months, the Headley oil must be put on weekly, and the other preparations require but a single, or at most two, applications a season.

Asked what "kicks" there were about the various preparations in use by the city, Mr. Gavett said: "The principal "kick' is from people who haven't the oil on their streets." Cyclists and auto owners say the fresh oil attacks their tires, and in wet weather it is slippery. Where oil-treated streets cross the brick pavement, the oil tracked on the bricks make them slippery.

There are now 47½ miles of macadamized streets within the city limits, and were it not for the fact that the water wagons don't have to patrol but about two-thirds of this distance, the number of these sprinklers would be inadequate. As the macadamizing has progressed with the oiling, the saving cannot be realized as yet, for the sprinklers have merely been transferred to other parts of the city. A street-sprinkler's job another season, however, isn't a sure thing for steady work.

The street department can't entirely kill the dust on the brick pavement because oil would make the bricks slippery and these hot days the water evaporates almost immediately. The difficulty has been overcome recently by keeping the dust swept up, so that there is nothing to blow. The brick pavements are sprinkled between 4 and 7 o'clock each morning, after the streets are swept with the horse-drawn sweeper. Later they are "flooded," and three sweepers are on the job all day long, when there are frequent sprinklings. The repairs to the brick pavement on West Front and Somerset streets are being made under the contract, spots in the pavement being faulty. This is to be paid for out of the five per cents. of the contract fund retained for such repairs, but will not exhaust it.

No definite plans have yet been announced for future oil treatment, but work will be started on Leland avenue within a short time. A tank of the Standard Oil preparation is now at the freight house, ready for use. The street department is now well equipped for applying the various oil preparations, for one of the water wagons has been transformed permanently into an oil sprinkler and the horse-drawn street sweeper is in constant use on such jobs. The satisfactory results from the "killers" in use at the present time is in a large measure due to the careful application of the streets treated are swept clean of all dust by the horse-drawn sweeper and a broom squad before the oil is sprinkled.

BOYS RETURN FROM WAWAYANDA CAMP

Seven happy copper colored youths returned Thursday from the State camp for the boys of the Young Men's Christian Associations which has been held at Wawayanda. They were aroused at a very early hour yesterday morning and after a hard morning of preparation and an entire afternoon of travel through woods, over dusty and rough country roads, the train from the Erie Railroad and the trip from Jersey City here made a long day for the youngsters.

Were they tired? Well, if they were they did not show it on the way to Plainfield. The camp songs were on their tongues continually and in spite of a little discord they won smiles of approval from every body in sight. The parents of several of the boys were at the station to meet them and even though they had had a long time to "rest up" at the camp it was evident that they were glad to be united with the loved ones at home again.

Joseph Sattells returned home with a ribbon of merit for having swum from one shore well to the other, a distance sufficiently to cover the distance required by the Life Saving Corps at the camp. He has also to his credit seven pounds of good solid flesh and an appetite that will keep his people busy for some time to come. This respect Joseph is not alone, for all of the fellows look as though they had gained in weight. If they did not it is not because they did not do justice to and appreciative the efforts of the popular bronzed youth, A. Y. Allen, in the culinary department.

On Wednesday afternoon, the last afternoon in camp, Charles Martin, who was the only Plainfield boy entered in the athletic events in the meet and who was also entered in the quoit contest, took the championship in the latter event. He defeated Gordon Kissick, one of the Elizabeth boys. This victory makes him champion of the two hundred boys who have been in camp thus far this season. He will now have to play the champion of the last section of the camp and this game will either be played in Plainfield or at Elizabeth some time in the future.

Raymond Manley was one of the smallest fellows in camp, although not the youngest. He and his older brother, Albert, were conspicuous in the work of the Life Saving Corps and have also served in some of the most responsible positions that the boys were called upon to fill. Delmore Weinberger also captured a ribbon for swimming the required distance. The other boys in the party, Paul Mandeville, Cooper and Gerald Linke. Gerald Linke returned on Saturday but all the other boys were in the little group that returned last evening.

Charles R. Scott, who is the leader of the camp, expressed himself to the effect that the last section of the camp was one of the best that he remembered. The corps of leaders that were there for the past two weeks were very capable and made possible many things, that could not possible with less experienced men; such as improvements around the camp and in the way of meetings and entertainments.

The city of Plainfield is better known in a hundred or more boys of this State than it ever was before and the few boys who went from the Plainfield Young Men's Association know more of the fellows of their own State. The boys have had a good time. They are improved in health. These are two of the good results in passing, but perhaps one of the greatest benefits they have received is that they know better how to live among other boys, of different tastes and from all kinds of homes, all of which goes to make them better prepared for the kind of citizens that every city needs.

Percy Cannon to Open A Store.

Through the generosity of friends, a one-story concrete building has been erected for Percy Cannon, the blind chair-caner, adjoining his residence on East Second street. Within a short time Mr. Cannon will start in business there with a line of notions. He will still continue in the chair-caning business.

EXPLAINED BY THE GOVERNOR.

Meaning of the Proposed Constitutional Amendment.

COURT OF PARDONS CHANGE.

The Governor and Four Citizens to Handle Cases—Seven Judges For Court of Errors and Appeals In Place of Sixteen—Less Expense to the State and More Benefit Under the New Court Plan.

In an address delivered before the New Jersey Bar association in Atlantic City Governor John Franklin Fort discussed the pending amendments to the state constitution. He said:

There are five separate proposed amendments to the state constitution to be submitted to the people for their approval at a special election to be held on the 14th day of September next.

The First Amendment.

The first amendment simply abolishes that provision of the state constitution which now permits foreclosure of mortgages in the circuit court and common pleas. This has practically always been a dead letter. It has been the rarest of exceptions when any foreclosure has occurred in the circuit court and seldom, if ever, in the common pleas. If the court amendments be adopted—to which I shall refer hereafter—the circuit and common pleas court will both be abolished. This amendment is of little importance, but as the present provision of the constitution is of little concern also this amendment can furnish no just ground for opposition and should be adopted.

The Second Amendment.

This makes the court of pardons, for the parole and pardon of persons convicted of crime, consist of the governor and four citizens, to be appointed to the court by the governor, to hold their office for five years.

The present court of pardons is composed of eight—namely, the governor, chancellor and the six special judges of the court of appeals. If the court amendment, to which I shall refer hereafter, be adopted, the six special judges will be legislated out and there will be no court of pardons until this second amendment prevail. This is a good amendment, whether the court amendment be adopted or not.

The four citizens can give practically their whole time to the work. The cases asking for pardon are about 50 or 75 annually and they need most careful examination.

I can see no reason why the second amendment should fall on any ground

The Third Amendment.

This amendment relates solely to the courts of the state. There have been no changes in the organization of the courts since the adoption of the constitution of 1884. We have had good courts, and while our state was small and litigation not very large they were admirably adapted for the administration of civil and criminal justice. But conditions have changed, and the present necessity for the practically continuous sitting of our highest court is apparent to all who are familiar with existing conditions. This need for the past five years has resulted in the removal of the justices of the supreme court from sitting in the counties in the trial of causes. This, in my view, is greatly to be regretted.

The influence of the supreme court justice upon the local judicial tribunals was always wholesome and of the greatest value. Any system which removes or curtails the usefulness of the supreme court justice is a mistake. Our present court of errors and appeals is composed of sixteen judges, which is nine more judges than that constituting the court of appeals of New York. It is eleven more than almost any of the other states and thirteen more than some. It exceeds by seven the supreme court of the United States. The mere statement of these facts is enough to demonstrate the need of a change. It is not only unnecessarily large, but because of its size it is excessively expensive. And, besides this, the large number of judges lengthens the conferences of the court and thereby makes greater delays in deciding cases.

The pending amendments make the appellate division of the supreme court —which becomes the court of last resort—consist of seven judges, the same as the state of New York, and charges these judges with the appellate work and no other. Under this system we shall have more frequent terms of the appeals court and a more expeditious determination of causes. Delays in the final determination of cases often amount to almost a denial of justice to the litigant.

Under our present system a person or corporation against whom a decision or verdict has been given in the trial court at law can sue out a writ of error and harass the successful party by two appeals on review, delaying a payment of a just claim for five years and causing much annoyance and expense. The pending amendments, if adopted, will cure all this.

The supreme court is preserved as it is with all its powers except those relating to writs of error, and the justices of this court will sit constantly in the courts of the county, dispensing justice between litigants. All inferior county courts, of which we now have so many, will be consolidated into a single court, called the "county court," with all civil and criminal jurisdiction, thus simplifying the county court system and procedure.

The scheme of court reorganization as proposed by the pending amendments represents the best thought of the leaders of the bar of the state and of the judges themselves, as well as of the thoughtful business men of the state who have reflected upon them.

Commission Is Praised.

The commissioners who drafted the proposed reorganization amendments were former Justice of the Supreme Court Bennet Van Syckle, than whom no judge ever had greater experience or was recognized as a man who was more loyal to the interests of the people. With him were former Governors Griggs and Murphy and Charles L. Corbin and John R. Hardin, two distinguished lawyers. They canvassed the whole matter with great care to secure public sentiment both within and without the legal profession and tried to formulate a system that would be simple and meet with popular approval.

The present court of chancery is not changed except in name. The chancellor still remains, as do the vice chancellors, their title only changing. They are hereafter justices of the supreme court and not seldom, if ever, in the common pleas. If the court amendments be adopted—to which I shall refer hereafter—the circuit and common pleas court will both be abolished. This amendment is of little importance, but as the present provision of the constitution is of little concern also this amendment can furnish no just ground for opposition and should be adopted.

The Second Amendment.

This makes the court of pardons, for the parole and pardon of persons convicted of crime, consist of the governor and four citizens, to be appointed to the court by the governor, to hold their office for five years.

The present court of pardons is composed of eight—namely, the governor, chancellor and the six special judges of the court of appeals. If the court amendment, to which I shall refer hereafter, be adopted, the six special judges will be legislated out and there will be no court of pardons until this second amendment prevail. This is a good amendment, whether the court amendment be adopted or not.

The four citizens can give practically their whole time to the work. The cases asking for pardon are about 50 or 75 annually and they need most careful examination.

I can see no reason why the second amendment should fall on any ground

PATERSON WOMEN SUED FOR $50,000

Mrs. Mary White, a well-to-do grass widow of 8 Michigan avenue, Paterson, while in the Yonkers City Court at Yonkers, N. Y., Thursday prosecuting a charge of fraud, was served with papers in a $50,000 damage suit for false arrest. The injured party is John F. Wood, a clerk in the De Groff grocery house, New York, whom Mrs. White had arrested on Monday by Detective Joseph Schelbel of Yonkers, charging him with obtaining $450 from her last September through misrepresentation.

Wood's father conducted the Yonkers Hotel for a bout a year. Last September Mrs. White came here seeking to recover from her separated husband $2,000. While awaiting the court trial she remained in the Yonkers hotel. There she met young Wood, who told her, she says, that the price was being neglected.

He offered her a half interest in the business for $1,000. He spoke to her in such gentle terms and affectionate manner, she says, that she thought they would manage affairs agreeably and "he even said he'd put the bankbook in my name," she testified. She paid him $450 on September 26 in Yonkers and the $550 in the Paterson Savings Institution on September 28. She later learned that the place was not "free and clear," as he had represented it, and, furthermore, the hotel was subsequently closed by the police as being disorderly.

Associated in the suit with Mrs. White will be the Ebling Brewing Company and her counsel, Norbert Blank, of New York. During the proceedings today Blank created a sensation when he told Mrs. White while she was still in the witness chair that she would have to conduct the case herself. She began arguing with counsel from the chair while testifying. She anticipated questions and testified to matters without being asked.

Ex-Judge John F. Kerr, of Brooklyn, stepped in and stated he would conduct the case, as the woman was "probably muddled on account of being done by her husband and Wood."

City Judge Beall threw her case out of court, saying she had testified directly contrary to what she had sworn to in the information. Judge Kerr offered to produce new evidence and secure a new complaint. Judge Beall agreed to have this done.

Cop Fires Stray Shot.

A shot said to have been fired by a Plainfield policeman at a stray dog, struck the side of the jamb near the bottom of the front door of the Reginald Huse house on Park avenue. No one was coming out of the door at the time, or was in the vicinity. Hence no evil consequences followed the stray shot.

START PLAYGROUND FUND

Two Women Pledge $200 Towards the Expense of Undertaking.

CONTRIBUTIONS ARE WELCOME.

The Daily Press Will Receive, Acknowledge and Transmit Any Donations for Fund.

The first steps toward the realization of the plan to have public playgrounds for Plainfield was taken Friday by two women, who telephoned Mayor C. J. Fisk this morning and pledged themselves for $100 apiece for equipment of such parks on public school grounds. The donors' names have been withheld.

The Daily Press will receive, acknowledge and transmit to the playground commission, when appointed, any contributions for the necessary fund.

Mayor Fisk said today that playground plans are fast rounding into shape for action, but nothing will be done until the schools open in the fall. Inquiries on the trip of inspection of the city playground at Grove street, East Orange, Wednesday, have assured the Mayor that playgrounds can be equipped at the various city schools for less than $100 apiece. The land owned by the city, at West Front street and Rock avenue, is being considered as a site for a public playground, where a running track, baseball diamond, football field, tennis court and outdoor gymnasium apparatus can be located, and there are other locations under consideration.

It is the purpose of Mr. Fisk to appoint a playground commission to investigate the cost of securing, equipping and maintaining such a public playground, but no appointments have as yet been made.

"I believe that playgrounds for Plainfield have got to come," said Mayor Fisk to a Daily Press reporter today, "but we don't want to rush into this thing blindly and make any mistakes. For there is to be a general playground, and there are many here who favor the plan, it will be in charge of competent directors, and the school playgrounds will be under the supervision of women, who can superintend the childrens' play."

The equipment for a school yard playground includes teeter-boards, swings, a sand-box for the younger children and simple outdoor gymnasium apparatus.

CITY NATIONAL MAKES A SPLENDID SHOWING

The directors of the City National Bank have declared another dividend of four per cent. for the six months ending July 31, 1909, and an extra dividend of one per cent. for the same period.

This makes the sixty-fifth regular dividend and fifth extra dividend of one per cent., making the sum of $362,250 that has been paid to the shareholders of the bank. This institution also has a surplus of $150,000, and undivided profits of $92,000, making surplus and profits $242,000. All of this has been earned and not paid in by its stockholders.

With a capital of $150,000, surplus and profits $242,000, deposits of $2,000,000 give proof of a very strong and up-to-date institution, and the directors are to be congratulated upon its fine showing.

PLAINFIELD CONDITION TO BE PART OF Y. M. C. A. DISCUSSION

"The Association's new opportunities and obligations created by present tendencies in the church with especial reference to Plainfield," is the topic of a paper that is being prepared and that will be read by Secretary Herbert Parker of the local Y. M. C. A. at the first session of the Employed Officers Conference in Newark in October. The work will touch on the relation of the church to the Y. M. C. A. and will suggest means of making the latter a more potent ally to the church.

Monday Mr. Parker will leave for Silver Bay, where he will study Association matters during the month of August.

Announced Engagement.

Miss Margaret Ida Debele, daughter of Charles Debele, of the Maple Grove Farm, has just announced her engagement to Martin J. Bowman, of Perkasie, Pa. The wedding will take place Tuesday, August 24. Mr. Bowman was formerly a resident of this city. Miss Debele has just resigned her position with A. M. Griffen for whom she was a cashier. Miss Debele and Mr. Bowman are well known among a large circle of friends in this city and borough.

GENEALOGY OF HONEYMAN

A. VanDoren Honeyman Compiles the Comprehensive Family Records.

A HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY.

Plainfielder Gathers His Material in This Country and Abroad and Presents an Interesting Volume.

A conspicuous example of the genealogical work, including both history and biography, is "The Honeyman Family (Honeyman, Honyman, Hunneman, etc.) in Scotland and America, 1548-1908." The author is A. Van Doren Honeyman, of this city. The book, which has a special interest in Jersey, is one of the most comprehensive of its kind, and represents, in its various sections, a remarkable amount of painstaking research, prosecuted in this country and abroad.

Part I. of the volume is "Historical and Biographical." The second part is devoted to genealogy, its chapters being as follows: "Line of Bishop Honeyman," "Some Miscellaneous Scotch Lines," "Line of Samuel Honeyman, of England;" "Line of John Honeyman, 'the Spy' of Washington;" "Line of Charles Honeyman, of West Virginia;" "Line of Nicholas Hunneman, of Boston," and "Line of Sarah Honeyman (Yeater), of Kentucky and Missouri." In the chapter on John Honeyman, there is given a full list of his descendants in New Jersey and elsewhere. A valuable section is Part III., "Gatherings from Scotch Records." Among the many subjects treated in this section of Part III. are "John Honeyman, the 'Spy,'" and "Line of the Drs. Hodges, of Chester, N. J." The book is amply and interestingly illustrated.

Mr. Honeyman says that "We all belong to Fife" is a phrase long used by the Scotch people. He continues: "It appears to be true. With few exceptions, the author has not discovered anywhere a Honeyman, or Honyman, who did not trace his ancestry, by knowledge or tradition, to Fife. The Lairds of Dun, historic ground midway between Falkland Palace, the ancient stronghold of the MacDuffs and the favorite residence of King James VI., and that most venerable of Scotch institutions, St. Andrews, are claimed. Generally speaking," he remarks, "the early Honeymans in Scotland, including those who came to America in the eighteenth century and also their descendants, have possessed certain family characteristics. One is tallness of stature. Another is a high forehead. A decidedly distinguishable feature, so often recognized among the Honeymans everywhere is the 'cowlick.'"

Mr. Honeyman's historical biographical review of the family is very readable. An experienced traveler and one who knows how to report his travels, he works up his present material in an engaging style. There is a chapter, especially worthy of note, relating to the ancestor of Andrew Honeyman (circa 1619-1676), lord bishop of Orkney and Zetland. Many other distinguished persons on either side of the Atlantic figure in the narrative.

Part II. is the work of which the author deserves special praise, is on John Honeyman, Washington's spy. The largest family in America with the Honeyman name "belongs to the branch of which John Honeyman, known as 'Major John' the 'spy of Washington,' was the progenitor." This branch, says Mr. Honeymaa, "includes all the Honeymans now resident in New Jersey and nearly all who have ever resided in this State." Some of John Honeyman's descendants are in New York State, and some are scattered throughout the West.

John Honeyman was born about 1729. The place of his birth is stated to be Armagh, Ireland, but this is not definitely determined. Insamuch as a sketch of him, in connection with a reference to Mr. Honeyman's book, has recently appeared a brief quotation from the book will suffice. Mr. Honeyman says speaking of John Honeyman's meeting in Griggstown, this State, about the time of the beginning of the Revolution: "Whether he went there for the express purpose of assisting Washington in securing and furnishing information concerning the British army, which had invaded New Jersey, cannot be told, but such is the conjecture. Being a man of great courage, he certainly carried out with Scotch tenacity the difficult role, that of a spy, and his knowledge of camp life and of military movements must have stood him in good stead."

After the war, Honeyman moved to Somerset County, buying a large farm in Bedminster township, near Vliettown, on the road to Peapack. Here he lived for many years, his death taking place August 18, 1822. He passed away "without leaving behind him, so far as anything is now known from his own lips, the secret of his most interesting and romantic career."

Incorporated in the chapter is the article, "An Unwritten Account of the Spy of Washington," by the late Oliver Hyde Dyke, a grandson of Honeyman's, and originally published in Our Home, October, 1873. This account, with which every student of Revolutionary history should be familiar, has accompanying comment of much value.

JACK JOHNSON SHOUTS "LET ME AT HIM"

Jack Johnson says he will be in New York next Tuesday to cover the $5,000 forfeit posted by James J. Jeffries on Wednesday to bind a match for the heavyweight championship of the world. Johnson declares that he will post the full amount of the side bet, $10,000, and will sign articles of agreement as soon as the proper times arrives. He favors San Francisco as the battleground, which means that in all probability James W. Coffroth will get the match.

The negro cannot get it out of his head, however, that Jeffries is not on the square, and declares that he will not rest easy until he sees the boilermaker actually in the ring.

Jeff continued to receive congratulations from his friends all day yesterday. He repeated the statement that it was now up to Johnson to cover his money and agree to the terms offered. He also stated that he would be in his old condition when he entered the ring, and that Johnson would prove as easy a mark as Jack Munroe.

Jeff, however, declined to say a word about the division of the purse. It is believed that he will insist on a winner's and loser's end, which means that Jeff will get 60 per cent., in which case nobody can accuse the big fellow of naming unfair conditions. Jeff also believes that California is the place for the big mill, and shows an inclination to do his training in Los Angeles. If Johnson puts up his coin next week he will set at rest all rumors that he does not want to meet Jeffries, but he will probably have to wait until some time in September before signing final articles of agreement. And Jeff will not be ready to fight until three months after that, it is thought the money will not settle their differences before the latter part of December or early in January.

Jeff insists that he weighs only 235 pounds at the present time, although he looks much heavier. If he trains vigorously for three months he will surely reduce to a proper fighting weight, but he may find a rather difficult matter to perfect his wind.

When Ketchel heard that Jeffries had put up $5,000 he said: "Jeffries is wasting his time. I am going to begin training in a week and will be in magnificent trim for the fight with Johnson. What is more, I am going to knock the negro out and that will relieve Jeff of the responsibility. I know that I can outpunch Johnson and, as that's the thing in which he excels, I'll be out of sight." I will be the next heavyweight champion of the world. I am taking on weight now, but I am ready to fight Langford to a finish before I meet Johnson. Langford, however, does not want any of my game, for if he did he would have accepted a $5,000 bonus to meet me in Ely, Nev., on Labor Day. That is more money than Langford ever got before and yet he passed it up when he had a chance to whip me and win a fortune. Let me say, however, that if Johnson should beat me, Jeffries, if he is right, will stop him inside of ten rounds. Jeff is a wonderful fighter, the best the world has ever seen."

LOCAL EXCURSIONISTS WITNESS TEN RESCUES

Some of the thousand excursionists who spent Thursday at the shore on the Trinity Reformed church excursion, saw ten people rescued by life saving crews in front of Ross's pavilion, about one hundred feet from shore.

A treacherous hole was formed in some unknown manner about one hundred yards out in the ocean in front of the pavilion to the right of the trains and immediately into the surf. A number of bathers who were swimming near there were sucked in by the undertow and it was impossible to swim. Life saving guards threw out with ropes attached to their belts. They gathered all the bathers and assistants on shore pulled them in. A few planks stretched over some piles afforded a temporary relief, in the work of rescue.

The excursionists had a delightful day at the shore, the weather was ideal, and the cool, refreshing breeze from the ocean afford much relief from the sun. The temperature of the surf was 70 degrees, thus making bathing conditions ideal. The breakers were rough, though, and this detracted from the pleasure to some extent.

The trip to and from the shore was made in seventeen cars divided in two sections and the journey each way was made in an hour and a half. The Sunday school band went on the excursion were the Trinity Reformed, the Marconnier chapel and the Netherwood Reformed church. The next to go to the shore from this city will be the Sunday schools of the First Methodist, the Grace M. E., the Monroe Avenue, the Dunellen M. E., and the Wilson Memorial chapels, who go next Thursday.

FLANNERY'S FUTILE FLY

Boyd Does a Circus Stunt and Prevents Tying of Game in Ninth.

PLAINS ARE ALMOST SHUT OUT.

Splendid Playing by Home Team Wins Game in Record Time—Frentz Spiked.

With two out and one man on second Flannery of the 'Plains team picked out one of Ortlieb's offerings and sent it screaming to left garden, giving Boyd a chance for a sensational catch. He took it, nabbing the ball on the run and rolling over and over, clinging to the sphere like grim death, and saving the game for the home team.

It was a timely catch, as the 'Plains men were finding Ortlieb, who up to this point had pitched a fine game. If Boyd had dropped the ball the score would have at least been tied and the game possibly won by Manager Frentz's team.

As was expected, the game was an exciting one from beginning to end, and so sharp was the fielding and so little time lost between innings that it was played in almost record time.

Plainfield scored first in the third inning, Ortlieb's safety to centre began it. Boyd ran for Ortlieb. Schott's and Barnes' sacrifices brought Boyd over the pan. Two more runs came over in the sixth session, when Boyd and Barnes bunted safely and were advanced a base on Emery's out. Martin went out on a fly to left, but both runners scored on Seery's single to right. This ended Plainfield's scoring.

Scotch Plains squeezed one across in the ninth, Frentz singled and promptly stole second and moved along to third when Dodge, who was given a pass was thrown out at second in a double steal, and came in on Reick's sacrifice.

Emery was the only Plainfielder who could solve McLaughlin's pitching. Out of four times at bat he made two singles and a double, the latter would easily have been a triple had Emery been able to run, but the strain on his game leg was too much.

Frentz was spiked by Seery in the fifth, but not seriously. Barnes, Nolan and Schott carried off the fielding honors for Plainfield, while Frentz, Baldwin and Brown did fine work for 'Plains.

CO. K. READY FOR HIKE TO STATE CAMP

The last business meeting of the drill term was held Monday by Company K, in the armory. The line of march that will be followed when the company goes to the annual encampment at Sea Girt Saturday, was discussed, and the stopping places were agreed upon. Sergeant O. R. Pierson was elected secretary of the Company.

The recently elected non-commissioned officers were awarded with their warrants. Corporal Roy Decamp received his warrant as sergeant and Privates Archie Niles and Samuel Rothberg got their warrants as corporals.

The company will leave the armory sharply at 1:30 o'clock Saturday and will take a special car to New Brunswick. There they will be joined by the company from that place and from there on will follow the line of march as outlined.

The men are enthusiastic over the trip this year and anticipate much fun from it. Most of them are now preparing their equipment, according to instructions given out by Captain Kitchel at the meeting last night.

ST. MARY'S TEAM DOWNS CLIMAX A. C.

St. Mary's had splendid base running practice Saturday afternoon on St. Mary's Oval, when they defeated the Climax A. C. by the score of 9-3, shutting them out until the ninth inning, when "Hub" Conover eased up and let them save themselves from a shut out.

Al Squiers started for St. Mary's and pitched in his usual brilliant style, shutting them out for five innings, when "Hub" Conover went in and proceeded to hang up a strike-out record for four innings, fanning seven. Terry pitched a good game for the Climax but received poor support, the infield making all the different varities of errors behind him. St. Mary scored two in the first on a base on balls, a hit and a passed ball; four in the third on two hits and two errors; two in the fifth on two hits and a base on balls and one more in the eighth. "Hub" Conover connected for three hits and McAfee kept up his batting streak, driving out two safe ones.

SMALL ATTENDANCE AT LOCAL GOLF COURSES

Owing to the fact that there are so many members away on their vacation, there was a small field out at the Park Golf Club, Saturday afternoon. The only event was the weekly competition for the President's and golf club cups, and but few scores were posted. R. B. Titsworth of E. A. Lough, 104, 36-74; and L. P. Fisher divided the points for the two cups, handicap and scratch events. Mr. Titsworth returned a net 67, but his handicap of 26 will be given a generous slice before another week rolls around. The point winners:

R. B. Titsworth, 93, 26-67; E. A Lough, 104, 36-74; Charles R. Morse, 100, 14-86; L. T. Fisher, 106, 20-86.

There was no scheduled event at the Plainfield Country Club Saturday, here, too, the absence of members, attracting a small field. Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton was the winner of the women's handicap competition, defeating Miss Martha Robert by 3 up and 2 to play.

CHIEF KIELY'S REPORT TO BE MADE PUBLIC

When Chief Kiely was authorized to attend the convention of police chiefs at Buffalo, with the understanding that he was to render a detailed report of the proceedings of the event, and also turn in an itemized statement of the expenses of the trip to the Common Council, it was understood by the members of the Council that this report and statement were to be read to them.

Councilman Frank Holt brought the matter to the attention of the Council Monday by asking Chairman Randolph what had become of the report. Mr. Randolph replied that he had understood that the reports were to be handed to the Police Board, and that he had them. He said that the report was very complete and that he would present it with the itemized account of expenses to the Council at its next meeting.

Supplies at Hope Chapel.

The pulpit supplies at Hope chapel during the absence of Rev. L. R. Howard, the pastor, will be as follows: August 8, Rev. Fred B. Newman of Trenton; August 15, Dr. H. K. Carroll, of North Plainfield; August 22, Rev. Lewis Bond, of this city. The prayer meeting services will be in charge of the ways and means committee. The leaders for August 12 and 26, when the Christian Endeavor Society will have no separate meeting, will be Allen Snyder and Walter Firsbrook.

COMMON COUNCIL ROUTINE

Netherwood Reformed Church Want Railroad Embankment Removed.

ASSESSMENT MAPS RE-ADOPTED

Various Departments Present Interesting Reports—Ordinances Adopted on Final Reading.

Rev. Royal A. Stout, pastor of the Netherwood Reformed church, and other interested citizens, petitioned the Common Council at its August meeting, Monday, to remove the old railroad embankment near the church at Midway and Leland avenues to the proper grade the same. Their argument in favor of the improvement was that that section is rapidly building up and that the embankment should be removed. The petition was referred to the street committee.

C. E. Drake and others requested the Council to take steps to have the trolley switches removed from in front of the site of the old car barns on West Fourth street. They claimed that the switches are worn out and are causing that point disturb the quiet of the neighborhood by unnecessary noise. The matter was referred to the street committee.

Treasurer Andrew D. Jennings, of the Plainfield Fire Department Pension Association, reported a balance of $4,793.32 a year ago and with the present year's receipts a total of $6,191.82. The report was filed.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett reported that during June and July thirty-five newer permits were granted, and Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that twenty-six permits were granted during July.

Overseer of the Poor A. D. Ayers reported outside expenses of $148.81 for July and alms house expenses of $240.72 for the same period. Clerk Horace G. Adams of the District court reported receipts for the past month to be $105.60 and disbursements $31.13, leaving a balance of $74.47. These reports were filed.

In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Buxton and adopted, the city assessment maps were re-adopted as official and Civil Engineer H. C. Van Emburgh was employed to take care of the maps for the coming year for the sum of $125 and in addition to locate any new buildings and make necessary changes for the sum of $100.

Mr. Gloak, chairman of the street committee, reported back the petition of George E. Hall and others asking that Denmark road be accepted, stating that the request would be granted when the petitioners furnished the proper maps.

Mr. Taylor, chairman of the fire committee, offered several resolutions, which were adopted, calling for changes in the telephone arrangement as cared for by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company. One resolution provided for a change of the clock and equipment at fire headquarters at an expense at $4.53; also the installation of an extension 'phone at headquarters, at an expense of $6; also the installation of a tapper in the residence of J. W. Ludgate, a calliman, at 310 Clinton avenue, at an expense of $14.10. The tapper will be installed to notify Mr. Ludgate of fires, his residence being such a distance he cannot always hear the fire alarm.

Another change ordered was the removal of the telephone in the residence of Street Commissioner Gavett to the new East End fire house, and the installation of a four-party flat rate 'phone in Mr. Gavett's residence at an annual rental of $50, which the city will pay.

The ordinance providing for gas "cutoffs" as a protection in case of fires, was read on third reading on motion of Mr. Holt, and similar action was taken regarding the tax ordinance in accordance with a motion by Mr. Buxton. The meeting then adjourned after a motion by Mr. Buxton that another session be held Monday night, August 9, was carried.

Red Bank Firemen to Parade.

Thirteen visiting fire companies are expected to parade in Red Bank on Labor Day with the local firemen. They will come from Fair Haven, Oceanic, Rumson, Seabright, Little Silver, Oceanport, Eatontown, West Long Branch, Long Branch, Shrewsbury, Navesink, Highlands and Atlantic Highlands. The parade committee says it will be perhaps the largest affair of its kind ever held in Red Bank. The marching will commence just before noon, in order to give the firemen chance to attend the second annual fair of the Monmouth County Fair Association, which will take place at Shrewsbury avenue and the "Newman Springs" road. The parade committee have asked the Borough Council for an appropriation to defray the expenses.

REGULATION OF TRAFFIC

In a Special Message Mayor Fisk Suggests Lights on All Vehicles.

LOCAL AUTO CLUB INTERESTED.

Rules Presented Which Would Lessen the Danger of Collisions On the Highway.

Mayor C. J. Fisk's attention having been called to the importance of the matter with a view to rendering less likely the danger of collisions between automobiles and other vehicles at night, he sent a special message to the Common Council, Monday night, urging enforcement of certain reasonable rules providing for lights on vehicles of all kinds and the proper regulation of traffic through the streets of the city. The message was read and then referred to the committee on laws and ordinances. It is believed that the Mayor's suggestions will be adopted. The message is as follows:

"The purpose of this special message is to call your attention to the importance of passing an ordinance providing for lights on vehicles of all kinds at night, so that the same may be plainly seen for a distance of at least two hundred feet in either direction. Also to the establishing and enforcing of certain reasonable rules for the proper regulation of traffic through the streets.

"Both of the above matters should have prompt and careful consideration. During the past few weeks there have been a number of accidents caused in every case by ignorance of what is known as the ordinary rules of the road.

"The Executive Committee of the Plainfield Automobile Club and other citizens have not only called my attention to the subject but have offered and agreed to abide by such rules as may be adopted, and also to do all in their power to influence and educate others to do the same.

"In all our business streets the rules should be to always keep to the right and only stop with the right side of the vehicles to the curb. In turning corners always to keep to the right of the centre of the intersection.

"To always approach a corner with the horse being driven or automobile under control so that it may be stopped short. Persons driving horse or automobile must be taught that in crossing a street at a regular crossing, the person walking has equal right with the driver of a vehicle.

"Another rule to be observed should be to always look out for the person approaching on the right. These are a few of the most important rules that should be incorporated in an ordinance. For your information, I hand you herewith a copy of the rules on this subject in force in New York and several other cities.

"I would suggest that this matter be referred to a Committee with the request that they give the subject their immediate consideration and investigate and report at the next meeting of the Common Council with such recommendations as they deem proper."

THE TAX BUDGET RAISED

Common Council Appropriates $23,000 to Meet Certain Expenses.

FOR A CONTINGENT FUND.

Question of Granting Additional Street Lights Provokes Endless Discussion.

For the purpose of meeting certain contingencies during the coming year, Mr. Buxton offered a resolution at the August meeting of the Common Council, Monday, which was adopted, adding $23,000 to the general tax to be raised during 1909, the amount not exceeding the ten per cent. of the total sum as provided by law. This money will meet certain expenses for the maintenance of schools, streets, etc., according to previous custom.

There was a considerable amount of business of minor importance taken up and disposed of. The question of granting petitions for lights caused much discussion, especially the one from Philip S. Suttern and others for lights on Kensington avenue, between Prospect and Watchung avenues. After an endless lot of talk, during which it was once decided to table the petition, it was taken up again and on motion of Mr. Montgomery, two lights were granted for that thoroughfare.

Mr. Montgomery, in response to a petition from George O. Stevens and others, recommended a change of lights on West Sixth street, between Lee place and Monroe avenue, whereby the thoroughfare would probably get an extra lamp. During the discussion which followed, the other members had lots of fun at the expense of Mr. Montgomery. He stated that he wanted to have the lights placed about 300 feet apart complying with the uniform plan adopted by the committee. Mr. Montgomery's resolution calling for two lights on West Sixth street was finally amended to provide for one extra lamp.

Residents of Everitt place, between West Front street and Dunellen avenue, petitioned for two lights, but this matter was referred to the light committee. The Public Service Corporation informed the Council that it had located three lights on Gresham road as directed.

In the discussion regarding the question of exceeding the light appropriation, which was raised by Mr. Buxton, Mr. Montgomery presented a statement of the finances of his committee, showing that this is not likely nor possible. He said that the amount appropriated for the year was $15,500, while including the July bill there is now a balance on hand of $452.72, which will be applied until the next appropriation is made.

WORK STARTED ON NEW TUBERCULOSIS CAMP

Ground was broken Saturday on the Muhlenberg hospital property for the new pavilion to be erected by the Plainfield Society for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis, and the work of construction will be pushed forward rapidly. William Duncan, chairman of the building committee, has announced that it is probable that all will be in readiness for the reception of patients in September. Plans for the tuberculosis pavilion were prepared by Architect A. L. C. Mish.

The society feels much encouraged by the general interest being shown in the local crusade against tuberculosis, but it is said that additional funds are required for both the construction of the building and for its maintainance. Subscriptions may be sent to J. P. Murray, 737 Watchung avenue, treasurer of the society.

Business Conditions Improving.

Indications of the steady improvement in business conditions is evidenced in the fact that there is a steady demand on the schools for competent office help. During the month of July the following pupils of the Plainfield Business College have accepted positions as stenographers. Miss Edith Kutz, who was the official stenographer for the Charter-Day committee, has accepted a position with Dr. H. K. Carroll, of this city; Miss Charles Sebring, of Scotch Plains, with Lawyer Fred S. Taggart, of Westfield; Miss Olive Kershaw, of Somerville, with the Central Railroad of New Jersey; Miss Mary Logan, of Dunellen, with the United States Express Company of New York; Charles Sebring, of Greenbrook, with the New York Flatiron Company, of Belle Meade.

Will Visit Exposition.

Among the Plainfielders who are to visit the Alaska Yukon Exposition are Clarence H. Drake, agent at the Grant avenue station, and his father, Charles F. Drake. Their trip will include the principal points of interest in the west. They will stop for two weeks in California and then will go to Jacksonville, Fla.; New Orleans, La.; El Paso, Texas; Salt Lake City, Utah; Denver and Kansas City.

FINE RACING AT LOCAL DRIVING PARK

The Plainfield Driving Club held a successful matinee race meet at the driving park, Saturday afternoon, attracting a large crowd of spectators from all parts of Union county, as well as New Brunswick, Metuchen, Somerville and Flemington. There were four events on the card, a free for all and three trot and pace races. In each one there were three prizes, a set of harness, leading bridle and a whip.

Adam C. Blair's "Aron B." won the first race easily in straight heats, while N. M. Giles won the second race in straight heats with "The Minister." J. S. Booraem's "Miss Bessie," won the Class C event in straight heats, while Michael Quinn's "Whisper," won first prize in the fourth race, finishing third in the first heat, and then taking the next two heats. All of the races were run off in good time.

The judges and timers were Nate Robbins, John Quinn, Dr. C. M. F. Egel, Dr. Butler, N. M. Giles and John Tiate. John Seely, of Westfield, was the starter. The summaries:

FIVE HOUSES STARTED IN PAST FEW WEEKS

Building permits were granted during the past three weeks for the erection of six frame dwelling houses in this city, and in most instances the work of construction has already been begun. The residences are a two-story, two-family house, owned by Harry Dreier, to be built on New Market road, a one-story and attic house, owned by D. N. Force, of Manning avenue; a similar house by Frank V. Lawrence, on Denmark road; another by the George E. Hall Corporation, on Denmark road, and one by the Mutual Land and Investment Company, on Dixie road.

George J. Whalen, president of the United Cigar Stores, has secured a permit for the erection of a playhouse bungalow in the rear of his home on East Front street, and George A. Beaton, of West Seventh street, is adding a bowling alley extension to the stable on his property, changing the building for use as a garage, and building sleeping quarters for a gardener. John W. Pitts, forward rapidly. William Duncan and Charles L. Stanley, of South avenue, have secured permits for the construction of greenhouses on their properties.

A cement block store is under construction by a local contractor for Mrs. J. Green, at 210 Lee place, and a wagon shed by the Consumers' Coal Company, on West Third street, near Arlington avenue. At Percy Cannon's house, on East Second street, a two-story extension is to be built, to be used by the blind man as a room, and Gustave Meisner, of Watchung avenue, has filed plans and secured a permit for the construction of a three-story brick addition to the building near East Fourth street.

Garages are to be built by James C. Manning, of Dunellen avenue and Dr. F. S. Wells, of Grant avenue, and Harry Dreir is going to move a two-story house on a West Fifth street property, Permits for small extensions have been secured by Dr. H. D. Corbusier, of Park avenue; P. J. Crawford, of Dunellen avenue; William Sandford, of East Front street; Joseph Goldstein, of West Fourth street.

Justice Hand Busy.

Two couples were made happy Saturday afternoon by Justice of the Peace Hezekiah Hand. At 4 o'clock he united in civil marriage in the District court room, Gilbert Read Kice, of Hoboken and Louise J. Berry, of Brooklyn. There were quite a number of witnesses at this ceremony. At 6 o'clock at his home the justice married Andrew Roberto and Francesca Porrette, both of this city. The latter couple will reside on Johnson avenue on their return from a brief wedding trip.

WANT TWO PLAYGROUNDS

Mayor Fisk Urges City Fathers to Take Prompt Action.

A COMMISSION IS SUGGESTED.

Purchase of Land in the Eastern and Western Ends of the City Recommended.

The question of establishing playgrounds in Plainfield, which has been agitated considerably of late, was urged by Mayor C. J. Fisk in an important special message which he sent to the Common Council at the regular August meeting, Monday. Such a public playground as proposed has the support of a large number of leading citizens, who believe that children should have some suitable place where they can engage in approved sports and get the healthful exercise which they need.

Mayor Fisk urges the establishment of two playgrounds, one in the West End and the other in the East End of the city, the appointment of a playgrounds' commission and proper equipment of these grounds. His ideas are clearly set forth in the following special message, which was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances for further investigation:

"The matter of providing proper playgrounds for the children has been called to my attention by a number of our most prominent and influential citizens. Such playgrounds with proper supervision are no experiment, but have proven to be not only very beneficial to the health of the children, but also a great step forward in the educational line, mentally and physically. There is no doubt in my mind that in the city of Plainfield the question of establishing such play grounds should be given serious consideration at once and a commission appointed as provided by the laws of 1907, to take charge of the matter.

"In this connection, I would strongly recommend: (1), that the property owned by the city, corner of Rock avenue and West Front street, be improved as a playground park with proper facilities for the children in the western section of the city, including the laying out of a running track and ball field, with proper shelter houses and dressing rooms. This property is now lying waste, and could be improved at comparatively small expense, as there is no reason why it should not be utilized for this purpose; almost immediately; (2), A tract of land should be acquired in the eastern section of the city, somewhere near Richmond street, located convenient to the trolley road, for the same purpose, and if such a tract of land can be found and secured for a reasonable price, I recommend that the same be purchased and dedicated to such use; (3), a portion of the ground in the respective playgrounds school houses should be put at the disposal of the play ground commissioners, properly equipped with apparatus and set aside at least during the summer months as playgrounds for the children 12 years old and under.

"Our city is rapidly increasing in population, new houses for residences and building for business purposes are being built, and in a very few years all available land conveniently located for the uses above outlined will be taken up or the cost of same will be higher than the city should pay, at the same time the need for same will be more and more apparent.

"In order that our city to continue to grow, and the right kind of people to come here to live, we must keep up with the times and give the children all the advantages possible and there is no doubt that playgrounds under proper supervision is a means of development of not only mind and body, but of character, leadership and self-government to a much greater extent than the schoolroom.

"I urge that your Honorable Body give this subject your earnest, prompt and serious consideration, in order that the children in Plainfield may enjoy at an early date the same advantages in this respect that are already enjoyed by children in other cities of this State."

Plainfielders in New England.

Many Plainfielders are enjoying the New England resorts this summer. At Poland Springs, Me., are Miss Mary E. Brown and Miss E. M. Dunleavy; E. S. Fowler at Rangeley, Me.; at the Rockmere Inn, Marblehead, Mass., are registered Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Gernon and Miss Gernon.

Question of Public Park.

The question of establishing a public park in the West End of the city is still a lively one and within a short time the interested parties will hold a conference to discuss features concerning it. The idea of a public park, such as proposed, meets with general approval.

Quite Appropriate.

BRUTAL NEGRO IS HELD

Judge Scores Prisoner for Fiendish Attack on Patrolman Nolan.

FIXES BAIL THREE THOUSAND.

Prosecutor's Office Takes a Hand—Negro Hurried to Jail Where He Will Languish.

William Jackson, the negro who attacked Patrolman Tobias Nolan on Richmond street Wednesday night, when warned to light his bicycle lantern, and who fought with him for twenty minutes before he could be subdued and put in the patrol wagon, was held in $3,000 bail to await the action of the grand jury at his postponed hearing before City Judge Runyon at the city court Saturday. Unable to secure a bondsman, Jackson, whose home is on East Third street, was taken to Elizabeth this afternoon, where he will be held a prisoner in the County jail to await the action of the grand jury in October.

In fixing the bail, City Judge Runyon took occasion to speak of the brutality of the unwarranted attack upon the policeman. He referred to the integrity and excellent record of Patrolman Nolan, who is under the care of City Physician C. B. Laiburrow as a result of the fight. Yesterday Nolan swore out a warrant for atrocious assault and battery against his prisoner, whom the physician has also attended.

"This attack," said Judge Runyon, "constituted a fiendish outrage which cannot in any way look lightly upon. It is a serious offence, and one which, if not punished, will result in a form of anarchy in this city in which the police may be subject to similar attacks. In no way do I believe that Patrolman Nolan would act as the defendant says. I have known the officer for a long time, and have never heard complaints about him. He is absolutely truthful, and has shown wise judgment; on which account I believe his story, and it is well corroborated by his two witnesses."

Assistant County Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., conducted the case for the State, and John Mottley, a Richmond street grocer, and George Gildersleeve, of East Elm street, were called at Patrolman Nolan's witnesses. On the witness stand, the policeman gave a graphic account of the fight. According to his story, Jackson swore at him when he warned him to light up, and told him to mind his own business. The language was such as to warrant arrest, and Nolan ran after the cyclist to capture him. Jackson got off the wheel, and struck Nolan as the patrolman when he made the arrest. The men grappled and fell together, and Nolan says his ribs were "cracked" by the negro's bear hug as they rolled on the ground. His attempt to locate his club by throttling his opponent resulted in him being severely bitten on the middle finger of his left hand. His head was also "split" by a blow with his own night stick, wrested from him in the struggle.

The fight couldn't have been all one-sided, because the negro woke the neighborhood yelling "help" and "murder" after the first few minutes of the combat. City Physician C. B. Laiburrow said that Jackson was badly bruised about the head and body and required his services in the cell yesterday. "There's nothing brutal about me whatever," said Nolan on the witness stand, "and before we started in I said 'Surrender, and you'll be perfectly safe.'"

Jackson, who is employed as a gardener by John Valiant, of Myrtle avenue, was nervous and confused during his examination, speaking in a high-pitched voice, and at times incoherently. He denied the policeman's statement that he swore, and said that he thought a boy hailed him.

In summing up the State's case, Assistant Prosecutor Hetfield asked Judge Runyon to impose a heavy bail. "This attack," he said, is serious in more than one way. The defendant has not only violated a city ordinance, but he has defied the law and the authority of an officer. So long as this sort of thing is countenanced by this court, we may expect repititions of these attacks on the police."

The court room was thronged with residents of the district, who witnessed the fight. Those who know Jackson intimately, say he is mentally unsound.

Sunday Night Fire.

An alarm from box 12 at about 8 o'clock summoned the firemen to extinguish a small blaze in the rear of Daley Bros.' grocery store on West Front street. The fire is believed to have started from spontaneous combustion among papers. There was no damage.

New Real Estate Firm.

Paul A. Whitford, of Westerly, R. I., has acquired an interest in the real estate and insurance business of Clarke & Tapscott, of the Babcock building. Mr. Whitford was formerly employed by the Potter Printing Press Company. The new firm will be known as George M. Clarke & Co.

AIRSHIP FLIGHTS HERE

Howard Colby to Make Trips About Plainfield in His Aeroplane.

PARACHUTES FOR EMERGENCY.

Wright Brothers Will Deliver City's First Airship in the Fall.

Plainfielders will have an opportunity to witness an airship in flight in this city as a daily occurrance when Howard Colby, of Evergreen avenue, receives his new aeroplane from the Wright brothers, with whom he has just placed an order.

Mr. Colby at present knows very little about aeroplane construction or operation; but his order specifies that it be of fair size, and capable of easy operation. It will cost about $2,500 and will be ready for use this fall.

This will be the first aeroplane to be operated in this city, and as the initial aviator Mr. Colby enjoys a unique distinction, which he bears modestly.

To a Daily Press representative he said that he would make flights locally, and, as the machine is large enough for more than one person, friends may occasionally be invited to make the trips with him. A machine of similar design will be put out for Edward S. F. Randolph, a former Plainfielder. With him Mr. Colby is planning a series of trips to points of interest about the State.

Mr. Colby says he will carry with him a number of folding parachutes so that in case he alights on a mountain peak, a skyscraper or a church steeple, he will not have to undertake the hazardous task of climbing down the outer walls, which are often very slippery and in some cases, from lack of proper repairs and attention, are apt to be frail in their construction.

"GOLDEN-VOICED TENOR" A HIT AT 'PATCONG

"The Breeze," a weekly publication, issued at Lake Hopatcong during the summer months, got hold of a good local "social story" for its last issue, and reports the merry times at a "porch party" at Ardsley Cottage as follows:

"The members of 'Camp Crescent,' of Newark, and 'Camp Ram's Horn,' of Plainfield, were guests of honor at a porch party given Thursday night by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Punchard, at their cottage, 'Ardsley,' on Halsey Island. Music and dancing were features of the occasion. Miss Ada Lewis, of Sam Barnard's "Nearly A Hero" company, contributed several delightful impersonations, and a solo was rendered by a trio composed of Burrill Barbaretts, also a member of the 'Nearly A Hero' company, Tom DeMesa and Tom Muir of Camp 'Ram's Horn,' member of the well known 'Gold Medal Minstrel Troupe.' J. Polhemus Hall received three encores by his clever rendition of "Don't You do That Dance, I tell You, Sadie."

"On Friday night, Mr. and Mrs. Dolan, of 'Camp Dolan,' entertained the 'Ram's Horn' camp members at a marshmallow roast, during which one of the largest camp fires seen around the lake in several seasons was lighted."

PLAINFIELD TO HOPATCONG IN A CANOE.

Four young men, Frank Wilcox, Edward Abbott and Russell Morris, of Plainfield, and Alfred Beeken, of Dunellen, are camping on Halsey Island, Lake Hopatcong, after practically canoeing from this city. They carried canoes and the outfit to the Passaic river at Berkeley Heights, paddled down this stream to the Pompton river, fifteen miles above Paterson, thence to the Morris canal at Mountainview, down the canal to the lock entrance to Lake Hopatcong.

They started last Tuesday and reached the lake on Thursday night. They will return home by way of the Morris canal to the Delaware river; thence to the Raritan canal from Bordentown to Bound Brook. They say that this sort of a trip can not be beaten if one is looking for variety of scenery, to say nothing of the splendid exercise to be had. They expect to complete their trip home in less time than it took to go and say they are enjoying every minute of their outing.

Easily Seen.

"There are many points about our machine, Mr. Poodick," the agent was saying, "that you don't find in typewriters usually. For example, the whole line, as you write, is visible—by the way, Mr. Poodick, have you ever had a visible typewriter in your office?"

"Visible," he said. "We have one that's more than visible—she's conspicuous!"—Argonaut.

The finger nails should be manicured once each week, then if they are scrubbed and polished every day it should keep them in very good order.

"A "DOG DIRECTORY" NOW

Plainfield's Canines are Registered by Breed and Owner.

950 NOW WEAR LICENSE TAGS.

"Every Dog is Numbered," and Ordinance Rigidly Enforced —The Big Revenue.

Plainfield has a "dog directory" now, for the dogs licensed are recorded by kind and street address in the office of the city clerk and at police headquarters. The city's dog population, according to the license "blue book," is 950, and so rigidly have the police been enforcing the ordinance that practically all the canines now wear the little numbered tags.

The dogs are of all sorts and conditions, and their owners include the millionaire, who registered his blue-blooded ribbon winners, and the Italian laborer, whose mongrel also wears one of the license tags. Among the fancy breeds of animals listed are a Japanese Pinky-Panky, a Maltese poodle, a Llewellyn setter and a blood hound, but the proletariat of Dogdom is also represented, for many license wearers are simply designated as "mongrel," or "unknown." These latter sort are in several cases owned by the well-to-do, and those who pay their licenses say that they are the truest of the faithful, and far more companionable than the be-ribboned cushion-sleepers.

The income from the dog licenses, which cost $250 apiece, makes a total of $2,375. Of this sum, $237.50 goes to the city clerk, who gets a quarter apiece for issuing the licenses, and the balance goes to the city treasury. A movement is on foot to have this balance put to an especial use, and agitation has been started to have it made the nucleus of a police pension fund. Several of the councilmen are interested in this movement, but no action has yet been taken. Last year there were less than 500 dog licenses issued.

The 1909 ordinance has done away with the muzzle requirement, and licensed dogs now trot the streets, free to breathe, eat and drink. Many dog-owners looked on the muzzle as cruel, and the agitation for its abondonment resulted in the muzzle requirement being dropped. With all the dogs wearing numbered tags, it is an easy matter for a policeman to "get the number" of any canine trouble-maker, and "arrest" it afterwards through its owner. At the dog pound, too, conditions have been improved, and any vagrants captured are treated like prisoners in the Union county jail, and receive plenty of good food Those condemned to die are given a humane impetus toward the dog star, and funeral arrangements are under the supervision of the Board of Health.

COMMON COUNCIL RATIFIES SPECIAL SEWER REPORT

The Common Council at its August meeting, Monday, ratified and confirmed the report of the special sewer assessors, R. A. Meeker, S. P. Wilcox and H. B. MacDonald, which was presented at a previous meeting. The Council has complied with the law in granting a public hearing, and passing on the proofs of publication in the official newspapers of the city.

The Shade Tree Commission reported to the Council that maple trees on the sidewalks throughout the city are being constantly injured, but because its funds are entirely exhausted it is powerless to do anything. The matter was referred to the finance committee and at an adjourned meeting Monday night. it is likely that a sufficient sum will be appropriated for this work.

Mayor W. J. Fisk appointed Chas. Anderson a regular policeman to fill the vacancy in the force caused by the resignation of John Kelly, and the appointment was confirmed. Anderson has been doing regular duty as a special since July, 1909, when he received his first appointment.

Frank Thompson An Officer.

The Consolidated Arizona Smelting Company has been reorganized. William Schall, Jr., Charles A. Little, Victor I. Cumnock, Julius Kessler, Edwin S. Hooley, Charles A. Greene and Frank W. Thompson have been elected directors. William Schall, Jr., was elected president; Frank C. Dillingham, vice-president, and Frank W. Thompson, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Thompson has resided on Rockview terrace for a number of years, and for a long time has been in the insurances business. He is secretary of the Plainfield Hunt Club.

PLAINFIELD Y. M. C. A. DEFEATED BY NEWARK

Although the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. team made a determined rally in the ninth inning, they fell just one tally short of tieing the Newark association nine in the game between the two teams at Wecquaick Park, Newark, Saturday. The score was 7 to 6 in favor of Newark. The home team, by scoring four runs in the first inning, forced its opponents to make an uphill fight throughout the contest. Will Schoonmaker and Murphy lead the Plainfield team in hitting, each securing two hits of the six credited to the nine. Newark secured but seven hits off Peacock's delivery. The score.

STATE GETTING READY FOR SPECIAL ELECTION.

In getting ready for the special election on the adoption of the constitutional amendments, several tons of printed material are being prepared for shipment at the office of the Secretary of State. From that one fact alone may be gained an idea of the work that is being done under the direction of Ernest O. Fuller, who is in charge of the division of elections.

In addition to the specially prepared ballots, which are prepared in accordance with the special act passed at the last session of the Legislature, the boxes in which the votes will be sent out will contain copies for each precinct in the State of the election law, blanks for the precinct returns and blanks for reports to the county election boards.

The form of the blank ballot which had been prepared as a sample has been returned by Governor Fort with his approval as to the general make up and size. This was the form that had been devised by the State's legal department. The ballots will be 12 inches long and 5 in type a little larger than that used in printing the ordinary newspaper. Whether or not it is small enough to go into the slot of the regular ballot box has not yet been determined.

Under the new law governing this special election there are several dates of importance to voters and ward workers as well as professional politicians. They are:

September 7—First meeting of boards of registration and elections.

September 11—County boards of elections meet at the courthouses in various counties from 8 o'clock a. m. to 5 p. m., the same as for regular elections.

September 14—Special election on constitutional amendments.

September 20—County boards of canvassers meet to canvass.

September 30—Four members of the Senate will meet in session on the summons of the Governor to serve as the board of canvassers of the State returns.

Good Time at the Camp.

Another good time was given the children and mothers at the King's Daughters' Baby Camp on the mountain Saturday afternoon, when several women from Fanwood provided ice cream and cake for everyone at the camp. The children enjoyed their party fully. Arrangements have been made to have the various Circles of the King's Daughters of this city take turns in entertaining at the camp every Saturday afternoon this summer.

F. E. Smith to Build.

F. E. Smith, of the firm of J. A. Smith & Brother, has sold his house at 308 West Fourth street to Dr. M. L. Clawson for investment. Mr. Smith has purchased the desirable lot on Central avenue between Sixth and Seventh streets on the north side from Mrs. P. P. MacQuade. Plans for the construction of an up-to-date dwelling house are now being drawn. Building will be started at once, and he will occupy it as soon as it is completed.

Police Complimented.

At the meeting of the Common Council Monday a resolution was introduced by Councilman Frank Randolph, chairman of the police board, which was unanimously adopted, complimenting the police on their fine appearance, soldierly bearing, efficient service and general all-around competence during the Charter Day celebration.

NEW JERSEY'S MONEY IS WELL SAFEGUARDED

Considerable interest has been aroused and favorable comment heard in connection with a joint resolution presented by Assemblyman Carlton R. Pierson, and passed by the last Legislature, intended to prevent State deficits in the future.

The remedy suggested is very simple and consists merely in putting the complete facts as to moneys available and expenses necessary in the hands of the Legislature before appropriations are voted, and then cutting the patern according to the cloth.

The resolution is entitled "Joint resolution providing for the furnishing of information to the Legislature as a basis for appropriations."

It provides that by the tenth day of January in each year the various State institutions and bodies dependent upon legislative appropriation for support shall submit estimates of their needs for the coming year to the Comptroller upon blanks provided by him.

"The Comptroller then causes condensed statements of these estimates to be printed together in pamphlet form, and places in parallel columns for the purpose of comparison, the similar expenses for the prior year and the appropriations for the current year.

In the same pamphlet, and in similar form for the purpose of comparison, the Comptroller prints brief statements, sufficiently itemized under general heads to be intelligible, showing:

"(a) The State receipts for the prior year and estimated receipts for the current and coming years.

"(b) The State expenditures for the prior year and the appropriations for the current year, and

"(c) Such other matter, information, tables, summary statements and balances, as the Comptroller or Governor shall deem desirable, in connection with the work of legislative appropriation for the coming year.

"The said pamphlet shall be arranged throughout to present in simplest form the financial condition of the State, of the moneys available and expenditures necessary for the current and coming fiscal years, and shall be submitted to the Legislature by the Comptroler on or before the first day of February in each year."

Assemblyman Pierson was seen today and gave the following statement in explanation of the resolution.

"The resolution is the outcome of the work of the special joint finance committee of the Legislature. The committee had two problems to solve, one to meet the pending deficit, and the other to prevent a recurrence; the resolution is along the latter lines.

"The practice of the Legislature in the past, like that of Congress, has been to vote for appropriations deemed worthy, as they came along without much reference to what was yet to come, or whether money was available or in sight, or any real knowledge upon the subject. The point was supposedly taken care of later by the Appropriations Committee, which left out of the final bill items deemed unnecessary. In spite of this check, however, expenditures had been exceeding income, until a balance of some years ago had become a deficit.

"The new resolution changes former methods and puts the work of appropriation on a business basis. The budget required to be made up by the Comptroller under the resolution will put the complete facts as to the financial condition of *the State in the hands of the Legis*lature before any money is spent and with the facts in hand, there should be no difficulty at any time, with reasonable care, in keeping expenditures within income."

FIRST IMPRESSIONS OF GENERAL MEADE.

General Meade called at the executive mansion whilst the cabinet was in session, one of the members, like myself, had never seen him. Blair and he were classmates at West Point, but they have never met since they graduated until today. He has a sharp visage and a narrow head. Would do better as *second in command than as general-*in-chief. It doubtless a good officer, but not a great and capable commander. He gave some details of the battle of Gettysburg clearly and fluently. Shows intelligence and activity, and at the same time as well or better pleased with him than I expected I should be, for I have had unfavorable impressions, prejudiced perhaps, since the escape of Lee. This interview confirms previous impressions of the calibre and capacity of the man. From the diary of Gideon Welles, July Atlantic.

FRUIT STANDS MUST GO

Borough Board of Health Passes Measure to Eliminate Possible Danger.

LIVING ROOMS TOO CLOSE.

Some Have Menageries of Animals —New Health Inspector. Appointed Last Night.

About a dozen small fruit stands and groceries in the borough of North Plainfield, conducted for the most part by Italians and Greeks, will have to be changed shortly to conform to the new ordinance passed by the borough Board of Health at its meeting Monday night. If they wish to continue in business.

Heretofore, the living room has been in the rear, and the store, as it is called, has been in front. The only air passage has been through the front door, and in the living room. Often the whole family is assembled in the one room and here they sleep, cook their meals and in some cases harbor a whole menagerie of pet animals.

These unsanitary conditions were brought to the attention of the health board, and it was found that in many cases the only thing that separated the living room from the store, where edibles were kept, was a curtain. Often a mere screen did service in this respect. Perishable fruits, vegetables and meats sold by these dealers are kept in the front room exposed to all the odors and contamination of the back room. A thorough investigation of all conditions in this type of store led the health board to take drastic steps in the matter to relieve the condition. An ordinance was proposed to make it a misdmeanor for a dealer to live in the back part of his store, where perishable edibles are sold in the front. The ordinance came up twice, but failed to meet with the necessary support. A complete investigation of the conditions led to its passage last night on the third reading. Sufficient time will be granted dealers to make the necessary changes in their manner of do*ing business and of living, to con*form to the regulations of the new ordinance.

At the meeting Monday, Louis Olff was appointed health inspector. His position is to be permanent.

SEVENTH-DAY PASTOR TALKS ON MIRACLES

Preaching in the Congregational church Sunday morning, the Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, unconsciously gave answer to the teachings of Goldwin Smith, when he explained some of the miracles of Jesus Christ in simple, yet forceful terms. The sermon was very interesting and was enjoyed by a large congregation.

The Rev. Mr. Shaw showed that as it is possible for us to interfere with the laws of gravity—which is exemplified by holding one's hand out to stop a falling book in its flight, or by throwing up a stone—so it is much more possible for the Lord Jesus Christ to interfere for a time with the usual course of events, and perform what is called a miracle. On this basis, he said, it is easy to understand how He restored to life the dead young man and delivered him to his mother, and also the feeding of the multitude with the few loaves of bread and few fishes.

"And so Jesus interferred here in behalf of this poor heartbroken lonely mother," said Rev. Mr. Shaw, "and I believe that He is interferring in these times in behalf of His children who are in distress; interferring with the laws of nature as they usually act, interferring with the course of events as we should expect it from our previous experience, all for the happiness and the well-being of His people.

"To every boy in this church, in this city, Jesus says, 'Young man, I say unto you, Arise. Keep not away *your life, dead to the better im*pulses of your own being, dead to the higher, nobler life; arise, there is work for you to do, a place for you to fill.' Four things which seem to me to make Jesus an inspirer of young men are integrity of life, devotion to duty, heroism and unselfish love. The man of integrity is careful not only about paying his coal bill, but even his street car fare when the collector passes him by. He is careful about having the correct change at the cash desk when the mistakes has been made in his favor as when it is made to his loss. And a business man whose life is lived on those lines becomes an inspiration and a help to those who know him.

"I say what the world needs is a nearer and more intimate view of the life of Jesus and the responsibility of bringing this view to the world and of securing its attention, rests largely with the church.

"DO WRITE SOON!"

"There's a little habit," said the hostess, whose last guest had just departed, "that we are prone to fall into. It is but a little thing in itself, and probably not one in ten people would criticise it, but nevertheless it always nettles me when I find myself slipping into it. It is the habit we have of saying to our friend we have entertained 'Now, be sure to write soon.' I don't mean that we ought not to wish to hear before long, but it is the implied suggestion of what is proper to which I object. Of course, a person who has been entertained certainly should consider it her privilege and her pleasure to drop a line as soon as she possibly can, after bidding farewell—a bread and butter note, if you like the expression; I don't. So, you see, it is really conveying a hint of what ought to be done, when a guest is asked to write soon. I always feel like biting my tongue when I have started to make this more or less conventional remark. I believe, as the result of careful thought, that I do not make it so frequently as I once did."

A Widow Wordalogue

By Helen Rowland.

"Come with me," said the Widow, mysteriously, leading the Bachelor toward the waiting hansom, "and I'll show you the greatest invention of the age."

"What is it?" demanded the Bachelor, halting suspiciously.

"The latest triumph of whalebone and steel," responded the Widow, waving her violet parasol dramatically as she gently pushed him toward the hansom. "The newest things in figures and fashions. I'm going to the dressmakers' convention."

"But I don't want to be shocked," complained the Bachelor, squirming in his side of the hansom. "And I'm not interested in inquisitions, nor instruments of torture, nor human suffering, nor monomania, nor—"

"Is what, Mr. Travers?"

"In the ridiculous fashions of women," explained the Bachelor, bluntly.

"It's the ridiculous taste of men that inspires them," retorted the Widow, tartly.

"Nonsense!" protested the Bachelor. "No man admires a human work of art, nor a forest of false hair, nor a figure that works on springs, nor—"

"Of course you don't," put the Widow, sympathetically, "on principle. Theoretically, you don't approve of rouge, nor dyed hair, nor peek-a-boo waists, nor sheath gowns, nor—nor Solome; but when it comes to practice it's always the girl with the pink chin and the butter-colored hair and the openwork stockings and the handmade figure that you turn around in the street to stare after."

"I don't!" declared the Bachelor.

"And the woman who rustles like a windstorm and leaves a path of patchouli behind her to whom you are pining for an introduction."

"It's false!" cried the Bachelor, indignantly.

"Of course it's false," acquiesced the Widow, quite unruffled, "but it's feminine. Ruffles and curls and lace and perfumes are the insignia of femininity, and it's a woman's femininity, not her strength of mind and breadth of character, that attracts a man. Theoretically you admire flat heels and physical culture and sweet simplicity and beauties of the soul, and dote on a girl with high ideals and principles, but that isn't the kind a woman hesitates to introduce her husband to; it's the kind with high heels and a straight front figure and Paquin gowns."

"And yet," sighed the Bachelor, "I don't know a $40 hat from a four dollar one, nor chiffon from calico print."

"No man does," agreed the Widow, soothingly. "No man knows what a woman has on any more than he knows what an artist has put into a painting, but he can tell a well-dressed woman from a frump as quickly as he can tell a red picture from a dash. Do you fancy women powder their noses and peroxide their hair merely for the pleasure of dabbling in chemicals? Do you imagine they wear tight corsets and French heels merely because they are pining for indigestion and a pain in the side? Do you suppose—"

"I hadn't supposed anything about it," broke in the Bachelor, desperately. "But if you make early Christian martyrs of yourselves in order to fascinate us, you are wasting your time. A man doesn't respect nor admire a woman that is gotten up like the third act of a comic opera chorus."

"Who wants to be respected and admired and left at home?" demanded the Widow, scornfully. "Who wants to be a modest violet, when all the men are around the corner chasing chrysanthemums and orchids? If women-folks are frivolous and artificial and senseless, it's men who have made them so. No woman is going to spend her days in the pursuit of virtue and economy and the cook book while you are spending yours in the pursuit of some foolish little thing who doesn't know a broom from an egg-beater and wouldn't know what to do with a sample if she had one, but who knows how to wear her hats and—"

"Oh, hell," broke in the Bachelor, desperately; "if we men are that kind, why do you care—"

"You're the only kind there is," sighed the Widow. "And—and here we are!"

"Here are they?" demanded the Bachelor, glancing eagerly around, as the Widow led him into a room full of wire mannikins draped in imported gowns.

"Where are what, Mr. Travers?"

"The—the inventions?"

"I don't know what you are talking about."

"The triumphs in whalebone and steel."

The Widow wrinkled her brows questioningly.

"The models," explained the Bachelor. "The live ones."

"Billy Travers!" exclaimed the Widow. "Did you think I would bring you here when there was a demonstration going on? Did you think you were going to see live models?"

"I knew I was going to be shocked," grumbled the Bachelor, bitterly, "but didn't know it would be such a shock—"

"A shock?" inquired the Widow.

"Of disappointment," sighed the Bachelor, as he disentangled himself from the folds of a mauve gown on a wire mannikin and tripped over a white lace train in his endeavor to escape.

PATENTED

The BOYNTON

Square Fire Pot

makes tending the furnace easy, but best of all it makes a joyous fire. Round fire pots burn strongly through the center with a rim of half dead clinkers at the edge and when you shake the fire the middle drops out. You've noticed it. Fires built in BOYNTON Square Pots are all live coals. A shake down is an even shake. The whole fire settles. There is no waste. The fuel being equal, a square pot will develop almost twice the heat, or the same heat for about half. The square pot is our patent and can be had only in the BOYNTON furnaces. We have a dealer in your town. He will be glad to show you.

There are BOYNTON heating systems of kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for Steam or Hot Water Heating.

ECONOMY IN THE HOUSEHOLD.

Little Savings That Go Far to Cut Down the Monthly Bills.

That useful little article, the scrubbing brush, often wears out long before its time because of bad usage. Nine persons out of ten lay the brush upside down, forgetting that any moisture will sink into the back, often causing the bristles to fall out and making the brush sodden and unfit for use.

The household broom, scornfully characterized as the woman's weapon, is, as a rule, placed in the corner straw upward. Any water left in it sinks into the center, rusting the wire and rotting the straw. A broom should always be hung on a nail or placed in one of those patent arrangements that hold it firmly from the floor so that any dust or water may fall from it when not in use.

Where do all the clothes pins go? Strewn through the grass here and there to be raked up by the mower, soiled and broken, when he cuts the grass on his monthly round. Every one that requires a new one to fill its place. And what of the clothes-lines left out through all weather, notably, as we have seen from one week to another? "Such little things are not worth mentioning," some one may say. Nay, all these little things and many more count largely in making up the yearly household budget, as every housekeeper well knows. These are the unnecessary expenditures that spoil the balancing of accounts.—The Housekeeper.

FOUR BOTTLES IN ONE.

Quarter Sections Each Intended for a Different Liquid.

The handy if homely old-fashioned castor which was wont to stand in the center of the dinner table within reach of every one has been outdone in convenience. Now along comes a bottle with four compartments and as many stoppers, each quarter section being intended for a different liquid. On each division is engraved the name of the beverage it is to hold. One may have bottles marked for whisky, rum, gin and brandy; and there are what the dealer pleasantly styles, "afternoon bridge" bottles, bearing the inscriptions "sherry, claret, sauterne and madeira." Smaller bottles are made for liqueurs, and who knows but others will shortly follow, marked conveniently, "pickles, catsup, salad dressing and maple syrup?" The sectional bottles are said to be a revival of old colonial sideboard decorations, and some of them come with little stands of filigree silver or gilt.

Making a Book of Novel Recipes.

The girl who has just been married would be delighted with a booklet made from unruled tablet paper and tied into book form between cardboard backs, covered with gay chintz or water color paper.

If the latter is used a narrow gilt line can be painted as a border and on the front can be lettered: "What Mother Used to Make" or "Favorite Dishes."

There should be a page for each day of the year, and on each one should be clearly written a time-tested recipe that cannot be found in a printed cook book. A recipe can be written on each side of a sheet, or if it seems better to use only one side, on the opposite blank page could go menus for different meals, quotations about eating and odd bits of culinary information.

Little Lobster Creams.

Pound the flesh of a small lobster with one gill of milk, rub it through a sieve, add a teaspoonful of anchovy sauce, a pinch of cayenne pepper and a squeeze of lemon juice. Beat all well together; whip rather less than half a teacupful of cream and add half of this to the mixture, whipping all the time you are adding it. Fill some small china cases with the mixture and pile the rest of the cream on the top. Pound the coral of the lobster and rub it through a sieve, sprinkling the top of each case as you pass it through. Stand on ice and serve cold with brown bread and butter.

Potato Balls.

Three small potatoes, boiled and mashed; one cup warm milk; two eggs well beaten, one cake compressed yeast, one tablespoon salt, one cup potato water. Melt butter and lard in milk, mix well together and pour into flour in mixing; take care not to use too much flour. Let rise and work down twice. Then cut with small biscuit cutter, dip tops in melted butter, fold and place in pans one-half inch apart. If wanted for six p. m. set about nine a. m.

Royal Pudding.

One cupful of bread crumbs well crumbed, one pint of milk, one-half cup sugar, the yolks of two eggs well beaten, grated rind of one lemon, one tablespoonful butter. Bake until done. Spread on the pudding a layer of jelly or jam. Then whip the whites of two eggs stiff, beat in one-half cupful of sugar and the juice of the lemon. Pour over the pudding, bake in the oven until slightly browned.

Baked Omelet.

One cup bread crumbs soaked in one cup of sweet milk over night. Beat the yolks of three eggs, add the bread and milk, stir well, then add a pinch of salt and the well-beaten whites of the eggs. Bake 20 minutes.

White Meal Gems.

One egg, one cup of milk, quarter cup of butter, two tablespoonfuls sugar, one cup white cornmeal, half a cup of flour, one teaspoonful cream of tartar, half a teaspoonful of soda. Bake 20 minutes.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 8, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—Why war should be abolished.—Isa. ii. 2-4; Matt. v. 38-45.

Living in the twentieth century with all the history of the past behind us, it should scarcely be necessary to discuss the subject of why war should be abolished. Once the glory of victory in war was the ideal of the nations of the world. Persia, Greece and Rome were constantly at war, each in their order becoming the supreme nation of the time. And that which was gained through the glory of war was, after all, very little, and one nation soon overcame the other. At such a time, however, such a question might have been raised without any seeming lack of necessity, but that today it should still be necessary to discuss it is one of the dark spots on modern civilization. Isaiah speaks of a time when nations "shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift sword against nation; neither shall they learn war any more." The time seems to be approaching when this prophecy shall be fulfilled.

1. The curse of war should lead to its abolition. General Sherman's definition of war is well known, and is well known to be true. There has never been anything on earth so typical of the place of perdition as war. If we had the statistics of all who have died in or because of war, if we knew the number of widows and orphans made by war and what they have suffered, if we had certain knowledge of all who have escaped death and wounds, but who have been morally and spiritually ruined while engaged in war, we might be enabled to slightly estimate what a curse war has been to the human race. It arouses the basest passions of men, and, like wild beasts, they are made more inhuman by the sight of blood in time of battle and burns with but one desire—namely, to destroy their fellow men. Nations have been ruined in a day, and even the curse of war has led to awful slaughter and bloodshed in the church of Christ.

2. The expense of war should lead to its abolition. What the wars of the world have cost in money cannot be estimated, but if it could the figures would be enormous. The money spent today on armaments and navies, even in time of peace, is beyond human conception. And the people bear the burden. If there were no war departments to support, no war vessels to build, no standing armies to support, no pensions to pay, what a financial burden would be lifted from the people of every nation. Billions of dollars could be spent for schools, the talented poor could be educated in art and music, and hundreds of blessings could be made possible which are now impossible, because of the great war expenses in time of peace.

3. The supremacy of Christianity should lead to the abolition of war. Christ came to bring peace—not in a day, but by the gradual growth and acceptance of His teachings. War is un-Christian. It is based upon selfishness, jealousy, hate—all of which are un-Christian. We are to love our enemies and to live at peace with them. The Golden Rule, if practiced by nations, would abolish war in a day.

4. There is no necessity for war today, and for this reason it should be abolished. Diplomacy and arbitration could settle all international disputes without war. Moreover, they would if it were not for the fact that the nations are armed to the teeth. Disarmament of all nations is the only safe guarantee against wars. So long as nations "prepare for war" there will be wars. A nation trained to fight will always be ready to fight. Turn all implements of war into tools of industry, cease to train armies and build navies, and "nation shall not lift up the sword against nation." Universal peace will prevail.

BIBLE READINGS.

Job 1, 13-20; Lev. xxvi, 17, 31-39; Ps. xiv, 8-11; Isa. ix. 5-7; xi, 1-10; Luke ii. 8-15; Ps. lxviii, 30; Rom. xii, 9-21; Rev ix, 1-21.

Zealous Samoan Endeavorers.

"The Samoan Islands," says Rev. J. W. Hills of Upolu, Samoa, "divided between Germany and America politically, are filled with ardent Christians, and these are imbued with the utmost enthusiasm for missions to other parts of the Pacific, while nowhere in the world is there a larger proportion of Christian Endeavor work. Indeed, much of the very best of our missionary work among this charming race is done on the Christian Endeavor plan, which has peculiar attractions for them and forms a solid, integral and permanent part of our system.

"The missionary work in which these Endeavor societies take an invaluable share is a marvelous one. We are now each year sending five or six couples of native evangelists to New Guinea. That immense island is now looked upon as our great field of missionary enterprise. The climate is dangerous, yet we always find eager and able recruits ready to fill all gaps. And all the work is done at little expense to the London Missionary society, for even our students in the training college build their own houses and cultivate their own crops for their food. In a very few years we were able to place native ministers in every village in Samoa. The societies pay the salaries of the few missionaries from home; that is all."

Mr. Hills has been in Samoa since 1887 and knows the people and their needs. His words are a splendid tribute to Christian Endeavor.

THE LARGEST FAIR IN THE WORLD.

Long before Columbus discovered America Russia was holding her great market at Nijni Novgorod, for history tells us that the first fair was held there in 1246. Since that time each year men and women have gathered from all parts of Europe and Asia to offer their wares at this Russian market.

The fair, which covers eight square miles, is a town in itself. The church belonging to the fair is particularly beautiful and was built to mark the spot of the meeting of the two great rivers. Its domes are heavily coated with gold, and may be seen for miles. The ground occupied by the fair buildings is low and marshy, the paving vile, and the odor from mudholes nauseating.

The business is conducted on Eastern principles. There is no fixed price—everything is worth what it will fetch. A Tartar will ask twice as much as he will take for his goods, and there is a sort of fascination in bargaining with him, and in the end you pay more than the article is worth. Everywhere one hears the click of the abacus—wood-n beads on wires, such as we learned to count on as children.

The long, poorly lighted buildings are filled with merchandise of every description—German toys, cotton goods of every variety, umbrellas, Turkish silks, Persian carpets, tawdry jewelry and famous Orenburg wool shawls, which are so soft they may be drawn through a lady's bracelet. Whole streets are devoted to the sale of samovars, Russian boots and slippers and many shops, and a square or two is devoted to the sale of ikons. Fruits and hardware are sold on the river front, and I saw hundreds of bags or raisins on the wharf ready for shipment.

The furs, for no country produces such a wealth of furs as the Land of the Bear. Several acres are devoted to fur shops of every description. There are hundreds of bear skins, ranging in size and beauty from the huge polar and grizzlies to the soft shiny coats of the cubs of the small black bear. Leopard and tiger skins are plentiful, and there are thousands of lynx and wolf skins interlaced of tiny ermines and Russian squirrels and bale upon bale of sables. In one place I actually walked for squares through bales of these precious sable skins. Persian lamb skins, too, were plentiful.

The fair opens in July and lasts until September. After that the unsold goods are stored, tents are struck, flags are furled, hotels are barred up, the governor-general goes back to his residence in the upper town, the pontoon bridge across the river is removed and the place is left to take care of itself. In early autumn the rains set in, the river rises and the fair ground is soon under water. This crowns by the first of November, and Nijni's great market place becomes a vast steppe of ice. —Mrs. C. R. Miller in Leslie's Weekly.

No Leash for Boro' Dogs.

"We don't want borough dogs on a leash," said Mayor Townsend, of the borough, when asked if he would follow the plan adopted in this city. "If a dog goes mad, no human being is going to hold on to a leash by which it is held. If dogs are properly muzzled, I think, the problem has been solved. We take every possible precaution to guard against any danger from dogs."—Georgia Nowadays.

"Colonel, do you mean that you have something in stock?"

"Well, we have some rare old lemon pop which has been in the family for several months."—Kansas City Journal.

Not a Return Ticket.

The accommodation train had pulled up on a siding to let a fast express past. As it was backing on to the main track again, it happened that the conductor put out his hand for an Irishman's ticket.

"No, ye don't!" exclaimed the Celt, holding his ticket. "Ol'll not pay ye wan cint's worth while th' train's goin' th' wrong way!"—Judge.

PROGRESS OF THE DAY ALL OVER THE WORLD.

In France about 600 duels are fought yearly.

There are only 770,000 natives in all Siberia.

In Germany 85,000 tons of tobacco are consumed a year.

The city of London has increased from an area of 0.2 square miles in the year 1200 to 117 square miles in 1908.

Nerve troubles are on the increase in the great cities of the world, owing to the strenuous business and social life.

The United States is the third largest annual producer of barley in the world—153,000,000 bushels—only 7,000,000 bushels less than Germany, with Russia leading.

Following the example set by the New York Central on its Adirondack lines, the Maine Central Railroad has placed in service on its branches running through forest regions a number of oil-burning locomotives. The company thinks it will be cheaper to use oil than to put out sparkignited forest fires and pay damages for woodlands burned over.

In the manufacture of perfume Italy consumes yearly 1,860 tons of orange blossoms, 1,000 tons of roses, as well as quantities of other flowers.

Bear cubs are popular pets in London just now. A prominent dealer says that the taste inclines now to the Syrian variety, while a short time ago the Malayan bear was all the fashion.

Swamp and overflow lands of the United States aggregate in round terms 75,000,000 acres, of which 20,000,000 acres are timbered, 9,500,000 in Louisiana, 6,000,000 in Mississippi and 5,750,000 in Arkansas.

Concrete foundation for a railroad crossing has been found a failure because it is too much of a success. The innovation was made experimentally on a Western railroad and the results watched with interest by railroad men all over the country. But the results seem to indicate that the foundation was so rigid that it was very hard not only on the rolling stock, but on the track and roadbed as well.

BASEBALL AT NIGHT.

A small sized fortune has been expended in Cincinnati in the construction of a remarkable illumination scheme for lighting the National league baseball park of that city in such a manner as to make ball games possible at night. Popular Mechanics for August contains an illustrated article describing the system. It says:

The chief problem was not in providing sufficient illumination, but to provide it in such a way that none of the centres of illumination will blind the players.

"The plant which converts night into day is composed of fourteen powerful carbon lamps, fed by a 250 horsepower dynamo installed on the ground. All the lamps encircle the field, arranged in such a way that the glare does not blind. Ten of the lights are arranged on five towers, two lamps on each, and the other four are operated from the roof of the grand stand on the top of the bleachers."

A SOFT CROWNED HAT.

Some of the very newest hats are made with big gathered crowns of silk or real lace. In either case the brim, usually of leghorn, is lined to match, and a little chou of flowers tucked away under the voluminous folds of the crown forms the only trimming. Such hats as these usually return to fashion during some period of the year, although their general shape and size will often vary.

One of the loviest of these models is of leghorn, with a huge tam-o'-shanter crown of violet taffeta. It has a rosy light. The same lovel ytabric lines the brim, while a pretty rose of pink peeps forth from the crown on the left side of the front.

THE DESERTER.

Ere yet he tried the metal of his blade,
When first he heard the battle bugles sound,
He turned his back upon the canonade,
And flung his loaded weapons to the ground!
Not one of all the brave that won the fight
Can show a wound as deep as that he feels—
For cowardice has followed day and night
To brand him with a scar that never heals!
—Aloysius Coll in Appleton's Magazine.

Former Plainfielder Helps Harry K.

Dr. Carlos MacDonald, the alienist, now testifying in the Thaw case before the New York courts, formerly lived in Plainfield. He tried the experiment of suburban life here, twelve years ago, and for some time lived on East Fifth street. His sister lived with him and earned a livelihood by painting and selling pictures. She painted several pictures of animal and still life which she sold in this city and in New York.

THE SUNSHINE HOME.

Expense is not the essential of making the home beautiful. What is far more important is good taste. A few cents spent in muslin curtains will often make a great improvement in a room than will $100 paid to a professional decorator. Many people have come to prefer the thick curtain to the older window shade. Either of them should never be used without muslin curtain, and I have found, in many instances —especially in the case of upstairs rooms—that the muslin curtains alone are sufficient. Too many people spend their money for devices to keep the sun out. This is all wrong. Let it come. Sun is the greatest germ disperser that there is. More than that, there is nothing like bright, wholesome sunlight to give a room a cheerful and homelike appearance. Sun lights up the dark corners, where dust is neglected to dirt, therefore compelling you to keep your house as clean as a whistle. In this way it is a triple blessing. It is no harm, but, on the contrary, for a passerby to catch a glimpse of a cheerful, homelike interior. And if rooms to which the sun must be private, and which are so situated as to be commanded from the outside, thick curtains give the privacy as well as shades could do.

This is not meant to be taken too arbitrarily. In a window opening directly upon a sidewalk, or facing other windows, shades may be an easier solution than thick curtains. On my kitchen windows I have shades for use at night, for an entry window to its best advantage. Its full shape and size are suited to the room, and for the sake of health there should not be the shutting out of sunlight. Cases where there is intense sun glare, or where sick people require specially darkened rooms, are exceptional.

If you are fond of house plants, you should give them plenty of sunlight. Don't draw your curtains on them. Give them the life they deserve.

TRAINED NURSES FOR CATS.

Describing the work of the Rockefeller institute in McClure's Magazine, Burton J. Hendrick gives interesting details of animal operations. Because of the humane precautions taken, the writer asserts that they suffer very little.

Throughout the whole proceeding, the animal is the attendance of an expert trained nurse, says the writer. Clad in the conventional nurse's white garb, she gives the little vagrant the same minute attention that she would give a millionaire. The preliminary step is a warm bath in a porcelain tub precisely like that found in every well-ordered home.

The woman who has trouble in drying her hair may envy the expedition and care with which the cat at the Rockefeller Institute solves a similar problem. From the tub it is placed in an adjoining cage; a crank is turned, starting an electric dynamo, a wave of hot air passes through and in two or three minutes the subject, clean and glossy, steps toward the so-called sterilization room.

More inesthetic is given an animal than a man; it can usually stand more, and does not experience the disagreeable physical complications that frequently assail the human subject. Everybody who handles it or comes near it is thoroughly sterilized; the cat itself, after etherization, is bathed in a disinfectant.

No up-to-date hospital for human beings is more perfect in its equipment than the chamber in which the operation takes place. The operating table is precisely like that used for a man, except that it is smaller; there is the same assortment of clean and shining instruments and every*thing in the room, from the white* coat of the operating surgeon to the linen bandages and the hands of all the attendants, is sterilized.

Inoffensive.

"Did you hear what happened to Fweddy in Noo Yawk?"

"No, tell me."

"Why the dean boy made a mistake and got one of those cars in the tunnel that are resolved exclooseively for ladies, don't you know."

"Yes?"

"And they let him stay."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Woven of Linen.

For the elderly woman there are beautiful combinations garments even thinner than the usual batiste and linen affairs made by the perfect seamstress. They are low necked and of knee length, made of woven linen. These corset covers and pantaloon combinations are of exquisite make and beautiful finish—the really best garment for the would-be hipless.

Impossible.

"But why don't you believe that I have a friend who is much more beautiful than I am?"

"Because it is impossible that she should be your friend if she is really more beautiful than you."—Comic Cuts.

MARTHA WASHINGTON'S STRONG CHARACTER.

Gaillard Hunt's account of "A Christmas at Mount Vernon" in The Century—the first Christmas of General Washington's final home-coming to Mount Vernon—has this interesting description of Mrs. Washington:

I am afraid the modern woman of advanced ideas cannot approve of her. She went North to join the troops when they were in a safe place for the winter and when her husband told her to come; she went South again as the campaign opened in the spring. She heard many cannon shots in the distance, but she had no ambition to share her husband's dangers, if he did not wish it.

She was a loyal patriot, and hated the British. She held, in fact, the same views as her husband, and told them because he held them. She thought he was the greatest man in the world—as, indeed, he was—and that the life of wife of a Virginia planter was the best life a woman could lead. She lost no sleep in letting the problems which were vexing philosophers and statesmen, but went cofortably to bed at night, thinking of the last invoice of clothes arrived from England, or what she would have for dinner on the following day.

Her character was high, her intelligence was good and her temper masterful. Nobody at Mount Vernon disputed her sway, nobody laughed at her, and everybody held her judgment in respect; yet she never made a bright or witty remark and hardly ever read a book except her Bible and a few books of religious devotion.

*She knew all about the manage*ment of a large household, could play upon the spinnet or harpsichord and could work in worsteds in all sorts of stitches, but of book education she had very little. How could she have much, when she was counted a woman at the age of fifteen, and had charge of a household and husband at seventeen? She was fully as well educated as other ladies of her days, and in writing when she sent her love to "all enquireing friends" and hoped "billy's recovery would be a lasting wone," she was none the less a lady and an ornament to society.

SEERSUCKER AGAIN.

With the advent of crepe for the summer gown there has been a revival of all materials of that class. Seersucker has been called back, and standing out from among the less expensive qualities, there is the East Indian cotton which may be got through the importer.

It is not cheap by any means, but it is almost everlasting. A soft, yet crisp quality marks it as desirable. It is silk and linen, and is the favored material with the English who are forced to live in torrid India. Men and women alike have found constant use for this delightful material, which may be shaken free of all wrinkles.

For the dweller in mountain camps there is nothing more desirable than our own low-priced striped seersucker. The afternoon dress of creamy crinkle, with its plain and tailor made stripe, is suitable for mother and daughter and will make ideal rompers for the baby.

Brother's and even father's shirts, when made of this same handy stuff, will prove more than satisfactory on their family wash day by the mountain lake.

AIRSHIP WAR STATIONS ALONG ATLANTIC COAST.

The Signal Corps of the United States Army has been issued instructions by the Secretar yof War to prepare a plan for the protection of the Atlantic coast from hostile airships. The scheme involves the establishment of balloon houses all along the coast from Maine to Florida. The stations, if built, will be 250 miles apart, this being considered a safe distance for the airship of the present day. The intention is for these aurial craft to go scouting at sea, turning and flying back to shore to give the alarm when the fleet of an enemy is sighted, but if Congress should provide for such a fleet, it would undoubtedly be ready before long to drop explosives on the ships of an enemy as well as simply scout.—From August Popular Mechanics.

Knew Him Well.

Bigbee—I say, Smallbee, you are just the man I want to see. You have known me now for five years, haven't you?

Smallbee—Yes.

Bigbee—Well, I would like you to accommodate me with the loan of two pounds.

Smallbee—Sorry, Bigbee, but I can't.

Bigbee—Can't! Why not?

Smallbee—Because I've known you for five years.—Exchange.

Its ore capacity is 13,000 tons, or if loaded with wheat it will carry 488,000 bushels, which represents the product of 19,000 acres. Its length over all is 607 feet; beam, 58 feet; depth, 32 feet, and it contains thirty-two staterooms. Accommodations for guests comprise nine staterooms, with shower baths to each room; a grillroom forward, with electric cooking appliances, and other special equipment for their entertainment. Nearly 2,000 tons of plates and shapes were used in the building of the boat.

PIERROT'S SONG.

If you were kind, we two might stray
Forever where the fields were gay.
Your gown I'd weave of summer skies,
With sunshine and with butterflies
And love should never say you nay.

On thistledowns we'd sail away
Across the dreams of yesterday.
On lilies watch the moon arise,
If you were kind!

Who am I? Just the tear that lay
Where now I see the dimples play
I am the wistfulness that sighs
Thro' far-off dreams of Paradise.
For old time's sake you'd bid me stay,
If you were kind.

Convincing the Jury.

"The recent protest reports touching the use of whiskey by juries in Tennessee," says a New York lawyer, "reminds me of an amusing incident in connection with a trial I once witnessed in Arkansas.

"The defendant had been accused of selling adulterated liquor, and some whiskey was offered as evidence. This was given the jury as evidence to assist in its deliberations.

"When they finally filed into court his honor asked:

"'Has the jury agreed on a verdict?'

"'No, your honor,' responded the foreman, 'and before we do we should like to have more evidence.'"

An Englishman and an Irishman were overheard discussing Miss Annette Kellerman and her "Diving Venus" act at the Fifth Avenue Theatre recently. Said the former:

"She can swim nearer a swimming Channel than anybody ever did."

"How close did she come?" inquired the Irishman.

"Eleven miles."

"Which coast?"

"The English, I think."

"Then begorra, that was close enough."—Success Magazine.

Die Near Same Hour.

Harry P. McCabe, proprietor of the Windsor Hotel, Garfield, received word Monday night that his sister had died in Philadelphia. He was about to start for that city yesterday when he received a telegraphic message informing him of the death of his brother, James W. McCabe, in Brooklyn. His sister, Mrs. Jada Lehre, expired at 4 p. m. and his brother at 6 p. m., only two hours separating the deaths.
